MINUTES OF EVIDENCE.

Veneris, 12° die Maii, 1837.

MEMBERS PRESENT.

Mr. Serjeant Ball.
Mr. Hamilton.
Mr. Hogg.
Mr. Lefroy.
Lord Granville Somerset.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. John Butler, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. John Butler.

11315. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] I WAS examining you the last day respecting the value which you had put upon certain premises in Clonmel?—Yes.

11316. I ask you now, do you know the premises belonging to John Collins, in Sherlock's-lane, baker?—I do.

11317. Did you value those premises?—I have been in those premises.

11318. For the purpose of valuation?—For the purpose of valuation.

11319. Do you consider them of the value of 10 l.?—I do not consider them of the value of 10 l.

11320. Mr. Hamilton.] Is Collins a voter?—He is; he was a voter, and I believe he is still.

11321. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know the premises of William Burke, of Duckett-street?—I do.

11322. Did you value them?—Yes; Burke's is the same as the other houses in that neighbourhood.

11323. When you say in that neighbourhood, do you mean in that street?—Yes.

11324. With respect to which you have already given evidence?—Yes.

11325. Now, do you consider them of the value of 10 l., the premises of William Burke, of Duckett-street?—I do.

11327. And your impression is he could get 10 l. a year for it?—That is my impression.

11328. Do you know the premises of John Ryan, of Duckett-street?—I do.

11329. He is dead?—He is dead.

11330. Do you consider them of the value of 10 l.?—I do.

11331. At the time when he registered?—Yes.

11332. Chairman.] He was a writing clerk, was he?—Yes.

11333. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you happen to know what his rent is?—The rent is 8 l. 10 s., the same as the others.

11334. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are the other houses in Duckett-street, that you have been speaking of, also held at the same rent?—Yes, they are most of them held at the same rent; but the rent is advanced according as the tenant's time expires. Dr. Burgess, who is the owner, raises the rent according as the houses become vacant, at least I was told so in that street.

11335. You consider them of the value of 10 l. a year?—I do certainly.

11336. Do you know the premises of Jeremiah Daniel, in Dublin-street; that is a cellar, I believe?—I do; I was in that cellar.

11337. Now, do you consider that that cellar is of the value of 10 l. a year?—No, I would not say that that was worth 10 l. a year perhaps. If you take the lodging, and everything else into account, it might be so; but as it stands, I would not say it is worth 10 l. a year.

11338. Mr. Hamilton.] Is he a voter?—He is a voter.

11339. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Then, perhaps, what you mean is, that if it were now to be let by the tenant, Jeremiah Daniel, you do not think it would fetch 10 l. a year?—I do not think that any man, as it stands, would give 10 l. a year for it.

11340. Do you know the premises of Michael Darcy, in Dublin-street?—I do.

11341. What is your impression as to the value of those premises?—Michael Darcy's, that is a better one than Daniel's, the one I have been speaking of.

11342. Well, do you consider that it is of the value of 10 l.?—I will describe the cellar: it is a good large cellar, with three lodging beds in it, and a back-room; there is a room at the back of the cellar; it is in a good situation for the huckstering business; cellars are valuable there.

11343. There is a shop?—There is a shop; he sells meat and other things, huckstry.

11344. Now, have you any memorandum of the dimensions of that cellar?—I have no memorandum, but I have an idea of the dimensions of it.

11345. No, not an idea, but have you taken any note of the dimensions?—I did not measure it, but I know the extent of it.

11346. Now, what would you say was the width of that cellar?—I dare say it is about 12 feet wide; I think it is the width of the house.

11347. And your impression is that the house is 12 feet wide?—It is.

11349. It is at least 12 feet wide?—I am sure it is.

11350. Now attend to this evidence of Mr. George Graham's (No. 4754): "Do you know the premises of Michael Darcy? I do.—Is that also a cellar? It is.—Where is it? In Dublin-street, nearly opposite the last I was asked about.—What do you conceive to be the value of that cellar? I should think about 5 l., 5 l. 10 s., or 6 l.—Can you describe the dimensions as nearly as possible of that cellar? In the width it is only about 8 feet; but I believe it is about 20 feet deep." Now, do you agree in that statement of Mr. George Graham, that the width of the cellar is only 8 feet?—I do not.

11351. You state that it is 12 feet?—I do, and the length also must be more.

11352. Mr. Hamilton.] But you state you have not measured it?—I said I did not measure it; but I have, in fact, the size of it in my recollection.

11353. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You state it is the same width as the house?—It is the breadth of the house.

11354. And you probably recollect (as you say you have it in your recollection) the width of the house?—It must be 12 feet; eight feet is very short; I know it is at least 12 feet wide and 25 or 26 feet long.

11355. Mr. Hamilton.] Are there cellars in Clonmel only eight feet wide?—I do not know one in Clonmel only eight feet.

11356. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] They are all more?—They must be more; they are generally the breadth of the house, and there are none of those houses confined to eight feet; they are 12 or 14 or 16 feet.

11357. Now, that being the case, what do you say is the value of that cellar?—The man pays 6 l. for it.

11358. You know that fact?—I have it from his wife.

11359. Well, then, do you consider that that is of the value of 10 l.?—Considering what he makes by lodgings; there are three lodging beds, which pay him from 4 s. to 4 s. 6 d. a week; and under those circumstances I should say it would be worth 10 l. a year.

11360. But when you say considering what he makes by lodgings, I ask you whether, if Michael Darcy wished to dispose of his interest in that cellar now, you consider he would get 10 l. for it?—Upon my word, from the situation of the cellar, which is very good, being a very great thoroughfare, and near the court-house, I think he would get 10 l. a year for it.

11361. Chairman.] Tell me who his landlord is?—I do not know who the landlord is.

11362. Has Michael Darcy this cellar under lease?—I do not know that either; I did not think it necessary to inquire into that.

11363. Can you account for the landlord letting him have the cellar for this rent, which you say to be 6 l., I think?—He has been living in it a long time.

11364. What is the rent?—£.6 a year.

11365. Can you account for the landlord letting him have this cellar at the rent which you state (6 l. a year), for the sum of 6 l. a year, supposing it to be worth worth 10 l.?—I cannot account for it; he has it for a length of time; I know that landlords make a difference between a good and a bad tenant.

11366. What, to the amount of 40 per cent.?—Perhaps not so much; in a cellar there may be a difference of 2 l. or 3 l.; I know myself in some cellars there has been a difference of 3 l. a year made between what the landlord conceived a good and a doubtful tenant.

11368. Then, when the good tenant has to pay the less rent, in point of fact, he pays the fairer rent, does he not?—He is the better able to pay the rent that he is bound to.

11369. But when the bad tenant has to pay the higher rent, does he not pay a sort of insurance price first of all, on account of his want of accuracy or expected accuracy in the payment of the rent, and next of all from his not being generally a good tenant towards the premises?—I do not understand the question.

11370. What is the reason why you would let any premises to a good tenant for a less rent than to a bad one?—Because, in letting to a person who I conceive a good tenant, I am quite easy as to the rent; I know I shall have no trouble with him in getting it; I conceive I am secure so far; and also if the tenant is honest, it is a great matter to know that an honest man lives in your house.

11371. Then, do not you consider the extra rent paid by the bad tenant in the light of an insurance to the landlord, both as to the security of the rent and as to the propriety of the conduct of the tenant?—I protest that is a question I cannot answer.

11372. Supposing you wanted to insure your house with regard to fire, would you charge the same rent to a tenant who would take that insurance on himself as you would to a tenant who would not take that insurance on himself?—I do not conceive the tenant has anything at all to do with the insurance; I would not raise the rent in consequence of the insurance of the house.

11374. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] What is his name?—Timothy Murphy; he has been a long time in the house; I know him to be an honest man. I could get 3 l. a year more for the cellar, but I prefer this man whom I know, and of whose honesty I have had proof.

11375. You think it is better worth your while to take 6 l. a year, which you expect to be paid with certainty, than to have a claim for 9 l., which you would not obtain with certainty?—I do think so.

11376. And so with others, is it not?—Yes, I believe it is.

11378. Mr. Hamilton.] Which should you say, the rent offered by a good and solvent tenant, supposing the premises were in the market, or the rent offered by a person who did not intend to pay, that is, that of a doubtful person, was the fairest criterion of the value?—I think the rent offered by the good and solvent tenant is at all events the best for the landlord.

11379. Which do you consider, the rent offered by a good and solvent tenant, or the rent offered by a doubtful tenant, supposing it to be higher, the fairest and truest criterion of the actual value?—That depends on circumstances; for instance, if a man pays a rackrent or a high rent for a place himself, he will endeavour to make the most of it.

11380. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you consider rent a criterion of value in Clonmel?—I do not exactly.

11381. Mr. Hamilton.] Then, admitting rent not to be a criterion of value exactly, allow me to ask again which you think, the rent offered by a good or a bad tenant, approaches nearest to the criterion of value?—Indeed I do not know; perhaps perhaps the high rent, I should say, would be nearer the value, but not so safe as the low rent to the landlord.

11382. Take the case of a house in Clonmel in the market: a certain number of persons state they are willing to give 6 l. a year for that, those persons being evidently solvent and respectable persons; a certain number of persons offer 10 l., you have doubts respecting their solvency and propriety of conduct, and you accept the 6 l.; should you say, with reference to that house, that the 6 l. or the 10 l. was closest as a criterion of value?—Perhaps if you divided the sum it would be coming nearer to it; but I know the lower rent would be safest for the landlord to take. I have found it so myself. I have been 25 or 26 years in Clonmel, and during that time I lost considerably by letting cellars at high rents, or giving them to persons who did not turn out to be good tenants; that has taught me a lesson. I would prefer the person whom I consider to be honest, and would make an abatement to such, and I have done so.

11383. Then do you know any reason why the solvent tenant should not offer fairly that which is the value of a house when in the market?—A person going to take a house or cellar (particularly those kind of people) will endeavour to get it for as low a rent as he possibly can.

11385. Then if a solvent and respectable tenant wants to get a house, may he not offer that which is a fair value for it on account of the competition among others?—As I told you before, the good tenant and the honest man will get the preference, and he knows he is entitled to the preference; he knows it well.

11388. Then good character, like every other commodity, has its price in the market?—It has, and the tenant will tell you, it is better for you to give me your house for such a rent, than give it to a person who is not likely to pay you.

11389. The man with a good character finds his character in some instances worth 3 l. a year?—Yes, no question of it.

11390. Because he gets an abatement of that rent which otherwise he would have to pay?—Yes, he knows his character as an honest man, and that he is entitled to the preference.

11391. Then your impression is this, as I collect from you, that these premises of Michael Darcy would fetch 10*l.* a year if they were to be let by Michael Darcy; is it not so?—Indeed it is.

11392. Do you know the premises of William Finnel, in Main-street?—No, I have not been in them; he has left.

11393. Do you know the premises of John Fitzpatrick, in Main-street?—I do.

11394. You know those premises?—I know Fitzpatrick's; it is just opposite my house.

11395. Then you know it probably very well?—I do.

11396. Now what do you consider the value of that cellar?—It is precisely such another as I have described; such another as Darcy's; he is just situated in the same way; he is an honest man in comfortable circumstances.

11397. Do you know what rent he pays?—£.7 a year is what I have been told; I have not described it.

11398. But you say it is the same as Michael Darcy's?—With the exception of an additional room; I find he has an additional room; he has two rooms, and he makes by lodgings 3*s.* a week regularly; he sells meat and huckstering.

11400. Then, having considered Michael Darcy's worth 10*l.* a year, I presume you infer John Fitzpatrick's is worth 10*l.* a year?—Considering what he makes by lodgings and his business, I certainly do.

11401. Do you consider if he wanted to let it he could get 10*l.* a year for it? —I do not think he would get 10*l.* a year for it; the situation is not so good as Darcy's.

11402. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you know how that cellar is lighted?—From the front of the street.

11403. Through the entrance?—No, I think there is a window on the side of the entrance, and an aperture in the street; a hole cut in the flags, I think there is, but that I am not quite certain about.

11405. There is no window behind?—I do not think there is a window behind.

11408. Who is his landlord?—His landlord is a man of the name of John Collett; he lives over him.

11409. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know the premises of the late Dennis Grady, in Lower Johnson-street?—No, I have not been in those premises.

11410. Do you know William Heffernan's cellar, in Main-street?—Yes, I know it.

11411. Now what is your impression as to the value of those premises?—That is a very fine cellar, almost one of the best; there may be two or three better in Clonmel, but this is a good one; it has a good shop in it; has a counter and everything else like any shop; the man has been living 32 years in that cellar; he is a wealthy man; he has made a great deal of money in it.

11412. Now, do you happen to know the rent he pays?—He pays 8 l. or eight guineas, I do not know which.

11413. Then have you any hesitation in saying that those premises are worth 10 l. a year?—Not the smallest; that is a very fine cellar; the man has made a great deal of money there.

11414. That is to say, if he wanted to let it to-morrow, he could get 10 l. a year for it?—I am certain he could; I do not think, if he was offered 20 l. a year for it, he would leave it.

11415. Do you mean to say he would get 10 l. a year at least, or more?—I find the rent is eight guineas.

11416. But do you say he would get 10 l. a year for it?—I do think he would; I have no doubt of it.

11417. He would get more than 10 l.?—He would get 10 l. at least; the man has made a good deal of money there; he married a daughter of his a short time ago, and gave her 200 l. fortune, to a man that lived next door to him.

11418. Now just attend to this evidence of Mr. George Graham: "Describe the premises of William Heffernan? It is in the Main-street; a cellar also about 9 feet wide.—What depth? I should think it is about from 24 to 28 feet.—What do you conceive to be the value? I think the value of it is about 5 l. 10 s. or 6 l.; it is a small cellar, narrow." Now, you having stated that the rent he paid is eight guineas, have you any hesitation in saying that this statement of Mr. George Graham, that the value of the premises is 5 l. 10 s. or 6 l., is exceedingly incorrect?—I think it is not correct in my view of it.

11419. But in any view of it?—In any view of it, I have no doubt it is incorrect; the man pays more rent, and I think it is worth more than 10 l.

11420. Do you know the premises of Daniel Hamigan, a cellar, in Main-street?—Yes; I believe he is a cooper.

11421. Do you know anything of the value of that cellar?—I have been in that cellar.

11422. Well, what should you say was the value of it?—I would not say that that cellar would bring 10 l. a year.

11423. Do you know John Costello's cellar, in Main-street?—I do.

11425. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you know the rent of that cellar?—£. 7 a year.

11426. Do you conceive, then, that it is let at its full value?—No, I think it would set for more than 7 l. a year.

11427. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you state it would let for 10 l. a year?—Upon my word, I do.

11428. That is your opinion?—It is my opinion.

11429. Mr. Hamilton.] Should you think Mr. Glasscot, the landlord, was a fair judge of its full value?—Indeed I think he is a judge of the value of anything.

11430. Do you know his handwriting?—No, I never saw him write.

11431. Should you be surprised, if you were told, he stated under his hand, that he conceived that that was the highest rent he could obtain?—

> Mr. Serjeant Ball objected to his written statement, as he was not here to be asked about it.

11432–3. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you know William Smith's handwriting?—I do; I know his handwriting; perhaps Mr. Glasscot takes the same view of tenants that I do, that he would give the preference to a good tenant, and make a reduction accordingly.

11434. Chairman.] Do you suppose Mr. Glasscot would assert a thing without its being correct?—I should not; he is a very correct man.

11435. If it has been stated by him that he has received such and such a rent, would you conceive that to be the actual value of the place?—I would believe anything Mr. Glasscot would say; he is a very correct and proper man.

11437. And that Costello could get that rent for it if he were disposed to let it; do you state that?—I do, from his having made money in it and being so comfortable; I have no doubt he would get 10 l. a year for it; in fact, cellars in the neighbourhood are let at 10 l. a year. Mr. Hackett, who lives in the same neighbourhood, has a cellar let at 10 l. a year, and higher than 10 l. a year.

11438. When you say the same neighbourhood, is it not next door to him?—I believe it is; and I find that Mr. Hackett's cellar is let at 12 l. a year.

11439. Now do you know what trade Costello is?—Costello is a smith; he works for Mr. Bianconi.

11440. Is he what is called a coach-smith?—He is; and works for Mr. Bianconi.

11441. Is he a cooper?—Not at all; he is a smith; he works for Mr. Bianconi; he is not a cooper that ever I knew.

11442. But do you know the man?—I do; I know him to be a smith, working for Mr. Bianconi.

11443. He is not a cooper?—He is not.

11444. Have you any doubt about it?—I have no doubt about it.

11445. In answer to question 4714, Mr. George Graham says he is a cooper; is that the fact?—No, it is not.

11446. Do you know John M'Auliffe's cellar, in Main-street?—I do.

11447. What do you state as to the value of that?—That is also a very fine cellar; he pays eight guineas a year for it.

11448. Now have you any doubt that that is of the value of 10 l.?—That man has made a great deal of money; and there has been a great deal of money made in that cellar before him.

11449. Have you any doubt, if he wanted to let it, he could get 10 l. a year for it?—Indeed I have not; that is a very spacious cellar; the former occupant made a very large property in that cellar, I suppose 2,000 l.

11450. Now, having stated he pays eight guineas a year rent, I think you say, be so good as attend to this evidence of Mr. George Graham, 4821: "Are you acquainted with the premises of. John M'Auliffe? I am.—Describe the premises? It is a cellar about nine feet wide; it is about 20 feet deep; no light except by the entrance, and its utmost value I take to be about 6 l." Now, have you any hesitation in saying, having stated that the rent is eight guineas, and that you have no doubt it will let for 10 l., have you any hesitation in saying that that answer of Mr. George Graham, that its utmost value is about 6 l., is exceedingly incorrect?—That is very incorrect; he must have been very much mistaken. The breadth and length is considerably over that; the breadth of that cellar must be from 12 to 14 feet, and the length, I am sure, is about 26 feet. There are three or four apartments in it, a sitting-room or parlour, and two or three bed-rooms besides.

11451. Well now, do you know the premises of Martin Smith, in Main-street, a cellar?—I do.

11452. What do you take to be the value of that?—That is, I believe, one of the largest cellars in Clonmel.

11453. Do you know Thomas Shaughnessy's cellar, Lower Johnson-street?—I do.

11454. What do you consider the value of that?—That cellar is worth 10 l. a year; it is a very neat cellar and large.

11455. Do you know the rent it pays?—I think he pays 9 l. a year; I think so; I will tell you immediately; he told me so himself.

11456. Then have you any doubt now that that cellar would let for 10 l. a year if he were disposed to part with it?—I have not; and I think Mr. Achison, who is his landlord, has served him with notice to quit; he wants to raise the rent on him.

11457. Above 9 l.?—Yes; at least the man told me so, that he was under notice to quit.

11458. Now, that being so, will you attend to this evidence of Mr. George Graham, No. 4853: "Do you know the premises of Thomas Shaughnessy? I do.—Describe them? It is a cellar in Johnson-street; that cellar I measured; it is 17 feet by 26 feet.—What do you conceive to be its value? £7. 10 s.; 8 l. I would say; indeed 7 l. 10 s. would be the value of it." Now, that cellar paying 9 l. a year rent, the landlord seeking, as you state, to raise the rent above 9 l., can you hesitate to say that that statement of Mr. George Graham, that 7 l. 10 s. is the highest value of it, is exceedingly incorrect?—It is incorrect.

11460. That is a cellar too, is it?—A cellar.

11462. You describe that as a good cellar?—I do.

11463. What do you take to be the value of it?—He has four lodging beds; he makes a good deal by lodgers; he has a public clothes mangle in it.

11464. Well, having described that cellar as you have done, what do you consider the value of it?—He pays 6 l. a year rent for it; if you take the lodgings and the other matters into consideration, I think it would bring 10 l. a year, otherwise I do not think it would be value for 10 l.

11465. That is to say, that if John Smith wished to part with his interest in it, you doubt whether he would get 10 l. a year for it?—I doubt whether he would, as it stands.

11466. Do you know the premises of Cornelius O'Neil, in Dublin-street; formerly Cornelius O'Neil's; he is dead, I believe?—He is dead.

11467. Do you know his premises?—I do; I was in them.

11469. And that that could be got for it if the tenant wanted to part with it; is that what you mean?—It is what I mean.

11470. Do you happen to know the rent paid for that cellar?—Yes, he pays 10 guineas; he has paid 10 guineas, and his widow, I believe, is under the same rent.

11471. So that, I suppose, you would not have much hesitation in saying that is worth 10 l. a year?—None whatever.

11472. Now, that cellar paying 10 guineas a year, will you attend to this evidence of Mr. George Graham, 4847: "Are the premises of Cornelius O'Neil of the same description? They are not; that is what we call a good cellar in that part of the town.—What part of the town? It is 29, Dublin-street.—What size is it? It is about 22 feet by 26.—Of what value do you conceive it to be? I dare say it is worth 8 l." Now, as you state the rent to be 10 guineas, what do you think of the statement of Mr. George Graham, that the value is about 8 l.?—I think he must be mistaken at least.

11473. Chairman.] Have any of these cellars more than one story, or are they all on the same level?—No, they have no more than one story from the ground.

11474 That is to say, they are under the level of the street?—Yes.

11475. And therefore they are called cellars; then when you are giving the dimensions dimensions of a cellar, that includes the whole extent which can possibly be inhabited, does it not?—Sometimes they get under the yards in the rear, and also they are in the front under the street.

11476. But I mean to say, if you said a cellar was 22 feet by 26, or any other particular measurement, that would include the whole space of which the tenant has possession, would it not?—As far as I have described the breadth and length, I have taken it from wall to wall.

11477. And not taken into account either running under the yards on the one hand, or under the street on the other?—No, not in any description I have given as yet; I have only taken it from wall to wall.

11478. Do you know the premises of Thomas Mackey, stone-mason, in White's-lane?—I know that man very well; he has left the premises, I believe.

11479. But you do not know the premises?—I do not know the premises; he is a very proper man.

11480. Chairman.] Is that the pheasant man?—Yes.

11481. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Have you known him long?—I have known him a long time.

11482. He has a family, I believe?—He has.

11483. A wife and children?—Yes, grown up daughters.

11484. Can you say whether he keeps a house of ill fame?—Yes. I never heard until I came to London that he did; I always heard that he was a proper, industrious, well-conducted man.

11485. Could he keep a house of ill fame without your knowing it?—I do not think he could.

11486. Have you any doubt about it?—Indeed, I have not; we have been endeavouring for years back to get that description of persons out of Clonmel, and with the assistance of the Roman-catholic clergy, we have in a great measure succeeded in doing so; and I think it is quite impossible he could have such a house without my knowing or hearing it.

11487. Were you present when he came up to register?—No, I was not; I did not attend the registry, I was otherwise employed; I have a good deal of farming to attend to, and business in town also.

11488. Chairman.] When you said you were convinced there was no such house as a house of ill fame in Clonmel, is that your evidence?—I did not say such a thing; I said we have been endeavouring for a long time to get rid of that description of houses, and I said that, with the assistance of the Roman-catholic clergymen, we have succeeded in getting them out of the town; I do not believe there is what may be call a regular house of that description in Clonmel; I do not know one.

11489. That is your opinion?—That is my opinion.

11490. Now, you said this is a very respectable man, this Mackey?—No, I did not; I said he is a proper man as a tradesman.

11491. A highly respectable man; did you say that?—No, I did not.

11492. He is very fond of cock-fighting, is he not?—Yes, he is, certainly; he has attended to that sort of game.

11493. He attends to that, does he?—He attends a good deal to it; he fights cocks; he has a fancy that way for cock-fighting, and goes even out of town some miles, I believe, with his cocks to fight.

11494. Are fighting-cocks generally called pheasants there?—No, I never heard they were.

11495. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Have you ever heard of pheasant cocks?—I have.

11496. Do you know what they are?—They are a kind of bird.

11497. But why are they called pheasant cocks?—I do not know.

11498. You are not a cock-fighter yourself?—I am not.

11499. Mr. Hogg.] By a pheasant cock I suppose you mean a cock pheasant?—I mean a cock bird.

11500. Chairman.] Do you mean a barn-door fowl, or what they call game?—I mean what they call the common cocks.

11502. Do you know what a cock partridge is?—I have heard of it.

11503. Do you not call that game; is it not under the game laws: is not a cock partridge called game?—

11504. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know anything about the game laws?—No, not much.

11505. Chairman.] You have heard of such a thing as game in this country?—Yes.

11506. You understand a cock partridge to be game?—Yes.

11507. Do you know cock pheasants to be game in the same way?—I do not know whether they are. I do not understand the game laws.

11508. And you know nothing about hares?—Yes; I have hunted hares and rabbits often.

11509. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are rabbits game?—Indeed I do not know. I know hares are game; but I do not know whether rabbits are.

11510. Mr. Hogg.] You state that you do not know whether pheasants are or are not game?—I do not know whether they are or not.

11511. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You have never studied the game laws?—I never did.

11512. Mr. Hogg.] Do you know whether a pheasant is a bird or a four-legged animal?—I am not so stupid as that.

11513. Answer the question; is it a bird?—It is, of course; I am sure it is a bird.

11514. Can you state whether it is a bird or not?—It is a bird.

11515. That you can state positively?—I can.

11516. Being a bird, I suppose there are cock birds and hen birds?—Of course there must be.

11517. Then do you know any difference, or is there any difference in your mind between a cock pheasant and a fighting cock?—I do not think there is; it is a cock all the time.

11518. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] I believe you know a good deal more about the value of houses in Clonmel than you do about game?—Indeed I do; or of an acre of ground.

11519. Mr. Hogg.] There is not, to your knowledge, a house of ill fame now in Clonmel?—Not what they call a regular house, a brothel; I do not think there is to my knowledge. Of course those kind of people will always be in those large places.

11520. My question is, is there, to your knowledge, a house of ill fame, large or small, in Clonmel, to your knowledge?—There may be houses in which women of ill fame lodge; but, to my knowledge, there is not a house of that description now in Clonmel. There were houses, but the clergymen routed them out of the town.

11521. Chairman.] Were there in the year 1832, five years ago?—Within five or six years, perhaps there might have been.

11522. Mr. Hogg.] Were you ever in the house of this man, Mackey?—I said I was not.

11523. Do you know whether he ever received or kept lodgers in his house?—I do not know.

11524. I suppose he may have had lodgers; never having been in his house, I suppose he may have had people living in his house without your knowledge?—He may.

11525. That is just possible and probable?—Indeed it is.

11526. But you know nothing of the inmates of his house?—I do not; nothing more than that he has a family.

11527. But you know nothing of the inmates of his house?—No; but this I know, that he could not have kept such a house as has been talked of without my knowledge; that I know.

11528. Chairman.] Not within the last five years?—Certainly not; he could not; it is quite impossible. I know the man well, and I know his daughters, and they are not persons at all of that description, or that I would suspect for such a thing; in fact, we would not associate; we would not countenance a person of that description.

11529. Mr. Hogg.] I do not understand you to say this is an associate of yours?—I say we would not countenance or have anything at all to do with a person of that description.

11530. You never was in his house?—No.

Mr. John Butler.

11531. Nor, perhaps, he was never inside yours?—Yes, very often, on business.

11532. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Is he a stone-mason?—He is.

11533. Mr. Hogg.] And you have seen him on business, but not otherwise?—Chairman.] As a customer, in fact?—Not at all; he often comes into my house.

11534. Mr. Hogg.] But you do not visit; you do not associate with him?—No, I do not, indeed.

11536. He has left, I believe?—Yes; I know his house.

11537. What do you say as to his premises; do you consider them of the value of 10 l.?—I would not say that house is worth 10 l. a year.

11538. Do you know Patrick Carrigan, of Slattery's-lane?—I do.

11539. He has left?—He was about leaving. I was in his house, and he told me he intended leaving.

11540. But do you know anything of the value of his house?—I do not think that the place is worth 10 l. a year.

11541. Do you know Michael Lacy, in New-street?—I know that house.

11542. Do you think that is of the value of 10 l.?—I do not; I do not think the part he occupies is worth 10 l. year.

11543. He is a lodger?—So I heard.

11544. Chairman.] All these persons you are talking of are registered voters, are they not?—They are.

11545. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Thomas Sheehy, of Blind-street?—I know him.

11546. What do you say as to that; do you know those premises?—I do; I was in them.

11547. What do you say as to the value of them?—I will describe the premises; it is a good sized thatched house, with a yard and slaughter-house, and a stable in the yard; and at the rear of the stable is another house, an out-house, and a garden, about three ridges of ground. The man has been a long time living in that place; he is a butcher.

11548. Chairman.] Are those premises in the same state as they were five years ago?—They are not in a good condition now; they want thatching, and so on. I think they were in better condition five years ago than they are now.

11549. But they were the same character of premises?—The same character and the same extent; I think so.

11550. What is Mr. Sheehy; a victualler?—He is a victualler.

11551. Does he sell spirits?—No, he does not, not to my knowledge.

11552. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know who occupied that house in 1828; Thomas Sheehy's house in Blind-street?—I believe he did himself.

11553. Have you stated whether you consider it worth 10 l. a year?—I think it is.

11554. Do you mean to say if Sheehy wished to dispose of it he could get 10 l. a year for it?—He could; but he told me if he got 20 l. a year for it he would not dispose of it.

The Earl of Glengall (attending by Permission of the House of Lords), Examined.

The Earl of Glengall.

11555. Chairman.] I BELIEVE your Lordship wishes to give a statement as to your attendance at the registry held in Clonmel of claimants for county votes in the month of January last?—Yes, I did attend two or three days as a magistrate sitting on the bench; I never attended at any registry for the borough of Clonmel, though I have property in it.

11556. You are aware it has been stated in answer to question 9841, that Lord Glengall has taken "an active part; he attends the registry himself in person, and sits on the bench"?—Yes.

11557. Have you ever attended any registry for the borough of Clonmel?—Never.

11558. Then whenever you have sat on the bench at the registry it was with regard to the county voters, and not the borough voters?—Yes; and as a magistrate of the county.

11559. Did you object to the vote of a person of the name of James Walshe, of Garrymore, being received on the registry for the county?—I gave some information to the counsel with regard to that man's vote when he tendered it.

The Earl of Glengall.

11560. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Who was the counsel ?—Counsellor Mulcahy.

11561. Chairman.] Did you ever give him instructions beforehand for that purpose ?—No.

11563. What was the invalidity of the instrument; was it that the lease was forfeited in any way, or was it that the life on which his tenure depended was dead ?—The life was dead; it is a very curious circumstance, the whole affair is; and, if the Committee would allow me, I could make it plain to them in about two minutes; it is one of the most curious cases that perhaps ever occurred. It was an attempt to make out a title to a very large farm when the present lease should fall out. The circumstances are very singular, and I will relate them if the Committee wish; it will not take two minutes. A person of the name of Ross was granted a lease by James Lord Caher, in the year 1780, of a very large tract of land, at a very small rent, for 61 years, which lease, of course, is out in four or five years, and a very considerable rise of about 800 l. a year will take place to me on that event occurring. Mr. Ross's son succeeded the father, and Walshe, the individual mentioned, married one of the daughters; they all got into great distress, and mortgaged their interest in this lease to a Mr. Prendergast. In the year 1816 or 1817, the lease being in the hands of the mortgagees, and the mortgagees in possession of the lands, my father wished the under-tenants upon that farm to be registered; but the lease being in the hands of the mortgagees, of course it could not be produced. He then gave them, what was called in Ireland, in those times, an article; that is, an accepted proposal upon a 5 s. stamp, giving them the lands of Garrymore for the life of Thomas Drake of Rayhill, on which the under-tenants of the lands, in the year 1816 or 1817, registered on the old 40 s. tenure. Walshe appeared before the barrister to register; and as I had lent him 700 l. or 800 l. to recover his lease of the property out of the hands of these mortgagees, whom I considered to have unjustly treated him, and the Ross's, I should have been the very last person to have opposed him, or thought of such a thing, being perfectly certain that if I had an anxiety about it he would always vote as I wished; but I never intended to have opposed him under any circumstances, when, to my great surprise, I heard that he was going to register upon this old article, and to swear that Thomas Drake of Rayhill was alive, who died 13 years ago. I certainly did whisper to the counsel, " Do ask him if he will swear that Thomas Drake of Rayhill is alive ? " Counsellor Mulcahy said, " I am a neighbour; I live within a very short distance of Drake's, and I know he is dead myself." He then asked him if he would swear that Thomas Drake of Rayhill, the man on whose life he obtained this article in 1816 or 1817, was alive, and he replied, " A Thomas Drake is alive ; " upon which the barrister asked him, " Will you swear the Thomas Drake is alive to whom you referred in that article ? " He said " He would not ; " upon which the barrister desired him to go down and not attempt to register upon a man's life who was dead. This was done for the purpose of, when the lease fell out, establishing the article of 1816 as being a valid article, and the life being in existence; it was to make a law point four or five years hence with regard to the falling out of the great lease of 61 years.

11564. Then, if I understand your Lordship correctly, your object in interfering in this matter was not to prevent the man being registered as a voter ?—No.

11565. But it was to prevent his establishing a certain degree of evidence in support of a claim which hereafter might be of disadvantage to your property ?—That was all.

11566. And, in fact, if you had not interposed upon that occasion, you conceive the man would have in reality perjured himself ?—Certainly.

11567. Mr. Lefroy.] And your property must necessarily have been affected by evidence given in your presence if it remained uncontradicted ?—It would have made a very strong point against me, I consider.

11568. You sitting present while he stated that Thomas Drake, in that instrument, was alive ?—Yes.

The Earl of Glengall.

11569. Chairman.] Did he address you during his examination at all?—Yes.

11570. What did he say?—He observed that he was surprised he should be opposed in any way; I might be certain that he was always a friend of mine, and that sort of thing.

11571. Did he state that your agent, Mr. Chaytor, had the lease in his possession?—I cannot recollect that he did; Mr. Chaytor, of course, could not have his lease in his possession, because his 61 years' lease was in the hands of the mortgagees; we held another copy on the other side, which is in the office in Dublin.

11572. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] He might have meant the article?—No, that he stated to be in the hands of Mr. Duckett, his solicitor.

11573. But his Lordship asks whether he said anything about the lease being in the hands of Mr. Chaytor, your Lordship's agent?—I do not recollect.

11574. Chairman.] Did he charge your agent with keeping the counterpart of his lease?—I do not think he could have done that, for there never was a counterpart; in the first place, that article being on single sheets of paper, there were no counterparts to them; that article was in the hands of his own solicitor.

11575. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But, however, your Lordship says he was a little confused, and for anything your Lordship now recollects, he may have made some observation of that kind?—I do not think he could; he could not in my face, because he knew it was not true.

11576. He was a little excited at the time, was he not?—He is a very singular man; I do not think anybody understood what he said; he tried to confuse them all.

11577. Just so; perhaps he did not understand himself either?—Thoroughly; he is more knave than fool.

11578. He may have made some observation about your Lordship's agent having retained the counterpart of his lease, although your Lordship does not recollect at this moment that he did?—I do not think any person in court, except myself and himself, understood any one word he was saying; his object was to confuse.

11579. Then, if so, the witness who has given evidence upon the subject may have mistaken what he said?—I do not think he could possibly have understood it; I am quite sure the barrister did not understand it even afterwards.

11580. Chairman.] Supposing the witness to have stated he believed the man took the benefit of the Insolvent Act, and that the lease was given up in trust to the agent, Mr. Chaytor, and it was kept in Mr. Chaytor's office, would that be correct?—No, the witness has made a great mistake there. It was distinctly asked him by the counsel whether or no he had ever been insolvent or bankrupt, and he was very indignant, and said he never was either; I distinctly remember that myself.

11581. Was there any question asked as to the lease being in existence?—No; it was in existence; the article is in existence, so is the lease.

11582. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But did it appear in evidence upon that occasion in court that the lease was in existence?—Walshe stated it was; that the lease was in the hands of the mortgagees, and that the article was in the hands of Mr. Duckett, his attorney; I recollect that perfectly.

11583. Chairman.] Was it stated, when his vote was rejected, that it was in consequence of his not being able to produce the lease that he was not registered?—Certainly not; he was rejected by the barrister, because he would not swear that the Thomas Drake, upon whose life he desired to register, was alive.

11584. Now, was that statement apparent to anybody who was attending to what was going on in court?—It was said in a very loud voice by the barrister, and by Walshe too, that he would not swear the Thomas Drake was alive, but that a Thomas Drake was.

11585. Then your Lordship has a distinct recollection of such a declaration as that, or such a thing as that having been stated in open court at the time alluded to?—I have, by Mr. Howley the barrister and by James Walshe of Garrymore.

11586. Could anybody sitting as near to the bench as your Lordship is now sitting to the Chairman, fail of hearing that declaration?—Quite impossible.

11587. Supposing him to have attended to the case at all?—Quite impossible, for Mr. Howley, the barrister, called silence and addressed him pointedly, "Will you swear that the Thomas Drake of Rayhill, mentioned in that article, is alive?"

"No, I will not," was his reply, in a very loud voice; "but I will swear a Thomas Drake is;" upon which the barrister said, "Go off the table, Sir."

11588. Mr. Hogg.] From what your Lordship says, I gather that the attention of the court was prominently called to the circumstance that there were two Thomas Drakes, father and son?—The father being dead, he wished to establish the son as being the man.

11589. And that the counsel called Walshe's attention prominently to that fact?—He did. There is another fact connected with it, which will prove a good deal that his object was not registration, which I believe will turn out to be the fact, that he was registered only two or three years before, and his name now stands in the county books, and he is entitled to vote upon the old lease of Garrymore, and his object in coming forward to register a second time was to establish this old fictitious article.

11590. Whether your Lordship's family were affected or not, you would have considered it your duty, when sitting as a magistrate, to call the attention of counsel in court to the circumstance of a man's swearing generally that Thomas Drake was living, when to your Lordship's knowledge the person adverted to was dead?—I am not sure I would have interfered; I think not unless it had been to establish this fictitious title to a property; I do not think I would, because I never did interfere in any way, though I sat there very frequently; I never make any observation. My object in sitting there is in order that I may be an eyewitness to the system of perjury and fraud I see going on at the registration in Tipperary daily, in order that I may state what I see in the House of Lords afterwards; that is my object chiefly.

11591. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] I find the witness, Mr. Walshe, in answer to a question that was put to him says this: "I heard Lord Glengall say that he (that is that Walshe) was not entitled to his franchise, and I heard him say something about the lease." Now is it in the recollection of your Lordship that you said anything to that effect in open court, that Walshe was not entitled to his franchise?—I cannot say whether I did or not; anybody might have heard what I said to Counsellor Mulcahy.

11592. The witness says, "I heard Lord Glengall say in court that he (Walshe) was not entitled to his franchise;" then your Lordship apprehends you may have said something to that effect?—I cannot say I did or did not; I do not recollect.

11593. Chairman.] Was what you said to Counsellor Mulcahy said in a loud tone of voice or a whisper?—Quite loud enough to be heard by people within five or six of us.

11594. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You leaned over the bench?—I leaned over the bench.

11595. Then there was no occasion for speaking very loud?—No.

11596. I find it is also stated by Walshe that he heard your Lordship make observations to the barrister; your Lordship had some conversation with the barrister in open court about Walshe, I believe?—I had; I said to the barrister "If this man is prepared to swear that Thomas Drake is alive, I am prepared to go upon the table and swear the contrary."

11597. Do you recollect any other conversation you had about it?—No, I had no more; I had none other.

11598. It was shortly before the court broke up?—Just before; he was the last vote, W.

11599. About four or five o'clock?—About five o'clock; it was getting quite dark; it was in the month of January.

11600. I find that Mr. Walshe qualifies his answer with respect to the transaction that your Lordship has been asked about by the Chairman, this way; he says, "as well as I recollect," so and so; "I believe the man took the benefit of the Act," and so on. Now you observe the whole of the statement is qualified by a reference to the recollection and belief of the witness; it is not a positive statement?—The man was very indignant at being asked if he had ever been an insolvent; he denied it; in fact, he never was an insolvent, I know it myself; I know him well enough.

11601. Chairman.] Then am I to understand this Walshe, of Garrymore, never was an insolvent?—He never was.

11602. Never took the benefit of the Act?—Never; he swore so at the time, and I believed him.

The Earl of Glengall.

11603. Mr. Lefroy.] Did he deny that loud enough to be heard by Walshe, the witness?—He did.

11604. By the court in general?—Very loud; he was very indignant about it, in answer to Counsellor Mulcahy, who asked him who were his assignees, or some question of that sort.

11605. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You observe the witness Walshe does not state that Walshe, the claimant of the franchise, stated or did not state what your Lordship now says in court, but he gives his belief as to the matter of fact, namely, "I believe the man took the benefit of the Act." He was not giving an account of what occurred in court, but he was speaking of facts independent?—I do not think Dennis Walshe, the witness, understood the question at all, or knew what his namesake and relative, James Walshe, was endeavouring to do; I do not think he was at all aware of it.

11606. Chairman.] Is he any relation?—I believe he is a cousin.

11607. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] That is your Lordship's impression, that Dennis Walshe, the witness, did not understand this confused story?—I do not think he had the least idea that James Walshe was endeavouring to establish a fictitious lease through the means of registration.

11608. Was your Lordship aware that notice had been served by what is called the liberal interest for Walshe?—I was not aware of it, nor do I believe it; I believe that Walshe sent in his own notice, because they must know very well that Walshe would what is called vote with his landlord from particular circumstances; he would and always did.

11609. But has he done so since the first election after the Reform Act?—We have had no contest.

11610. But it is your Lordship's expectation he will vote with his landlord whenever he shall be registered?—If a great number of acts of kindness would induce a man to do so, I should think he would.

11611. Does it occur to your Lordship, although abstract acts of kindness from the landlord to the tenant might insure the tenant to vote for the landlord, that such a man as you describe Walshe to be, who gets on the table to commit flat perjury, and to obtain his franchise by fraud, that he would be the man to be influenced by acts of kindness to vote for his landlord?—I never heard of James Walshe having committed an improper act in his life before; I have always been told by people, that I considered enemies of his, that he was a great rogue, but I always disbelieved it; and lent him this large sum of money, believing him to be a very injured man; and I never had reason to see him in any other character till that day.

11612. However, after the exhibition of that day, I may ask, does your Lordship still entertain a confident expectation that Walshe will vote with his landlord whenever he has an opportunity of doing so; is he the man to be influenced by the sentiments your Lordship ascribes to him, or is inclined to ascribe to him?—It is very difficult to say; I could not pass an opinion on him now, since that day.

11613. You are not so confident of his vote as you were before that day?—I really could give no opinion upon that; I think he would probably vote as I liked, in order to do away the bad impression; because the lease is out very soon, and it is a very heavy concern.

11614. Would that be calculated to do away the bad impression felt by your Lordship?—No, nothing on earth would, ever since that day.

11615. Your Lordship stated you sat on the bench as a magistrate?—Yes.

11616. Is it any part of the duty of a magistrate to sit on the bench as such during the registry?—No; but it is very common in Tipperary.

11617. But it is not considered in Tipperary, I presume, any part of the duty of a magistrate to do so?—No.

11618. Has a magistrate sitting on the bench during the registry any duties to perform on the bench?—None.

11619. Why, then, if he sits there, he does not sit as a magistrate?—When a magistrate goes into the quarter-sessions court he invariably takes his seat on the bench.

11620. And during the trial of offences he has duties to perform?—Yes.

11621. He sits as a judge then; but during the registry, I believe I am correct in saying, he has no duty to perform, and if he interferes at all he is an intruder; is is he not so; is he not an intruder if he interferes at all?—No person speaks in court, unless he is put on his oath, except the lawyers.

11622. And, of course, if a magistrate not on oath, and not examined as a witness, speaks, he is an intruder on the duties of the assistant barrister?—Yes; and I never saw a magistrate make any observation before I did that myself.

11623. Accordingly it is the practice in Tipperary for the magistrates to attend the registries, and to sit on the bench?—In Clonmel, out of curiosity, they go in.

11624. Does your Lordship consider it mere curiosity?—I do not; not exactly curiosity; I think they go in to listen to the outrageous swearing of people with regard to the value of land; I think that is their great object.

11625. But is it merely as a pastime, or is it that they have an object in going there; have they any object, because it is not an agreeable pastime to hear outrageous swearing?—I think there are a great many magistrates in Clonmel, who have no occupation, and they go in to amuse themselves there.

11626. But when you say the magistrates in Clonmel, do you include the Tipperary magistrates?—Yes; the neighbours within two or three miles of the place.

11627. They do not go there, of course, I need hardly ask the question, to encourage the system of outrageous swearing?—No.

11628. Do not you think their presence discourages it?—It may.

11629. Then probably their presence is calculated rather to damp it, is it not; rather to repress it than otherwise?—Yes, I think it is; I think from the country gentlemen attending, that people would be more careful, seeing witnesses from their own neighbourhood there.

11630. Their own tenants?—Not exactly so much their own tenants as a class of men who come to attend that registry for the purpose of bolstering up these people who swear so outrageously.

11631. And the presence of the magistrates on the bench has a salutary influence in checking that?—I think seeing persons attending from their own neighbourhood decidedly checks their swearing so extensively as they otherwise would.

11632. Does it occur to your Lordship that these magistrates may consider they are doing public good by sitting on the bench during the registry, in order by their presence to check what they consider a very improper course of practice?—The few that would do it may consider that a little.

11633. Perhaps your Lordship may have acted through that motive, in taking your seat on the bench during the registry?—No; mine is decidedly for the purpose of seeing how the whole system works.

11634. But of course you must consider that a nobleman of your influence might exercise a very salutary control over a system of this kind, which you consider so very improper, by attending and by your presence discouraging it?—No, I am afraid it is beyond that.

11635. But still your Lordship's presence on the bench is calculated to have that effect, although perhaps it may not have so much as you could wish?—No, I should think not much.

11636. Why, the presence of other magistrates, your Lordship seems to think, has that effect?—It may in a degree, but it is impossible to tell in an extensive county like that.

11637. But persons who come from your own neighbourhood, as your Lordship described it, persons coming to bolster up the cases of others, does it not occur to your Lordship that your presence on the bench is calculated to have that effect?—I think they might perhaps be more careful before neighbours what they asserted.

11638. And before the gentry and noblemen of the county?—Yes; they might be more particular, perhaps, in a large audience.

11639. But an audience of magistrates and of persons of station and rank?—I do not know whether that would make much difference to them.

11640. Do not the lower orders in Tipperary hold station and rank in sufficient estimation to be to a certain degree deterred by the presence of rank and station?—There are various motives among them; they never are anxious to prove too much as to the value of land, not before neighbours.

11641. And accordingly the presence of neighbours who know the value, is it not calculated in itself to deter men from going too far, as your Lordship puts it, in proving the value of land?—I think it is more apt to confine them to the truth.

11642. Then I think I am justified in taking this to be the result of your Lordship's answers, that you do consider that the presence of the magistrates and other persons of station on the bench during the registry, is calculated to prevent the claimants of the franchise and their witnesses from exceeding the truth as to the value of land?—I certainly think that a large audience, composed of neighbours, may make those persons more particular with regard to their swearing as to the value of land; I do think that.

The Earl of Glengall.

11643. Accordingly it is a salutary practice, you consider?—I think it is a very good thing always to have a very full court in Clonmel for that reason.

11644. But magistrates sitting on the bench?—Yes, I see no reason why they should not; I always mean to do it myself.

11645. Your Lordship does it constantly, as I collect?—Constantly.

11646. Seldom allow a session to pass without sitting on the bench?—At Clonmel, but not at other places.

11647. Is it your Lordship's practice, at Clonmel, to leave the court when the registry for the borough commences?—Yes; I take no interest or trouble myself about that.

11648. Then have you never sat on the bench during the registry for the borough?—I do not think I ever did. If I ever did, it was only for two or three minutes, not more.

11650. The presence of magistrates of the county on the bench during the registry for the borough, of course, is not calculated to have the same salutary effect in checking excessive valuation, as it has in the county, the county magistrates not having the same influence over the inhabitants of the borough that they have over the tenantry of the county?—I have no idea about the borough business system.

11651. But your Lordship understands that whatever good effect the presence of magistrates of the county may have while the county registry is going on, it cannot be expected to have the same effect in the borough any more than in any strange place?—I do not know whether it would or not; they know their own business much better. The inhabitants of the borough know the value of each others houses much better.

11653. Are not the magistrates for the county, residing in the neighbourhood, voters for the borough within seven miles; I believe almost all the magistrates in the neighbourhood reside within seven miles?—No, they do not.

11654. But of those who attend the registry sessions?—No.

11655. Some of them do?—Yes; Mr. Bagwell does.

11657. Mr. Pedder?—Mr. Pedder is not.

11658. However, I collect, your Lordship, from your evidence, to intimate that you would not have interfered to prevent this man getting his franchise, because you considered, if he got his franchise, your Lordship would have secured his vote?—I knew he had been registered before that, one registry.

11659. And, accordingly, it would not have been the fact that your Lordship could have had any interest in interfering to prevent this man getting his franchise, because you considered if he got it you would have secured his vote?—In either way I should not have interfered.

11660. But your Lordship takes a good deal of interest in the registration?—A great deal.

11661. In the establishment, or perhaps the re-establishment, I may say, of the conservative interest?—I do, a very great deal, indeed.

11662. Then your Lordship has no hesitation in saying, I presume, that, as far as you consider yourself at liberty to do so, you would exercise your influence in the county to re-establish the conservative interest?—I would, certainly, in every possibly way, fairly and constitutionally, of course.

11663. I believe there was a meeting at Clonmel some months ago?—There was.

11664. You presided then?—I did.

The Earl of Glengall.

11665. And the object of that meeting was, I believe, to raise up the fallen fortunes of the conservatives?—It was.

11666. And measures were taken for that purpose?—Yes.

11667. Funds subscribed?—Yes, there were.

11668. A very handsome subscription, by all accounts?—£. 1 a piece.

11669. No more?—No more.

11670. Well, I am afraid that will not be sufficient to sustain a contest for Tipperary; might I ask you, was the borough included in that?—Yes, it was.

11671. Well, was there an additional 1 l. subscribed to open the borough?—No.

11672. Now, with respect to Mr. Mulcahy, he is stated to have been the counsel, and, I believe, Mr. Kellett was the attorney, employed in the registry?—I do not quite recollect whether it was Mr. Kellett or Mr. Pedder; one of the two.

11673. They are partners, are they not?—I do not know.

11674. Mr. Mulcahy is the counsel regularly employed; he is the standing counsel, I believe, for the conservative registry?—He has been very frequently employed; I am not aware that he is the standing counsel; I believe he is only from quarter sessions to quarter sessions.

11675. But he is frequently employed?—Generally.

11676. And is it for the conservatives?—Why, yes, I should say it is.

11677. Is there no fund for the employment of counsel to attend to the registry?—I do not know how he is paid.

11678. But he is paid?—I take for granted no counsel would attend the quarter sessions without being paid.

11679. I presume Mr. Pedder and Mr. Kellett are paid by somebody?—I do not know.

11680. Do you think they volunteer?—No; I am quite sure they are paid by somebody or other.

11681. Well, do you consider it likely they are paid by any one out of his own private purse; that any one or more would volunteer to pay out of their own private purses the expenses of counsel and solicitors?—I do not know how they are paid.

11682. Have you no reason to suppose there is a public stock-purse for the payment of counsel and solicitors?—I think there will be, but I do not think there is at present.

11683. Do you think it is done on credit at present?—I do not know how Mr. Pedder or Mr. Kellett are paid at the present moment, nor formerly.

11684. But your Lordship has nothing to do with the payment of them, of course, when you say you do not know; you have nothing to do with the employment of counsel or solicitors?—I never employed Mr. Mulcahy, Mr. Pedder, nor Mr. Kellett.

11685. Nor any other counsel or solicitor to attend the registry?—No, nor any other counsel or solicitor; I never did that.

11686. But you have hopes there will be a sufficient fund hereafter for the employment of counsel and solicitors to attend to the registry?—Yes; I have no doubt that the gentry of the county will subscribe for that purpose, just the same as the other party are subscribing.

11687. There was a good deal of exertion made, I believe, in former times, to obtain the town's votes for the county and the borough, by means of subscription in Tipperary, in the case where Mr. Wise and the present Lord Donoughmore were turned out; was there not a subscription then raised?—I believe there was a subscription raised for Mr. Wise.

11688. I think your Lordship subscribed then?—I did.

11689. And also in the case of Mr. Dawson Damer?—No, I did not subscribe then.

11690. But, however, from whatever source the funds came, certain it is that counsel and attornies act regularly at the registry sessions for the conservative interest?—Yes, they do; and in the other interest also.

11691. And have they counsel also, the opposite side?—I have frequently seen Mr. Sheil himself acting as counsel.

11692. Did he address the barrister; make a speech?—Frequently.

11693. Make a speech?—A few observations.

11694. Was it law or oratory?—Law.

The Earl of Glengall.

11695. But I understand your Lordship to say that you have no idea whence the funds come that are applied to the payment of counsel?—Yes, I have an idea, a guess; I suppose that the gentlemen of the county subscribe.

11696. But your Lordship does not contribute to any fund that goes to pay the counsel and attorney?—I have contributed, but not directly in that way.

11697. I am to understand, then, that there is a stock-purse, that there is a fund raised by subscription?—There will be; but I do not think there is at present a regular stock-purse; as far as I know, not a regular one.

11698. But, however, thus far your Lordship is able to say, you have heretofore contributed money, and that that money has been applied to it?—I have contributed money for general conservative purposes; but whether that money is applied to the registry, or to newspapers, or that sort of thing, I do not know; I do not know what they do with it; they may do anything they like with it.

11699. Your Lordship is not one of the managers of the fund?—No, nothing to do with it.

11700. There are managers of the fund, I presume; treasurers?—I declare I do not know that there are managers; of course there must be some person or other who manages it; but I am not aware there are such things as managers, or any system of that sort.

11701. Is there no committee appointed to decide to what purpose the fund shall be applied?—No, there are committees appointed for registration purposes of gentlemen of the county among themselves; but I do not know how they manage their matters.

11702. But in whose discretion is it to apply this fund?—That I am sure I do not know.

11703. Your Lordship can form no conjecture as to that?—No, I can form no conjecture of a decided nature at all; I take it, that is in the breast of one or two individuals.

11704. Then there are one or two individuals?—I suppose somebody must manage it.

11705. But there are one or two individuals who have the management of the fund, and the application of it to conservative purposes?—I should say so, certainly.

11706. And that fund your Lordship has contributed to from time to time?—I have contributed to the general purposes.

11707. To the fund applicable to general purposes?—Yes.

11708. Liberally, I have no doubt?—No, I should not say that.

11709. I mean with reference to others; your Lordship was not behindhand, I dare say?—No, it was a very trifling contribution, I should say, as far as I have ever learnt.

11710. But then, I dare say, your Lordship has not been behindhand, at least you have contributed as much as other people have to this fund?—I never saw any account.

11711. But probably there is no other man in the county who has contributed more handsomely; there can be very little doubt of that from what your Lordship has stated?—I should say there are other people who have contributed quite as much, as far as I can learn from common report.

11712. But probably not more?—Indeed I should say more; I could almost say one person more.

11713. Is he a peer?—Yes.

11714. Then, with the exception of that one person, your Lordship, I think, has no doubt you have contributed as handsomely as any in the county, if not more so?—Yes, I dare say I have, though I have never seen the list; I should say so, certainly.

11715. Then the two principal contributors to this fund are both peers; your Lordship and this other nobleman?—I could not say that.

11716. At least as far as you can conjecture or recollect at present?—Really the money subscribed, that I know of, is so very trifling, as I told you it was only 1 l., that I do not know.

11717. Still, whatever it was, two of the principal contributors are your Lordship and another nobleman?—I cannot say that, because the only monies I ever saw paid were 1 l. a head.

11718. Your Lordship does not mean that that is the only sum you contributed to this fund?—There has been no regular fund; of course I cannot talk about a fund when that fund does not exist.

The Earl of Glengall.

11719. But from time to time it did exist?—I think it will hereafter; it must be very little indeed.

11720. From time to time there has been in existence a fund, created by subscription from different gentlemen of the county and noblemen?—I could hardly call it a fund regularly created, because it was not; the one I know of at least; I have no knowledge whatever of it; it takes place in the north part of the county; they have funds there of some description or other, but I do not know what they are.

11721. I am speaking of what is within your Lordship's own knowledge; it is within your Lordship's own knowledge, as you have already stated, that there has been from time to time a contribution, or have been contributions?—There have been small sums, I believe, subscribed.

11722. Among the gentlemen of the county?—Among some of the gentlemen of the county.

11723. For conservative purposes?—Generally speaking, I should say so, certainly.

11724. And that your Lordship has contributed to those funds from time to time?—Yes.

11725. And another nobleman also?—And another nobleman and gentlemen; several noblemen; English noblemen as well as Irish noblemen.

11726. What, to this fund for Tipperary?—Small sums, yes; and English gentlemen also possessing property in Tipperary, small sums; 2 l., 3 l. and 5 l., and that sort of thing.

11727. I think you mentioned there are two or three gentlemen who have from time to time had the disposal of these sums?—Yes, I suppose there are.

11728. And your Lordship has not inquired particularly to what purposes they applied it?—No, I never asked them any question about that.

11729. But they are for general conservative purposes; that is your meaning, is it not?—Yes; sometimes for dinners, and sometimes for the establishment of reading-rooms and clubs, and all that sort of thing.

11730. What description of clubs, may I ask?—Reading-rooms.

11731. No secret clubs, no associations?—No, I never heard of any such thing.

11732. That is all gone by?—I never heard of such a thing in Tipperary as a secret club, never.

11733. As Orange clubs?—I never knew but of two men who admitted themselves they were Orangemen, in Tipperary; I never knew but two, that is, in the county; and I never knew there was an Orange club in the county of Tipperary until the Act of Parliament put them down; I was then told there were a dozen or so persons who were Orangemen in the town of Clonmel, and that that was the sum total of all the Orangemen that were known out of 400,000 inhabitants; and I believe that to be the truth; I never knew myself that there was an Orange club.

11734. But is it your Lordship's impression that there were not more than a dozen in Clonmel?—I particularly asked the master of the lodge how many he ever met, and he said 13 he thought was the outside he ever met.

11735. But are you aware that there were many members of that society who were not in the habit of meeting?—No.

11736. There is Mr. George Graham, do you know him?—Well.

11737. I think we had an admission from him that he was a member of the society, but never attended hardly?—I never knew but two men who told us openly they were Orangemen; I never knew but two.

11738. Now, to go back to the fund; it was subscribed, you say, for general conservative purposes; now, allow me to ask you, whether watching the registry, attending with counsel and attorney on behalf of the conservatives to watch the registry, as it is technically termed, whether that is not a conservative object?—I should think it is.

11739. Is it not the principal conservative object?—No, I do not think the principal.

11740. What would you say was the principal?—I should say the principal conservative object was a good newspaper; the press that would tell the truth in the country.

11741. But that is not yet established?—Yes, it is.

The Earl of Glengall.

11742. That is, a newspaper in Clonmel ?—Yes, the Tipperary Constitutional; that is the newspaper.

11743. To sustain that your Lordship considers the principal conservative object ?—One of the principal conservative objects.

11744. Is there any other conservative paper but the Constitutional ?—The Clonmel Advertiser is supposed to be so.

11745. And is that supported also as a conservative paper ?—That I am sure I cannot answer.

11746. But the Constitutional is the paper that is considered the conservative organ of Tipperary ?—I should say certainly.

11747. And of course that paper is supported, or in some degree assisted, by these funds occasionally ?—There again, I cannot exactly say; but this I know, that we have subscribed to support a paper, and that is considered a species of conservative affair.

11748. With the exception of the support to a good press, has your Lordship any doubt that attending at the registry, and endeavouring to effect the registry of as many conservatives as possible, and to check the registry of as many radicals as possible, is a prominent part of the conservative object ?—Yes.

11749. And of course you have no doubt that the funds that are so raised are applied in part to that purpose ?—Certainly.

11750. But I do not know whether I understood your Lordship to say that, as to the borough of Clonmel, you do not take any interest about that ?—No; very little.

11751. The great object is the county ?—Yes.

11752. Chairman.] In the first place, I presume, when you state that Mr. Sheil appeared as counsel on the other side, you mean by that, that he appeared in his forensic dress, his wig and gown ?—It is not the custom in Ireland for counsel to appear in courts as counsel in their wigs and gowns.

11753. But he did appear as counsel, and not as a partisan; he acted in the same way as counsel would, argued law points, and so on ?—Yes.

11754. And therefore, whether he was in his wig and gown or not, he was in the same condition as Counsellor Mulcahy ?—They never wear their wigs and gowns in the county courts, nor on circuit. He appeared as counsel for the liberal interest, the same as Mr. Mulcahy appeared for the contrary side.

11755. Now, we have heard a great deal of subscriptions on the conservative side, are there any subscriptions on the other side of the question ever ?—There is a registration society established in Tipperary, also upon the other side of the question, which was established before the conservatives ever thought of such a thing.

11756. Do you know at all who the members of that society are; are they the gentlemen of the county, or who are you chiefly alluding to, as being the members of that society ?—There are one or two gentlemen of the county, and the rest are not certainly what I consider the gentlemen of the county by any means; the shopkeepers in two or three of the large towns, generally speaking.

11757. Were there any clerical members of that society ?—Yes.

11758. Roman-catholic clergymen or Protestant clergymen ?—Roman-catholic clergymen.

11759. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Does your Lordship know this society of your own knowledge ?—I know it from the reports of the meetings in the Free Press, and from the proceedings being published, and the subscriptions being occasionally published.

11760. Is it a regular organized body ?—It calls itself the registration society of the county.

11761. Is it anything more than an occasional meeting of persons, inhabitants of the town or county ?—I cannot tell about their meetings, except what I see published.

11762. There is no peer of Parliament a member of that society ?—No.

11763. Chairman.] Is that as regularly a constituted society as any that has been in existence on the conservative side up to this present period ?—Quite; there are several societies of different sorts of that description, all composed of the same persons; the same persons are, generally speaking, members of all; such as the Tipperary Pacification Society, the Registration Society, the Tipperary Election Fund Society.

The Earl of Glengall.

11764. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] They are composed of the same individuals?—All the same individuals.

11765. Chairman.] Then there is an election fund on one side, and there may be on the other?—And there probably will be on the other.

11766. Then there has not yet been one in existence?—No.

11767. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But your Lordship has no reason to know the fact that there is an election fund on the other side?—I only know it from having seen it in the newspapers frequently, and this morning I read of several subscriptions being handed in to that fund.

11768. It is not a fund to sustain the present Members in their seats, is it?—Yes, it is.

11769. Now, is not that the specific object for which that fund is raised, to await the expenses of the coming contest?—Certainly; I understand so, at least.

11770. Then that is not for the purpose of registration?—No, it is a different fund.

11771. Then your Lordship is not aware that there is any fund whatever raised on what I may call the other side of the question; that is to say, the side opposed to your Lordship in politics, for the purpose of registration?—There was a society established for the purpose, and some funds, I understood, were obtained, but, of course, it is not possible for me to say what that fund is limited to.

11772. That is merely hearsay?—No, it was published in the newspapers; there were public meetings held for the purpose.

11773. Chairman.] Your Lordship has been asked your opinion on a great variety of points as connected with the conservative party; have you better evidence as to the many of those points than you have as to the existence of this society? —Yes, rather better, with regard to the conservatives, of the two.

11774. What is the distinction that you draw between the evidence in the one case and the evidence in the other?—I cannot exactly answer that question. I hear a great deal more from one side than I do from the other side; from the side I receive my intelligence entirely from closely examining the newspapers; watching all their proceedings in that way.

11775. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But the intelligence you have of the conservative party, you have the best means of ascertaining it to be authentic; you are one of that party yourself?—Yes.

11776. You are the head of it, or, perhaps, if not the head, at least one of the heads, one of the principal persons?—I suppose so, certainly, having the largest property of any man in the county.

11777. And, of course, no man has so good a right to know what the conservatives are about as your Lordship?—No.

11778. Chairman.] But still you have no doubt, from the means of public organs, that such a society has been in existence, and that such a society is in existence, as that which you state to be formed to support the present members? —I cannot say it is in existence now, for I believe the funds were so small that the members have had to pay the expenses themselves.

11779. But there is a fresh society now instituted for the purpose of supporting the present members in their seats?—Exactly.

11780. Have you ever had a thing called "justice-rent" collected in the county of Tipperary?—Very frequently.

11781. Do you know anything about that, as to the amounts paid, or in any way what the objects are?—The amounts paid have always been published in the newspapers; that is the only way I have of knowing it; and I have seen them collecting it.

11782. The newspapers have also proclaimed the objects of that rent?—Yes.

11783. How soon after the institution of the first liberal, I suppose I may call it political, society in Tipperary, did the conservatives form any conservative society?—The Conservative Society was formed at a very late date indeed; two or three months ago; three months ago, I should think. No, it was last December.

11784. Do you mean to say that that society, to which the honourable and learned Member alluded, was instituted after the justice-rent, as it is attempted to be called in the county of Tipperary, was instituted?—Some time after.

11785. Were the objects of the justice-rent, as far as you are aware of them from the appearance in the newspapers and so forth, local or general objects?—General objects; general election purposes, I always presumed.

The Earl of Glengall.

11786. Are you aware whether there has been any subscription from any peers to that justice-rent?—Yes.

11787. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Your Lordship has no knowledge of that fact?—Only by the accounts published in the newspapers.

11788. Does your Lordship bear in mind any peers who have subscribed to it?—I should say that I conceive Lord Milton has subscribed to it, and that Lord Shrewsbury has subscribed to it.

11789. Is Lord Milton a peer of Parliament?—No.

11790. Lord Shrewsbury is an English peer?—Yes.

11791. And is your Lordship quite clear that Lord Shrewsbury has subscribed to that particular fund?—Not perfectly certain. Lord Rossmore, I should say, has subscribed to it, but he is not a peer of Parliament; several peers have subscribed, but whether peers of Parliament I cannot say.

11792. Chairman.] Has it not been stated in the public papers, and never contradicted, that a very large proportion of Roman-catholic clergymen subscribed to that justice-rent?—It has.

11793. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] I believe they are not peers of Parliament?—Not yet.

11794. Mr. Hogg.] Your Lordship said you have seen the justice-rent collected?—I have.

11795. Where was the collection making?—At Cahir. I saw them collecting it.

11796. I mean the place; where was the collection made; at the Roman-catholic chapel?—At the gates.

11797. At the gates of the Roman-catholic chapel?—Yes.

11798. As people entered?—As people entered.

11799. Who were the collectors?—The coadjutor priest, and three or four shopkeepers.

11800. But either the priest, or one of the assisting priests, or some Roman-catholic clergyman was present?—He was, when I passed by.

11801. At the time that your Lordship speaks of?—Yes.

11802. Chairman.] Have there been pacificators sent down to the county of Tipperary, to your knowledge?—Yes, plenty of them.

11803. Who are they sent by?—There are several pacificators in the county Tipperary; but I do not know that they are sent down by the association in Dublin.

11804. But are they authorized by the association to act as such?—Yes.

11805. Have you any means of stating, from your own knowledge, what is their object?—The chief object is to attend to the registries, and to send up reports about illegal societies.

11806. I suppose the word pacificator intended to infer that these individuals cause peace and goodwill amongst men wherever they are?—Yes.

11807. Is it your opinion, or to your knowledge, do they succeed in causing peace and goodwill where they appear?—I think just the contrary, and particularly from the speeches which they delivered at the formation of the Tipperary Pacification Society.

11808. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] What do you consider was the tendency of those speeches?—The tendency was to excite the people against the Protestants by terming the Protestants of Tipperary Orangemen.

11809. Chairman.] Would that expression of Orangemen be likely to cause bad feeling rather than good among the inhabitants of the county?—Most decidedly; the speeches I allude to were uttered by Archdeacon Laffan and Mr. Lycet Pennefather.

11810. Is Archdeacon Laffan a Roman-catholic clergyman?—Yes.

11811. Is Mr. Lycet Pennefather a Roman-catholic clergyman or a Roman-catholic layman?—No, he is a Protestant layman.

11812. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] The son of a Protestant clergyman?—The son of a Protestant clergyman.

11814. Chairman.] Is he practically a pacificator, do you conceive?—The Rev. Mr. Pennefather is one of the most respectable gentlemen of the whole county.

11815. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But you do not set his character as a respectable gentleman in contrast with that of a pacificator?—Indeed I do.

The Earl of Glengall.

11816. That a pacificator cannot be a respectable gentleman?—I should have a very bad opinion of any person who held the language Mr. Lycet Pennefather did, as a pacificator, because his language was of so very strong and outrageous a nature, and of so bad a tendency, that a man could not be justified in using it.

11817. But your Lordship is not of opinion that no man can be a pacificator who does not hold such language; I presume that it is not of the essence of a pacificator to hold outrageous language?—I should say they would consider him of no use unless he did hold strong language.

11818. Outrageous language?—Yes; unless he were a violent partisan, he is of no use as a pacificator.

11819. But you do not mean to say a man may not be a violent political partisan without using outrageous language?—No, certainly not.

11820. You have told us you are a very strong political partisan, and the distinction between being a strong partisan and using violent language?—But this is as regards the pacificators; the objects they wish to attain; and I say one of them is to create and keep up political agitation.

11821. Now how does that appear?—The professed objects are, that they should attend to the registration of counties and report upon illegal societies; that is the chief thing. If they attend to the registration, of course they are obliged to attend public meetings and make strong speeches, which they do, and use very strong language in the quarter sessions courts.

11822. And is that part of their duty, to attend the quarter sessions courts?—I consider it is, by their own publications, emanating from the association in Dublin, which are printed, published and circulated, and which I can produce.

11823. You consider it then part of the duty of the persons called pacificators to attend the quarter sessions courts and use violent language?—I cannot say it is their duty; but I say they do it; I can give instances of it.

11824. Would you not consider that rather an abuse of their office than as a part of their duty?—No, I think that the association, in establishing that system of pacification throughout the country, intended their own partisans to keep up the ferment of agitation.

11825. From what do you derive that?—From Archdeacon Laffan and Mr. Pennefather's speeches on the formation of the society in Tipperary.

11827. Has your Lordship any reason to suppose there are private instructions, or any instructions except what have gone forward?—I have reason to believe there are private instructions, and for this reason, that every person in Ireland who at all watches the proceedings of the association in Dublin must be aware there are committees sitting up stairs, where there are deliberations of a secret and private nature, which none but a member of that committee is admitted into; and from them emanate, I understand, the orders to the pacificators, and it is to them to whom the returns of the state of the registries are made.

11828. Is it your Lordship's opinion that secret committees are sitting, to which no persons have access except members of those committees?—I merely speak from reports in the newspapers, that there are those committees.

11829. Newspapers, on which side of the question?—Both sides.

11830. Is it your Lordship's recollection that in what is called the liberal press you have ever seen a statement that a secret committee was sitting, to which no persons but members of that committee have access?—What I said was, that there were committees to which no persons but members of that committee had access.

11831. Are their proceedings open to the public, or are they not?—I understand they are not; that the debates are open to the public on paying 1 s. a piece on going in, but not the deliberation of the committee up stairs, to which all matters almost of a confidential nature are referred, and they are daily referred to that committee up stairs, as you will see if you look to public prints with regard to the debates below stairs at the Corn Exchange.

ceedings are not known or disclosed; has your Lordship ever seen a statement to that effect in any liberal newspaper?—I cannot charge my recollection either way; that is my impression.

11833. Then your Lordship cannot say but that the impression you have taken up may have been collected entirely from statements in the conservative papers?—I should say it was more from conversing with Roman-catholic gentlemen; talking over the subject of the association generally with Catholic gentlemen who are not members of it.

11834. Then, if they were not members of it, their authority on the subject is not the highest; they have not the same means of knowledge that your Lordship has of the proceedings of the Conservative Society?—I cannot be aware what they judge from; I stated that in the House of Lords, and I was not contradicted, nor have I yet been contradicted with regard to referring matters to committees up-stairs at the Corn Exchange.

11835. Your Lordship has that impression strongly on your mind?—Yes.

11836. But, at present, you cannot say that it is in consequence of statements in newspapers that you acquired that impression?—It is from statements in newspapers, and also from conversations with Roman-catholic gentlemen with whom I have talked the matter over frequently, that such is the fact; that there is a committee or committees (I do not know whether the singular or the plural number was used) to which matters of a confidential nature are referred.

11837. And your Lordship added, I think, that secret instructions emanate from them?—Private instructions; I do; I believe so.

11838. Emanate from these private committees, and that they are despatched to the pacificators all over the country?—I do believe so.

11839. Is that impression also taken up from the newspapers?—Not altogether from the newspapers, but from general report in the country, in parts of Tipperary.

11840. Was there ever an instance stated, in which any pacificator or any other person had any private instructions from any such committee?—It is very generally reported that such is the case.

11841. But was there a single instance stated in which that was believed to have occurred?—I never heard one proved in a court of justice, certainly; but it is the general opinion of the people in the country.

11842. Is it at all within your Lordship's knowledge that it occurred in a single instance?—I never saw any communication with my own eyes.

11843. Have you ever heard any single pacificator named who had received private instruction to act differently from that which emanated from the body at large who appointed him?—I have heard of a pacificator who received a private communication with regard to the general system pursued from leading people in the association.

11844. Is that from the committee?—I understood it to be from persons belonging to the committee.

11845. Is it from the committee, the body, or from persons accidentally belonging to the committee?—I should say from persons accidentally belonging to the committee.

11846. Would you not call that private instruction, and nothing but private communication between persons in Dublin and persons in the country, but not as an official communication emanating from the committee?—That is drawing a very nice distinction.

11847. But still, will not your Lordship draw that distinction, that if those instructions did not go down to Tipperary from the persons from whom they emanated, as members of the committee, but as private individuals, would you not draw that distinction?—I am not quite sure that I should.

11848. Did I understand your Lordship rightly to say, it was rather that they happened to be accidental members of the committee, than that those instructions went down from them as members?—I never heard it said it came officially from the committee.

11849. Then, is it your Lordship's impression that these private instructions, whatever they were, were sent down to persons in Tipperary, not officially, but as private communications?—I cannot say in which light they were sent down.

11850. Were they not private letters, or was it conversation?—The report, generally speaking, was, that private communications had come down.

The Earl of Glengall.

11851. But it was a mere report, and, of course, rather vague; but did the report fix itself upon the nature of the communication; was it written, or was it oral?—"Come down," was the expression I always heard used; they came by letter, I presume; but whether by letter or orally, I do not know.

11852. They must either have come by letter or by a special messenger; would it not occur to your lordship it was by letter?—I cannot possibly form a judgment how a man receives his communications.

11853. But your lordship cannot apprehend that these communications were anything more than private communications, whatever they may have been?—They were on public subjects.

11854. Private communications on public subjects?—Yes.

11855. And I think your lordship mentioned that you did know one instance in which these communications had been received by a pacificator from persons accidentally belonging to the committee?—Yes.

11856. Would it be fair to ask your lordship his name?—I do not think it would, for it is not safe to mention people's names in that part of the world.

11858. And that I believe, I may assume, as the authority for it all, rumour?—General rumour of the country.

11860. From the account of their proceedings in other places, as well as Tipperary, have you any doubt that it was not their object to promote peace or good will, but, on the contrary, agitation throughout Ireland?—I think it was their object to promote agitation throughout the whole country; and I particularly consider that the consequence of their conduct in Sligo produced a great deal of turbulence and trouble from what I have heard stated by persons connected with that country, and also what I have seen stated in the newspapers, and in the reports of the constabulary of the district.

11861. Now, do you conceive that they were acting in contravention of their instructions, or in pursuance of their real instructions; I ask your lordship, whether you conceive that those men would act against the real instructions they received, or whether they were not rather acting in pursuance of the instructions they received?—I think they were acting in pursuance of the private instructions they received; I believe so firmly.

11862. Then you conceive that their acts were the best test of the instructions they received?—I do.

11863. You have seen, of course, from time to time, the proceedings of this association in Dublin?—I have, regularly.

11864. From the report of those proceedings, did it not appear that it was quite a matter of course, from day to day, and from meeting to meeting, to refer different matters to committees sitting above stairs?—Yes, the expression is, "let it be referred to the committee up stairs."

11865. Then it was not simply from the statement in the papers that these committees existed, and that matters were referred to them, but from the course of the proceedings of these societies that you collected these facts?—I collected these facts from persons who have paid a shilling to go in and hear the debates at the Corn Exchange, and who heard them say, that matters were referred to committees up stairs.

11866. Then you have collected the course of their proceedings from eyewitnesses of them?—I have, from eyewitnesses.

11867. Chairman.] I understand this is from Roman-catholic gentlemen?—Yes.

11868. Not from Protestant gentlemen?—No.

11869. But from Roman-catholic gentleman, who, although present for once or twice, were not members of the association?—No, going from curiosity; paying 1 s. to go in.

11870. Mr. Lefroy.] As I collected from you, your impression was, that those were secret committees?—That those were committees into which a man could not enter without being a member.

11871. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] When you say without being a member, do you mean mean without being a member of the committee itself, or without being a member of the association?—Without being a member of the committee itself.

The Earl of Glengall.

11872. And that your Lordship states as your impression?—Certainly.

11873. Now, does your Lordship mean to say that you read anything to that effect; I will put the question once more, in order that your Lordship may be quite clear upon it, that you ever read anything to that effect in any liberal newspaper, namely, that the committees up stairs, the existence of which no one seems to doubt, that those were secret or private meetings; did you ever read anything to that effect?—I cannot say that I did; not in a liberal newspaper.

11874. Then if you read it in any paper, your impression is that you read it in a conservative paper?—Yes, I am sure I have, several times.

11875. Mr. Lefroy.] And you inferred that also from the conversation with those Roman-catholic gentlemen, who, not being members of the association, yet attended occasionally?—Certainly.

11876. Chairman.] With regard to the Roman-catholic Archdeacon Laffan, and the Protestant layman Mr. Pennefather, have they continued pacificators subsequent to these violent speeches to which you alluded?—Yes.

11877. How long ago were those violent speeches delivered?—At the formation of the society; about five or six months ago, I should say; I have the speeches.

11878. And they had continued in that office of pacificators?—Yes.

11879. Are you aware that any of those pacificators, to which you have also alluded, in other counties have or have not continued to act as pacificators since?—I cannot speak to other counties.

11880. Now, the object of these pacificators is to encourage parties to register, is it not?—Yes.

11881. In your experience, are you aware that the lower class of voters, or at least of persons who would claim to vote, are disposed or indisposed to come forward to register?—Very much indisposed to register.

11882. What is the groundwork of their indisposition?—Disobliging their landlords.

11883. Why should they disoblige their landlords?—Because the agitators intimidate them, and force them to vote for candidates against their wishes.

11884. Then, am I to understand that the landlords have one view of the propriety of the candidates and the tenants another?—No; the landlords, generally speaking, have one view with regard to the candidates, the agitators and the priests a contrary one, and the tenants would rather go with their landlords if it were not for the agitators and the priests, generally speaking.

11885. And, therefore, they are disinclined to vote?—They would rather not register.

11886. Then, am I to understand that, supposing them to register, they are not free agents when they give their votes, generally speaking?—Generally speaking, they are not, I should say.

11887. They are deprived of their free agency, and vote according to the wishes of the priests and the agitators rather than according to their own?—They are afraid not to do that.

11888. But when parties do come up to register, are they indisposed to establish their vote, or are they disposed to go to the utmost limit that can be imagined in supporting the value of their tenements?—I think when they come forward they are generally disposed to make out the full value.

11889. And therefore your belief is, that the register is incumbered by a great number of bad votes; is that it?—I am perfectly sure it is, speaking of the registration in Tipperary.

11890. Do you think these pacificators are likely to prevent or increase it?—To increase it materially.

11891. Why?—Because the people dare not refuse to go forward and register, and swear to a value which in all probability the land is not equal to.

11892. Then you think that these pacificators, whatever other effects they may have, will have this effect of creating a number of fictitious votes to be put on the registry in Ireland?—I am quite sure of it.

11893. Mr. Lefroy.] They serve notices on the tenants, do they not?—They do.

11894. Chairman.] What, whether they will or no?—Yes, without asking them.

11895. Have you been present at any registry since their institution, or since the the thing has been in full activity?—Yes, I should say so; I should think so, certainly.

11896. Have you observed any difference on the part of the people coming up to register; have there been more claimants, or how?—I never attended a registry before the establishment of the pacificators.

11897. Then you can give no opinion as to the comparative proceedings on the part of claimants?—No.

11898. Mr. Hogg.] Your Lordship has stated the professed object of the public instructions to pacificators is to promote peace and goodwill?—Of course.

11899. You have stated that, in point of fact, as far as your local knowledge goes, and as far as you have heard and understood from others, that, in point of fact, these pacificators are violent political agitators?—They are, certainly. I judge so from their speeches at the formation of the society.

11900. From what they say and from what they do?—Yes.

11901. Has your Lordship ever known or heard that the general association has expressed any dissatisfaction at the conduct of these pacificators, as respects their acting in a way different from the instructions that were given to them?—No.

11902. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You have mentioned two of these pacificators, Archdeacon Laffan and Lycet Pennefather; do you recollect any others who made speeches of the same character as those persons described?—No. The only speeches reported at any length were the speeches of those two gentlemen.

11903. Your Lordship does not recollect, then, any other instance in which pacificators have made violent speeches except those two?—If I had been aware we were going to enter into this subject of pacificators, I could have brought down documents proving very violent speeches from a vast number of persons who are pacificators, upon various subjects, such as tithes, universal suffrage, vote by ballot, and the repeal of the Union. Every one of them almost were repealers at that time, when repeal was the order of the day.

11904. Is it in your Lordship's recollection that pacificators were in existence at the time when the repeal was on foot?—No; they were churchwardens then.

11905. I am speaking now of speeches made by pacificators after they became such, not before they became such; does your Lordship recollect any instance, except those of Archdeacon Laffan and Lycet Pennefather, in which pacificators have made use of violent language on any of those topics your Lordship speaks of?—We have not had any public meeting in Tipperary lately.

11906. That is, since the pacificators have been in existence?—Yes, there have been public meetings since they have been in existence, but not very lately; not within the last three months, I think; I cannot charge my memory.

11907. How long have the pacificators been in existence?—I should think about six months; a little more perhaps.

11908. Then these violent speeches on the repeal of the Union and these other topics were made years before the pacificators were in existence?—No.

11909. The repeal of the Union has not been heard of lately?—No; I said that many of these people who joined the pacificators' society were formerly repealers, and have been great persons for attending meetings for the abolition of tithes, and universal suffrage.

11910. Then was that before they became pacificators?—Yes; we have had no tithe abolition meetings lately.

11911. Perhaps since; at least none of those made a strong impression on your Lordship's mind?—There has been one in Clonmel for corporation reform and the abolition of tithes; I think it was called a county meeting, but I do not exactly recollect.

11912. Did the pacificators for the county attend?—I do not believe there were 70 people there altogether; I have not a doubt that the pacificators of the town of Clonmel were at that meeting, but there were not above 70 people at it altogether.

11913. Permit me to confine your attention at present to the pacificators for the county; then your Lordship's impression is, that the pacificators for the county did not attend there?—I do not know.

11914. At all events your Lordship has no recollection of having read any violent speeches made by pacificators from the county Tipperary at that meeting at Clonmel, to which your Lordship alludes?—I do not know what description of speeches speeches were made there at all; it was a very small meeting; it broke up in a few minutes.

The Earl of Glengall.

11915. But whatever they were, they made no impression on your Lordship's mind as having been very violent?—No.

11916. Then it comes to this, that since the pacificators have been appointed, with the exception of Archdeacon Laffan and Lycet Pennefather, your Lordship cannot recollect any instance in which pacificators have made violent speeches?—Yes, I consider the Crown solicitor, at the quarter sessions, who is a pacificator, who was lately appointed by the Government to the situation of Crown solicitor, and who is a member of the association; I consider him to have made a most violent speech at Clonmel, during the registration at the quarter sessions, about three weeks ago.

11917. Was it a public meeting?—It was before the barrister at the quarter sessions.

11918. That was in court?—In court, during the registration; I consider his speech a most violent one.

11919. What is his name?—Mr. Cahill.

11920. And your Lordship has no doubt he is a pacificator?—I have not the least doubt of that.

11921. Then that is the third instance of a pacificator making a violent speech since the pacificators were appointed; does your Lordship recollect any other?—No, I do not think I do.

11922. Then out of the pacificators for the county Tipperary—— how many in number are there, do you think?—I have not the least idea; I should think 150.

11923. Out of the 150 pacificators for the county Tipperary, who have been now five or six months in office, in three instances a violent speech was made by three different persons?—They were the only speeches I can recall to my recollection at this moment, but I have not the least doubt that in their respective parishes they have made a great many more.

11924. But your Lordship never heard of any more, and cannot state that in any one instance it has occurred?—No, I cannot at this moment.

11925. Now, your Lordship has said that several of these persons were violent partisans on former occasions, agitating the repeal of the Union and other topics of that kind?—Yes.

11926. Now, does it occur to you as possible, that when they were appointed to this new office of pacificators, they may have become peaceful persons, although they might have been agitating before?—No, I do not think that would make any difference.

11927. Your Lordship has no reason to assume the contrary, when there have been only three instances in which anything occurred that was not perfectly peaceable?—I do not think they trouble themselves the least about the business of the country generally; they merely attend to the registration, nothing more.

11928. Then they are not likely to agitate except on questions of registration?—Merely electioneering affairs; nothing more.

11929. Then it is your Lordship's opinion that their exertions are calculated to increase the number of fictitious votes on the registry?—Yes, to induce people to come forward and attempt to register whether they have claims or not.

11930. But is it your Lordship's impression that such gentlemen as you have named, Archdeacon Laffan, for instance, would deliberately go forward and induce persons to endeavour to register, who he knew had not a proper qualification?—Archdeacon Laffan is a very zealous partisan; I do not think that he would willingly, knowing a man had not a qualification; I do not think he would advise him to swear he had.

11931. Or allow him to swear; does your Lordship think he would sit by and hear a man swear he had a qualification, which he (Archdeacon Laffan) knew he had not?—I should hope no clergyman would, of any persuasion.

11932. Have you any doubt that Archdeacon Laffan would not sit by and hear a man swear to a qualification which he (Archdeacon Laffan) knew he did not possess?—I cannot answer that question decidedly.

11933. Then your Lordship has a doubt?—I should rather say, I have a doubt; I am sorry to admit it, but I do not say he would or I do not say he would not.

11934. You have a doubt whether he would not sit by and hear a man sworn to a qualification which he (Achdeacon Laffan) knew he did not possess?—

The Earl of Glengall.

I think people are such violent partisans sometimes, that they really do form wrong notions.

11935. But still, assuming he knew that a man had not the qualification which he heard him swear to, do you suppose he would sit by and allow that course of proceeding to take place?—I never saw any Roman-catholic, I believe, do so on the hustings, or on the registration, on the table; I never saw them do the contrary.

11936. But I am applying myself to this particular individual, and he is a zealous politician, you state?—Very zealous.

11937. But in point of character, I presume, he is a respectable person?—Very; I should say very respectable.

11938. A highly respectable clergyman?—Yes.

11939. And, as far as the discharge of his duties as a clergyman goes, your Lordship probably can bear testimony to his character?—Certainly; I believe he is a very good clergyman, an extremely talented man too.

11940. And a conscientious clergyman?—Yes, I believe so, certainly.

11941. Then, has your Lordship any hesitation (knowing him to be a conscientious man) in concluding he would not sit by and hear a man deliberately perjure himself?—I really do not know whether he would or not.

11942. Could he be a conscientious clergyman, and do so?—I do not know whether it was his business to interfere or not.

11943. According to your Lordship's own notion of conscientious feeling, could you reconcile yourself to it, to sit by and hear a man deliberably perjure himself on the subject of his franchise?—I do not think it is their place to interfere; I think at home they very likely would tell them not; but at court I do not think they would interfere.

11944. But would it not be his business to interfere in that character of pacificator, watching the registry, and bringing a person to register; does it not occur to your Lordship it would be his business to interfere?—I do not know; I cannot say; I am not sufficiently informed; I do not understand the way they go on sufficiently among themselves in getting up these votes; I am not aware of the under business at all.

11945. However, your Lordship can say thus much, that you have no doubt that Archdeacon Laffan would not deliberately himself abet any person to come forward to swear to a qualification he did not possess?—I do not think he would assist him.

11946. Or permit him to do it if he could prevent it?—I cannot possibly answer that question; I really do not know.

11947. But does your Lordship think he would be a conscientious clergyman, and be a party in any way, directly or indirectly, to the commission of perjury by claimants to register; do you think he would be a party to it?—No, I do not think he would.

11948. He could not be a conscientious clergyman, and be a party to it, either directly or indirectly?—No, he could not, and ought not.

11949. And would not?—I should think he would not.

11950. Then, if that be so, would Archdeacon Laffan, in your apprehension, continue to discharge the duties of an office, the exercise of which had a tendency to make men perjure themselves in claiming to register?—I do not know what the duties of the office are altogether.

11951. But I will remind your Lordship you stated that one of the principal duties is to make men register?—To induce them to register; one man will go a great deal further than another, because a layman will do what a Roman-catholic or any other clergyman would not do.

11952. Speaking of this particular individual, does it occur to your Lordship, he being, as you have described, a conscientious respectable clergyman, that he would continue to do the business of an office that had for its tendency the necessary effect, as you describe it, of making men perjure themselves in claiming their franchise?—I do not think he would do it willingly.

11953. Mr. Lefroy.] Would not that depend entirely upon his notion of its being perjury?—Yes, certainly, whether he thought it was perjury or not.

11954. And that would depend on his notion of the qualification, or what constituted the qualification?—Yes, the value.

11955. And, therefore, if his notion of the qualification were a mistaken one, he might might conscientiously listen to men swearing to that qualification, although it might be under the legal standard?—Yes, certainly it might be the case.

The Earl of Glengall.

11956. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But it would come to this; that Archdeacon Laffan had an erroneous notion in point of law, of what constitutes a qualification?—Yes, it might be so, certainly.

11957. And if he had an erroneous notion in point of law, if he misapprehended the law, he might allow a man to go on, or not, and assist him?—If he misapprehended the value of the land he might.

11959. I am putting this: that no matter what the opinions of Archdeacon Laffan are on the subject of the law of qualification, I ask your Lordship whether you have any doubt that Archdeacon Laffan would not knowingly abet any man in seeking to establish a qualification by false swearing?—No, I do not think he would; not if he were sure it was thoroughly false.

11960. And that he would not contine to discharge the office of pacificator if he considered that the effect of it was to assist or to aid or to spur on men to swear to qualifications that they did not possess?—I do not say that.

11961. Is it your Lordship's impression he could do so consistently with the character you have given him, namely, that of a conscientious clergyman?—I do not know whether he would act.

11962. Would he continue to do the business of pacificator?—I do not know whether he would.

11963. Would it be consistent with the character of a respectable conscientious clergyman?—I do not think it would.

11964. Then, considering him a respectable conscientious clergyman, do you consider it possible, consistently with that character?—I think every clergyman has a right to be called a conscientious clergyman until he is proved to be otherwise.

11965. Then is it your opinion that he has not been proved to be otherwise?—He never was proved to be otherwise; I consider every clergyman a conscientious clergyman, and has a right to be called so, until the contrary is proved.

11966. Then, all your Lordship means to say is this, that you do not know now he is not a conscientious clergyman?—No, I certainly do not.

11967. But you cannot say affirmatively that he is?—I say I should consider that he was, as far as I ever heard.

11968. If he is, then I revert to my former question?—People take such different views of things where men are extremely zealous in political and party spirit; it blinds and misleads men's better judgments occasionally, that is all I mean to observe.

11969. Do you consider it consistent with the character of a conscientious clergyman to do the business of an office which has for its tendency the object to make men commit perjury?—No, I do not.

11970. And, of course, if Archdeacon Laffan considered that that was the tendency, or still more the object of the office of a pacificator, have you any doubt he would not continue to do the business of a pacificator?—I will not say that I do not think he would continue, or would not.

11971. Could he do it consistently with the character your Lordship has given him?—I do not think he could consistently do it; but I cannot say whether he would or not go on with the business.

11972. But if he has the character of a conscientious clergyman, can you hesitate to say he would not do it?—I really cannot answer for what the Roman-catholic priesthood will do; to tell you the truth, I do really think the Roman-catholic priesthood have such extraordinary ideas with respect to political partisanship and party spirit, that I really cannot answer for what they would do, or would not do. If it came to a point of election, or came to be a matter of importance, I really do not know what view they might take of what was conscientious, scientious, or what was not; I am sorry to say that that is the truth; I wish to clothe it in quiet language, but I have seen such violence from the coadjutor priests upon that subject, that I declare I do not know what they would not do.

The Earl of Glengall.

11973. I wish to confine myself to individuals?—That is my honest conviction; I am sorry to say it, but that is my honest conviction.

11974. Does your Lordship's conviction amount to this: that in matters of politics there is in fact no such thing as conscience among the Catholic clergy? I never said that; some of the coadjutor priests, I said; I allude to the great mass of coadjutor priests in the south of Ireland.

11975. Does it come to this, then, that with respect to the great mass of the coadjutor priests, your Lordship's impression is, that in political matters they have no conscience amongst them?—Not so much as they ought to have, especially those educated at Maynooth; I am sorry to say it is, but as I am asked the question I will tell the honest truth; I decidedly wish to draw a very great distinction between the priests and the coadjutor priests; there is a vast deal of difference between them.

11976. Then your Lordship's impression is pointed, as it is, to hearsay, that speaking of the coadjutor priests they cannot be called conscientious men when political interests are concerned?—I do not go so far as that; I have seen a great number of acts which I consider improper.

11977. You will not go so far as to say they cannot be termed conscientious men when political interests are concerned?—I think their better judgments are warped very much.

11978. But is their conscience warped?—I know nothing about their conscience.

11979. I wish to confine your Lordship's attention to Archdeacon Laffan, and I am speaking of him, and I ask your Lordship whether you consider that, if he is as conscientious a clergyman as you described him to be, he could reconcile it to himself to continue to do the business of a pacificator, if he considered that the tendency of that business were to encourage the crime of perjury?—I do not think he would willingly do it.

11980. Would he do it willingly or unwillingly; could he reconcile it to his conscience, having the character you have described him to have?—I should think he could not, certainly not.

11981. Now does it not result from that, that in the case of Archdeacon Laffan, at all events, the tendency of this business of a pacificator is not to encourage the crime of perjury?—Upon my word I do think that the system of pacification does tend to increase the crime of perjury; I do think so.

11983. I call that the crime of perjury. Now what I ask your Lordship is this, whether you consider, you who have given in this as your belief and opinion, whether you are of opinion and believe another matter, namely, that Archdeacon Laffan would continue to act as a pacificator if he were of opinion that the tendency of the system was to increase the manufacture of fictitious votes; in other words, to increase the crime of perjury; do you believe that?—I will not answer that question.

11984. Then your Lordship declines answering that question?—I do; I certainly do not think Father Laffan would willingly encourage perjury; I am sure he would not willingly do it.

11985. Would it not be willingly encouraging perjury, if the necessary tendency of the system is to increase the crime of perjury, if he continued to act as a pacificator?—That is going so much into the whole system of the thing that I could not answer that.

11986. You hesitate to give an answer?—Yes.

11987. Your Lordship does not wish to answer that question?—No, I do not; at the same time, of course, I do not wish to cast any aspersion on Father Laffan's character, but I cannot go into his views and objects; what he probably would do, or would not do, I cannot pretend to say.

11988. But I am asking your own judgment; what is your own judgment; would you consider it consistent with the character of a conscientious man to continue to act as pacificator?—I think it very likely he would not interfere much more.

The Earl of Glengall.

11989. If he interfered at all, knowing his interference had a tendency to increase the crime of perjury, he would be acting inconsistently with the conscientious discharge of his duty, would he not, as a clergyman?—I do not think he would do anything willingly wrong at all.

11990. Either in that respect or any other?—No.

11992. He would not act counter to his conscience, you state?—No, that I certainly do say.

11993. I believe your Lordship has no doubt that Archdeacon Laffan does not consider that the tendency of the system of pacification is to increase the crime of perjury by increasing the manufacture of fictitious votes?—I could not give an opinion on what he would say.

11994. Your Lordship has stated you considered that the tenants in Tipperary were not free agents?—I have.

11995. That they first of all are unwilling to register, that they are pressed to register by these pacificators, and that their reason for being unwilling to register is, that they would wish to vote for their landlords?—They are afraid of the landlords, on the one hand, and afraid of the agitators, on the other.

11996. It is not that they are desirous to vote with their landlords; you do not consider that the tenantry, speaking generally, are very desirous to vote with their landlords?—I think they are; I should say they were; as far as my experience goes, that they decidedly were.

11997. Decidedly anxious to vote with their landlords?—Yes, I should say so.

11998. Does your Lordship give that character to the present tenantry of Tipperary, or throughout Ireland generally?—To Tipperary only.

11999. Then the general character of the tenantry of Tipperary is, that they are desirous of obliging their landlords?—I believe so.

12000. Then is there a great deal of good-will subsisting between landlord and tenant in Tipperary?—There is a great deal; we have not had a contested election for many years now.

12001. I am not speaking of elections merely, but generally there is a great deal of good-will between landlord and tenant?—Indeed, I should say there is.

12002. And a very good understanding between the tenantry and the landlords?—Yes.

12003. And, in fact, the tenantry are attached to the landlords?—I should say, generally speaking, they were, especially on the larger properties.

12004. Attached to their landlords?—I should say so.

12005. Very much attached to them?—Yes, I should say so.

12006. And your Lordship has no doubt that that is the general character and state of things between landlord and tenant in Tipperary?—Yes, I should say it was, certainly.

12007. And as to the priests, what is your Lordship's opinion with respect to the relation which the tenants stand in to them; do you consider them attached to the priests?—Yes, I do very much.

12008. Then, would you say they were more attached to the landlords than the priests?—I could not answer that question.

12009. Could your Lordship say, whether they are more attached to the priests than the landlords?—Of course, as regards religion, they are naturally attached to the priests.

12010. But, as regards temporal matters, could your Lordship say whether the general character of the lower class of people of Tipperary is to be more attached to the priests than to their landlords?—Really there are such different priests and such different landlords that it is quite impossible to say; I could not answer that question.

12011. Therefore, your Lordship cannot say whether, upon the whole, the lower class of people of Tipperary are more attached to the priests than the landlords?—That is a very nice question; I should not like to give an answer to that.

12012. But your Lordship has no doubt, they are very much attached to their landlords?—No doubt that on a great number of estates they are.

The Earl of Glengall.

12013. But those are the large estates, I think your Lordship said?—I am taking the estates of above 1,500*l.* or 2,000*l.* a year.

12014. But the greater part of the estates are about that, are they not; or at least a very large proportion of the gentry have estates about 1,500*l.* a year; among the gentry?—Yes.

12015. So that I may say, that upon the greater part of the estates the tenantry are very much attached to their landlords?—I should think so, generally speaking; I should say they were.

12016. That they would rather oblige the landlords than the priests?—Then comes in the system of intimidation, and that is very difficult to say.

12017. I am speaking of mere good-will; you could not say whether they are more willing to oblige the landlords than the priests?—I cannot answer that question; it is a very nice question.

12018. Then you could not say whether they are more willing to oblige the landlords than the priests?—No, it is very difficult.

12019. Could your Lordship say whether they would be more willing to oblige the priests than the landlords; does it not occur to your Lordship that they would be more anxious to oblige the priests than the landlords?—It quite depends on the sort of man, the sort of possession he was in, and the sort of property he held: the more property a man has the less he cares about the priests.

12020. And, probably, the less about the landlord?—I think he is more inclined to go with his landlord.

12021. You think the more property he has the more he is inclined to go with his landlord?—I do.

12022. Is that your Lordship's experience, that the more property a man has the more inclined he is to go with his landlord?—I do think so.

12023. Have you not known instances of many, what are called independent tenants, voting against their landlords?—That depends entirely on the tenure, that applies to your argument.

12024. A tenant of property, does he not stand in the position to be independent of his landlord?—I think the more property he has the more inclined he is to go with his landlord; that is the result of my experience.

12025. The great mass of the tenants, however, are not persons that you would call men of property?—If you take the 10*l.* freeholders, I can answer the question; persons above 10*l.*, I think, would rather go with their landlords, if they dared.

12026. Then, that is your Lordship's impression, that the great bulk of the tenants of 10*l.* and upwards, would rather oblige the landlords than the priests?—Yes, if they dared; if it were not for the general system of agitation and intimidation throughout the country; I do not mean the priests' intimidation, but the general intimidation; I do think they would go with their landlords rather than go with the priests, beyond that value.

12027. Ten pounds and upwards?—Yes; the higher you go the more I think they will stand by their landlords.

12028. The higher you go, more approaching the class of gentry?—What I call bettermost people; stout farmers.

12029. Being of the class of gentry, and looking forward to become members of that class?—That is rather too high a ratio to take.

12030. You would not go so high as that?—No.

12031. By even those who approach within some distance?—The more you increase the value of the tenant, the more his property is, the more I think he is out of the hands of the priest, and the more he would be likely to oblige his landlord. That is my feeling; and I should also add, the more he is out of the power of the general troublesome people of the country.

12032. On the other hand, does it occur to your Lordship that persons of the class you describe, substantial farmers, and even higher still than that, that they are persons who would be likely to think for themselves on political matters; would they not be more independent of the politics of the landlords, as you say they would be of the priests?—Yes; I think that the more property that most of the people have,—the tenants of respectable classes in the country,—the more property they have, the more likely they are to vote against any fact connected with agitation.

The Earl of Glengall.

tion. I think the more respectable the people, the more they are inclined to go against great changes, organic changes.

12033. Then is it your Lordship's experience, that the more respectable and wealthy the people of the tenantry of Tipperary, that the more likely they are to become conservatives?—I do think so indeed; I do, really.

12034. Then that is your Lordship's impression, that as the tenantry increase in wealth they approximate to conservatism?—I think so; they are afraid of riots and troubles, and tumults.

12035. Then it is not for the love of conservatism, but for the fear of revolution?—The fear of revolution.

12036. So that it is fear that operates upon them, and not love?—I should put it decidedly on the fear of revolution and tumult; I think so. They think their property is safer.

12037. Does that feeling exist very generally in the county of Tipperary, the fear of revolution, I mean, among the tenantry?—I think it does among the superior classes of the tenantry; among people who hold 50 and 150 acres of land. Those sort of men, I think, are very much alarmed at it.

12038. Are they Catholics generally?—All.

12039. Is it your Lordship's impression that those men, whom you have now described, in the event of a contest for Tipperary, will vote with Protestant landlords, and will not vote with the present candidates?—That is the question that remains to be decided at the next election; I have not canvassed.

12040. I am merely asking your Lordship's opinion?—I have not canvassed the people at all, and therefore I really cannot answer that question. My impression is, that a great number will go with the landlord, and a great number stay away; that is quite ideal.

12041. Now, you mentioned you had heard from Catholic gentlemen who had been at the association in Dublin; do you mean by that gentlemen magistrates?—I do, gentlemen magistrates.

12042. From several, did you say?—Three; two or three, but I have two in my eye.

12043. I ask, are they conservatives?—I do not think that there is a single Catholic gentleman who has joined anything of a conservative society, or can be called a conservative, further than perhaps they are called conservative Catholics, and so on; they have not joined the other party; they have stood aloof from it.

12044. When I asked your Lordship whether they were conservatives, they are persons who in the country are called conservatives?—No, not so far as that; you do not know which way they will go.

12045. Is that the rumour or the opinion about there, that they have a conservative turn?—They are people who are very glad to get all the lands into their own hands, if they can, for fear of accidents; that is the truth.

12046. What accidents?—Revolution.

12047. In the event of a revolution, will they be better off with the lands in their own hands?—They think so.

12048. And are they acting upon that system, getting the lands into their own hands?—I could not answer that question, for it might bring other people into disturbance in Ireland; it would not be safe.

12049. There were three gentlemen from whom your Lordship got this information?—Yes, two or three; one is not a magistrate.

12050. But one of them you are sure is?—I am quite sure of two.

12051. Then, was it two or three?—Three who have attended two or three times apiece.

12052. Accidentally, when in Dublin?—Yes.

12053. And it is the impression of your Lordship, from the conversations you had with them, that the committees you spoke of up-stairs were private and secret bodies?—Private bodies, certainly; yes.

12054. And that they were in the habit of sending private instructions?—Managing the whole business.

12055. But sending down instructions to pacificators?—To pacificators and others.

The Earl of Glengall.

12056. Mr. Sheil, you mentioned, appeared as counsel?—He appeared to advocate his own cause.

12057. Mr. Sheil is the sitting Member?—Yes.

12058. Well, he very naturally attended the registry, which is, in fact, vital to him?—Of course.

12059. And Mr. Sheil, then, did not act as counsel, but he acted as the party concerned?—Certainly, he acted as both; in fact, I should say both.

12060. He happened to be accidentally a counsellor; but have you any doubt, if Mr. Shiel were not a barrister, knowing his disposition, zeal and energy, that if he appeared at the registry, being Member for the county, he would have acted in the same way?—He would not have been allowed to speak.

12061. Then it was in the character of counsel that he was allowed to speak?—Just so.

12062. So that he was allowed to speak being counsel, but in point of fact he spoke for himself?—Yes; nobody is allowed to speak at all but counsel.

12063. Chairman.] Do you consider if Archdeacon Laffan entertained the same conscientious opinions that you do, he could have made that violent speech to which you alluded in the early part of your evidence as to pacificators?—I cannot exactly answer that question, but the object of the speech was to create agitation, to keep up the spirit of agitation, I should say, was the object of that speech, for political motives in the county.

12064. Do you conceive it was the part of a conscientious person, looking calmly at the question, to keep up the spirit of agitation?—Why, party spirit runs so high in that county that the priesthood certainly do not consider they are acting wrong in addressing the people against tithes and against various other political subjects.

12065. What description of property have you in Clonmel?—A great part of the manor mills are mine.

12066. You have not many small houses there?—No, very few small houses; some few good houses; middling ones.

12067. Are the rents in Clonmel generally, to your knowledge, about the real value of the houses, or are they higher or lower than the real value?—No, I should think that the value of the houses in Clonmel was very justly ascertained; indeed houses were rather cheap in Clonmel some time ago, but now they are dearer; I understand that now they are dearer; times have improved lately.

12068. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] The Chairman has asked you about the character of the speech of Archdeacon Laffan; have you not heard of clergymen of the Established Church making very violent speeches and preaching very violent sermons on the other side of the question, and being very conscientious men all the time?—I have not heard of their preaching very violent sermons; I have heard of clergymen making very violent speeches.

12069. And very conscientious men?—I believe so.

12070. So that it comes to this, that if any conscientious Roman-catholic clergyman has made violent speeches, Protestant clergymen have done the same thing?—I never heard a Protestant clergyman make but one very violent speech in my life, and he was considered a madman.

12071. But you have heard of such things?—I have, and seen them in the newspapers.

12072. Of Protestant clergymen who were conscientious men?—Yes.

12073. Making very violent speeches on political matters?—Yes, on both sides; clergymen interfered too much, I am sorry to say.

Mercurii, 17° die Maii, 1837.

MEMBERS PRESENT.

Mr. Serjeant Ball.	Mr. Serjeant Jackson.
Sir Robert Ferguson.	Mr. Lefroy.
Mr. Hamilton.	Lord Granville Somerset.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Patrick Rivers, Esq., called in; and Examined.

P. Rivers, Esq.

12074. WHAT are you?—I live on my own fortune; I live on property which I derive out of Clonmel.

12075. Where do you reside?—At 22, Upper Gloucester-place.

12076. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Your father was a freeman of Clonmel?—He was.

12077. He was a Roman-catholic?—He was.

12078. And you are also a Roman-catholic?—I am.

12079. Your father is not living?—No, he his not.

12080. When did he die?—In the year 1796.

12081. Are you a freeman of Clonmel?—I look upon myself to be a freeman.

12082. Were you ever admitted a freeman?—Never.

12083. Did you ever apply for your freedom?—I did; I applied in right of birth.

12084. Were you the eldest son?—I am the only son; I applied in right of birth to the town-clerk of the town for the cocket of my freedom.

12085. Who was that?—Mr. Labarte.

12086. What time was this?—In 1800 or 1801.

12087. Then that was the father of the present Mr. Labarte?—Yes, the father of the present Mr. Labarte, who was town-clerk at the time; it must have been after that when I came of age.

12088. What was the town-clerk's reply to your application?—He told me that I should apply to Mr. Bagwell.

12089. Did he question your right to it?—He did partly question my right to it; but he said, that if I applied to Mr. Bagwell, he thought that Mr. Bagwell would grant it by favour, and I refused to do so; my reason for refusing to do so was, I was a 50*l.* freeholder of the county, and at that time there was an expectation of a gentleman setting up for the county, who was the father of the present Lord Donoughmore, and I said that I could not vote for Mr. Bagwell if Colonel Hutchinson, who was my captain of the yeomanry corps, set up against him.

12090. You declined applying to Mr. Bagwell to be admitted as a favour?—Yes, I did.

12091. The town-clerk, to whom you applied for admission as of right, declined admitting you as of right?—Certainly; and I spoke to him frequently upon the subject, and he afterwards declined, and referred me to Mr. Bagwell.

12092. He declined admitting you as of right?—Yes, always.

12093. He said you might apply to Mr. Bagwell for it as a favour?—He stated that he had no doubt that Mr. Bagwell would grant it to me, if I applied to him; I said it is a matter of no consequence, and I would not apply, for I did not wish to be under an obligation to Colonel Bagwell.

12094. Mr. Hamilton.] Did you ever apply for a mandamus?—No, never.

12095. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know Mr. Edward Serjeant of Clonmel?—I do.

12096. Do you know whether he is a freeman or not?—I do not know whether whether he is or not; I have heard that he is a freeman lately, made in right of birth, but he is not the eldest son of his father.

P. Rivers, Esq.

12097. Do you know his father?—He lived within 10 or 20 yards from where I lived.

12098. Was he the eldest son?—No, he was the third son.

12099. Do you know the eldest?—No.

12100. What is his name?—Henry.

12101. Is he living?—He is; he is barrackmaster of Cahir; William was the second brother, and Edward the third.

12102. Chairman.] At the time you applied to take out your freedom, it was the object of Mr. Bagwell to confine the freemen to as small a number as possible?—I should think so; my father was made by Lord Mountcashel when the borough belonged to him.

12103. Of course Mr. Labarte, as Mr. Bagwell's friend and agent, would do all he could to restrict the number, and to throw every impediment in the way of persons taking out their freedom, unless he was assured that those persons were friendly to Mr. Bagwell's interest?—Most undoubtedly.

12104. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Was Mr. Labarte the agent of Mr. Bagwell?—He was not his regular agent.

12105. Was he his agent in any sense?—He was his right hand man in everything about the town.

12106. You have stated that you never applied for a mandamus to admit you as a freeman?—Never; I knew another gentleman who applied, Mr. Castell, whose grandfather and great grandfather were freemen of the town, and his father and he told me that he applied and was not admitted.

12107. Were you resident or non-resident?—I was resident in Clonmel.

12108. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Why did you never apply for a mandamus?—Because I did not think it worth while to go to the expense of it.

12109. Did Mr. Castell state that he had frequently applied?—He told me so.

12110. In right of birth?—Yes.

12111. Mr. Lefroy.] Did he tell you the reason he was not admitted?—No, he did not tell me the reason.

12112. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did he ever tell you that he ever applied for a writ of mandamus?—Never.

12113. Or took any step?—Never.

12114. Mr. Lefroy.] Had he expressed any disposition towards Mr. Bagwell, or against him?—I think he was rather friendly to Mr. Bagwell; I voted for Colonel Bagwell afterwards, though I never asked him a favour, when Colonel Hutchinson did not set up.

12115. But if Colonel Hutchinson had set up, you would have voted for him against Colonel Bagwell?—Yes, I would.

12116. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You do not consider it extraordinary that the inhabitants of Clonmel should not proceed by mandamus, and quarrel with their landlord, Colonel Bagwell?—Certainly not.

12117. Mr. Hamilton.] At the period you made the application there was no difference between the privileges of the honorary freemen and of the freemen by right?—I should imagine not; at that time they said that some men were free of trade, but were not free to vote for the Representatives in Parliament; that was the opinion about the town; in fact, there was no question of voting for the Member at that period.

12118. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You are aware that at that period it was not uncommon to admit persons to such a qualified freedom for the purpose of trade, under the rules of Charles 2, in order to encourage settlers in the towns?—Yes; I heard that Mr. Bagwell never demanded any tolls of the Quakers, whether they were free or not.

12119. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Is that what you mean by a qualified admission to the freedom?—Yes; the tolls were not demanded from them.

12120. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did you ever hear, that under the new rules of Charles 2, settlers obtained their freedom for the purposes of trade in different corporations of Ireland, not thereby obtaining any right for voting for Members of Parliament?—I do not doubt that I might have heard of it.

12121. Did you ever hear of such qualified freedom as that being admitted, in Clonmel, for example?—No, I never did.

P. Rivers, Esq.

12122. But you have heard of the new rules of Charles 2 for the encouragement of Protestant settlers?—Yes, I have.

12123. The Quakers you have spoken of as being admitted free, you consider to have been for the purpose of encouraging trade?—All by favour, but not one of them in that way.

12124. Do not you think they were admitted for the encouragement of trade? —No, they were admitted by favour, because Mr. Bagwell knew that the Quakers would do whatever he pleased.

12125. Were those Quakers admitted to the general freedom of the town?—To the general freedom of the town, I believe; I knew some of them in my own neighbourhood.

12126. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] By favour of Mr. Bagwell?—No doubt of it.

12127. Mr. Hamilton.] In the same manner that it was suggested to you by Mr. Labarte that you might obtain your freedom?—Yes.

12128. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] If you had been admitted to the freedom as a matter of favour, you would have been at liberty to have voted at the elections? —I suppose so.

12129. Mr. Lefroy.] Was it not understood that every man that was admitted by favour was bound in honour to support Mr. Bagwell?—Certainly, I should think so.

12130. And that was the difference between being admitted by favour and being admitted by right?—Undoubtedly.

12131. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] In the course of your experience, did you ever hear of a single instance of a man being admitted in any other way than by favour?—Never.

12132. Mr. Lefroy.] Do not you think that was the best way to secure the borough?—Undoubtedly; it prevented a contested election.

Mr. John Butler, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. John Butler.

12133. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] YOU have been an applotter of the county charges and parish cess in Clonmel?—I have.

12134. In point of fact, is not the applotment laid on without any sworn valuation?—The applotters are not sworn, at least, I was never sworn.

12135. You consider it the practice that they should not be sworn?—It is.

12136. You are not speaking now of the cess collected under the 9 Geo. 4?—No, I am speaking of the other cesses, such as providing for foundlings, coffins for the poor and county charges.

12137. You have been also a commissioner under the 9 Geo. 4?—I have.

12138. You have been twice elected commissioner?—I was elected in 1831, and re-elected in 1834.

12139. Will you state whether it is your impression that the valuation of 1828 is over or under the true value of the houses?—I think it is under.

12140. Is that the general impression of the commissioners?—It is, I believe.

12141. If that be so, why have not the commissioners proceeded to have a new valuation made?—That would be attended with a good deal of expense, and the new commissioners entered on their duties for the purpose of saving to the people; and they did so; they reduced the tax, in the first instance, from 4*d.* to 3½*d.* for the first class, and so in proportion upon the three rates.

12142. Then the new commissioners elected in 1831, and their successors elected in 1834, have been more economical in the disbursement of the cess than their predecessors?—They have; they have reduced the rates upon the three different classes.

12143. That you state to be the reason why the commissioners have not proceeded to have a new valuation made?—Yes; it would be attended with a good deal of expense, perhaps 30*l.*, and we did not want to raise the tax; we had plenty of means to carry on the business of the town.

12144. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you state what proportion the expenditure of the present commissioners bears to the expenditure of the commissioners of 1828?—I believe there is very little difference; it is something more now, because the gas contractor raised the gas on the second commissioners.

12145. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Then how are you enabled to reduce the rates?—We were handed over the sum of 80*l.* which they had on hand by the first commissioners, which enabled us to reduce in the first instance, and also there were new houses built, and houses altered and repaired, that we took into the valuation in 1831.

12146. So that the rates have been more productive?—They have.

12147. Mr. Hamilton.] But the commissioners have not been more economical?—They have been as much so as they possibly could.

12148. But you have not reduced the expenditure lower than the first commissioners?—We have reduced the tax a halfpenny in the pound on houses under 10 l., three farthings on houses under 20 l., and one penny on houses over 20 l.

12149. Have you reduced the expenditure?—No, we were not able to reduce the expenditure.

12150. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Have not you stated that the expenditure has been rather increased?—Yes; Mr. Graham raised the price of the gas, and on that account we were obliged to raise a fraction again in 1834.

12151. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did the reduction of the tax arise from the saving of your predecessors in office, who have handed you over a balance?—That, with the new houses.

12152. Then so far as that balance went, it was the saving of your predecessors which enabled you to make the reduction?—So I say; but we had at the end of the first three years the sum of 40 l. odd on hand, that we handed over to the next commissioners.

12153. Chairman.] Are not you aware of the various clauses of the Act of Parliament under which the commissioners are bound to act?—I think I know something about it.

12154. Are you aware that it is the duty of the commissioners, in the first instance, to make a valuation of the full and proved yearly value of all houses, &c. in each of the towns?—I do not consider that to be incumbent upon them.

12155. Are you not aware that it is unjust upon the parties who do pay upon the proper yearly value of their houses if other parties are rated too low?—If they conceive themselves overrated they have the power to appeal to the commissioners.

12156. Have there been many appeals of that description?—Very few.

12157. Is it not also a provision of the Act, that parties dissatisfied with the assessment may appeal to the commissioners as well upon the ground of inequality as upon the ground of overrating?—I believe so, and they have done so.

12158. In how many cases?—There are very few indeed.

12159. Then the feeling of the people in Clonmel generally is, that the valuation is not excessive with regard to themselves, nor insufficient nor inadequate of the premises belonging to other persons?—I do not conceive that they think it is oppressive or overrated, except in those instances.

12160. Do they conceive it is unequal?—In two or three instances there was an appeal of that kind.

12161. Can you mention them?—There was a man of the name of Ryan, in Main-street; he conceived he was rated higher than his neighbours, and he appealed, and the result was that he was reduced 5 l.

12162. What was his rental?—£. 45 I think it was, and he was reduced to 40 l.

12163. Is that the only case?—I do not remember any other.

12164. Had any alterations been made in the valuation of other houses besides his?—None that I recollect, except on the score of improvements.

12165. You mean to state that no alteration has been made either by reducing or by cancelling altogether the valuation of other houses?—I believe there were some cabins that were altogether taken off the books in consequence of being deteriorated.

12166. When was this case of Ryan?—I think it was in 1834.

12167. You are aware of the objections that were made to various voters before the Committee of The House of Commons, in the year 1833, on the ground of under value?—I know very little about that transaction.

12168. Were you not aware that such allegations were made?—I was aware of it.

12169. Was it not notorious in Clonmel that both Mr. Bagwell's party and Mr. Ronayne's party were about to object, or did object, to voters on the register, ter, on account of an under value, in the year 1833?—There were objections on both sides, so I heard.

12170. Did not the great body of those persons who were elected commissioners in 1834 know that to be the fact?—I believe they did; they must have known it.

12171. But still they did not think it their duty to see that parties were raised if they were below the value?—The people did not call for a new valuation.

12172. Did not you, in the course of the year 1804, raise a good many houses in Clonmel?—In consequence of improvements and new houses.

12173. Were they not chiefly houses of a value exceeding 20*l.*?—I believe chiefly; there were some few houses under 10 l.

12174. Did any of those parties complain of that increase of valuation?—Not that I recollect; I do not doubt but they might have complained.

12175. Did any of those parties complain that individuals rated under 10*l.* had their houses rated at too low a value?—I did not hear that.

12178. Do you mean to say that you altered the valuation of no house, either in 1831 or 1834, that had not been improved?—Except Ryan's, and one or two more.

12179. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Were there many appeals?—Yes.

12180. Chairman.] Was it not equally competent to you to raise the value of the lower class of houses, supposing they were undervalued?—We could not do it without a general valuation of the town.

12181. What special directions are there in the Act calling upon you to raise the value of a house because it is improved?—We conceived that we were bound to do so, and to take into account any new or improved houses.

12182. Were you not bound to take care that the valuation of the whole town was correct?—I believe so.

12183. Was not it equally your duty to raise the value of a house, even supposing it were not improved, wherever it should appear to you that the valuation of that house was not sufficient?—There was no complaint of the valuation of 1828 as being excessive, except in very few cases; we found we had sufficient means to carry on the business, and we let the valuation rest.

12184. Then so long as the commissioners felt they had plenty of money they did not conceive it their duty to see that the valuation should be actually correct?—There was no complaint, except those few instances, and they were redressed.

12185. But they considered it their duty to alter the valuation of houses of a certain class when they were improved, but not to raise the valuation of houses of a lower class, although that valuation might be much under the real value?—If the lower class of houses were improved, we would consider it our duty to raise them also.

12186. You considered it your duty to raise the higher class of houses from 110 l. to 118*l.*, but not to raise the lower class of houses from 5*l.* or 6*l.* to 10*l.*?—We sent the valuators about the town, and desired them to take an account of all houses built since 1828 that were not in the applotment book, and also to take an account of all improvements made.

12187. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you mean whatever the value was, whether above 10 l. or under?—Yes; and he did so upon oath, and on that affidavit being regularly sworn before us, we acted upon it.

12188. Do you say that there are only two or three instances in which houses under the value of 10 l. were improved?—That was all, I believe.

12189. But if there had been other instances, you would have raised the value proportionably?—Not a doubt of it.

12190. Chairman.] Then are the Committee to understand, that of the whole class of houses in Clonmel of 10 l. and under, only two or three were improved improved between 1828 and 1834?—I do not know; we had the return of the valuators and the clerk upon oath.

12191. Is not that the result of the evidence you have just given?—I cannot tell that; we sent the valuator with our clerk, and he made the return upon oath.

12192. When the valuator makes his return upon oath, you have confidence in his valuation?—We have.

12193. Have not you great confidence in a valuator when he makes his return upon oath?—Unquestionably, unless I knew him to be a dishonest man.

12194. Were there not three valuators who returned the valuation upon oath in 1828?—There were.

12195. Have you any reason to disbelieve those three persons' oaths?—I do not know what their motive may be, but I know that they valued very low.

12196. You state that when the valuator gives in his valuation upon oath you give credence to it; do you mean to say that the three valuators in 1828 were persons of such character that you would not believe them upon their oath?—By no means.

12197. Did not they return the valuation of 1828 upon their oath?—I believe they did.

12198. Have you any doubt that that was a proper valuation in 1828?—I cannot say, but I know it was a low valuation; as a proof of that, there were very few appeals for excessive valuation.

12199. Were there any appeals upon the ground of insufficiency of valuation?—That is very seldom the case; a man would not complain that he was taxed too low.

12200. Were there any appeals upon the ground of insufficiency of valuation as to other persons?—There were in the instance I stated; there may have been an appeal or two.

12201. Are not you aware that the Act of Parliament is just as conclusive upon the power of appeal as to insufficiency of valuation of other parties as it is for excess of valuation on the part of the individual himself?—I believe it is in taking the general valuation of the town.

12202. And still there have been only one or two cases of parties appealing upon the ground that the valuation of other persons was insufficient?—Two or three.

12203. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] In the case of Ryan, was the appeal by reason of other persons having been valued too low?—By reason that his house was higher rated than other houses.

12204. The result of that appeal was, not that the valuation of other persons was raised, but that his valuation was lowered?—Certainly.

12205. That appeal was on the ground of his house having been valued too high?—That his house was not in proportion to his neighbours' houses.

12206. And the result of the appeal was, that his valuation was reduced?—It was.

12207. Then, in substance, that was an appeal on the ground of his house having been valued too high?—It was; he was rated higher than his neighbours, and accordingly he was reduced 5 l.

12208. It is not very likely that any persons would come forward for the purpose of increasing the valuation of their neighbours, if they could not reduce their own?—Indeed, I cannot conceive that any man would.

12209. Then cannot you account for there being no appeals on the ground of inequality in the valuation, except in two or three instances you allude to, from the circumstance, that unless the party appealing was to succeed in reducing the valuation of his own house he would gain nothing by raising the valuation of his neighbour's?—He would gain very little, to be sure.

12210. He would gain only a fraction of a reduction in the tax?—That is all.

12211. Chairman.] What was the rent of Ryan's house; what do you believe it to be worth?—I think it is worth 45 l.; I believe he pays more rent for it; I think he pays more than 50 l. for it.

12212. Do you consider it consistent with the duty of the commissioners, believing a house to be worth more than 45 l., to reduce it to 40 l.?—I was only one of the commissioners.

12213. Did you agree with that decision upon that occasion?—I did.

12214. Do you conceive it to be consistent with your duty as a commissioner to reduce the valuation of a house to 40 l. when you believed it was worth more than 45 l.?—The man complained that he was higher rated than his neighbours; we examined him about it, and the persons in his neighbourhood gave their opinions upon it; he compared his house with a man of the name of O'Connell's, who lives next door; O'Connell has as good a house, and he has also a back concern, and Ryan has none; under all the circumstances, the commissioners agreed to make his the same as O'Connell's.

12215. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did you give your brother commissioners the benefit of your opinion, that Ryan's house was, in your opinion, worth as much as 45 l. a year?—Indeed, I do not know what I said at the time.

12216. Did you institute any inquiry as to whether the other houses were not charged too low in comparison with their real value, or did you inquire only into the comparative rating?—I think it was the comparative rating that was the question; we were perfectly satisfied that the others were not overrated.

12217. Were you perfectly satisfied that they were not underrated?—The rate was under the rent.

12218. Do not you think it is the duty of the commissioners to see that all the houses be fairly rated?—Yes, they are sworn to that.

12219. Is it not as much their duty to see that they are not underrated as that they are not overrated?—I think it is; but they have no power, unless when there is a general valuation, of altering it.

12220. Have not they the power of causing that general valuation to be made?—I believe only every three years.

12222. But not to see whether the houses were truly and correctly valued?—Certainly not; there was no complaint of the valuation of 1828.

12223. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] And for that purpose there should be a general valuation of the whole town?—I should say so, which would cost at least 30 l. The first valuators were paid 30 l. for valuing the town.

12224. And the new houses would, of course, have made the valuation somewhat more expensive?—It would considerably; it would cost 10 l. more, or perhaps more than that.

12225. Chairman.] When was the valuation of Ryan's house altered?—I do not know whether it was in 1834 or 1835; there is a power every year to alter.

12226. Do you mean to say that there is a power every year to alter the valuation?—I think so, upon appeals.

12227. Was Mr. Graham's house ever altered?—I do not recollect that it was; the house was divided and subdivided between the families. I do not know whether there was any alteration in the valuation.

12228. Was there any alteration in Counsellor Mulcahy's?—I do not recollect.

12229. Was there any alteration in Mr. Bianconi's?—I think there was a stable or some outhouse of his.

12230. Was there any alteration in Mr. Davis's, of Market-street?—I do not know.

12231. What are the rates at which the different classes are now valued?—The first rate is 3 ¾ d. from 5 l. to 10 l., the second 5 ⅝ d., and the third 7 ½ d.

12232. Is it not a great object for persons coming under the third class that the first class should be fully rated?—It would lower the tax upon them so much.

12233. But they choose rather to pay more than to take the trouble of appealing?—No, I do not say any such thing; it is a proof that they did not find themselves overvalued; if they did they would appeal.

12234. What is the value of Mr. Graham's house?—I do not know; it is a very large house.

12235. What would be the value of Mr. Pedder's house?—It is a very fine house; I could not say the value; it is worth a good deal; one of the best houses in Clonmel; a fine garden, offices and ground attached to it.

12236. What would be the value of Mr. Mulcahy's ?—I believe he pays 35 l. or 40 l. a year rent.

12237. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Were you understood to say that the houses in the neighbourhood of Ryan's were valued under the rent ?—I believe they were in almost all cases; O'Connell's was not, because he built it himself, and is living a long time in it.

12238. You have stated that in almost all cases the houses in Clonmel were valued under the rent in 1828 ?—I think so.

12239. Then, if so, must not that valuation in 1828 have been an undervaluation ?—I have no doubt at all of it.

12240. You yourself have some houses in Clonmel ?—I have.

12241. Have you a tenant of the name of Barrett ?—He was a tenant of mine.

12242. Where was his house ?—In New-street.

12243. What rent did he pay you ?—£. 9 a year.

12244. Do you consider that that was the full value of that house ?—No; I was paid more rent for it before I let it to Barrett; I was paid 10 l. a year for it.

12245. Why did you let it to him for 9 l. ?—Because I considered him to be a good mark for the rent.

12246. Is his name Timothy ?—Yes.

12247. What do you consider to be the value of the house to Barrett ?—It must be worth 10 l.; I could get 10 l. a year for it. I was paid 10 l. for it before. I could have got 11 l. a year for it when I gave it to Barrett, and I gave the preference to him, conceiving him a good tenant and an honest man, and would pay the rent in advance if required.

12248. Do you consider that that is a common practice in Ireland to let houses under the value ?—I do.

12249. Do you know many instances ?—I do; those that make a difference between a good and bad tenant do it.

12250. Mr. Hamilton.] Is it usual where houses are let under their value to require a payment in advance ?—Sometimes it is.

12252. Mr. Hamilton.] In that case the value of the advance would, of course, have to be added to the tenant's interest ?—Of course it would; he loses the interest of the money, of course.

12253. Chairman.] How long has Barrett been your tenant ?—I think about five years.

12254. What is he valued at in the valuation books ?—I do not know whether he is on the books at all.

12255. Do you or do you not know that this house is not valued ?—I do not know.

12256. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Was he living there in the year 1828 ?—He was not.

12257. Chairman.] Look at the present valuation book and see whether he is in the book [The same being shown to the Witness] ?—I do not see his name in this book.

12258. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Were you aware that his house was one that ought to be valued ?—I think it ought to be valued.

12259. Did not you think it your duty as a commissioner to see that your own or your tenant's house was valued ?—He has not been my tenant for the last three years.

12260. Was he your tenant in 1834 ?—I do not think he was; I parted with him at that time.

12261. Who lives in the house now ?—The same man.

12262. Mr. Lefroy.] Was the house built in 1834 ?—It was.

12263. Was it built in 1828 ?—No, it was not; in 1831 it was not finished.

12264. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Can you account for the valuator whom the commissioners employed in 1834 not having included this in his valuation ?—I cannot.

12265. Have you sold your interest in that house ?—I have; I parted with it.

12266. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] But you knew the house ?—I did.

12267. And you knew it to be a house that ought to be assessed ?—I did.

12268. Then why did you not think it your duty to see that it was rated ?—It never occurred to me; it was more the duty of the valuators.

Mr. John Butler.

27 May 1837.

12269. Were not you sworn to the due discharge of your duty, and was not it part of your duty to see that all houses were properly rated?—It escaped my recollection.

12270. When did you sell the house?—In 1834, I think.

12271. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Was it before or after the commissioners employed the valuators, in 1834, to go and value the new houses that you parted with your interest in that house?—It was before the last valuation of the new houses, in 1834, that I parted with it.

12272. You were asked, were you not sworn to do your duty as a commissioner; is it any part of your duty as a commissioner to go about the town yourself, and to observe the new houses and to see that they are valued?—I do not think it is.

12273. Is not the mode in which the commissioners discharge their duty by sending out a valuator, who is sworn to do his duty, to value the new houses?—I conceive that to be the proper way.

12274. And if that house is not included in the valuation, you have no doubt that it was owing to some error in the valuator?—It must have been.

12275. Mr. Lefroy.] Did the commissioners cast their eye over the valuation?—They did.

12276. Did they feel it their duty to look at it?—No doubt of it.

12277. If so, how came it that you did not see that this house was omitted out of that valuation?—I do not know; it did not occur to me.

12278. How long had Barrett been your tenant before you sold the place?—I believe he was two or three years.

12279. Had any valuation taken place between the building of the house and your selling it?—I believe not; there is a certain time allowed before those new houses are brought into the valuation book.

12280. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] What time is allowed upon the new houses?—There may be 12 months or there may be more; until they are finished.

12281. Do you mean that the commissioners allow a grace of that kind?—The commissioners do not, but it so happens sometimes.

12282. Is there any understanding to that effect?—There is not.

12283. Do you think it was necessary for you to go about the town yourself, to ascertain whether your own house was there; did not you know it was there without going to walk about the town?—I did; and I do not know the reason why the valuator did not value the house.

12284. Could not you have known of your own house, sitting as a commissioner, without going out and walking about the town?—I suppose so.

12285. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Had it ceased to be your own house when the last valuation was made?—It had.

12286. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] But was not that a house that ought to have been valued?—No doubt.

12287. You do not think that the changing the owner of the house made any alteration in the propriety of rating it?—No.

12288. Although the valuator omitted his duty in not charging it, did not you omit your duty in not seeing that it was charged?—I do not know that I did; we are not able to attend regularly at the meetings; it is so with every body of men; they are all men of business, and cannot attend every meeting day.

12289. How many of them do attend upon the average?—From seven to 10 or 12 is the most that attend.

12290. How often in a year do they attend?—They have attended very often; they take it in rotation.

12291. How many times in the year did you attend?—It is impossible for me to say; there are 12 meetings in the year; I might have attended seven or eight, or nine meetings.

12292. Was not that a sufficient opportunity for you to have examined the valuation, and to see whether this house was included?—It did not occur to me.

12293. Mr. Lefroy.] To whom did you sell the house?—To Mr. Walshe.

12294. Did you sell it as a house free from tax?—No, I made no condition of the kind.

12295. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Would the house sell better being liable to tax, or being free from it?—I should suppose it would sell better without the tax; but there was no such condition in this case.

12296. There was nothing expressed?—Nor understood either.

12297. Do you mean to say that the purchaser did not know whether it was charged or not?—I do not know whether he did or not.

12298. Would not a prudent man inquire?—I think he would.

12299. Was he a prudent man?—Yes, I suppose so.

12300. What Mr. Walshe was it?—The witness that was here.

12301. Chairman.] Mr. Walshe has told us that Mr. Stokes, Mr Hackett and Mr. Butler are very intelligent men; that they are all men of business, and that they attend very closely to the discharge of their several duties; do not you consider that it is a most important duty for the commissioners to attend to upon their entering into office to see that the valuation is correct?—They have done it as much as they could.

12302. You have stated that the commissioners sometimes attend more closely and sometimes less; is it not their particular duty to attend closely in the early part of their commission, when it is necessary to determine upon the valuation of the houses?—I think it is their duty when they can spare time.

12303. How soon after the election of commissioners in 1834 did they attend to the valuation of the houses?—I think very soon after; in the month of August they are sworn.

12304. Then it was some time in August that this valuation took place?—In August or September, I think.

12305. Was not Timothy Barrett, according to this register, registered on the 16th July 1833?—I believe he was.

12306. Therefore he had been upwards of a twelvemonth upon the register as holding a house value 10*l.*, and still he was omitted being put upon the valuation books?—I cannot account for that.

12307. Mr. Lefroy.] At what time were you appointed?—I was appointed first in 1831.

12308. When were you re-elected?—In 1834.

12309. Then in the very same year during which you were appointed a commissioner you sold the house to Walshe?—It was while I was a commissioner.

12310. Was not the circumstance of selling the house calculated to bring to your mind the existence of such a house?—It was.

12311. How came it that you did not, at that time, look to see whether the house was valued?—I did not conceive it my business.

12312. Has it ever since been valued?—I do not know; there has been no general valuation.

12313. But that is a new-built house, and therefore ought to be valued by the valuator when he goes round to value the new houses?—Certainly; I do not know whether it is valued; I have no interest in its being valued or not.

12314. But Walshe had an interest in its not being valued?—I believe not; Walshe has parted with it also.

Mr. Patrick John Keily, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. P. J. Keily.

12315. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] DO you know the house occupied by Mr. Timothy Barrett, in New-street?—I do.

12316. Do you know whether that is on the valuation or not?—It is not.

12317. Can you account for that house not being valued?—I cannot.

12318. Do you consider it above the value of 10*l.*?—Yes; I consider it of the value of 10*l.*

12319. Was it built at the time of the last valuation of 1834?—I am not quite sure of that; if built in 1834, it must have been omitted by the valuator.

12320. Can you account for it?—I cannot; more than I think it must have been omitted by the valuator.

12321. On what principle?—I do not know.

Mr. John Butler, further Examined.

Mr. John Butler.

12322. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] YOU did not consider it any part of your duty as a commissioner to scrutinize the valuation made by your sworn valuator, in order to ascertain whether he had omitted any houses which he ought to have included in it?—I did not.

12323. You gave credit to his oath?—Just so.

12324. Have you ever heard any complaint as to the accuracy of his valuation?—No; but there was one person complained that he took into his valuation premises mises that were valued before, and we brought him to account about it, and it turned out to be a mistake; the person showed that the premises were included in the first valuation.

12325. Supposing that it was part of your duty to scrutinize the valuation made by the valuator, could you ascertain whether he omitted a house that he ought to have included in it, without yourself going about the town to ascertain what new houses were built since the last valuation, and then taking the valuation and comparing it with the result of your own observation?—If I did it in one instance, I would be equally bound to do it in all.

12326. Then the result would be this, that you should yourself become a valuator, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the valuation made by the sworn valuator was correct?—Just so.

12327. Mr. Lefroy.] Would it be necessary to do that in order to ascertain that your own house was omitted?—Not as far as that house was concerned.

12328. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Because you would have known it by not having to pay any rate?—Just so.

12329. Mr. Lefroy.] Must not you have known it from looking and seeing that it was not mentioned in the return?—I might have overlooked it, which I suppose I did.

12330. Chairman.] Are you aware of the right of registry, as laid down in the Irish Reform Act; as to the qualification that is necessary?—I am.

12331. Are you not aware that it requires that every occupier of a 10*l.* house who shall be admitted to register under the Act shall first of all occupy the premises six calendar months previous to the time of registry, and next shall have paid and discharged grand jury and municipal cesses, rates and taxes?—I am aware of that.

12332. It was a great advantage to parties therefore not to be upon the rate books, because it completely relieved them from the difficulty of that proviso?—So it appears by that; but the tax upon this house would be a trifling thing upon such a man as Barrett, a wealthy man; it would not prevent him from exercising his right of voting.

12333. But in that respect it makes the clause less stringent?—It does; but in that case there would be no difficulty at all, as far as Barrett was concerned.

12334. Must he not have been the occupier of his house for one half year previous to July 1833?—Yes, he must, of course.

12335. Then when the valuation took place in August 1834 he must have been more than a year and a half in the possession of his house?—Of course he must.

12336. Was the house of the value of 10*l.* before it was finished?—Not before it was completely finished.

12337. Then he was relieved, as far as municipal tax was concerned, of all payments above 18 months after his house was completed?—Yes, he was.

12338. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you hold the office of pacificator in Clonmel?—I am not aware of it.

12339. You never were appointed a pacificator?—No, I got no such appointment.

12340. You never acted as such?—I never did.

12341. Is there any other person of your name in the town?—No person in my trade in the town; there is a person of my name in the Irishtown.

12342. Do you know what a pacificator is?—I heard of it; I read something about it.

12343. Were any pacificators appointed at Clonmel in consequence of what you read?—I do not know; I heard it talked of that I was appointed, but I never got any notification of it, nor did I get any information of it through any regular channel.

12344. Did you see it in print?—No, I did not.

12345. Did you see any resolution adopted at the Association about pacificators?—I did; I saw letters from Mr. French, recommending that the people of Tipperary particularly would assist in keeping the peace and preventing disturbance, in order to meet the views of the Lord Lieutenant in pacifying the country.

12346. And for that purpose to appoint pacificators?—Yes.

12347. Did you hear that it was part of their business to attend to the registries?—I did.

Mr. John Butler.

12348. Did you pay any attention to the registries?—I did not in consequence of that.

12349. In consequence of anything did you?—I paid some attention, not a great deal.

12350. Did you attend at the sessions?—I did not, unless I might go for a short time.

12351. Did you go?—I did two or three times, just for curiosity, and took some part, but not an active part.

12352. What part did you take?—On the liberal side.

12353. In what way?—I recommended persons to go and register, and gave them instructions how to do it.

12354. How many persons did you instruct to go and register?—Very few.

12355. How many were there during the last registry?—I might have spoken to 10 or a dozen people.

12356. When were the last sessions?—In January.

12357. You said you instructed them?—I advised them to register, if they could do so.

12358. What instructions did you give them?—I inquired into their holdings.

12359. Did you do it at the former sessions?—I did.

12360. Did you make it a practice?—No, I have something else to do.

12361. How often did you do it at the former sessions?—Not very often.

12362. Did you do it at the sessions before the last?—I might have gone once or twice to the court; I believe I did.

12363. When were they held?—There were two sessions in the year in Clonmel, and two in Cashel.

12364. When did the last registry take place in Clonmel?—I think in January.

12365. When were the sessions next preceding; were they not in July?—Yes.

12366. At the July sessions how many persons did you speak to to go up to register?—I do not know.

12367. Did you speak to some?—I am sure I did.

12368. When were the sessions next before those July sessions held in Clonmel?—I think the sessions are always held in Clonmel in January, and at Cashel in April.—The last registry sessions were held in Clonmel in April.

12369. Did you take any part in the January sessions in Clonmel in 1836?—I might have taken some part, but I do not recollect whether I did or not.

12370. When was it that you heard you were appointed pacificator?—It was only a report that I heard about the town; I think it was about five or six months ago.

12371. Who was appointed with you?—I do not know.

12372. Did you hear?—I did not.

12373. You have been rather more active since you have been appointed pacificator than you were before?—Indeed, I was not.

12374. You spoke to 10 or a dozen the last registry?—I was more active before.

12375. That being so, you have no doubt that you applied to at least 10 or 12 in January 1836?—I do not know.

12376. You say that you are sure that you might have applied to 10 or 12 at the last registry?—I said that I might have done so.

12377. Did you?—I do not know the number; it is likely that I might have spoken to 10 or 12.

12378. Do you think that you did, or that you did not?—I do not know the number that I spoke to; I know I spoke to some.

12379. What is the inclination of your mind; that you did, or that you did not speak to 10 or 12?—I cannot say; I am inclined to think that I spoke to 10 or 12 upon the last occasion.

12380. And you say that you were more active prior to the time that you heard you were appointed a pacificator?—I did not believe I was appointed, because I had no notification of anything of the kind from any quarter whatever.

12381. You said that you were more active before you heard that you were appointed a pacificator?—I said that before the last sessions I might have been more active in the registries than I was then.

12382. Do you mean more active at the former registries than you were at the last?—I believe I was.

12383. Then must you not have applied to more than 10 or 12 persons in January 1836?—I do not know the number, indeed.

12384. What is the inclination of your mind as to January 1836; do you think you did apply to 10 or 12 in January 1836?—I think I did; when I met a person in the court that I knew, I asked him what he was going to do; and I, of course, advised him to register.

12385. In what consisted your greater activity at the former sessions than at the last?—I had more business to attend to at the last, and could not attend the registry.

12386. In what did your greater activity consist at the former sessions before January 1836?—In assisting at the registry.

12387. How did you assist prior to 1836 in a greater degree than subsequently?—I was more active, and I was more among the electors.

12388. And you spoke to more?—If I was more active, I suppose that I spoke to more.

12389. You are not sure?—As I was more active, of course I spoke to more.

12390. Then you did speak to more than 10 or 12 before 1836?—I did.

12391. Did you ever hear that Archdeacon Laffan was appointed a pacificator?—I never heard any such thing.

12392. Did you hear that Mr. Lycet Pennefather was appointed a pacificator?—I do not know that I ever heard that he was appointed; but as to Dean Laffan, it surprises me that any person should mention his name, being a Roman-catholic clergyman.

12393. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Your impression is, that no Roman-catholic clergyman was appointed?—Decidedly; I do not believe one word of it.

12394. You never heard of it till you heard it here?—No.

12395. So that it is not known in Clonmel, though it is known in London?—Certainly not.

12396. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did you ever hear of either of those gentlemen making speeches upon being appointed pacificators?—I heard that they spoke at meetings.

12397. At what meetings?—At meetings of the county.

12398. For what purpose?—A registry meeting, and other meetings also.

12399. You heard that Archdeacon Laffan made a speech at that meeting?—Yes.

12400. And Mr. Pennefather?—I do not know whether Mr. Pennefather attended.

12401. Is that the gentleman they call the anti-tithe agitator?—Yes, I believe so.

12402. Did you hear that that gentleman made speeches upon being appointed pacificator?—I did.

12403. Did you hear that his speech had any reference to being appointed pacificator?—I heard that it recommended the people to assist in preserving the peace of the county, to meet the views of the Lord Lieutenant in keeping the peace and tranquillity of the county.

12404. The question has reference to the appointment of pacificators; did any speeches of those gentlemen refer to their being appointed pacificators?—I do not recollect, indeed.

12405. Were you at the meeting?—I was not at any of the meetings.

12406. Did you read a report of the proceedings?—I believe I read part of it.

12407. Did you read the report of Archdeacon Laffan's speech?—I believe I read some of it.

12408. Was there any reference to his being appointed a pacificator?—I cannot say whether there was a word about pacificators in it; all that I recollect was, that he recommended the people to come forward and to keep the peace of the county, and discover any bad characters that may be in it.

12409. Was not this a meeting for the purpose of promoting registration?—I do not know whether it was particularly confined to that.

12410. Was that any part of the business for which the meeting was convoked?—It might have been introduced.

12411. Was not that the purpose for which it was called?—There was a meeting for that purpose.

12412. Did not you say that the meeting was called for the purpose of registration?—

tration?—I do not know whether it was entirely for that purpose; it was certainly discussed at some meeting at Cashel, I believe.

12413. The question refers to the meeting at which Archdeacon Laffan attended, and Mr. Pennefather, and made speeches; was that meeting convoked for the purpose of promoting registration?—No, it was not solely for that purpose; it was discussed at that meeting.

12414. Was not that the purpose for which it was called?—I cannot say.

12415. Did not you say that that was the purpose for which it was called?—I said that Dean Laffan attended some meetings.

12416. Did not you say that he attended at a meeting of the county, called for the purpose of the registration?—I believe I said something of that sort.

12417. Did his speech at all relate to the registry?—In some of his speeches he did refer to it.

12418. Did he speak about the business of the meeting, or about other subjects?—Of course he spoke about whatever the meeting met for; but there were so many meetings, that I cannot say what was the business at any particular meeting at which he spoke.

12419. Was it at the time that he was talking about keeping the peace of the county that he spoke about the registry?—I do not know; it was immediately after the Lord Lieutenant had been in the county.

12420. Was that the time when he let the people out of the gaol there?—Yes, he did liberate some people at that time.

12421. That was the time when the meeting was called?—After that time.

12422. Now the question refers to the meeting held immediately after Lord Mulgrave was in Clonmel; was that meeting about the business of the registry?—Indeed I do not know; I cannot recollect the object of the meeting.

12423. You recollect that Archdeacon Laffan was talking about keeping the country quiet?—I do not recollect any particular meeting; I say that there were meetings at which Dean Laffan attended and made speeches.

12424. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You were not present at this particular meeting?—No, I was not.

12425. Of course you cannot tell what Dean Laffan may have said?—I cannot; I stated before that I did not attend any of the meetings.

12426. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] But you said that you read the proceedings?—I said that I read some of the speeches.

12427. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are you sure that you read the speech of Archdeacon Laffan upon that occasion?—I do not recollect any such thing.

12428. Of course if you do not recollect whether he made a speech, you can not say what the speech contained?—Of course.

12429. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you now say that you do not recollect whether you ever read a speech of Dean Laffan's?—No, I often read speeches of Dean Laffan's.

12430. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Where were those speeches delivered?—In Clonmel and at Cashel, and in Fethart, where he lives.

12431. You say that you often read speeches of Archdeacon Laffan at meetings?—I often did.

12432. Then he often attends meetings?—He does attend meetings.

12433. Public meetings?—Yes; at elections, and meetings of that description.

12434. What do you mean by meetings at elections?—He has attended at elections.

12435. What are the meetings at which the speeches have been delivered which you have read?—Dean Laffan has attended meetings in Clonmel, at Cashel, and at Fethart.

12436. Meetings for what purpose?—I cannot say for what purposes; I do not recollect.

12437. For political purposes?—Not for political purposes, but to recommend the people to preserve peace and good order in the country and to avoid outrage.

12438. When those meetings were convened, was there a general and public notice of a public meeting?—There was, I suppose.

12439. What were the objects announced?—There were registry meetings.

12440. Were all those meetings registry meetings?—I dare say they were.

12441. Are you sure?—I am not sure.

12442. Can you state the purpose for which any one of those meetings was held at which the speeches were delivered which you say you read?—I cannot now tell precisely the objects of any particular meeting.

Mr. John Butler.

12443. Mr. Lefroy.] Were any of them anti-tithe meetings?—I do not know.

12444. Can you take upon you to say that they were not any of them anti-tithe meetings?—I cannot say.

12445. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Were they for the repeal of the Union?—No; I did not hear any such thing for the last three or four years.

12446. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You have heard nothing of the repeal of the Union in Clonmel the last three or four or five years?—I do not think I have; it has been quashed for the present, and I hope there will be no occasion to renew it; that justice will be done to Ireland without it.

12447. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] What do you call justice to Ireland?—To put every man upon a fair footing.

12448. Mr. Lefroy.] What deficiency is there in that at present?—There are a great many things that people complain of; I myself have reason, as a landowner in the county of Tipperary, to complain of tithes; I hold 200 acres of ground, and I am a 50*l.* freeholder of the county.

12449. Mr Serjeant Jackson.] Are not all persons that hold land liable to tithes?—They are.

12450. Are you worse off than others in that respect?—I do not think the Irish are on the same footing as the English.

12451. What is the difference?—In many respects; I think tithes more particularly.

12452. Do you believe that the people of England do not pay tithes?—I believe they do, but they have better means to pay tithes, and to pay everything else, than we have in Ireland.

12453. Chairman.] Do you wish to be put upon an equality with England as to assessed taxes?—Yes, I say that as well as everything else.

12454. You would like to have the assessed taxes to pay in Ireland?—I would like to have means to pay them as they have in England.

12455. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Would you like to have to pay assessed taxes? —We have enough to pay in Ireland.

12456. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are you aware of the fact that there are no assessed taxes in Ireland?—I am.

12457. When you were asked whether you would wish to be put upon an equality with England as to the assessed taxes, did you mean that you would like to have assessed taxes in Ireland?—Certainly not.

12458. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Will you give one of the instances in which you complain that justice is not done to you?—Tithes is the most grievous one.

12459. If all are obliged to pay tithes, why are those tithes a grievance to you?—Not more to me than to others.

12460. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are you a Roman-catholic?—I am.

12461. Do you consider that it is a greater grievance to a Roman-catholic to pay tithes to a Protestant parson than it is to a Protestant?—I consider that it is, because the Protestants have some value for it.

12462. Chairman.] Do Roman-catholics pay tithes in England?—I suppose they do.

12463. Mr. Lefroy.] Do not Protestant dissenters pay them in Ireland?—They are obliged to pay; Quakers are forced to do it; when I was churchwarden I was obliged to distrain Quakers for tithes when I collected for the incumbent.

12464. Do not the Quakers refuse to pay taxes as well as tithes?—I believe they do.

12465. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] When you say you distrained as the churchwarden, you mean minister's money?—Yes.

12466. Chairman.] Can you give any instance in which you are not upon an equal footing with your neighbours?—Tithes are the greatest grievance in Ireland.

12467. Can you give any instance in which you are not upon an equal footing with the rest of His Majesty's subjects?—Tithes is the most grievous one and the heaviest.

12468. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do not you give the instance of tithes as one in which you are not upon the same footing as His Majesty's Protestant subjects? —Yes, certainly.

12469. You consider it unjust that you as a Roman-catholic should be obliged to pay tithes to the clergy of an establishment from which you derive no benefit?—I do.

12470. And you consider that in this respect justice is not done to Ireland? —Not so far as that goes, certainly.

12471. Mr. Lefroy.] Is not that the case with all the Roman-catholics of Ireland, and with the Protestant dissenters both of England and Ireland?—I believe it is.

12472. Then in that respect you are on the same footing with all those classes of His Majesty's subjects?—Yes.

12473. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But the Roman-catholic people of Ireland are less able to pay tithes, according to your impression, than the Catholics of England? —I should say so.

12474. So that in addition to the injustice of their paying tithes at all, you add their inability to pay them?—I do.

12475. Chairman.] Are you a landowner or a land occupier?—All my land is let to tenants; I did hold some myself until within two years ago.

12476. It is clear from your evidence that you are a liberal landlord, that you do not exact more than what is fairly due from your tenants?—Indeed I do not; and I find it is very difficult to get tithes from them. They are bound to pay tithes, and they will not do it.

12477. In what way do you interfere as to that payment?—The incumbent has the power to resort to the landlord, and in this case he has resorted to me in preference to the tenant.

12478. In consequence of that, you expect your tenants to pay you what you pay him?—Yes; they ought to pay it, because they have done it for several years, and now they refuse doing so.

12479. Therefore, in fact, they decline to pay you a greater rent, although you pay the tithes which they themselves ought to pay?—No, they do not refuse paying the rent, but they refuse to pay the tithes; there is a fixed rent.

12480. What rent per acre is one of your farms let at?—There are some farms let at 32 s. per Irish acre.

12481. What tithes do you pay for your land?—I believe the tithes amount to about 5 s. an acre.

12482. The tenants pay you 32 s., and when they engage to pay 32 s. to you as landlord, they also engage to pay 5 s. to the rector?—To pay whatever the tithes may be.

12483. And subsequent to that the rector has come upon you, and you are obliged to pay the 5 s. an acre?—Yes.

12484. And now you wish to recover it of the tenants?—They are bound to pay it, but they have refused to do so, and so the matter rests.

12485. Supposing you change your tenant, what should you ask the next tenant?—The farm which is now set at 32 s. an acre is set at its value.—I meant to have said that this land is now let under its value.

12486. Supposing you are hereafter to pay the tithes for land for which you get 32 s. an acre, what would you hereafter ask a tenant to pay you?—This ground is let for a long time.

12487. Supposing it was not let for a long time, and you had now means of re-letting it, would you or would you not ask the tenant 32 s. an acre for it?—I certainly would; it is worth more; I set it low.

12488. Would you ask him 37 s. an acre, because you are hereafter to pay the tithes?—No, but because it is worth it.

12489. Then even if you were hereafter to pay the tithes, you would let him have it at the same price you do now?—When I let those lands to the tenants, they were obliged to pay the tithes and taxes.

12490. Supposing you are to pay the tithes and taxes hereafter, shall not you increase the rent by that proportion?—I will raise it to whatever I conceive to be its value.

12491. Would it not be worth more to the tenant if he had not to pay tithes and taxes than it would be if he had to pay tithes and taxes?—Certainly, it would.

12493. Would not you raise it in proportion to what you have to pay to the incumbent?—I do not think it would be right to do that.

12494. Do you mean that you should make no difference in the rent you required, supposing you paid the tithes and the taxes?—I would; but I would take care that I would not put too great a rent on the tenants.

12495. You would make no difference in point of rent, whether or no you are the payer of the tithes and taxes, or whether your tenant were the payer of the tithes and taxes?—I say that I would not put too great a rent in any case.

12496. Is not the church cess done away with in Ireland?—Yes.

12497. Was it not for church cess that you distrained upon the Quaker?—No, it was for minister's money.

12498. Mr. Lefroy.] In the course of your examination, it has appeared that there were several houses of persons that are registered that you do not consider of 10*l.* value; can you state how many houses of that description there are on the register?—I did not count them, but I should suppose that there may be about 16 to 20 altogether on both sides.

Mr. Stephen Lonergan, called in; and Examined.

12499. Chairman.] WHAT are you?—An attorney, in Clonmel.

12500. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] The Committee have heard from Mr. Walshe and Mr. Butler that you accompanied them for the purpose of valuing certain houses in Clonmel previous to your coming over here to give evidence?—I generally accompanied Mr. Walshe, and Mr. Butler was for a very short time with me, but my general valuation was with Mr. Walshe.

12501. Did you and Mr. Walshe generally concur in your valuation, or did you occasionally differ?—I occasionally differed from Mr. Walshe, but generally speaking, we quite agreed.

12502. Do you know the premises of Michael Russell, in Dispensary-street?—I do.

12503. Did you value those?—I did.

12504. Do you consider that house of the value of 10*l.*?—Certainly I do.

12505. Suppose that Michael Russell wished to part with that house, do you consider he would get 10*l.* for his interest?—I do.

12506. Do you know a house occupied by a person of the name of Napper?—I was not in that house, but it was one of the same range, and there seems to be no difference.

12507. Do you know the premises of Paul Winbury, in Catherine-street?—I do.

12508. Do you consider those of the value of 10*l.*?—I do.

12509. If the tenant wished to part with his interest, do you consider that he would get 10*l.* for it?—Yes; that is the meaning I attach to it.

12510. Thomas Hill, in Upper Johnson-street, do you know his house?—Yes.

12511. Do you consider that he would get 10*l.* for that house?—Yes.

12512. Laurence Cashin, in Upper Johnson-street?—Yes.

12513. Do you say the same as to that?—I do.

12514. William Brown, in Upper Johnson-street?—I know those premises; I consider them of 10*l.* value.

12515. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you know what those persons pay for their premises?—I do; in some instances I ask them the rent.

12516. What does Michael Russell pay?—He pays 6*l.*; and he showed me his agreement, and it was specified in his agreement that his rent should be 8*l.* if he did not pay up the arrears upon the house.

12517. What does Winbury pay?—I was informed that the former rent was 10*l.* 10*s.*; the tenant himself was not upon the premises, but there was some reduction upon the rent in consequence of improvements made.

12518. Do you know what Thomas Hill pays?—£. 7. 10. I was informed was the rent of that house.

12519. What does Laurence Cashin pay?—£. 7. 10. I was informed the rent of that house was.

12520. Were those sums Irish currency or British money?—British money.

12521. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know that the house of Laurence Cashin was valued at 12 l. in the commissioners' books?—I do; I consider it worth more than 10 l. a good deal; there is a very good shop there.

12522. Do you consider Jeremiah Myers's, in Upper Johnson-street, worth 10 l.?—Yes, I do; there is a very good piece of ground attached to that house.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12523. Mr. Lefroy.] What does he pay?—£. 7. 5., he informed me; it is a very neat house altogether, with a very good plot of ground, which is very valuable in Clonmel.

12524. You are speaking of the present value?—Yes.

12525. Do you know when this man registered?—Myers, I understood, registered in 1832, and I considered him of the same value then as now; I understand those houses were built before 1832.

12526. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know Walter Bowles's house?—Yes.

12527. Do you know whether that is more or less valuable than Myers's?—It is less valuable.

12528. Do you know that Bowles was registered by Mr. Hobson?—Yes.

12529. Do you know what Bowles's rent is?—£. 6. 6., I was informed.

12530. Have you heard any complaint as to Bowles's?—I have heard a complaint as to Bowles's; Bowles has only half the quantity of land that Myers has, and it is not so good a house in any respect.

12531. Do you know the valuation in the commissioners' books of Bowles's house?—No, I do not.

12532. Look at the valuation of 1828; do you see Walter Bowles there?—I do.

12533. What is the valuation there?—£. 6.

12534. Do you consider Edward Day's house, in Upper Johnson-street, worth 10 l.?—I do.

12535. Do you consider John Bagg's worth 10 l.?—Yes.

12536. Mr. Lefroy.] What rent do those persons pay?—Edward Day, 8 l. 10 s.; I have not got the rent of Bagg's.

12537. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Thomas Boyd's, in Duckett-street?—I know that house.

12538. Do you consider that of the value of 10 l.?—I do.

12539. Mr. Lefroy.] What rent does he pay?—He pays 8 l.

12540. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] John Everard, in Bagwell-street?—I was in that.

12541. Do you consider that of the value of 10 l.?—I do.

12542. Mr. Lefroy.] What rent does he pay?—He mentioned to me that he paid 7 l. 10 s.

12543. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know Thomas Walsh's house?—Yes.

12544. Is that worth 10 l.?—I would not say it was.

12545. Do you know James Glissan's house?—Yes.

12546. Is that worth 10 l.?—I would not say that it is.

12547. Thomas Keily's, in Gravel-walk?—I would not say that that is worth 10 l. a year.

12548. Timothy Carey, of Cherry-street-lane?—I do not consider that worth 10 l. a year.

12549. John Hennessy, in Hopkins'-lane?—I do not consider that of the value of 10 l.

12550. John O'Flannagan, of White's-lane?—I do not consider that of the value.

12551. Michael Murphy, of Upper Johnson-street; do you consider that worth 10 l.?—I do not; it is precisely similar to Bowles's.

12552. Joseph Burke, in Bagwell-street?—I know the value of that house from its appearance; it is a very excellent one; I suppose it is worth 40 l. a year.

12553. Bartholomew Fennesy, in Irishtown?—That is worth 10 l. a year.

12554. Mr. Lefroy.] What rent does he pay?—He informs me that he pays 10 guineas rent, and that was a reduction from a larger rent.

12555. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] William Burke, of Duckett-street; do you consider that worth 10 l.?—Yes, I do.

12556. Do you know his rent?—He pays 8 l. a year, and says that as those houses become vacant the rent is raised to 8 l. 10 s.

12557. Michael D'Arcy, Dublin-street; what do you say to the value of that?—I think it is worth very near 10 l. a year; but I would not say exactly that it is worth 10 l. a year.

12558. William Fennell, Main-street; do you consider that worth 10 l.?—I do.

12559. Do you know the rent he paid?—Yes; I have seen receipts paying 9 l. a year.

12560. John Costello, in Main-street; do you consider that of the value of 10 l. ?—I do consider it of the value of 10 l.

12561. Mr. Lefroy.] What rent does he pay ?—£. 7; I know a cellar under a house which my father formerly occupied, not half so large, paying 7 l. a year.

12562. Chairman.] In the same situation ?—Not in so good a situation.

12563. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] John M'Auliffe ?—I say that is worth 10 l. a year; he informs me that he pays eight guineas a year rent.

12564. Thomas Shaughnessy of Lower Johnson-street; a cellar ?—I know that cellar.

12565. Do you consider that worth 10 l. ?—I do; he pays 9 l. a year rent, and I am told by his landlord that he could just as soon get 10 l. for it as 9 l. if he wished it, but he did not wish to press the man.

12566. Will you attend to the evidence of John Graham, in answer to question 4853: "Do you know the premises of Thomas Shaughnessy ? I do.—Describe them ? It is a cellar in Johnson-street; that cellar I measured; it is 17 by 26 feet.—What do you conceive to be the value ? £. 7. 10 s.; 8 l. I would say; indeed 7 l. 10 s. would be the value of it." Do you agree in opinion with George Graham that premises which pay 9 l. rent are worth only 7 l. 10 s. ?—Certainly not.

12567. Michael Skiffington ?—I know the house, and have no hesitation in saying that it is worth 10 l. a year, from its external appearance.

12568. Patrick Dumphy, Mary-street ?—I know that house; taking it as a house, it is worth a good deal more than 10 l. a year. I heard that he was impeached upon another ground.

12569. Sir Robert Ferguson.] On what ground ?—On the ground of voting as a lodger.

12570. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know anything as to the fact ?—No, I do not.

12571. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you know what rent the houses in Dispensary-street pay ?—I am informed 8 l. Irish.

12572. That is about 7 l. 7 s. 9 d. British ?—Yes.

12573. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know Thomas Hogan, in Main-street ?—I do.

12574. Do you consider that of the value of 10 l. ?—I do; it is a very good cellar.

12575. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you know what rent he pays for it ?—£. 7.

12576. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know Anthony Manning ?—Yes; I was in that cellar.

12577. Do you consider that of the value of 10 l. ?—I do.

12578. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you know what rent he pays ?—I have it down here; 6 l. 10 s. Tenants are not fond of saying that they pay a high rent; I had not that from the tenant himself, but from a woman that informed me.

12579. They knew for what purpose you made the inquiry ?—I did not inform them.

12580. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did they know that you were coming over to be a witness before the Fictitious Votes Committee ?—I do not know; it was known that some witnesses were coming; but I do not know whether it was known that I was coming.

12581. Were you a person active in the registry ?—No; I have attended the registries for some time, but I cannot say that I ever took a very active part.

12582. Chairman.] You belong to the liberal party ?—Yes, I belong to what is called the liberal party.

12583. Have you been pretty actively engaged in arranging the evidence to be brought forward before this Committee ?—Yes.

12584. Are you the person to whom that was committed ?—Yes, to a certain extent.

12585. Mr. Lefroy.] Your going about the town to look at those premises was a matter of notoriety ?—Yes, many persons saw me I should think; it got wind soon after I had been there.

12586. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You have no knowledge of the rents subject to which those tenants hold, except what you derived from themselves ?—Except the receipts I have seen.

12587. You are not agent to the property ?—No.

12588. Mr.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12588. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you think the tenants understated their rents in any cases?—I could not answer that question.

12589. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] What would be their motive for understating their rents?—Because they have a general feeling to depress their rents, because their landlords might be induced to raise them if they said that they paid so and so; if those persons said that they paid a higher rent than they actually do, they might have a notion that their landlords would bring them up to the higher rent.

12590. That is a reason for not representing their rents higher than they are, but is that any reason for representing their rents lower than they are?—I think amongst this description of persons they generally say their rents are lower than they are.

12591. Is it not an object with this class of people to possess the elective franchise?—I do not think it is; I do not think it serves them much.

12592. But are not they anxious to have it?—Many of them are, but several of them are not.

12593. With respect to those you have given evidence of, are they desirous to possess the elective franchise?—Many of them are very careless about it.

12594. They are registered, are they not?—They were induced to do it by persons serving notices for them.

12595. That has been done, to your knowledge?—Yes.

12596. Persons have served notices on behalf of others without the desire of those others?—Yes.

12597. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Has that been done on the other side?—Yes; it is done on both sides, and it is quite an understood thing in Clonmel; there is scarcely a registry that it is not done on both sides.

12598. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You think some of those people would be rather reluctant to register; how many of those persons whose premises you have given us the value of would be reluctant to register?—I could not say as to that.

12599. Can you name one of them?—I was not present at the registries, and therefore I cannot speak to that; I only spoke of the thing in general, of some of the persons in that class of people wishing not to interfere about the matter.

12600. But you are not aware that any one of those persons was reluctant to register?—No.

12601. Therefore as regards those particular people, you cannot assign any motive why they should underrate their rent?—No, I cannot say that any of them was reluctant to register, because I was not present.

12602. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] When you say "reluctant to register," do you mean that they were indifferent as to whether they registered?—Some of them are.

12603. They have no direct profit or advantage from registering?—I think not.

12604. And some of them were indifferent about it?—Yes; I have heard it stated that notices have been served, and they could not be induced afterwards to come to register.

12605. Then you do not believe that they would misstate the amount of the rent that they pay for the purpose of preserving their franchise?—If I were to give any opinion, I would say that they would rather state a less rent than they actually paid, from a feeling there is amongst those people.

12606. You conceive that they apprehend that if they represented their rent to be higher than it actually was, it might induce the landlord to raise it?—Yes; I know, as far as I have to do with them, they often represent the payments to the landlords as being lower than they are.

12607. You stated the rent payable by the houses in Dispensary-street at 8 l.; will you look at this valuation in 1828, and you will see that the houses that pay 8 l. rent, are valued at 6 l. and at 5 l.?—Yes, I perceive that.

12608. Do you consider that an accurate valuation?—No, I do not.

12609. Mr. Lefroy.] That is a valuation made upon oath?—I perceive it is.

12610. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Is not the incorrectness of it demonstrated by the fact, that the rents paid are in many instances higher than the valuation?—Yes; I think generally in those valuations, in extensive towns, they value houses houses without going and examining them very minutely; they take a whole range together.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12611. Mr. Lefroy.] Is it not likely that persons that value upon oath will take more pains and value more accurately than persons that do not value upon oath, and are not to give evidence upon oath as to their valuations?—I think persons that are to give evidence as to particular houses are very particular in examining them, perhaps more so than persons appointed valuators under a general Act, who go through the streets and value whole ranges of houses.

12612. Do not you think that when a man has to give the value upon oath he is likely to inspect the house with at least as much attention as a man that has not to value upon oath?—I think in valuing towns it would be a very difficult thing if they had to go into every house and examine it minutely. I do not think it is at all an infraction of their oath to value streets and ranges of houses generally.

12613. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Would it not be an infraction of the oath if a man sworn to value to the best of his skill and judgment was to value under the real value?—I think it might still be according to his skill and judgment.

12614. Do you think that the persons that were sworn were worse in judgment than those that were not sworn?—They may be defective in judgment.

12615. Were they defective in judgment?—I think so.

12616. Who were they?—Mr. Smith was one, Mr. Shea was another, and Mr. Higgins another.

12617. Do you think they were not fit persons to be appointed valuators?—I do not think they made a correct valuation.

12619. Therefore the fact of the rent being higher than the valuation in many cases is demonstration?—Yes.

12620. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Is it within the range of possibility that you could be imposed upon as to the amount of the rent in any of those cases?—I do not think I could.

12621. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Did not you see the receipts in many instances?—I did.

12622. Mr. Hamilton.] Have you seen any recent receipts?—I have seen recent receipts.

12623. Chairman.] When the valuators made the valuation in 1828, could they have any political object in valuing otherwise than according to the best of their skill and judgment?—I do not think they had then, or could have had.

12624. Was not it long previous to the Reform Bill?—Yes, four years, I believe.

12625. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] It was under the Reform Bill that, for the first time, those houses obtained the franchise?—Yes.

12626. Mr. Hamilton.] It would rather be the interest of a particular valuator that the valuation upon the whole should be high?—It would be matter of no interest one way or the other.

12627. But the higher the general valuation was the less it would be upon each individual?—It would be so small a trifle that it could not influence their judgment.

12628. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Is it not the general impression that those valuators in 1828 leaned lightly upon the poor class of houses?—I am informed that they did.

12629. And if they valued high at all, it was upon the better class of houses?—Yes, that is the impression in Clonmel.

12630. Assuming that to have been so, can you account for the valuation of those poorer classes of houses being lower than it ought to have been?—Yes; it would lead me to suppose that they did not think themselves authorized to value to the utmost farthing where the occupier of the house was not in opulent circumstances.

12631. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you think that that indulgence should go to the extent of a fourth or a fifth of the value of the house?—No, I do not think it should, if their judgment was correct; but it turns upon the point of judgment.

12632. Were

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12632. Were not those valuators professional men?—None of them; one of them is an auctioneer.

12633. Chairman.] Where is your own residence?—My residence is in the New Quay, and my office is in Johnson-street.

12634. When was the house in which you reside completed?—About two years ago.

12635. Then of course that was subsequent to the last appointment of the commissioners?—Yes.

12636. Are your offices in Johnson-street entered in the commissioners' books?—The house itself is valued.

12637. But you are only a lodger?—Yes.

12638. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Under what right are you registered?—I am registered as a freeman.

12639. Do you know the premises of Patrick Welch, in William-street?—I do.

12640. Did you know them in the year 1828?—I did.

12641. Do you consider that they have undergone any change of value since the year 1828?—The value is about the same.

12642. Will you attend to this evidence of Mr. Richard Legge, in answer to question 4192? "What is No. 18 as to value? No. 18 is a very good house, and at the rear there is one common entrance.—What is the whole value of the house No. 18, William-street? It ought to be worth 16 l. a year." Will you see what is the valuation of the house in the commissioners' books in 1828?—£.11.

12643. So that Mr. Richard Legge states that that house is worth 16 l., and yet the valuation is only 11 l.?—Yes.

12644. Chairman.] Is that house in the same condition now as it was in 1828?—To all appearance it is the same; I think it was as fully worth that value in 1828 as it is now.

12645. Mr. Lefroy.] Were you particularly acquainted with the house in 1828?—I frequently passed through the street, and there was not a house in the street that I did not know.

12646. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] May there have been an addition to it behind without your knowledge?—There might, behind.

12647. Should you willingly, from that sort of transitory knowledge, put your judgment upon the value of that house in 1828 in competition with the sworn opinion of those three valuators?—I would not for a moment venture to say that those gentlemen committed any infraction of their oath, but I could not surrender my judgment in that case to any person's.

12648. Did you take such means to come to a right conclusion as to make you feel safe and comfortable in setting up your opinion against a sworn valuation?—I should feel perfectly comfortable.

12649. Mr. Lefroy.] Then it is from your recollection of the house in 1828 that you think that it is more likely your judgment is correct than theirs?—I should think so.

12650. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did you go into the house in 1828 with a view to the valuation?—I did not.

12651. Did you go round the house?—No; I only judge from the external appearance of the house.

12652. Did you go round the house, or into the house, since 1828?—No.

12653. Then your opinion is only the casual observation of a person passing through the street?—Not casual, for I passed through the street very frequently.

12654. Did you ever examine it for the purpose of setting a value upon it?—I did lately.

12655. Did you go into it?—No, I did not; I felt that I had no occasion to go into this house, for it is a perfectly valuable one.

12656. Mr. Lefroy.] Did you look at it with any other view than to ascertain that it was worth 10 l.?—No; in looking at other houses, I looked at that, and I thought that the house being of such a cast could not at all come under the range of impeachable houses; it struck me that that house was worth 15 l. or 16 l. or 17 l. a year.

12657. You did not look at it with a view to set your judgment of it against the judgment of the valuators on oath?—No.

12658. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Did you know at that time what the valuators had valued it at?—No.

12659. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Was not your object to see that the houses were of such a value as to render them fit for the register?—I did not look at that house for the purpose of registering it, because I was convinced that it would not be impeached, for I knew the house to be worth 16*l.* or 17*l.* a year.

12660. The question is, what was your object in the process you were going through?—I did not value that house for the purpose of giving evidence to sustain it in point of value in coming over here.

12661. Then you did not value that house as you did the other houses?—No.

12662. Other houses you did value for the purpose of giving evidence here upon them?—Yes.

12663. And that house you did not?—No.

12664. Mr. Hamilton.] In this case your judgment agrees with Mr. Legge's as to the value?—It does.

12665. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know William Burke's, in Duckett-street?—Yes.

12666. Did you know it in 1828?—Yes.

12667. Do you consider that the house has undergone any alteration since 1828?—No, I do not consider that it has.

12669. William Purcell, in Gordon-street; do you know whether he occupies that house?—He occupied it at the time he registered.

12670. Was he the sole occupier?—He was.

12671. Do you know that fact?—I know it from Mr. Baker's son that he was the devisee of the house; Mr. Baker was formerly lessee of the house; he devised it to William Purcell by will, in order to get rid of it, because he had it at too high a rent.

12672. You state that when he registered in 1832, he was the legal owner and occupier of the house?—He was.

12673. You attended at the registry in 1832?—I did.

12674. Mr. Lefroy.] Can you state to the Committee any circumstance in point of skill or experience, or any ground which ought to entitle your evidence as a valuator to a preference over the sworn valuation made under the 9th of Geo. 4?—I have been connected with the drawing of leases and the value of premises generally the last seven or eight years, and when I was serving my time I had frequently to draw leases and to inquire about the value of houses, and that gives me some knowledge of what the value of houses ought to be.

12675. Was not drawing leases a matter done in the office, and did not contract for the rent always precede the drawing of the lease?—Yes, but it often happens that those things provoke inquiries about the premises.

12677. Mr. Lefroy.] Are not those small houses generally held under parol agreements or articles that do not require a professional man's services?—They are generally held from year to year, but then I can take a relative proportion to value them from the value of other houses.

12678. Then it is not so much from your experience respecting those houses as respecting houses of a superior class?—Many of those houses are held under proposals, many of which I have seen from time to time.

12679. But you have not been employed between landlord and tenant to make valuations of those houses?—No, but I have seen the proposals from time to time, and that gives me an opportunity of knowing the value of those houses.

12680. Does it give you the knowledge of anything more than the fact of what is paid for them?—From having seen proposals and other documents, and afterwards knowing the premises, it gives me some knowledge of the value of them.

12681. Does it give you any more knowledge than any man would have who saw the proposal, or saw the article on which the premises were held?—Not if he was in the habit of seeing them.

12682. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Have not you stated that the circumstance of your being employed in drawing those proposals and leases led you to make inquiries respecting their value?—It provoked discussion as to the value of them.

12683. Mr. Hamilton.] One of the valuators is an auctioneer; is not an auctioneer peculiarly likely to know the value of property of that kind?—He may know the value of furniture and chattels of that description, but in Clonmel they are not generally employed to sell houses.

12684. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] What was the name of the auctioneer?—Mr. Shee.

12685. And he was the valuator who was not examined here?—Yes.

12686. So that two persons who were not at all conversant with the value of houses were examined, and Mr. Shee was not examined?—Yes.

12687. Mr. Lefroy.] You say that the other two persons were not at all conversant with the value of houses?—Forming my judgment from this valuation book, I would say that they do not appear to have been.

12688. Do you think that your valuation is more to be relied upon than theirs?—I would say so.

12689. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Was not your judgment assisted in many instances by reference to the receipts for rent?—Yes, and those instances would stagger any one, I think.

12690. Mr. Lefroy.] And yet in many instances your valuation exceeded the rent, in some cases by a matter of between 3 l. and 4 l., in other instances by a matter of 2 l. 10 s., and in other instances by a matter of 2 l.?—Yes.

12692. Out of all you have been examined about, did three of them pay a rent of 10*l.* a year?—No; in those instances I do not think there was a single one where the rent was 10*l.*

12693. Some as low as 6*l.* 6*s.*?—I believe the lowest rent that I supported was 6*l.* 10*s.*; that was the case of a cellar where the individual had been a long time in possession.

12694. What regulated you with respect to the houses and cellars that you valued?—I only took the relative value of them, comparing them with other cellars.

12695. Then was it more from the relative value than from an absolute inspection and valuation that you formed your judgment?—Both combined.

12696. It appears that in some streets you valued some houses and passed by others; what determined you in doing that?—That occurred in Dispensary-street; the houses appeared to be very similarly built, exactly at the same time and the same height; I went into one house and took a view along the rear, and they appeared to me precisely the same, and I having other matters to attend to, did not think it necessary to go into them all, they appearing of the same dimensions and structure.

12697. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Did you attend the registry by Mr. Guthrie in 1832?—I did; I was there a considerable portion of the days on which he was registering.

12698. In Mr. Joseph Higgins's evidence, question 2725, this passage occurs: "Do you remember any declaration made by the barrister as to the intentions of the Legislature in the introduction of the Reform Act? I do; I remember that he stated that his opinion was, that it was the intention of the Legislature to extend the elective franchise almost, if not altogether, to universal suffrage; that was his opinion, and that he would do so." Did you hear the barrister, Mr. Guthrie, state that, or anything to that effect?—No, quite the contrary; the barrister's conduct would contradict a statement of that kind; he examined every voter very minutely as to the value and residence, and occupancy, and all that; and where the person did not swear that the premises were worth 10*l.* a year, and also adhered to the other requisites, he rejected him; and I think those acts would be quite inconsistent with such a declaration.

12699. The declaration he is reported to have made, being that he would extend the elective franchise almost, if not altogether, to universal suffrage, you think think it quite inconsistent with such a declaration as that that he should investigate each case, that he should in many instances reject the claimants, and that he should offer to hear any evidence that could be adduced to contradict the statement made by the claimant?—Yes, it would appear very inconsistent; I frequently heard him calling upon Mr. Walsh and the agent of Mr. Bagwell for evidence.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12700. Did you hear him make any statement of the construction that he was disposed to give to the Reform Act?—I did; I heard him say that the Reform Act was one which was to be construed liberally, but not universally by any means; he considered it as a boon given to the people of Ireland as well as of England, and that to put a narrow construction upon it would not be to carry out the meaning of the Act; and it having made the claimant a competent witness, he considered that he should place a good deal upon the person's own swearing, he being made a competent witness under the Act.

12701. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you know how many claimants Mr. Guthrie actually rejected?—No; but I know it was well known that many were rejected.

12702. Sir Robert Ferguson.] How many were rejected in your presence?—I think upwards of a dozen in my presence, there might be 20; I recollect two instances of rejection, because they were persons of rather respectable character, and it made an impression upon me at the time.

12703. Who were they?—In one of those cases the claimant was admitted to register upon another point; one was Mr. Burrows Close, who was rejected, it appearing that he was a lodger.

12704. He was an attorney?—He was an attorney; the other was the Rev. Sackville Burke; he was rejected upon the lodger point; but it appeared that he was allowed to register out of a stable which was at the rear of his house; he and Mr. Burke, his landlord, having sworn that he had exclusive possession of them, and that they were worth 10*l.*

12705. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Then the result is, that the registering barrister, who is said to have announced that he would confer universal suffrage upon the people of Clonmel, rejected claimants, some upon the ground of their being merely lodgers, and others upon the ground of under value?—Yes; Mr. Burrows Close is what we term a liberal Protestant.

12706. That is a rare thing in Clonmel?—Yes, very rare.

12707. Mr. Lefroy.] Then Mr. Guthrie did not register a single voter that was not fully qualified in point of value?—I have already said that I think he did register some that were not qualified in point of value, but I do not think he was culpable in having admitted them.

12708. Did he admit any persons that were merely lodgers?—No; it appearing to him that they were merely lodgers

12709. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] When you say that you do not think he was culpable in admitting them, what do you mean by that?—I mean that there was no evidence to contradict the swearing of the person.

12710. Then if any one was to blame, it was those persons who undertook to supply evidence and who did not supply it when they ought to have done?—Yes, and there might be some blame attached to the individuals themselves; they might have been under a false impression about it, as the Act of Parliament was a new one.

12711. Mr. Lefroy.] Were not the terms in which the claimants swore to the value of their premises, that they were worth to them 10*l.* a year?—Yes, there were several instances of that.

12712. And upon that swearing Mr. Guthrie registered them?—Yes, but he generally brought them to the test of the fact; and I may say, while I was present, he always did so, for he, not knowing exactly their meaning by those words, tested them in this manner: "Would you leave them for 10*l.* a year?" and when they answered they would not, then, no evidence being produced upon the other side, he thought he could not reject the claim.

12713. Then, if the claimant swore that they were worth to him 10*l.*, and that he would not leave them for 10*l.* a year, upon those two tests Mr. Guthrie would admit the voter?—He also asked, "Would you pay 10*l.* a year rather than leave them?"

12714. Did he apply all those tests in every instance?—While I was present I do not recollect any nstance that he did not.

12715. Were

12715. Were there any further tests, or were those the only tests?—In the absence of other evidence I think they were.

12716. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] The application of those tests was not very consistent with the intention and determination to confer universal suffrage?—No.

12717. Mr. Lefroy.] That is matter of opinion, is it not?—Yes.

12718. Chairman.] Did the liberal side object to the claimants as being under value?—In some instances, I think, they did.

12719. Were those claimants admitted or not admitted?—As far as I can recollect, in some instances they were not admitted, in some instances they were.

12720. Were those tests applied in those cases?—Certainly.

12721. Did you give any evidence in those cases?—None at all.

12722. Mr. Hamilton.] You are understood to say that Mr. Guthrie's criterion of value was not the marketable value, but the value to the individual?—No; I think that was his mode of ascertaining what was the marketable value.

12723. Would not the obvious mode of ascertaining the marketable value be to inquire whether a person could be got to take it at that value?—When he asked the individual whether he would pay 10 l. rather than leave it, I think that was a test of the marketable value.

12724. Might not an individual be willing to give a greater sum rather than leave his premises, though the premises in the market would not be worth so much?—I do not think that persons would be likely to pay 10 l. a year for premises that were not worth it.

12725. You conceive that the inconvenience of leaving premises, and the uncertainty of procuring others, is not a matter that would be taken into consideration?—I do not think it would in that class of society; it might with persons of very extended business, and with quantities of furniture.

12726. Was the test of whether a solvent tenant could be found to give the amount at which the premises were valued ever applied by Mr. Guthrie?—In many instances solvent persons came and swore that the premises were worth 10 l.

12727. Was that put as a question to the claimant?—Yes; I recollect the question being put to him, and he said "Yes."

12728. Mr. Lefroy.] Was that test always applied to the claimants?—It was put on both sides.

12729. You conceive that any man, however poor, paying a rent of 9 l. a year, or occupying premises worth 9 l. a year, would leave them for another pound a year?—There have been premises set at 9 l. a year in Clonmel, and worth 10 l., and taking it in that way I would not say that he would leave them.

12730. In all those instances in which the claimants stated that they would give 10 l. a year rather than leave the premises, it may have been the fact that the premises were really only worth 9 l. or less than 10 l., although for their own convenience they would rather pay 10 l. than leave them?—No, I do not think that; I think those individuals would not pay more than the value of the houses.

12731. Do you think a man having a house of the value of 9 l. a year, would rather leave it than pay an additional pound?—I think, if he considered that he paid the full rent for the house, he would.

12732. You think a man, under those circumstances, would not estimate his convenience at 1 l. a year?—No; I do not think persons in that class of life would.

12733. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] They would not pay 1 l. a year to avoid that sacrifice of convenience?—No; I think those people would do a great deal for 5 s.

12734. Chairman.] You mean to say that the leaving that particular house would be no loss to him?—If it was in a very good situation, the very situation would make the house worth it.

10 l.; but it can be explained in many instances. An individual comes to register for a house for which he pays 9 l. a year, and that house is worth 10 l., and he may have a feeling that as he does not pay 10 l., he may not feel it safe in his conscience to swear that it is worth 10 l. I recollect in many instances when it was asked what they meant by the words "to me," the man explained it by saying, "I pay a certain rent, I do not know what another person would pay, but I consider it is worth 10 l., and I would pay 10 l. a year for it."

12737. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You were asked as to the difference between the valuation set upon certain houses by Mr. Legge and other witnesses, and the valuation in the book of 1828; are you aware that it has been the practice every three years, when the commissioners come into office, to have a new valuation made of all houses which in the meantime have been improved?—Yes, I know that fact.

12738. Accordingly, since 1828 there have been new valuations made of all the houses in Clonmel which have been improved since the valuation of 1828?—Yes.

12739. (To Mr. Keily.) Is Patrick Walsh's included in either of the valuations of improved houses made in 1831 or 1834?—It was not.

12740. Those were sworn valuations?—Yes.

12741. If that house was improved since 1828, the valuators who made those valuations in 1831 and 1834 must have sworn falsely if they excluded Patrick Walsh's house from those valuations?—Yes.

12742. Does Thomas Atkyns's house continue at the same valuation at which it stood in 1828?—It does.

12743. If that had been improved after 1828, it would have appeared in the subsequent valuations of 1831 and 1834?—It would, certainly.

12744. Attend to the evidence of William Smith, 3567; he is asked, "Are you acquainted with the house of Thomas Atkyns, in Duckett-street?" his answer is, "I am; his house I consider is of the value of 10 l." What is the valuation of that house in the book of 1828?—£. 7.

12745. Is that house included in either of the subsequent valuations?—It was not.

12746. (To Mr. Lonergan.) It appears that Mr. Smith states the value of the house to be 10 l., and the valuation of the house is only 7 l. in the book?—That is very incorrect.

Mr. Serjeant Jackson.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. Stephen Lonergan, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12747. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] DO you know anything as to the practice in Clonmel with respect to the way in which rent is received out of small tenements?—I have heard it stated that tenants very often pay by the week and by the month, holding as yearly tenants; I heard it stated by individuals.

12748. That they were in the habit of receiving or paying rent?—Receiving it.

12749. Do you mean in the instances of yearly tenants?—Yes.

12750. That they were in the habit of receiving their rents weekly?—Yes, weekly and monthly, though the tenants were yearly tenants, for the purpose of securing the rent, as well as making it convenient to the tenants and landlords.

12751. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you speak of the particular houses with regard to which Mr. Serjeant Ball has been examining you, or generally?—I speak generally; generally; I heard it stated; I do not know it of my own knowledge; I think, though, that it is a very general practice.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12752. Mr. Lefroy.] Does that practice obtain as to the houses respecting which you have been giving evidence?—I should think it does not; it may with regard to the cellars; I think it is a very general practice with regard to the cellars that their rents are paid weekly or monthly.

12753. For the purpose of securing the rent to the landlord?—And for the convenience of parties, generally speaking, both the landlords and the tenants; they find it more convenient to have the rent paid in that way.

12754. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] With regard to what proportion of the 10*l.* houses in Clonmel does that practice obtain?—I think it is chiefly confined to the cellars, that practice is.

12755. What number of cellars?—I should think it is very general among the cellars.

12756. What number of cellars?—I am not speaking from my own knowledge of any particular cellars, but as I heard it; it is the impression upon my mind, that it is very general among the cellars.

12757. That it is the practice adopted by landlords as respects cellar-holdings? —I have heard it stated.

12758. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you conceive it arises from a feeling of insecurity with regard to the rent?—No; I think it arises from a feeling of convenience to the parties.

12759. But if it arises from convenience, would not the same principle apply to other houses?—It may occur in other houses, but I am not aware of it.

12760. Chairman.] Why do you suppose it applies principally to cellars; are they inhabited by a less respectable class of occupants?—I think there are many persons occupying cellars who are just as comfortable as persons occupying houses of 10*l.* a year.

12761. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you see any reason why it should obtain in the case of cellar-holdings?—No, I do not.

12762. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you state it is confined to cellars alone?—No; I have heard it stated it occurs in Clonmel, that tenants holding houses of not very considerable value, that is about 10*l.* or so, pay their rent very frequently by the week or the month to the landlord; I do not confine it alone to cellars, but I think it generally prevails among the cellars.

12763. Mr. Hogg.] What is the meaning of the expression, that it generally prevails among the 10*l.* householders; do you mean that the majority of the persons in Clonmel pay their rents weekly or monthly?—No, I do not; I cannot speak to the majority; I think in some instances it occurs.

12764. What is your meaning, when you say it generally prevails; do you mean there are individual instances?—I think there are individual instances; I have heard of cellars where the rent was paid weekly.

12765. I am not speaking of cellars; I am speaking of 10*l.* houses?—I do not know of any house, of my own knowledge, where that is the case.

12766. Do you know, of your own knowledge, of any 10*l.* householder in Clonmel who pays his rent weekly?—No, I do not; I stated before, that I could not speak to my own knowledge, whether cellars or otherwise, but merely as I heard.

12767. My question was, if you knew of any of your own knowledge, and you answered you did not; can you tell me the occupier of any 10*l.* house in Clonmel who told you he paid his rent weekly?—No, certainly not.

12768. Can you tell me any landlord of any 10*l.* house in Clonmel who has informed you he received his rent weekly?—No, I cannot speak to any fact at all about it.

12769. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] What I understood you to state was, am I right, that the landlords of some cellars told you so?—Yes, just so.

12770. And that is all you know about the matter?—Yes, I cannot speak to any fact of my own knowledge.

12771. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Could you name the landlord of the cellar who told you so?—Yes, I can name one; Mr. John Butler told me that he received his rent weekly, though the person is a yearly tenant.

12772. Can you name any other person besides Mr. Butler?—Yes, I heard Mr. Gleeson say it was a general custom.

12773. Is he a landlord of any such holding?—I cannot say.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12774. Can you name any other landlord besides Mr. Butler?—No, not immediately.

12775. Can you name any tenant of a cellar-holding that told you he was in the habit of paying his rent weekly?—No, I do not recollect.

12776. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are you aware of this, that supposing that the practice does prevail, that the tenants as well as the landlords do find it to their interest to pay their rents weekly?—Yes, I think they both find it a convenience where it does prevail.

12778. Mr. Hogg.] And by paying it, it is a protection to their own improvidence?—I think so; that is the construction I put upon it.

12779. Which is a convenience to both parties?—Which is a convenience to both parties.

12780. Does that occur in houses?—It may occur in houses, but I cannot call to mind any householder paying by the week or the month.

12781. Your impression is, that it is limited to cellars, and that it does not extend to householders?—No, that is not my impression; I have heard of cases of cellars, but I cannot bring to mind that I have heard of cases of householders.

12782. It might or might not, you know nothing about it?—Just so.

12783. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But when you say it is a convenience to needy persons, do you say to them only?—I do not say to needy persons.

12784. It may occur to persons in good circumstances?—It may occur to persons in good circumstances; the landlord might make that arrangement when the tenant was going into the house.

12785. I suppose a person who does not keep an account at a bank, where he can lodge his money, finds it convenient to pay weekly or monthly?—Yes.

12786. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you think it would be a convenience to a person in good circumstances to be at the trouble of paying his rent weekly?—I do not think it is any trouble to pay the rent weekly or monthly.

12787. Do you think it would be a convenience to a man in good circumstances to be at the trouble of paying his rent weekly?—In a pecuniary point of view it might not, but it might be convenient to the landlord to get it by the week.

12788. But I want to know whether you think it would be so to a tenant, supposing him to be a person in solvent circumstances?—Not particularly in a pecuniary point of view; if he were a person in solvent circumstances, it would make no difference to him; but it may be a reciprocal advantage to the landlord and the tenant that the rent should be paid weekly or monthly.

12789. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] It would obviously be a convenience to any man to pay his rent weekly, rather than risk the loss of the money before the end of the year, with persons who do not keep accounts with bankers?—They may lose the money by contingencies, by holding it over.

12790. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you pay rent for any house yourself?—I do for an office.

12791. Would it be really to you an advantage to pay your rent weekly?—I know it would be a convenience to my landlady if I paid weekly; it would make no difference to me, one way or the other; but my landlady would consider it a convenience.

12792. Would it not be a trouble to you, instead of a convenience?—I consider it no trouble.

12793. Mr. Hogg.] You do not consider that 52 payments, in the place of four, would be any extra trouble?—No, I do not think it would be any trouble.

12794. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] I believe you are not afraid of losing your money before the end of the year?—No, I generally keep my money in the bank; but I know it would be a convenience to my landlady if I paid weekly.

12795. When you speak of convenience to the tenant, do you confine your observation to the case of the tenant, who having the money in his hands till the

the end of the year, and not having a banker to lodge it with, finds it convenient not to risk the loss of it before the end of the year?—Yes.

12796. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you confine your observation to those persons simply who have no bankers?—No, I do not; because it may occur where parties have formed an agreement to let or take concerns; it may be part of the original agreement that the tenants should pay weekly or monthly.

12797. Mr. Hogg.] Is there a saving bank in Clonmel?—Yes, there is.

12798. Where the smallest sums may be deposited?—Yes.

12799. And safely kept?—Yes; there is some inconvenience sometimes in getting the money out; there is a delay very often.

12800. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] The business is done by a pass-book?—Yes.

12801. And if the book is lost, is not there a great deal of difficulty in getting the money out?—I have known instances of difficulty in getting the money out.

12802. If a customer of the bank loses his pass-book, there is a good deal of trouble then?—There is a good deal of trouble then.

12803. And accordingly people are not so willing to lodge their money in saving banks as they otherwise would be?—I think not; I think there is more trouble in lodging the money in the saving bank, and the trouble of getting it out afterwards, with the little interest they would get, than there is in paying the rent weekly or monthly.

12804. I believe your father is a landlord of some houses in Clonmel?—He is.

12806. Do you know what the rent is?—£. 32 a year.

12807. How is it let to them; is there a lease?—No, they are yearly tenants.

12808. Is that considered a high rent?—No, a very low one.

12809. Do you know whether, in point of fact, a higher rent could be got for it than 32 l. a year?—I am satisfied it could.

12811. You think he could get 5 l. or 6 l. a year more for it?—I am satisfied he could, or more.

12813. I do not know whether I asked you any question as to the premises of a person of the name of David Thornton, in Bagwell-street?—No, you did not.

12814. Do you know those premises?—I do.

12815. Do you know the rent they pay?—I was informed by the tenant 20 l. a year is the rent he pays, and has continued to pay ever since he went into it.

12816. How long has he been in it?—Long before 1828.

12817. And he has been paying 20 l. a year since long before 1828?—Yes; he said he would let me have the receipts, but they were forgotten.

12818. Did you see them?—No, I did not see them; he said he would let me see them, but I forgot to call upon him.

12819. Do you know the landlord?—I cannot say who is the landlord.

12820. Look to the valuation-book of 1828, and see what the valuation set upon that house is?—The valuation on that is 14 l.

12821. And will you see, now, whether the valuation continues the same in the subsequent book?—It is the same.

12822. If there had been any improvement in that house since 1828, of course, according to the practice, the valuation would have been increased?—Yes.

12823. Then do you observe that that is another instance of the under-value set upon premises in that book of 1828?—Yes, certainly.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12824. Do you know the premises of Richard Daniel, mason, Cashel-road?—Yes.

12825. Do you know what rent they pay?—I am informed 6*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

12826. Who informed you?—Mr. Butler, who visited the premises also; I happened not to see the individual upon the premises, but I know those premises are worth 10 l. a year; I do not find them valued in this book at all.

12827. Chairman.] How long have they been worth 10*l.* a year?—As long as I recollect them, certainly since 1828; there is half an acre of ground besides the house; the half acre of ground is worth 10*l.* a year itself, or near that.

12828. Who is the landlord?—I cannot say; I do not know the landlord; I did not inquire.

12829. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know what rent is paid by Randall Pike for his house in Sherlock's-lane?—I was informed by a person on the premises 9*l.*; it is apparently a good house, and I think it is worth more than 10*l.* a year.

12830. Chairman.] Who do you mean by a person on the premises?—A woman on the premises; the tenant was not there himself.

12831. Who was the woman?—Indeed I do not know who she was; some member of his family.

12832. How do you know she was a member of his family?—I have no other reason excepting seeing her upon the premises.

12833. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Well, what is that house valued at in the valuation-book of 1828?—The house is worth more than 10 l. a year; it is valued at 5 l. here.

12834. Do you find any higher valuation in the subsequent book?—No.

12835. You have no doubt the house is worth more than 10 l. a year?—No, I have not.

12836. Then there is no increase in the valuation since 1828?—No.

12837. And of course no improvement?—No, no improvement.

12838. Chairman.] Do you mean to assert, that in no case in which an improvement has been made, there has not been a variation in the valuation since 1828?—I do not mean to assert that; I am speaking of those houses which, to all external appearance, as far as I can judge of them, looking at them and judging of them in that way, there has been no improvement.

12839. Do you mean to say, that because there has been no increase in the valuation, that therefore there has been no improvement?—No; but I am speaking from more than that, I am speaking from my own view of the premises, in conjunction with these valuations in 1831 and 1834.

12840. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But are you aware that the course of business of the commissioners is, upon entering upon their office, to send a valuator about the town, with instructions to value only the premises that have been newly built, or built since the last valuation, or improved since; are you aware that is the practice?—That is the practice since the commissioners came into office.

12841. If the valuator takes on himself to value premises that have not been newly built since the last preceding valuation, or improved, he goes beyond the instructions that he received from the commissioners?—Yes, he does.

12842. In other words, he has no right to value premises except where they have been improved?—Except where they have been improved or built.

12843. Chairman.] Are we to understand that there is no case in Clonmel in which a house or premises have been improved since the year 1828, which does not appear in this valuation?—I cannot answer that; there may be, but I cannot speak to it.

12844. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But we are to understand that in every instance in which there has been an additional value put upon a house by a valuator since 1828, that the house has been either built since 1828, or improved?—Yes.

12845. Chairman.] Now, what is your ground for stating that?—Judging from the sworn valuations in 1831 and 1834.

12846. What do you mean by judging from the sworn valuations?—If I were to give a general opinion respecting it, I should say that no house has been improved except those appearing in the subsequent valuations, made in 1831 and 1834; but speaking of the houses I have given evidence of, I know the houses from my own knowledge, and I can say that there have been no improvements.

12847. What I want to know is, on what ground do you assert that you believe believe there have been no houses which have been improved since 1828 omitted by the valuators in 1831 and 1834?—

12848. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you say that, that there have been no houses improved since 1828 which the valuators have omitted to put a fresh valuation upon?—I cannot give an opinion about that; the valuator is sworn to do his duty, and I suppose he has done it.

12849. Mr. Hogg.] The instructions to the valuators are not to increase the value, except there has been some improvement?—Or new houses built.

12850. Those are the instructions?—Yes.

12851. Your belief is, that the valuators act according to those instructions?—Yes.

12852. And all the opinion and evidence that you have given I understand is founded on that?—No, not founded on that, because I know many houses myself that have not undergone any alteration at all since 1828, and of course have not appeared in those subsequent valuations.

12853. Mr. French.] Has their value been raised?—No.

12854. Then why not?—If I understood the Chairman properly, he asked me this question, whether any house could have undergone any improvement that did not appear in those books of 1831 and 1834.

12855. Chairman.] My question was this, do you know of your own knowledge that no houses which have been improved since 1828 have been omitted in the subsequent valuations of 1831 and 1834?—I do not; I know nothing about it.

12856. Mr. French.] Do you know anything of valuations at all?—Yes, I have been valuing lately.

12857. You say the increased valuation took place in the houses being newly built or improved?—Not an increased valuation, but a new valuation for the houses built.

12858. If the house was improved, there was an increased valuation?—Yes.

12859. Do you know whether those men perform their duty or not, when they value all those houses?—I think they do.

12860. But you know nothing more than that it is the general impression on your mind that they do?—The general impression on my mind is, that they have done their duty, being sworn.

12861. But you know nothing more than that it is your impression that they have done their duty, because they were sworn?—I also speak to houses that I know myself have been the same from 1828 up to this period.

12862. What houses have been the same, either built or improved; what houses have remained the same?—The houses I have spoken to; I give my opinion on the valuations as sworn valuations.

12863. You know nothing except that those people are sworn, and that you suppose, being sworn, they did their duty?—Yes.

12864. Chairman.] Then you mean to say you believe all the valuators, because they are sworn, is that it?—Of course I would presume that they do their duty, unless I have reason to conclude the contrary.

12865. Have you not been giving evidence with regard to three gentlemen in 1828 who were sworn valuators, or who returned the value on oath to the commissioners, who were all wrong in their valuations?—Yes; but men may err in judgment; the cases, I think, are somewhat different. In the latter case the thing must have been apparent, either that new houses had been built or that the houses had undergone alterations; that was matter of notoriety to the individual making it, who is acquainted with the town, and he does not sever the original valuation at all, he only puts, in his mind, what the improved valuation ought to be upon it; and though the valuators in 1828 might have erred in judgment, still I do not think there was the same risk with regard to the subsequent valuators, because the thing was more notorious, either that improvements had been made or that new houses had been built.

12866. Were the valuators in 1831 and 1834 sworn to value every house that had been improved in the town?—Yes; there was only one valuator appointed.

12867. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Did they take any such oath as that, that they would value every house that had been improved in the town?—I am not aware of the exact words of the oath, but that is the instruction they had, and they swore swore afterwards that such and such houses had undergone improvements, and they valued them accordingly.

12868. Is not the oath that they take in substance this: that the valuation that they have set on the houses is correct?—Just so.

12869. Mr. Lefroy.] Which is the correct answer to the question, the one you gave or the one that was suggested to you by Mr. Serjeant Ball?—I think our answers tally.

12870. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] What do you call your own answer?—The answer I have given I will call my own.

12871. What do you call the answer suggested by me?—The questions were asked, and I have answered them, and I call them my answers to the questions.

12872. Which do you call your own answers, and which do you call the answers suggested by me?—I call them all them my own answers.

12873. Then you do not say any were suggested by me?—No, of course not.

12874. Mr. Lefroy.] Then no answer was suggested by Mr. Serjeant Ball?—No; I quite agreed with Mr. Serjeant Ball in whatever question he has asked me; the answer was quite in my mind.

12875. Chairman.] Then am I to understand your idea is, that these valuators swear that they have valued every house in the town that has received improvement?—No; I do not know what the words of the oath are.

12876. Then why do you conceive it is quite certain that they have valued every house in the town that may have received improvement between 1828 and 1831 and 1834?—I say I presume it is all right; I do not say it is certain.

12877. That is the foundation of all your opinions, is it?—No, not all my opinions; because I know houses of my own knowledge that have undergone no alteration since 1828, and those I find undervalued in 1828.

12878. And you find that they have not been put a new valuation upon in 1831 and 1834?—No, because the individual had no instructions to do so.

12879. Then perhaps you can tell us why he had not instructions to do so?—The commissioners instructed him to value only houses improved and houses built since 1828.

12880. But you have stated you know houses that have been improved since 1828 which still have not been raised in the valuations of 1831 and 1834?—I did not intend to convey that answer at all.

12881. Mr. Hogg.] Are the valuators changed every three years?—No; the custom has been to appoint the same persons.

12882. I mean that; are they the same set of valuators?—They may change them.

12883. But is it the usage to change them, or are they the same persons?—It has been the same person since the commissioners came into office.

12884. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] I believe there was only one valuator named?—Only one; he was named twice.

12885. Mr. Hogg.] And he is the same person who gave that valuation that you think so incorrect?—No.

12886. Who were the persons who gave the valuation, the incorrectness of which you spoke of, the valuation in 1828; how many were there?—Three.

12887. Is it those three that have been since employed, with instructions to re-value the houses that have been improved?—Not at all.

12888. It is a different person?—Quite a different person.

12889. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Now attend to me; with respect to that valuation of 1828, do I understand you to say that you do not consider that the valuators in that instance, although sworn to the correctness of the valuation, did value correctly?—I do not think they did value correctly.

12890. Do I understand you to give your belief upon that subject, as well from your own knowledge of certain premises having been undervalued, as from the fact that you know that some of the premises actually pay a higher rent than the valuation put upon them in that book?—Yes.

12891. Accordingly you do not give credit to that valuation, because you had evidence to satisfy you that it is incorrect?—Yes.

12892. With respect to the subsequent valuations made by the valuator appointed in 1831 and 1834, do I understand you to say you do give credit to those valuations, because you had no evidence to satisfy you that they are incorrect?—Yes.

12893. Accordingly,

12893. Accordingly, that you state to be the difference between the valuation in the year 1828 and the two subsequent valuations?—Yes.

12894. Chairman.] Perhaps you could state to the Committee in how many instances the valuation has been changed, in 1831 and 1834, from the valuation of 1828?—I could mention some instances.

12895. Well, mention some?—Mr. Pedder's was changed, and some others; I saw some names in the book; I do not exactly now recollect them.

12896. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You only know it from the book?—I only know it from the book.

12897. Mr. Hogg.] Did you go about, and by personal examination ascertain, with the book in your hand, whether the increased valuation was or was not correct?—No, I did not at all.

12898. But you believe that the persons made it correct, because they were sworn to it?—There was but one person.

12899. But you have not ascertained its correctness by personal inspection?—No.

12900. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But you have no evidence of its incorrectness?—No.

12902. Mr. Hogg.] Do you think a small addition to a house is more palpable or more evident than the diversity of value to which you have drawn the attention of the Committee, where a man has a house and half an acre of land, being valued at 5 l., and you state the half acre of land alone to be worth more than 10 l.?—The commissioners, in consequence, as I understood, of finding no want of funds, without inquiring much into the real value, whether it was correct or not, left it so.

12903. You have spoken of Richard Daniel as being assessed or valued in that book at 5 l.?—Yes.

12904. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are you quite correct in that?—I believe I stated he was not valued in the book at all.

12905. Mr. Hogg.] That is because the premises are under 5 l.?—Yes, that was the supposition in 1828.

12906. This individual occupies a tolerably good house, of what value; tell me what is the real value of that house?—I should think the house is worth 3 l. or 4 l.

12907. I understood you also to have said there was attached to the house half an acre of land?—Yes; perhaps the house is worth 5 l., I would say it is worth 5 l.

12908. And the half acre of land is worth about 10 l.?—Yes, according to the way land is let about Clonmel.

12909. It is very palpable, then, that the whole premises are worth 15 l.?—Yes.

12910. And yet, from what is appearing in the book, the valuators must have considered them under 5 l.?—Yes, exactly.

12911. Can any alteration, by improvement or addition, be more palpable than the fact that that house or ground is worth more than 5 l. a year?—There was no improvement there, therefore the valuator in 1831 and 1834 had no authority to value it.

12912. It is not palpable that that house and ground exceeds in value 5 l. a year?—Certainly.

12913. Is not that fact, as a matter of opinion, to a valuator as palpable as any improvement that can take place by building?—Yes, I think so.

12914. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] May not the valuators have overlooked the fact that there was half an acre of ground annexed to those premises?—They might.

12915. And can you account, by that very possibility of their overlooking that fact, for the circumstance of that house not being in the valuation of 1828?—It may have occurred, certainly; the only conclusion I should draw from it is that they valued rather vaguely.

12916. Chairman.] Supposing that that was the case, would it not be the duty of the valuator who was to correct that valuation to take into account the the additional half acre of land?—No, he would exceed his authority if he did.

12917. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] His authority extending only to a new valuation of improved premises?—Just so; or built.

12918. Chairman.] You are quite sure this half acre of ground belonged to the house in 1828?—Yes, I saw the man tilling it.

12919. In 1828 did you?—Not in 1828, but when I went there lately; I knew the individual to be living there before 1828.

12920. Did he have the land then?—Certainly.

12921. How do you know that?—I have seen the man in his field.

12922. In the year 1828?—In the 1828, and before it and since; there is no doubt about it.

12923. Mr. French.] Is the landlord of the house and the landlord of the land the same person?—I cannot speak to the landlord; I do not know who the landlord is.

12924. Do you not know the landlord of either the house or the land?—No, I do not.

12925. Mr. Hogg.] Do the valuators take any oath?—Certainly.

12926. Can you inform the Committee whether there is an oath prescribed to the valuators by the Act of Parliament?—I should suppose so.

12927. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know William Durney's house in Mary-street?—I do.

12928. Will you be so good as tell me what is the valuation of that house in that book of 1828?—William Durney's I find valued at 8*l.* here.

12929. Do you happen to know what rent that pays?—I know what rent it paid in 1828, and up to about a year ago, when his lease expired; 16 l. Irish.

12930. He paid that in 1828, and the valuation put on that house in 1828 in that book is only 8 l.?—£. 8.

12931. Well, that, you see, is another instance of the incorrectness of that book?—I do.

12932. Do you know Mr. Walshe's house, the witness who was examined here?—Yes.

12933. Well, what valuation is put on that house in the book of 1828?—£.45; it was then inhabited by Alice Lonergan.

12934. Do you happen to know what rent is paid for those premises?—He informs me 55 l.

12935. And yet the valuation-book in 1828 was only 45 l.?—Just so. I find here, just casting my eye over it, premises formerly occupied by my father in the Main-street.

12938. Do you mean to say those premises that have been since let at 126 l. a year were valued in that book of 1828 at only 80 l.?—Yes, as I understand it from this book; I cannot understand it in any other way; because he built a house next his own, which I take to be No. 1, which he let afterwards at 32 l. I find, "William Lonergan, No. 1, 28 l.;" that I take to be the house now occupied by Mrs. Carey. Then I find the premises he himself occupied valued at 80 l.; and he has since let those premises at 126 l.

12939. Chairman.] Have they been improved since that period?—No, they have been improved since the tenants went into them, lately; but they were actually in the same state when he let them as they were in 1828, precisely.

12940. Who is in the occupation of them now?—Mrs. Carey occupies one, and the other is occupied by a Mr. Prendergast.

12941. Then we are to understand that those are very much undervalued?—Yes, certainly.

12942. Mr. Prendergast's ought to be valued at 120 l.?—No, Mr. Prendergast's ought to be valued at 80*l.*, which is the rent he pays, and a store at the rear pays 46 l. a year; the store and the house, it appears, here are thrown into one, being on the same premises, and within the same curtilage.

12943. In that case he ought to pay 120 l.?—No, he does not occupy the store.

12944. Who does occupy it?—A Mr. Goss; they both hold under lease.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12945. Is he rated at all?—I do not know, because he has only just got into possession; he has been only six or seven months in possession.

12946. Were both those held by your father?—Yes.

12947. Then, at that time, they ought to have been 120 l.?—Yes, that was the value of them.

12948. And what does Mrs. Carey pay now?—£. 32 a year; and I find it here valued at 28 l.; and it is worth a good deal more than 32 l.

12949. Mr. Lefroy.] In speaking of the rent payable by these different houses as to which you have been examined, do you speak of your own knowledge?—No, I do not; I cannot speak of my own knowledge, except in these cases that I have been speaking of lately, such as Lonergan's and Carey's; those I speak to of my own knowledge.

12950. But all the rest only from information?—Just so, except in instances where I hold the receipts; I say in those cases where I was informed the rent was so and so, I can only speak from the information I received.

12951. In those instances where you saw the receipts; when did you see those receipts?—When I lately went about; but I got the receipts in many instances in 1832, and before that, between 1832 and up to the present period, in those cases.

12952. Did you in any instance, in the year 1828, ascertain the rents then payable for any of these premises?—No, I did not; I knew the rent payable by Mr. Lonergan.

12953. But as to the rest?—No, my mind was not directed to it at all.

12954. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But you have no doubt the premises remained in the same state from 1828?—In those cases I have mentioned they have.

12955. Mr. Lefroy.] Then all the information you have given us, except in the instance of Mr. Lonergan, was information you have got since the Reform Bill passed?—Yes; but if I were asked in 1828 what the value of a certain house was, I could say that I considered it worth 10 l. a year then, as well as now.

12956. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Now will you attend to this evidence of Mr. Joseph Higgins: No. 2896, he is asked, "Do you imagine that a man pays for a house the extreme value of it to him? I rather think he does." Again he is asked, 2902, "The practice is to let the houses at their full value, but not beyond the full value? To let houses at the full value."—"So that the tenants have no interest whatever in the house? I think, in general, in Clonmel (he says) the full value is paid for the premises." Then in 2907, this question is put to him, "Then rent and value, in your opinion, are synonymous? Certainly, rent and value, in my opinion, are synonymous; I speak with respect to Clonmel." And 2931, he is asked, "Do you adhere to the notion that rent and value are synonymous in that instance? I do." Now you are aware Mr. Joseph Higgins was one of the valuators in 1828?—Yes.

12957. Now Mr. Richard Legge was another, I believe?—No, Mr. Legge was not a valuator in 1828.

12958. Will you attend now to the evidence of Mr. Legge; No. 4309, he is asked, "When no fine is paid, rent and value, in your opinion, are synonymous? Yes, I think so; I consider that to be the value decided upon by the two best judges of the house, that is, the man who owns it and the man who takes it from him." Mr. William Smith was a valuator, I believe?—Yes, he was a valuator.

12959. Now will you attend to this passage in his evidence, No. 3181, "You consider rent and value different things, and that a valuable house might be at a low rent? Yes, it might." Now, sir, Mr. Higgins having been a valuator, and having stated, as you have heard, that in his conception rent and value were synonymous, and Mr. Smith having been a valuator, and stated his impression that rent and value were two different things, and those two valuators thus having two antagonist principles, I will call them, of valuation in their minds, does that suggest to you any mode of accounting for the erroneous valuation they made between them in 1828?—It draws me to this conclusion, that their judgment is not very correct on the subject.

12960. But can you account from that circumstance in some degree, or in any degree, for the incorrectness of that valuation of 1828?—Yes; I would say that both their judgments in one case did not concur; that their judgment, perhaps, was equally incorrect in 1828 in forming the estimate or the value of houses, houses, particularly where I find persons contradicting each other; that their judgment cannot be very strong as to the matter they were speaking about.

12961. Now again, with reference to this same subject, in Mr. George Graham's evidence, he is asked, 5320, "You cannot form any judgment of the rent; accordingly, when you are putting a value on these premises, as you are now, you are not considering what rent they pay? No.—You do not take that into account at all? I do not.—Then is it your impression that the amount of the rent paid is no criterion of value? It is not my impression, because it may be in some instances; in some instances I may have inquired of the landlord what the tenant paid, after forming my own judgment, and in these instances I found they always paid less than I valued them at.—Then, is it not your opinion, as the result of those inquiries, that, generally speaking, the rent paid does not constitute the full value; you have stated now, that in several instances, after forming your own judgment as to the value of the premises, you have inquired of the landlord? In some instances.—Well, in some instances you have inquired what rent was paid? Yes.—And in those instances you found less rent was paid than you considered to have been the value? I did.—Now, do you not then draw this result from that circumstance, that the rent paid is, generally speaking, under the value? Yes; in other words, that I have valued those places to the utmost that they would bear, if in the market.—And the rent is not the utmost value? Not in that case; I cannot take upon me to say that in all cases.—But we have got so far, that there are cases within your experience in which the rent paid for the premises is not the full value; is it not so? Yes, I think so; not the full value." Now, after hearing that, Mr. George Graham, I believe, was not a valuator?—No, he was not.

12962. Have you any difficulty in accounting for the mistakes in the valuation of 1828, when you find the witnesses on the same side of the question, if I may use the term, all differing from each other with respect to the criterion of value, including Mr. George Graham?—Yes, I think I may draw the conclusion that it is very hard to arrive at the conclusion which of them may be correct, when I find them contradicting each other so very much.

12963. Chairman.] Then, am I to understand you do not consider the value as decided on by the two best judges of the houses, the man who owns it and the man who takes it from him?—When I find the fact, that the house is actually of more value than the tenant pays for it, I cannot presume that.

12964. How do you find that fact?—I find it in the case of a range of houses in New-street, where I have heard the tenants say the houses were worth 10 l.; and they would rather pay 10 l. than leave them; and they were only paying about 8 l.; I know it in the case of Mrs. Carey.

12965. Then, I am to understand that the general rule in Clonmel is, that the landlords let their houses below their real value?—That is my impression, arguing from facts.

12966. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Can you understand that the value to the landlord should be one thing, and the value to the tenant a different thing?—I think that the landlord, when he finds a tenant that is a good character, he will give him an interest in letting the house low to him, rather than to a person perhaps from whom he would get the rent equally as well, but who, from his personal habits, he would not wish perhaps to be his tenant.

12967. Mr. Hogg.] If there were two tenants equally solvent, one willing to give 8 l., and the other willing to give 10 l., from your evidence, I understand that the Clonmel landlords would take 8 l.?—I think if there was a difference in the personal habits of the tenants, that the landlords would make a sacrifice from the 10 l., and let the tenant of more industrious habits take it.

12969. Then it must be from the absence of solvent and respectable tenants in Clonmel that houses are let under value?—Not from the absence of solvent tenants, because the tenants may be equally solvent; but, from peculiar circumstances, the landlord may give an interest to one man more than to another; besides, it is my impression too, in Clonmel, that the landlords wish to give an interest to their tenants in the houses.

12970. Is it from the absence of respectable tenants in Clonmel that the landlords are obliged to let their houses under the value?—No, I would not say that.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

12971. You have stated to me that if the tenants were solvent and respectable, they would give more?—No, I do not think I exactly stated that; if you will allow me, I will put the question as I understood it; I thought you asked me this, whether, if two persons were equally solvent and equally respectable, the landlord would make a difference between those.

12973. If it comes to that, that he would take the 10*l.* of course, it follows equally of course, that the houses being underlet in Clonmel must arise from the absence of solvent and respectable tenants?—Yes; but if I take two persons equally solvent and equally respectable, I find the landlord also making that deduction to them from the real value of the house, in order to get them, I place them on an equal par in that view.

12974. Chairman.] Then I am to understand that the landlords in Clonmel are unlike all landlords in other towns, because they let their houses under the real value?—I cannot speak as to other towns.

12975. But you mean to state, as a general fact, that the landlords in Clonmel do let their houses under value?—I do.

12976. Mr. Hogg.] And they could get more rent if they chose to take it? —I think they could get more in a number of instances.

12977. Mr. French.] Is that done for the purpose of creating a political influence?—I do not think it is.

12978. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Is not there such a thing in Clonmel, as well as in other towns, as comparative solvency?—There is; everywhere there may be comparative solvency.

12979. Then, although the tenants in general in Clonmel are not what you would call insolvent, yet there are some more solvent than others, I presume, in Clonmel, as well as elsewhere?—Yes.

12981. So that it is not merely solvency that decides whether a landlord would wish to have a person who is to be his tenant, but other circumstances? —Yes.

12982. Habits of industry and punctuality?—Yes.

12983. Mr. Hogg.] Among others, you said there might be persons whom it might not be so agreeable to the landlord to take the rent from?—I am not aware that I used that expression; but if I did, what I meant by that was, that though the individual was perfectly solvent, yet he might have to send one, two, three, or half-a-dozen times before he got the rent; whereas from another man he might, from his habits, get it directly; we all know many individuals who are very wealthy, and yet do not like paying money. If I were in business in the Main-street in Clonmel, and had got a house with a cellar to let under it, I should make a sacrifice of two or three pounds to a man whom I knew was industrious and not given to drunkenness or anything of that sort, rather than have a person for a tenant from whom I would get my rent, but of whom I had a suspicion as to his habits.

12985. Mr. E. Tennent.] Do you mean to say that the circumstance of solvent and respectable tenants is so rare in Clonmel, that the general rule of the landlords is to set their houses under value, in order to get them?—I think that in general houses are set, perhaps, under the value in Clonmel. I think if two persons came equally solvent and equally respectable, they are placed on an equal footing, and that the landlord would give the houses to either of them in that case.

12986. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] In that opinion which you have just expressed, do not you find you are corroborated by the passage I read from Mr. George Graham's testimony?—Yes.

12987. Does not he state the same thing?—Yes; he states he finds the rents are less than what he values at; so that I find an adverse person agreeing with me.

12988. Mr. Lefroy.] You stated just now that the valuation was considerably below the rent in most cases; in the course of your evidence you have stated that the valuation was in most instances below the rent?—

12989. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Was not that the valuation of 1828?—I am speaking of the valuation in 1828.

12990. Mr. Lefroy.] I am speaking of the valuation made under the local Act?—Just so.

12991. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But Mr. George Graham, in speaking of value, was not speaking of the valuation in 1828, but of his own value?—Just so.

12992. Mr. Hogg.] Is the land in the neighbourhood of Clonmel, six, eight and ten miles round it, set at its value?—I think it is.

12993. Do the houses in Clonmel, or a great proportion of them, belong to the same proprietors as those who have the land?—No, I think not; there is greater competition, I think, for land than for houses.

12994. Chairman.] Does competition increase the value of houses?—I do not think it has any connexion with the value of houses; houses in Clonmel are always to be had; and I have known instances where there have been a dozen proposals for land, and not perhaps two for a house.

12995. That is the reason why the landlord lets his house at a lower rate of value?—I think it is one of the reasons that there are plenty of houses in the market; I think if the proposals were in the rame ratio as for land, perhaps they would be set higher.

12996. Mr. Hogg.] Then the rents are as high as the landlords can get?—No, I do not say that either; I cannot exactly give any definite reason why the houses are let in Clonmel at less than their value, but the fact is so.

12997. Can you give any reason why land is let at its full value, and houses under their value?—I did not say full value.

12998. Is the land about Clonmel let or not at its value?—I think I said it was let at its value.

12999. Then am I to understand you to say, that great landed proprietors about Clonmel are not large and very large proprietors of houses in the town of Clonmel?—Certainly they are not.

13000. Is not Mr. Bagwell a large landed proprietor?—Not immediately about Clonmel; I do not think he has much land.

13001. He has a great many houses in the town?—Yes; he is the head landlord in a great number of instances.

13002. How far does he live from the town?—About two miles.

13003. He is a man of large property?—Yes; but his property does not exactly lay about Clonmel, I think; he has estates elsewhere.

13005. Is it not extraordinary, then, that the land is set at its full value, without regard to the tenants, and the houses are not?—I say it is my impression; I may be mistaken.

13006. But does it not seem a remarkable circumstance that the land should be set at its full value to tenants of a respectable character, but that houses should be set under their value?—No, I think that the proprietors of land would make a sacrifice still to tenants such as I have described; but I did not say the land was set at its full value, but at its value.

13007. May I ask you for the logical distinction between value and full value?—There is no logical distinction; but there is, in common parlance, a distinction.

13008. What distinction is there between value and full value?—When a man says he has the land for the value in that part of the country that I am acquainted with, he means he has it something below the full value; but when we speak of full value, we say it is set for as much as it is worth.

13009. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] In other words, would you call full value rack-rent?—I would call full value rack-rent, but value not; when I call land let at value, that is to give the tenant some interest in it.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

13010. When a tenant round you says he has land at value, you do not consider him as meaning he is paying rack-rent?—No.

13011. Chairman.] Do you draw a distinction between value and clear yearly value?—I cannot form an opinion as to that.

13012. Is clear yearly value the same thing as value?—I should have time to consider that question; I could not exactly answer it in a hurry, whether I should draw a distinction between clear yearly value and value.

13013. Do you draw a distinction between clear yearly value and full value? —Yes, I think there is some distinction.

13014. What distinction do you draw there?—In strictness there may not be any distinction; but I think in the common course of life there is a distinction.

13015. What is the distinction in the common course of life?—I have before drawn a distinction between value and full value; clear yearly value is something between value and full value.

13016. Is "yearly value," according to your understanding of those words, greater or less than the simple word "value," which you imagine to be the under value of property?—I think there is a difference between clear yearly value and value; value is something below the clear yearly value, as I intended it should be conveyed; when I said that land was set in Clonmel for the value, I meant it should be understood it was not set at the very highest.

13017. But I mean to ask you which would convey to your mind the highest rate; namely, the simple expression of "land let at its value," or "the clear yearly value;" which would you say was the highest rate?—The clear yearly value, I think; in common parlance, that is the way we understand it in Ireland.

13018. Yearly value is the rent, is it?—Yearly value is not exactly the rent.

13019. But the simple word "value," in common parlance, would mean the rent it gets, would it not?—No; when I say land is let at the value, I mean something below what it is worth.

13021. But I am talking supposing you wished to set a farm; I want to know how you would express yourself when you talked of it, supposing you asked 20 s. an acre; would you state that to be the value of the farm, or the rent of the farm, or would you make a distinction between the two expressions?—That is just as the case might be; it might happen that it might be worth 25 s. an acre, and I might set it for 20 s., but then the rent and the value would not be the same.

13023. How do you calculate that rent?—If I were a landlord, I certainly should like to give some interest to the tenant, and of course rent and value in that case would be different; there must be some criterion; you never could agree unless something was mentioned; the rent and value in that case would be different things.

13024. Then you mean to say, that in no instance, in setting a farm, would you consider value and rent synonymous terms?—I will not go so far as that; but I think there are lands let very high.

13025. Are not lands, generally speaking, let for the full amount of their value, taking into consideration the demand for such lands in the market, and also the solvency and general respectability of the tenants?—I think in a great many instances they are; but I am sure there are a great number of instances where premises are let under the full value to those tenants; I am speaking of respectable solvent tenants.

13026. If you were employed in letting a farm, would you not go upon that principle?—I would get as much for the landlord as I could; I would not be doing my duty if I did not do so; the landlord might have a different feeling.

13027. Then, when you had got as much as you could, would not that be the real real value of the farm at the moment at which you let it?—It might or might not.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

13028. Then you mean to say, getting as much as you could has nothing to do with the value of the farm?—I do not think it has.

13029. Mr. E. Tennent.] You have stated it to be the general rule that houses in Clonmel are let below their value; now I ask you in what proportion are they let below the value; take the case of 10 l. houses?—I know instances where houses are let at 7 l. which are worth 10 l. I can only give you cases; I should say, perhaps, they are set on an average at 30 per cent. under their value.

13030. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] When you say value, do you mean by that what has been called full value?—Yes.

13031. Mr. E. Tennent.] Which do you mean, because you have mentioned three; value, full value, and clear yearly value?—

13032–3. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Did you mention clear yearly value, or was it asked you in the question; did you take the distinction?—No, it never entered my mind till the question was put to me; I never made the distinction about clear yearly value.

13034. Was it you who drew the distinction first, or were you asked the question whether there was a distinction between clear yearly value and full value?—No; I was asked.

13035. Chairman.] And you admitted there was a distinction, did you not?—Yes, a fine-drawn distinction.

13036. Is not that the expression in the Act of Parliament as to the value of houses occupied?—Yes, I think there is a near connexion between the words clear yearly value and full value; I think that they might be called synonymous.

13037. According to your former answer, then, those parties ought, (supposing there were no peculiar circumstances to take them out of the general rule), by the general rule, not to be registered as 10 l. householders, unless they do pay 10 l. a year rent?—No, I do not at all agree in that doctrine, because a house may be worth considerably more than 10 l. a year, and pay only 5 l.

13038. You have already stated, that you consider clear yearly value to mean something between value and full value?—Yes; but it is a very fine-drawn distinction between clear yearly value and full value.

13039. And you have stated, that what you mean by value is something about the rent that they pay, have you not?—No, I did not state that.

13040. Thirty per cent. under the rent they pay?—Over the rent they pay; full value I consider over the rent they pay.

13041. Thirty per cent. over?—No, I do not mean that.

13042. What do you mean then?—There has been rather a confounding of questions; when we were talking of value and full value, it had reference to land; now I draw a distinction between land and houses.

13043. What distinction do you draw between land and houses?—I think lands are let higher than houses are generally.

13044. Mr. E. Tennent.] As a general rule, do you consider houses are generally let 30 per cent. under value in Clonmel?—Yes, houses of about 10 l. value.

13045. Are there many new houses building in Clonmel?—Yes, there are.

13046. What, in the face of such a fact as that, do persons invest property in houses that let 30 per cent. under value?—The profits they derive from these houses may pay them; they sit down and make their calculation of course; and though they know that perhaps rents are low, still they do it with their eyes open; they make their arrangements accordingly.

13047. Chairman.] Are you aware that the Legislature uses the same expression, "clear yearly value," with regard to counties as they do with regard to towns?—Yes.

13048. But you think there is a distinction between counties and towns?—In letting houses and lands, I think there is a distinction; I think houses let lower than lands.

13049. Then it means a different thing?—Not by the Act of Parliament; I think in the Act of Parliament the words are the same; there is no distinction in the Act of Parliament.

13050. But you mean to say, if you were called upon to put in force this Act of Parliament, you would draw a distinction?—No, I would not, if I were acting under the Act of Parliament.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

13051. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you think you would take the opinion of some counsel upon the subject before you decided how you would put the Act of Parliament in force?—Yes, it might be very prudent to do so.

13052. Mr. E. Tennent.] Both as to counties and towns?—Yes.

13053. Would you take those words in a different sense with regard to counties and towns?—No.

13054. Then how do you justify your own assertion, that there is a distinction between counties and towns?—I mean to draw this distinction, that owing to some circumstance the persons have not the same interest in lands as they have in houses; and, that though the house is of the clear yearly value of so and so, the rent is not so great in the same proportion or ratio that is paid for lands.

13055. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know Mr. Labarte, who was examined here?—I do.

13056. I believe he is a competent judge of the value of premises in Clonmel?—He ought to be.

13057. He resides in Clonmel?—Yes.

13058. And has for many years?—Yes.

13059. And you are aware he is town clerk?—Yes, and a professional man.

13060. Perhaps if you were called upon to select a person that you considered the most competent judge of the value of house property in Clonmel, it would be Mr. Labarte?—I think so; I would place great reliance on his judgment as to value.

13061. Now, in the opinions you have just been giving to the Committee, let me ask you whether, in the answers of Mr. Labarte, which I am about to read to you, you find any corroboration of those opinions. Number 5531, he is asked, "But there is such a thing as a landlord being willing to take a lower rent from a very solvent, industrious, respectable tenant, than he would require from one who is not so? Certainly, I should think so."—"And of course that feeling operates in Clonmel, as well as elsewhere? Certainly."—Again, in number 5575, he is asked, "But if I mentioned any particular cellar which does not pay 10 l. a year rent, would it be your conclusion that it was not of the value of 10 l., because it did not pay 10 l. a year rent; in other words, do you consider rent and value synonymous, as meaning the same thing? No, I do not."—Again, in 5580, he is asked, "I want to endeavour to arrive at the criterion of value in your mind; what is it that enables you to decide the value of a particular house; suppose I ask you, is the house I point out to you worth 10 l. a year, and I tell you it pays but 7 l., do you conclude then it is worth 10 l. a year? If it went so near the rent as 7 l. I should say it was worth 10 l.; if the man would say it was worth as much as 10 l., I should say it was worth 10 l."—Then, 5584, "Then whenever the rent was proved to be 7 l. a year, you would consider that, primâ facie, the man would make out a case to entitle him to vote? I should say so."—In 5589, "And that was because it was your persuasion, from what you knew of the town, that a man who paid 7 l. a year rent, in all human probability had an interest worth 10 l. in the premises, is not that so? Yes, I would say so."—Again, 5602, "Then you mean to say there are some who, when they can get 10 l. rent for their houses, allow their houses to be let for 7 l., is that so? I think houses are set for 7 l. that may be worth 10 l."—Again, 5609, "Do you think a landlord would require a larger rent from a less solvent man; do you think that is the principle upon which a landlord would let? I do not think a man would let to a person he did not think was a tolerably good tenant."—"When you say a landlord makes a difference according to the solvency of the tenant, do you mean he takes a less rent from a more solvent tenant, or that he would exact more rent from a more solvent tenant? No, I should not think he would exact more rent from a more solvent tenant."—"Do you think he would take less rent from a more solvent tenant? Yes."—"And more rent from a less solvent tenant? He might ask more rent, and not let him have it if he did not come up to the mark."—"His rent would be better secured by the more solvent tenant than it would be by the less solvent tenant? No, it would not be more secure by the less solvent tenant."—"Supposing 9 l. a year were payable by a solvent tenant, it would be better secured to the landlord than 10 l. a year payable by a less solvent? Yes."—"Do not you account in that way for a landlord being willing to take a lower rent from a more solvent tenant? I think he would from a more solvent tenant take a less rent."—"You were asked, with respect to whether it was the practice of landlords in Clonmel to to let their premises at 30 or 40 per cent. below their value; when you speak of their value, do you mean the value to the tenant or to the landlord? I should say value to the tenant."—"Do you conceive this to be the practice for a landlord, although he wishes to get as much as he can for his premises, and although the tenant wishes to pay as little as he can, for the two to adjust their respective demands in this way, that the tenant in the end, upon striking the bargain, will give something less than the value; and the landlord, on the other hand, will give up something which would otherwise go into his pocket for the rent? Yes, I would say that."—"So that in that way, in the ordinary course of bargains for a house, it comes to this, that the landlord gets something less than the value, and the tenant also gets a certain interest beyond the rent; is not that it? Yes, I should think so."—"And your impression then is, that, speaking generally, the tenant has an interest in the premises beyond the rent he pays? Yes, I think he ought to have an interest beyond it." "That he ought to have, and in point of fact he has, according to your impression? Yes, I think he has."—Now you have heard these answers of Mr. Labarte on the subject-matter on which he was examined, and I wish you to state to the Committee whether you concur in those answers or not?—I do certainly concur in them.

13062. Mr. Hogg.] Are many of the occupiers of houses in Clonmel occupiers of land also in the vicinity?—No, I think not a great many.

13063. Are several of them?—No; I think not, several of them; I think they are beyond the boundary of this valuation, not exactly in the town. There are many instances where persons have gardens attached to their houses, but I do not exactly call that land.

13064. Few of them are renters of land in the vicinity?—Renters of land, distinct, do you mean?

13065. Renters of land, distinct, I mean?—Some of them are; I cannot say how many are; some are.

13066. But a good many of them are?—There are some; some have fields in the neighbourhood, for keeping cows, horses, or conveniences of that kind.

13067. But not farms?—No, not farms; I think there may be, but I do not exactly recollect.

13068. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do I understand you to state, that speaking generally, according to your experience, the tenants of lands have less interest in their holdings than tenants of houses?—Yes, I think so.

13069. That is to say, the landlord gets more out of land than he gets out of houses?—Yes, I think so.

13070. Can you account at all for that from this circumstance, that there is a greater competition for land in the country than there is for houses in towns?—Yes, that is one of the reasons I would attribute to it; I think a principal reason.

13071. There is a greater number of persons looking out for land in the country parts of Ireland than of persons in towns looking out for houses?—Yes; and very often offering rents that perhaps they had no intention of paying, and thereby, perhaps, actually putting it into the landlord's head that the land was worth more than it really was, by offering greater rents than they had ever any notion of paying.

13072. So that it comes to this: that, in your opinion, the extreme competition for land in Ireland is one cause of the rents being higher than they would otherwise be?—Yes, I think so.

13073. And you think that does not apply to the same extent to houses in towns?—Certainly not.

13074. Chairman.] Define to the Committee what you consider the full value of a house; when you set to work to value, upon what principle do you go?—When I go to value I consider a house of the full value; of the value I consider it ought to bring.

13075. Upon what principle do you calculate that?—I consider, of course, what it would bring in Clonmel.

13076. That is the way you would proceed to value?—Just exactly the way.

13078. In valuing it, you would value it according to what it would bring?—According to what it would bring in the market.

13079. By valuing it according to what it would bring in the market, am I to understand according to the rent it would bring in the market?—The rent it ought to bring in the market.

13080. The rent it would bring or ought to bring in the market?—The rent it ought to bring in the market.

13081. And that you would consider the clear annual value, under the words of the Act of Parliament?—Yes, exactly.

13082. Chairman.] Now in proceeding to value land in the county of Tipperary, would you adopt the same principle?—Yes, I would.

13083. Mr. E. Tennent.] Then the clear yearly value of land and houses would be the same?—Yes.

13084. Have you not stated a few minutes ago you considered they were very different?—If I have, it was wrong. There can be no distinction in clear yearly value, no matter whether it be land or house. What I meant to convey was, that tenants of houses get the houses at less than the clear yearly value; but in consequence of the extreme competition in land, persons very often propose to pay rents they have no intention of paying, and perhaps by that means the landlord supposes that the land is worth a great deal more than he would be inclined to ask. That is the way I draw the distinction.

13085. Is it in your recollection that a few minutes ago you stated to the Committee, that although the words "clear yearly value" in the Act of Parliament equally applied to houses and land, yet that, in your opinion, there is a broad distinction between them?—No, not taking it in that sense at all. There can be no distinction in the clear yearly value, no matter whether it be houses or land; in the manner of estimating the clear yearly value, it is so for one thing as well as the other.

13086. Mr. Hogg.] Then if you were valuing houses in Clonmel as a valuator sworn under that Act of Parliament, you state you would value them according to what they would bring?—Yes.

13087. Am I to understand you to state that you would value them according to the rent at which such houses are now let, or according to the rent which, in your judgment and opinion, you could get from a solvent tenant?—According to the rent I think I could get from a solvent tenant, or that any one could get from a solvent tenant.

13088. Then your valuation in that case would be about 30 per cent. above the rent actually paid in Clonmel at present?—Yes, generally speaking, as regards the smaller houses.

13089. Because the rents that could be obtained from solvent tenants exceed by about 30 per cent. the rents actually paid?—Yes, I think so.

13091. Mr. Hogg.] Then your valuation as a valuator under that Act of Parliament would exceed the rent about 30 per cent.; now, does it not strike you as strange that the valuators under that Act of Parliament in 1828, that their valuation vastly falls short of the rents?—I have already given my opinion respecting these valuators.

13092. It falls short, I believe, by about 30 per cent.?—Yes, generally speaking.

13093. Then if you were employed as a valuator now, and you discharged your duty, there would be a difference of about 60 per cent. between your return under that Act of Parliament and the return made by the valuators in 1828?—Yes, there would be in a vast number of cases; when I find valuators valuing houses at only half the rent which they pay, and in many instances perhaps these rents are not what is called the full value, I think I am justified in saying that I can take those valuators as no criterion for my judgment whatever.

13094. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You speak of the valuators in 1828?—Yes, and I find them themselves valuing 50 per cent. under the rent actually paid.

13095. Mr. Hogg.] Have you ever lived in any other town except Clonmel?—No, that has been my residence always.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

13096. Have you ever resided in Dublin?—Yes; I have very often resided in Dublin for portions of years.

13097. For what portion of years?—Generally speaking, for half the year.

13098. For how many years past?—For the last seven or eight years.

13099. Did you find the same disparity there between the rents paid for houses, and what you call their value?—I never made the least inquiry; I went into lodgings immediately I went to Dublin, and took no trouble about what houses let for there.

13100. Chairman.] Did you get your lodgings much cheaper than their value?—I rather think I paid quite enough for them.

13101. Mr. Hogg.] In point of fact, during the number of years you have been occupying apartments in Dublin, have you, in your opinion, paid the full value for them?—It never struck me to consider that one way or the other; I never made any comparison between what I paid and what others paid.

13102. Chairman.] Have you got your office in Clonmel very cheap?—Very.

13103. Thirty per cent. under its real value?—I think I have.

13104. Mr. E. Tennent.] Are you aware of the mode in which houses are set in Clare and other places?—No, I am not.

13105. You are not aware of the mode in which houses are set in any other town in Ireland?—No.

13106. Would you conceive this a very general thing throughout Ireland, houses set at 30 per cent. under their real value?—I should not be surprised to hear it was.

13107. Would it surprise you to hear that all the houses in England were set 30 per cent. under their real value?—I cannot speak to England.

13108. It is a mere speculative question?—It is a mere speculative answer too; it may be so.

13109. You have stated that Clonmel is the only town you are acquainted with?—Yes.

13110. You cannot speak to the rest of Ireland, you say, as to whether there are houses set 30 per cent. under value or not; but you would not be surprised to find there were?—No.

13111. Now I ask you upon what you form your standard of value, if the same rule does not apply to the whole kingdom?—By forming my standard from Clonmel, the only town with which I am acquainted, it would not surprise me if I found other towns similarly situated.

13112. Did you never hear the least surprise expressed that there was any town in Ireland where all the houses were set 30 per cent. under value?—I never heard anything about it.

13113. Would you not conceive it would be noticed as a very remarkable thing in the country if all the houses in one town were set 30 per cent. under value, and all the houses in the other parts of the country were set at their real value?—Yes; but it may be a general thing.

13114. But if it were a general thing, it could not be because the value would be equal over the whole kingdom, and, consequently, you could have no such discrimination of value?—I cannot speak to other towns; it may or not be; I am not acquainted with other towns.

13115. Have you ever heard the observation made that Clonmel was remarkable throughout the kingdom for the lowness at which the houses are set?—No.

13116. Does it not strike you that if any other commodity were to be procured in Clonmel 30 per cent. lower than in any other town, that Clonmel would become notorious?—Probably it would; there are many towns where commodities are sold cheaper than others.

13117. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Does it occur to you, as a necessary consequence, that houses being lower in Clonmel than Belfast, that the inhabitants of Belfast would all flock to Clonmel?—No; not for the sake of 20 or 30 per cent. difference one way or the other they would not change their residences.

13118. That the gentlemen and ladies would not come down from the north because they could get houses cheaper in Clonmel?—No; they must have a greater inducement than that, I should say.

13119. Mr. E. Tennent.] Provided there was any other article manufactured in Clonmel as well as houses, of which there was such a production that there was was no competition, and that it had fallen 30 per cent. below its value, do you conceive the manufacturers of that article would still go on increasing their manufacture?—If they were actually losing ground 30 per cent. they would not; but I do not say that that is the case in houses.

13120. Mr. Hogg.] Are there many empty houses in Clonmel?—There are always houses to be let.

13121. Are there many empty houses in Clonmel, with reference to the size of the town, the number of houses and inhabitants?—Not knowing other towns, I cannot form any comparative view.

13122. But are there in Clonmel?—I think there is a sufficient number always for the seekers of them.

13123. Have many houses and streets been recently built, ranges of houses?—Yes.

13124. A good many?—Yes; I would say Clonmel has extended of late.

13125. Do you conceive the persons who have built these houses are amply remunerated by the rents they receive?—Not very amply remunerated, I think.

13126. What per cent. do you suppose they get for their money?—I should think it is rather low.

13127. How much do you think?—I do not think they get more than three or four per cent. in many instances for their money; I know cases where persons actually lose.

13128. Mr. E. Tennent.] Is that in new houses?—Yes.

13129. And in those cases where they actually lose they might if they pleased get 30 per cent. more?—Yes.

13130. But they prefer the loss?—It appears so; I know Mr. Stanton, who has lately built a house, and I understand he gives it for 40 l. a year to a parish priest, and he could get upwards of 50 l. for it.

13131. Chairman.] To a parish priest?—Yes.

13132. Mr. Morgan Jones has a good many houses, has he not?—Yes, I understand so.

13133. He is a gentleman who knows the value of money, and the value of things generally, pretty well?—Yes, I think he does.

13134. Do you think he lets his houses 30 per cent. under value?—I cannot say.

13135. Then if he does not, he is an exception to the general rule; I suppose he is the only landlord in Clonmel that you are aware of?—I do not say the only landlord; I am speaking from the general impression on my mind.

13136. He is the exception?—He is one of the exceptions; I do not mean to say that is the only exception.

13137. How many other exceptions are there?—I could not at all state.

13138. But all your particular friends, with whose matters you are acquainted, do let their houses 30 per cent. under value?—Yes, in many instances.

13139. Mr. E. Tennent.] To good tenants?—Yes; they would not set them to any others.

13140. Chairman.] If they were bad tenants, I suppose they would expect 30 per cent. more rent?—I do not think they would like to set them to bad tenants at all.

13142. And more consideration?—Yes; I am sorry to say there is not a sufficient bond of union in Ireland between landed proprietors and their tenants.

13143. You also stated, you considered the tenant is more attached to his house in a town than a farmer is in the country to his holding?—No, I did not state that; I do not think he is.

13144. But the bond of union, you think, is stronger in the town?—Yes, I do.

13145. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know Charles Riall, one of the freemen?—Yes; he was an old freeman; he was admitted more than five years before the Reform Bill.

13146. Now, do you know whose son he was?—The son of Phineas Riall, banker, of Clonmel.

13147. Was he the eldest son?—No, the second son.

13148. Now,

Mr. S. Lonergan.

13148. Now, in Mr. Labarte's evidence, number 6793, this question is put: "Do you mean to say that Phineas Riall, William H. Riall and Charles Riall are all three eldest sons of somebody? Yes.—None of them is the second son of any one? Elder sons. The eldest son is Phineas Riall; William Riall's eldest son is William Henry Ryall; there is a third son of an elder branch, but he has no children"?—That must be a mistake.

13149. You state that to be a mistake?—Yes.

13150. And that Charles Riall is the second son of Phineas Riall?—Yes, just so.

13151. Chairman.] How came you to know that?—It is a matter of notoriety; they were a long time bankers in Clonmel; it is well known; William was the head of the firm, and the eldest brother. It must have been a mistake in Mr. Labarte's evidence.

13152. That is to say, either you or Mr. Labarte are mistaken?—Mr. Labarte is evidently mistaken; it must have been a mistake; he knows the fact just as well as I do.

13153. Either Mr. Labarte or you are wrong, and you have both the same means of knowledge?—Just so; it must be an evident mistake of Mr. Labarte's.

13154. You cannot be mistaken; that is impossible?—I think not.

13155. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Why not?—The man is older than I am; but it is matter of notoriety that William Riall inherited the estates.

13156. So that you know this fact in the same way as you know another Mr. Riall is mayor of Clonmel?—Just so.

13157. Mr. Hogg.] You have the same means of knowledge as the witness his Lordship referred to?—Yes, exactly; and I can say this also, that William Riall looks much older than Charles.

13158. That you say from seeing him?—Yes.

13159. The other witness can see as well as you can perhaps?—No, I do not think he has such good sight as I have.

13160. And it is to that that you attribute the diversity in the evidence?—No, not at all.

13161. Chairman.] Mr. Labarte is a better judge of the value of houses in Clonmel than he is a genealogist, is that it?—I think it is Mr. Labarte's mistake, and I am sure he would correct it in a moment if he saw it himself.

13162. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You are not a pacificator, I believe?—No, I am not.

13163. But you know something about that body of men called pacificators?—I saw the general instructions from the Association that were sent down.

13164. What was the substance of them?—The substance was, that they should give information to the General Association of the formation of any secret societies within their baronies and parishes; that they should give immediate notification to the General Association of any secret societies about to be formed or forming, or of any persons swearing the people in for secret purposes; and that they should attend to the registries and see that notices were served.

13165. Anything else?—No, I do not immediately recollect anything else.

13166. Do you know Archdeacon Laffan?—I have seen him.

13167. Are you acquainted with him?—I am not acquainted with him.

13168. You know him by repute?—Yes, very well.

13169. He is as well known as any man in Tipperary, I suppose?—Certainly.

13170. Have you any reason to know whether he would be a pacificator or not?—It would surprise me very much if he were; I think it would be completely out of his sphere; and from what I know of him, I think it is not a thing he would at all consent to be.

13171. Are you a member of the General Association?—No, I am not.

13172. Chairman.] Who are the pacificators for Clonmel?—I never heard of but one; I heard of one lately; I heard Mr. John Butler was appointed; I do not know of any other.

13173. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are you aware Mr. John Butler says he never heard of it?—I am.

13174. Are you aware he says his appointment was never notified to him, and he has only heard it represented he was so appointed?—Just so; I heard him say he never knew it till he saw it in the public papers.

13175. And he never acted?—And he never acted.

13176. Chairman.] Who did you hear it from that he was appointed?—I heard it, I think, from Mr. Walshe; that was the person I heard mention it.

13177. Mr. Hogg.] Were there never any public meetings in Clonmel, where some individuals attended and spoke, and announced themselves as pacificators?—Never; there never was a meeting for that purpose in Clonmel.

13178. Chairman.] Nor in the county of Tipperary?—There were meetings, I understood, at Thurles or Cashel, and it was there that those appointments took place.

13179. Mr. Hogg.] These gentlemen addressed the assembly, stating they had been appointed pacificators?—I am not aware of the fact at all; I was not present.

13180. Did you read any account of it, or hear what passed at it?—I do not think I heard any account of it, anything more than that such meetings were held; I do not recollect that I ever read any of their proceedings.

13181. And you know nothing, either by personal knowledge or hearsay, or by reading, of what passed at these meetings?—No, I do not, except merely that pacificators had been appointed pursuant to the instructions of the General Association.

13182. Chairman.] How did you see these instructions?—I saw them in the month of January.

13183. But how did you see them?—I saw them in the public newspapers; they were sent down by the Association; placards or bills rather, for general information; quite public; sent about.

13184. Were there no names mentioned in them?—No; there might have been the secretary's name.

13185. Were there no names mentioned as to who were the parties to act as pacificators?—No; no names at all.

13186. Mr. Hogg.] What were the instructions?—It was instructions generally to the inhabitants of counties to hold meetings and appoint pacificators where they thought they were wanted.

13187. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] The pacificators were not to be appointed but only where they were wanted?—Just so.

13188. What do you mean by saying where they were wanted?—Where it was thought the registry was in danger perhaps, and where their attention to the registries would give a preponderance to what is called the liberal side.

13189. Or where the country was disturbed?—Yes; or where they had any information that there were secret persons going about swearing in people, which occurred more than once, in Tipperary particularly.

13190. Chairman.] Which of those two reasons were prevalent in Clonmel?—I think attending to the registry.

13191. Tipperary and Clonmel are altogether very quiet, are they not, now?—Yes.

13192. So that pacificators are not at all necessary?—They are quite unnecessary as far as regards keeping the peace; but I think they may be very useful as regards the registry.

12193. Then as far as Clonmel and the county of Tipperary are concerned, the pacificators will only have to attend to the registry; they will have nothing to do in their other character of pacificators?—I hope not.

13194. I mean to say at present?—At present I do not think there is any occasion for them.

13195. Mr. Hogg.] At present their duties are merely political?—Yes, I should think so.

13196. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do not you say they are to give information of any secret societies?—I was going to observe, they may be in action at this moment for aught I know.

13197. Chairman.] How do pacificators know more about them than other people?—

13198. Mr. E. Tennent.] Being very notorious and prominent persons, you consider

29 May 1837.

consider being so appointed they would be more likely to hear of secret societies?—The person that I have heard of as being appointed a pacificator is by no means a prominent person.

13199. Would not that very appointment make him so; making him a pacificator for his own district?—I never heard of it till I came over here; if he were appointed he never made himself prominent at all.

13200. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But even if he were prominent, could he not take secret means to ascertain whether there were secret societies?—Yes, I think so; for I think the very instructions would point out to him that he should take secret means for discovering them.

13201. Chairman.] What means should he take?—I should think he would have inquiries made, secret inquiries, if he saw strangers coming among the townspeople; that he would know them if he saw them mixing with the townspeople, or persons having a suspicious appearance.

13202. He would be a sort of spy upon what was going on?—Not exactly a spy; I have heard of what is called secret service; it would be something in that way.

13203. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] How do Government find out secret societies?—I believe by the same means.

13204. Might he not give rewards for information?—He might; I think the very appointment of these pacificators might perhaps do away with the necessity for anything of the kind.

13205. Chairman.] Do you believe there are any secret societies now in existence in Clonmel or its neighbourhood?—I do not think there are; there may be some secret societies among other parties.

13206. What do you mean by other parties?—What they call the Orange parties.

13207. What secret societies have you heard of?—I do not say now they exist in Clonmel, but I heard they did some time ago.

13208. Do you believe there is any secret society whatever, either of one party or the other, at this moment in Clonmel or its neighbourhood?—If I were to give my opinion, I do not think there is a secret society among what is called the liberal party; I think what they do they do openly, and wish to do so.

13209. Do you mean to say it is your belief that there is a secret society among the other party?—I can give no opinion with regard to that.

13211. What do you mean by a secret society regarding Orangemen in Clonmel; do you mean an Orange society?—Yes.

13212. Simply that?—Yes; they used to meet secretly I understood.

13213. How long ago?—I have heard that such a thing has existed there for the last two or three years.

13214. Do you mean to say there is at this moment, to your belief, any society of that nature in Clonmel?—I will not take on myself to say that; I will not say I believe it.

13215. I wish to know what funds are at the disposal of these pacificators?—I do not think there are any funds.

13216. Then you conceive that they can get information of this secret nature without any funds, but simply by their own activity, is that it?—Just so; because I know there is a spirit among the people that they would give information without requiring any pecuniary payment.

13217. What sort of spirit do you mean?—I think the liberal party wish to do everything openly; and they think their cause is quite sufficiently strong without having recourse to these secret societies, which they have now, and for a long time have had, the sense to perceive have only done mischief.

13219. But you think it is much more likely to be efficient against the other party party than against the liberal party?—I think it is just as efficient, if not more so, against their own party, because they must know it is a weapon against themselves.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

13220. But at this moment your feeling is that they will have nothing to do in that way at all in Clonmel?—I should hope not.

13221. But they will have a good deal to do with the registry?—Yes.

13222. Then I am to understand you to state that Roman-catholic clergymen are pacificators; is that it?—I have heard so; but my impression is that it is quite incompatible with their calling.

13223. And, more particularly, the interference with the registry is incompatible with their calling?—I do not think they interfere with that; not directly; I have never seen them.

13224. What do you mean by not directly?—That is attending at the registries.

13225. You have never seen them in any registry courts?—Yes, I have seen them there, but not giving personal aid.

13226. Is it your belief, then, that they do not give personal aid?—It is my opinion that they are anxious the liberal party should register very fully.

13227. But does that anxiety carry them to any proceeding whatever?—I have not seen it.

13228. Do you believe it carries them to any proceeding whatever?—It is very likely that some of them may say 'You ought to register; you ought to register;' I think as far as that goes, they may give their opinions to persons, as much as to say 'You ought to register.'

13229. But your opinion is they do not interfere actively?—No, I have not seen them.

13230. And your belief is they do not interfere actively?—I have not seen anything of it.

13231. Neither in your county nor elsewhere; is that your belief?—No, I think not. I have seen Roman-catholic clergymen in court during the registry, but never interfering.

13232. If I understand you rightly, your belief is, that neither in Clonmel, Tipperary, nor any part of Ireland, do the Roman-catholic clergymen interfere actively either in the registry or at the elections; is that it?—I have seen them interfere at the elections.

13233. Actively?—Yes, actively.

13234. More actively than at the registries perhaps?—Yes.

13236. Do you not conceive it would be a very improper sphere for a clergyman to interfere in the suppression of secret and illegal societies?—I think if he could give any information upon the subject it would be very desirable, but I do not think it would be exactly in accordance with his calling.

13237. Do you really mean to say that it is more in accordance with the sacred calling of a clergyman to attend the registries than to interfere at the elections; that that is more compatible with his duty than putting an end to secret and illegal societies?—I did not say the Roman-catholic clergymen attended the registries; I said I had seen them in court, not interfering one way or other. With regard to elections, I have seen them active; that is, inducing persons to come up and vote, and all that.

13238. Chairman.] That you think is less incompatible with their calling than preserving the peace and good order of the county?—I think a distinction might be drawn; when an election occurs, even persons of the most temperate habits perhaps are led away to some extent; but I think having to attend to two or three vocations in the capacity of pacificator, it is a thing that I would consider not at all compatible with their calling.

13239. He has but two things to consider; the one is to take care and discover secret societies, and to report them to the General Association in Dublin; and and the other is to attend to the registry?—I think that very fact of attending to the registry would be very burthensome, and I think he could not attend to it.

13240. And ought not?—Perhaps he ought not.

13241. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] It would take up too much of his time?—Yes; it would quite interfere with his usual calling.

13242. Have you ever heard of Protestant clergymen in England attending to the registry and attending to elections?—Yes, frequently, and in Ireland too.

13243. Do you know that the great majority of the lower classes of the people of England are of the Protestant persuasion?—Yes.

13244. There is a Protestant clergyman pretty nearly in every parish I believe?—Yes.

13246. But have you not heard it is the case in England, at present, to a great extent?—Yes.

13247. Mr. E. Tennent.] What part of Ireland does your knowledge extend to?—In speaking of Ireland, I speak of Clonmel.

13248. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Have you known the Protestant clergymen very active?—Very active at elections.

13249. Mr. E. Tennent.] Have you known them elsewhere?—I have not been at elections elsewhere; I have heard it, but I have not known it; yes, I saw clergymen in the college in Dublin, at the election, where I thought they ought not to be.

13250. You are at this moment speaking from your own knowledge; you know the fact with regard to Ireland?—Certainly.

13251. I ask how far does your knowledge of Ireland extend?—I have seen them in the polling-booths and at the committee-rooms.

13252. Where; at Clonmel?—Yes; and I have seen them, by their manner, evidently very much agitated and concerned with regard to the fate of the election, and as far as their vote and influence went, to use it.

13253. Chairman.] You never saw a Roman-catholic clergyman act in the same way?—Yes, I have; I think as regards elections they are pretty nearly on a par.

13254. Mr. E. Tennent.] That is in Clonmel?—Yes.

13255. Where else does your knowledge enable you to speak to?—I saw them in the college at Dublin during the election there.

13256. But you are aware that the clergymen there are voters?—A great number of them are voters, but there are a great number also who are not.

13257. Do you remember any more instances?—No, I cannot speak from personal observation as regards any other.

13258. Mr. Hogg.] Are the class of electors in the college likely to be influenced by clergymen, or anybody else; are they that class of electors that is likely to be subject to be influenced, masters and scholars and fellows of the university?—I think that every constituency, more or less, is open to influence in populous towns during excitement.

13259. Are the class of electors in the University of Dublin a class likely to be subject to personal influence, clergymen and others, from their stations and callings in life?—I think in the heat of an election there are persons making themselves very active, who may induce others to vote one way or other, or perhaps vote when they did not intend to vote at all.

13260. My question is particularly applicable to Dublin College, where the electors are fellows, masters and scholars; are they persons likely to have opinions of their own and act upon them, or are they likely persons to adopt a persuasion or be influenced by the opinions of others?—I think, with regard to the college, that they generally choose their own way of thinking.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

13261. And vote accordingly?—Yes.

13262. So that it is the very last place in all Ireland where influence could be created with the least success?—Perhaps so.

13263. And the college and Clonmel are the only two instances your personal knowledge extends to?—Yes; but I should not say that I think influence is not felt at the college in consequence of persons interfering.

13264. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you suppose, for instance, that clergymen pressing a particular candidate upon other clergymen would not have some effect?—I think influence is felt in every election to some extent.

13265. And suppose they announced the Established Church required a particular candidate should be elected, do you suppose that that circumstance would not influence the college electors to vote for that candidate?—I think a clever man by his argument and logic might perhaps prevail on a great many persons not so clever or logical as himself with regard to the good or bad of the Church, and get them to vote accordingly.

13266. Mr. Hogg.] That would be influence produced by persons addressed to their reason?—Yes.

13267. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Or to their passions, to their zeal?—They might turn it both ways.

13268. Mr. Hogg.] You spoke of clergymen in England; have you any personal knowledge of any one clergyman in any place in England having taken an active part in any one election?—No, not personal knowledge at all.

13269. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Your answer was that you heard such things?—Yes.

13270. And you have no doubt of the fact?—I never heard it directly contradicted anywhere, and I have seen it stated over and over again.

13271. Mr. E. Tennent.] Mention any one instance in which you have seen it stated?—I could not bring to my memory any instance, but the impression upon my mind always was that it was a thing that was notorious.

13272. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you think it is the fact?—I do think it is.

13273. Mr. E. Tennent.] Can you mention the name of any parish your recollection serves you with of which you ever heard such a fact stated?—No, I do not recollect.

13274. So that it is a vague impression upon your mind?—No, not a vague impression; I dare say, if I recollected for some period of time, I might be able to recollect a particular place, but I cannot charge my memory at present.

13275. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Did you ever hear of the last election for Devonshire, at which Lord John Russell failed in being returned for the county?—Yes.

13276. Does your memory serve you as to the clergyman having taken any part there?—Yes; I do recollect it was stated in some of the papers they took a very active part.

13277. And that they secured the non-return of Lord John Russell; is not that so?—So it was stated.

13278. Chairman.] Did you ever hear of a clergyman of the Church of England being one of the responsible persons in defending the return of a member to Parliament before an election Committee?—I heard that they were subscribers to funds for the general purposes of the registry.

13279. Did you ever hear of a clergyman of the Church of England making himself one of the responsible parties to defend the return of a member to Parliament before a Committee of the House of Commons?—No, I do not recollect I did.

13280. Did you ever hear of a Roman-catholic clergyman placing himself in that situation?—No, I do not recollect that I did.

13281. You are not aware whether in the case decided this year, of Carlow, the Rev. Mr. Moore, a Roman-catholic clergyman, was not one of the defenders?—I did not hear it.

13282. In fact, you know more about what the Church of England clergymen do in elections than what the Roman-catholic clergymen do?—I rather think I do not.

13283. But still you did not know that fact?—No, I never heard of it. I have been very much engaged since I came to London, if not I would have heard of it. I read more politics in Ireland than in England.

13284. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But even supposing that fact were so, do you see anything more criminal in a Roman-catholic clergyman's making himself responsible for the costs of an election than for a Protestant clergyman to go to the hustings and harangue the electors, and use his personal influence to induce them to vote?—I cannot see any distinction in point of fact.

13285. Mr. E. Tennent.] Did you ever hear of a Protestant clergyman going to the hustings and haranguing the electors?—I have heard of clergymen in Trinity College speaking.

13286. Where have you heard of it?—I cannot say where, but I heard it was often done.

13287. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Did you ever hear of Dean Adams in the county Cavan?—No, I did not.

13288. Then you did not hear he was the person who from the hustings proposed the candidate?—No.

13289. And harangued the electors from the hustings?—No; I know of a Protestant clergyman in Ireland who has been very much engaged about politics; a great many years back the Rev. Mr. Boyton took a very active part.

13290. Did he ever harangue the electors from the hustings?—No, not that I know of; but I have often read his speeches, at political meetings and dinners, which were very strong.

13291. Mr. Hogg.] Have you any recollection that you ever read a speech of his purporting to have been spoken from the hustings?—I do not recollect that I have; but I have read speeches of his, at political meetings and dinners, and that I consider in point of fact the same.

13292. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] When you said they were very strong, what did you mean?—Determined to uphold one party and to denounce the other.

13293. Did they amount to a denunciation of the other party?—Yes, inasmuch as he said there could be no safety in the state while any privileges were given to them.

13294. Given to whom?—Given to the Roman-catholics; that they should be kept within proper bounds, purporting to say, that unless the Protestants would uphold themselves by every means, that, in fact, they could not hold together.

13295. That is what you call a very strong speech?—Yes, tantamount to saying that they shall go so far but no further; if they can prevent them, they certainly will by every means in their power.

13296. Chairman.] You never heard of a Roman-catholic clergyman making so strong a speech as that, did you?—No, I did not. I think all the Roman-catholic clergymen that I have heard speak are for equal rights, not confining them to any particular sect.

13297. You never heard a Roman-catholic clergyman make so strong a speech as that which the Rev. Mr. Boyton is supposed to have made?—I do not recollect that I did, not at an election.

13298. I am not talking of elections, but at any time or place?—No; I think that Roman-catholics in their speeches, as far as I have read them, always wished that equal laws should be handed down to all His Majesty's subjects.

13299. What unequal law is there now existing?—The effects of the inequality of laws that have been and are still felt.

13300. What inequality of law now exists?—I do not know any actual inequality of law that now exists, but the result of unequal laws has been felt very much, and which one party still wishes to hold stedfastly for themselves.

13301. But you stated that you have known Roman-catholic clergymen, generally speaking, are for equal laws; I want to know what unequal law now exists, to your knowledge?—I think that what are the evils of unequal laws at one time existing, if they still continued, that the law, though repealed in the letter, might, in fact, be called unequal law so far as the result of the former law was felt. For instance, that the corporations shall be still in the possession of one particular party, and the other excluded.

13302. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You call that an unequal law?—It is the effect of an unequal law.

Mr. S. Lonergan.

13303. Is it not itself an unequal law?—I think it is.

13304. Chairman.] Is that unequal law the only one you can now mention?—No, there is another unequal law, and I think a very glaring one, which is that the Roman-catholics are obliged to support a church from which they dissent, and on the other hand the Roman-catholics can demand nothing from those persons who dissent from them.

13305. You consider that an unequal law?—Yes.

13306. You mean to state, the Roman-catholic pays tithe to a church from which they dissent, and the Protestants do not?—It is an unequal law in this respect, that one pays a person from whom he receives no value, the other does it in accordance with his sentiments.

13307. You have some Quakers in Clonmel, have you not?—Yes.

13308. Do they pay tithe?—Yes, they are compelled.

13309. Do they derive any advantage from the Church?—No, but the Roman-catholics are obliged to pay tithe.

13310. Is not the law as unequal with regard to the one as the other?—Yes.

13311. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Does the circumstance of inequality as to Quakers make it less an inequality with regard to Roman-catholics?—No, I think it is precisely the same.

13312. Chairman.] What inequality in law is there in all parties paying the same?—I think good sense operates against it.

13313. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] If two persons go to market, the one gets value for the shilling he lays out, and the other gets no value, although they both pay the same; would you not consider they were treated very unequally?—Yes, that is the natural inference to draw.

13314. Chairman.] You conceive the case of tithe and religion are the same exactly as a barterer buying common articles of merchandise?—I should not compare them together the same day; but merely viewing it in an abstract point of view, I think it comes to the same thing.

13315. Then you conceive the law of Ireland would remain unequal so long as tithe was paid by Roman-catholics?—Yes, that is my impression.

13316. And that the Roman-catholic clergyman will consider the law also unequal so long as tithe is paid?—I think the whole body of the Roman-catholics will consider it so, and if they do, it must take in the Roman-catholic clergy.

13317. Mr. E. Tennent.] You mentioned the wish of the liberal party to have equal rights for all parties?—Yes.

13318. Do you mean by that, you would not displace any person from a situation merely on account of his differing in political opinions from the liberal party, provided his functions were equally well discharged?—I would not; if I found he discharged his functions properly I would not interfere with him.

13319. You would consider that the primary object before his political opinions?—Yes.

13320. And you would enable that person to retain his situation, provided he gave satisfaction?—Yes.

13321. Then you would not displace a commander-in-chief?—

13322. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Have you made up your mind upon that subject?—No, I have not made up my mind; I cannot answer that question.

13323. Mr. Morgan John O'Connell.] Do not you think the whole body of the people ought to have a power in those offices which are under public control; that the bulk of the people at large ought to have the power of judging whether they are satisfactory or not?—I think they ought; the people ought to have some influence.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

John Hackett, Esq., called in; and Examined.

John Hackett, Esq.

13324. Chairman.] WHERE do you live?—In Clonmel.

13325. In what street?—In Main-street.

13326. What are you?—I am the proprietor of a newspaper, and a book seller.

13327. What newspaper?—The Tipperary Free Press.

13328. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You attended, I believe, at the inquiry held by the commissioners for inquiring into municipal corporations in Ireland, in the month of October 1833?—I did.

13329. Did you take notes of what passed upon that occasion?—I did.

13330. Did you afterwards publish a report of what passed?—Yes.

13331. I need hardly ask you if you consider it an accurate report?—It is.

13332. Did you hear the then mayor of Clonmel, Mr. William Chaytor, examined?—I did.

13333. Is he living or dead now?—He is dead.

13334. He was examined, I believe, at considerable length?—He was.

13335. On more than one day, I think?—Yes.

13336. I believe three days, or more?—About three days, I think.

13337. Then was he examined in detail as to the corporation and its privileges and its character?—He was.

13338. Did he state how long he had been mayor of the corporation?—He did.

13339. How long?—He was deputy mayor and mayor for about 17 years.

13340. He was an old man at the time?—He was a man of about 60, I suppose, or upwards.

13341. And he had lived, I believe, all his life in Clonmel?—He did; he was a native of Clonmel.

13342. He had been a member of the corporation for many years before?—He had.

13343. Did he state in what manner the mayor was elected?—He did.

13344. Do you recollect in what manner he stated the mayor was elected?—If you will allow me to look to the report, to help my memory, I shall be more accurate. It is my own report. Page 6: "Pray tell how the mayor is elected?—There are three burgesses put in nomination by the common council, which is itself composed of burgesses. One of these so nominated is proposed in open court by one of the burgesses, seconded by another, and, if approved of, elected. The court is composed of the mayor, bailiffs, burgesses and freemen."

13345. Do you recollect what he stated as to the influence of Mr. Bagwell in that corporation?—I do.

13346. What did he state upon that subject?—He said his influence was all powerful, or something to that effect.

13347. Did he state anything as to the patronage which he exercised in the corporation?—He did.

13348. What

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

13348. What was that?—He spoke of the nomination of freemen, and of all the offices being at the disposal of Mr. Bagwell; that everything which he recommended was attended to by the corporation.

13349. Did he state anything to that effect as to the ancestors of Mr. Bagwell?—He did as to his grandfather and as to his uncle.

13350. That they had been patrons of the corporation in like manner; is that what he stated?—Yes.

13351. Do you recollect any statement made by Mr. Chaytor on the subject of the freemen's oath and the practice of the corporation with respect to it?—I do.

13352. What was that statement?—He stated he had no recollection of having administered the freemen's oath previous to 1832.

13353. Did he state whether or not it was the duty of the mayor to administer the oath?—I think he said he was the proper officer before whom it should be administered, and that he had no recollection of having it administered before him.

13354. In any instance?—In any instance previous to 1832.

13355. Previous to 1832, were the corporation books produced on that occasion?—Some of them were.

13356. Do you recollect any appeal being made to the corporation books to ascertain whether in point of fact, before 1832, there was any record of freemen having been sworn?—I think I do; I think I recollect that particularly.

13357. And what appeared in the books?—I believe there was no record.

13358. Of a freeman having been sworn?—Of a freeman having been sworn.

13359. Then was it, according to your recollection, in proof before the commissioners, that in point of fact it was not the practice to swear the freemen previous to 1832?—He said so.

13360. The mayor said so?—The mayor said so.

13361. And there was no record to prove the contrary?—I do not recollect that there was.

13362. Was the contrary alleged; did the mayor allege it?—The mayor did not allege it.

13363. Was there any evidence given to establish the contrary?—No; Mr. Labarte made some remark about his having been sworn himself, but he stated nothing of anybody else.

13364. He was the town-clerk?—He was the town-clerk.

13365. And did it appear that what he stated, as to his having been sworn, had reference to his office of town-clerk?—It was a mere assertion on his part, he was not sworn to it; he said he was sworn when he was admitted town-clerk and a freeman, but he was not sworn at the time, he merely asserted it.

13366. But with the exception of that unsworn assertion of Mr. Labarte's, is it your recollection that no evidence was adduced to prove the fact that it was the practice to swear freemen previous to 1832?—It is my recollection.

13367. Did he state the practice as to the admission of freemen, or rather as to the mode in which they obtained their freedom?—I think he did; he said the freedom of the corporation originated in the council; if one of the council proposes any person who may have a right to the freedom of the borough at a meeting of the council, and if the majority approves, he is admitted and enrolled as a freeman, and entitled to be sworn as such.

13368. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] From what are you reading?—From a report of the evidence I took myself before the Municipal Commission.

13369. Who printed that?—I did.

13370. Were you employed by the commissioners to take a report?—I was not.

13371. Was it for your own use you took it, or for what purpose?—It was in my public capacity that I took it; I at first did not intend more than to publish it in the newspaper; subsequently I published the whole of it.

13372. For what object was it published?—Merely to give public information, and as a matter of profit.

13373. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Now, with respect to the rights in which parties have been admitted to their freedom, do you recollect what the mayor stated as to the claims of persons to be admitted to their freedom in right of marriage?—I do.

13374. What did he state upon that subject?—He said there was nobody admitted admitted in right of marriage from 1801, at which time he was himself admitted a freeman, and he said there was no record on the books for 50 years previously.

John Hackett, Esq.

13375. I am calling your attention to the right of marriage, and not to any other right?—I said so; the right of marriage.

13376. When you say there is no record on the books for 50 years previously, do you confine your observation to a record of admissions in right of marriage, or to admissions in any right whatever?—I confine my observation to the corporation record, on which he could find no such right of marriage.

13377. Chairman.] Was he admitted in right of marriage?—He was not.

13378. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you mean to state this: that for 50 years previously to 1801, there was no record of any admission in right of marriage, or no record of any admission in any other right, either birth or servitude?—I should like to refer to the report.

13379. Do so; page 10, I believe it is. What I ask you is, what was the evidence he gave on the subject, first, of a claim in right of marriage; have you ever seen the corporation books or examined them with a view to this question that I am now putting to you?—I have seen extracts from the corporation books, made by one of my people, a clerk and the son of another gentleman.

13380. Do you know the fact, because we have had it proved here by the production of the books themselves, that I think from the year 1740 and something, down to the year 1832, no entry appears of an admission to freedom in any right whatever; are you aware of that fact?—I recollect the mayor said something to that amount.

13381. That applies to any right, as well marriage as birth or servitude?—Yes.

13382. Now are you aware of this also, that upon reference to the books it appeared, and also by the evidence of the town-clerk, which you have before you, that there was no record at all, from the earliest period to which the corporation records extended, of an admission to freedom in right of marriage; no trace in the books?—Yes, there was no trace of it on the books, so the mayor said.

13383. Then, according to your recollection, the mayor's account and what I have stated to have been the result of what appeared from the books corresponded?—They did.

13384. Do you recollect the mayor having stated any instance of the application of a claimant for freedom being rejected by reason of his non-residence at the time?—Yes.

13385. Do you remember the name of that person?—I do.

13386. What did he state on that subject?—Shall I state it from the book or from recollection? I recollect it all, but only wish to refresh my recollection by the book.

13387. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You may refresh your recollection by the book; you need not give us the precise words.—He was examined several times.

13388. If you look to page 10, I think you will find what I refer to; what did he state then respecting this person; what was his name?—His name was James Thompson.

13389. Do I understand you to say he stated that a person of the name of James Thompson had applied for his freedom, and that his application was rejected by reason of his not being resident in the borough at the time?—Yes.

13390. Now, did he state what was the practice of the corporation, or what he conceived to be the practice of the corporation, with respect to admission to freedom in right of birth?—Yes, he did.

13391. What was that, according to his conception; in other words, was it open to all the sons of freemen, or confined to the eldest son?—Confined to the eldest son.

13392. Now, with respect to claims in right of servitude, what did he state he conceived the practice of the corporation to be in that particular?—The apprenticeship, as he conceived, should be served in the town and to a freeman.

13393. Now, immediately above that passage, what did he state on the subject of claims to freedom in right of marriage, as to their having been put forward previous to the Reform Bill?—He said he did not recollect any claim having been made in right of marriage before the Reform Bill, but several since.

13394. Now, do you recollect on that occasion Mr. David Malcomson being examined by the commissioners?—I do.

John Hackett, Esq.

13395. You are aware he was summoned to attend this Committee, and that he forwarded a certificate of ill-health from the physician?—I heard so.

13396. And, accordingly, he is not in attendance?—I believe not.

13397. Do you recollect Mr. Malcomson to have stated, on that occasion, that he was the agent for the Mountcashel family on the occasion of the transfer of the borough and corporation from that family to the Bagwell family?—I do.

13398. And that the purchase-money passed through his hands?—Yes.

13399. Do I understand you to state, then, that he proved distinctly a sale by the Mountcashel family to the Bagwell family of the borough and corporation of Clonmel?—He did.

13400. Did you say he was the agent of the Mountcashel family or the Bagwell family?—The agent of the Bagwell family, the agent for Mr. John Bagwell.

13401. Do you recollect his having stated anything with respect to his own admission as a freeman; his having claimed his freedom, in the time when Lord Mountcashel was the proprietor of the borough, in right of marriage?—I do.

13402. What did he state was the result of that claim?—He stated he claimed his freedom in right of marriage, and was refused on that right; it was not acknowledged.

13403. Was he afterwards admitted to his freedom?—He said he was.

13404. Was that after the transfer of the borough from the Mountcashel to the Bagwell family?—Yes.

13405. And how was he admitted?—By favour; he was a stranger; he had no other claim.

13406. Do you know Mr. Joseph Malcomson, the eldest son of Mr. David Malcomson?—I do.

13407. Are you aware of his having claimed his freedom in any right, some years ago?—I heard he did.

13408. But you do know the fact otherwise?—I do not know the fact except by report.

13409. Now, as you have told us that the evidence of the mayor was that the eldest son of a freeman only, and not any younger son, was entitled to his freedom in right of birth, do you happen to be aware that the following persons, namely, William Henry Riall, Edward Sargent, William Burgess and Joseph Going, are freemen of the corporation?—Yes.

13410. Do you know those gentlemen?—I do.

13411. Are you aware that William Henry Riall was admitted to his freedom in right of birth?—Yes.

13412. Is he the eldest son of his father?—He is not.

13413. Are you aware that Edward Sargent was admitted in right of birth?—Yes; I so stated.

13415. Chairman.] Do you say William Henry Riall is not the eldest son of his father; do you mean to say that there is an older son now living?—There is not, but there was, with whom I was acquainted.

13416. How long did he live after his birth?—He has been dead, I believe, six years.

13417. Yes; how old was he when he died?—About 25, I should suppose.

13418. Sir Robert Ferguson.] Was he living when William Henry Riall was admitted a freeman?—He was not.

13419. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] He was not living when William Henry Riall was admitted a freeman?—No.

13420. Mr. O'Connell.] Did he die unmarried?—He died unmarried; his name was Phineas Riall.

13421. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] The eldest son?—The eldest son.

13422. Now, with respect to Edward Sargent; you stated he was not the eldest son of his father?—He is not.

13423. Sir Robert Ferguson.] Has he an elder brother living?—He has.

13424. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Living at this day?—Living at this day.

13425. Now, is William Burgess the eldest son?—William Burgess is not the eldest son.

13426. Was he admitted in right of birth?—I believe he was.

13427. Mr. O'Connell.] Has he a brother living?—He has not.

13428. Had he when he was admitted?—No.

13429. How

John Hackett, Esq.

13429. How old was his elder brother when he died?—I think he had not attained age; he was 18 or 19, I believe; he was not of age, I believe, when he died; he had not attained his majority.

13430. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Well, Joseph Going; was he admitted in right of birth?—Yes, but he was not registered.

13431. Was he admitted in right of birth to his freedom?—He was.

13432. Was he the eldest son of his father?—He was not; his eldest brother was 30 years of age, I believe, before he died, or nearly 30 years of age before he died.

13433. Do you recollect Mr. Labarte giving evidence before that commission?—I do.

13434. He was the town-clerk?—He was the town-clerk.

13435. And was examined as such as to the details of the inquiry?—He was.

13436. Now, do you recollect his giving any evidence as to the claim or the right of the eldest sons of honorary freemen to their freedom?—I do.

13437. What did he state upon that subject?—He stated that he did not think the sons of honorary freemen were entitled to their freedom.

13438. Do you recollect on that occasion his having handed in a list of the burgesses to the commissioners?—I do.

13439. Do you remember how many there were?—Seventeen, I think; 17 burgesses.

13440. Now, do you remember whether any portion of those appeared to b non-resident?—There did.

13441. How many; do you recollect?—Eleven, if I recollect rightly.

13442. You state that 11 out of the 17 burgesses were non-resident?—So I think.

13443. Do you know how many freemen have been admitted since the Reform Bill has passed?—Except loosely, I cannot say; I should suppose about 150.

13444. You have seen the return, have you not?—I believe I did, but I do not know exactly how many.

13445. You have seen the report?—Yes, I think I have seen it.

13446. Well, about 150?—I think so.

13447. Do you know how many of those are Roman-catholics?—There are only two.

13448. How did they get in?—One was the son of the agent of Mr. Bagwell, of the name of Farrell; he was admitted since the Reform Bill; and the other is Mr. Lonergan, who has appeared here as a witness.

13449. How did Mr. Lonergan get in?—He served his apprenticeship to William Duckett, who was admitted to the freedom in right of marriage, since the Reform Bill.

13450. William Duckett was admitted to his freedom in right of marriage, and Mr. Lonergan obtained his freedom in right of servitude, as having served his time to that Mr. Duckett?—Yes.

13452. Accordingly, you do not think very highly of Mr. Lonergan?—I opposed his admission before the barrister.

13453. On what ground?—I said he was not entitled; I said that it would be likely that that right would be impeached before this Committee.

13454. Then was it shortly before this Committee met that that occurred?—It was; it was not two months ago, I think, since it occurred.

13455. You are probably aware of the decision on the subject of the evidence of the cocket being deemed conclusive as to the right to register as a freeman?—Yes.

13456. Chairman.] Are you talking of Stephen Lonergan?—I am; I opposed his admission to the freedom.

13457. Two months ago?—About two months ago.

13458. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are you quite sure it was two months ago?—About that.

13459. Chairman.] Do you mean on the registry?—On the registry; his admission to be registered before the barrister.

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

13460. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] And that, according to your recollection, was about two months ago?—I think it was.

13461. Shortly before you came over?—Shortly before I came here.

13462. Well, you are aware we have had it in evidence here that Mr. Hobson and Mr. Howley since have held that the production of the cocket of a freeman in evidence is conclusive of his right to be registered?—Not always; there is one case with reference to Going, whose name you read, he produced his cocket, but when Mr. Howley was satisfied he was not the eldest son of a freeman he did not admit him to be registered.

13463. Have you attended regularly at the registries?—I have.

13464. And that is the only instance, according to your recollection, in which the cocket was not deemed conclusive of the right to register?—That is the only instance that I recollect.

13465. Now, as you stated there are only two Roman-catholics admitted out of 150, are you aware that there are several respectable Catholics in Clonmel who have claimed their freedom and been refused it?—I am.

13466. Can you specify any?—There are two; there was one gentleman, Mr. Keily, who is a very respectable man.

13467. Wealthy?—And a very wealthy man; he served his apprenticeship to a freeman, and he applied, in right of that apprenticeship, to be admitted to his freedom, before the passing of the Reform Bill, and he was refused.

13468. You know that fact?—I do.

13469. Do you recollect Mr. Fell, a Protestant, having claimed his freedom?—I do.

13470. In what right did he claim?—I think in the same right, as having served his apprenticeship to a freeman.

13471. Was that before the Reform Bill?—It was.

13472. Did he succeed?—He did not.

13473. What were his politics?—He was a liberal in politics; he is called a liberal.

13474. Now, did you claim your freedom?—I did.

13475. By what right?—I conceived the right of servitude in the town gave me a claim, and I claimed in that right.

13476. Mr. Hamilton.] Had you served an apprenticeship in the town?—Yes.

13477. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Was this before the Reform Bill?—It was, several years.

13478. You claimed it, and was refused?—And was refused; I claimed it several times.

13479. So that your right was not recognised?—It was not recognised.

13480. You are a Catholic, I believe?—I am.

13481. Mr. Hamilton.] Did you serve your apprenticeship to a freeman?—I did not; but it was understood that an apprenticeship served in the town gave a right to the freedom; that was understood generally.

13482. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Who understood that?—It was understood that every Protestant settler had a right to claim his freedom under an Act of Charles the 2d; and after emancipation it was supposed that the same right would give a Catholic settler a right.

13483. Was there any lawyer gave that opinion?—I believe there was.

13484. Who now?—I think Mr. Greene; Counsellor Greene, who was on the liberal side at that time, gave that as his opinion.

13485. Chairman.] Gave it as his professional opinion?—As his professional opinion.

13486. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] What is Mr. Greene's Christian name?—George Greene.

13487. Where did he reside?—He was a son of Dr. Greene, of Powerstown, a very respectable gentleman.

13488. Where did he reside?—In Dublin.

13489. Did he practise in Dublin?—He did.

13490. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Is he living?—He is.

13491. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] When was he called to the bar?—I should suppose 10 years ago.

13492. And when did he give the opinion?—He gave the opinion, I think, some time about the year 1830; 1829 or 1830.

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

13493. Then he was about three years at the bar?—I believe so; he was a very young barrister.

13494. The rule of Charles the 2d is to encourage Protestant settlers?—I believe so; I am only speaking of it as matter of opinion.

13495. And his opinion was, that under that rule Roman-catholics would be entitled to their franchise?—Yes, I think he said so.

13496. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you ever hear that Edward Pennefather gave a similar opinion?—I did not.

13497. Have you ever read those rules?—I have not.

13498. Then are you aware one clause mentions Protestants and another mentions all foreigners?—I am not aware of the rules, not having read them, but I recollect his having given something of an opinion of the nature that I have stated to the Committee.

13499. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are you a foreigner?—No, I am a native, born in Clonmel.

13500. Mr. Hamilton.] Did it occur to you to try the right by mandamus?—It was rather too expensive a process.

13501. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You have no doubt that others were influenced by the fear of expense as well as you?—Certainly.

13502. Mr. Hamilton.] Then if that opinion was worth anything, it would apply to all Protestants who resided at Clonmel?—

13503. Mr. O'Connell.] Who came to reside?—I should suppose so; I only speak of it as a matter just floating in my recollection; I will not speak positively about it.

13504. And the effect of that would be to enlarge the right of freedom immensely?—It would.

13505. To establish it with regard to all who served apprenticeships in the town?—No, who had settled in the town.

13506. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Now, will you attend to the evidence of Mr. Labarte, No. 6808: "Where does Charles Riall reside? He lives at Heywood, within a mile of Clonmel.—Is it within the limits of the borough? I cannot say." Do you know Heywood?—I do.

13507. Do you know whether it is within the limits of the borough or not?—It is not, as defined under the Reform Bill.

13508. But was it within the limits of the borough before the commissioners went down?—That I cannot say; but it is not within the present limits of the borough.

13509. Well, now to go to another matter; you have some house property in Clonmel, I believe?—Yes.

13510. You have resided there for many years?—I am a native of Clonmel.

13511. You know the state of the lettings; the manner in which houses are let?—No; I cannot say I have applied myself much to valuations at all; I have not at all done so. I know some houses; very few indeed.

13512. Well, within your own experience, do you know instances of houses let at a rent under that which the landlords, if they were so disposed, would be likely to get for them?—I do.

13513. Can you specify any instance?—There is a house exactly opposite me; it belongs to a widow lady.

13514. What is her name?—Mrs. Ryan.

13515. Is that exactly opposite yours?—Exactly opposite mine.

13516. Well, has she let it?—She let it for 40 guineas a year.

13517. To whom?—To Mr. Thomas O'Bryan.

13518. Who is he?—He is a respectable woollen-draper.

13520. But how do you account for the landlady taking 10 guineas a year less?—She resides in the country, and she chose to have a solvent tenant, whom she knew for a long time, and who had property in the town. She came to advise with me; she said, "I could get more money for my house, but Mr. O'Bryan will only give me 40 guineas; would you advise me to let it to him?" I said I would; that he was a respectable man, and a wealthy man, and that if a person who promised her more money came to reside there, he might take away a year's rent, and it would be a long time before she could bring it up. She is a widow lady, a respectable woman, and I knew her from my infancy, and I gave her the best advice I could upon the subject.

13521. And she took your advice?—She did.

13522. Now, do you recollect another instance of a person of the name of Conway, who was admitted to register by Mr. Howley?—I do; I was present at the registry.

13523. Do you remember what rent he paid?—I think something about 7 l. or 7 l. 10 s. a year.

13524. It was a cellar, I believe?—It was a cellar; yes.

13525. Do you recollect his landlord coming forward upon that occasion to give evidence?—I do.

13526. What was the evidence his landlord gave?—His landlord swore that he could get 10 l. a year for it, but he preferred giving it to that man; he being a proper man, a man residing under him, and knowing him for a long time, he preferred giving it to him at a lower rent; he said he could have got more money, 10 l. for it, and that he preferred giving it to him; he assigned some reasons, and I think, among others, one was, that he was a very honest man; that he had known him for a long time, and that his place was more safe by having a man of that kind under him.

13527. He lived under him?—Yes, he himself occupied the upper part of the premises; and that is a feeling that generally prevails. It prevails with me; I have done the same myself.

13528. You have let the cellar under your premises at a lower rent than you could get for it?—Yes.

13529. What was your motive?—My motive is, having a careful person in the place; a person of some property, and a careful person; though I have my premises insured, yet if she was not a careful person, if any fire originated in her place, mine would be badly off.

13530. What is her name?—Lumbard; Mrs. Lumbard.

13531. What rent, in point of fact, do you get for it?—I get 12 l. a year; I generally make her a little present out of it at Christmas, about 12 s., to buy a piece of beef, or something of that kind.

13532. What rent could you get for it?—I think I could get easily 14 l. for it.

13533. What was the name of the landlord of Conway?—Hogan.

13534. What was the result of his giving evidence; the effect on the mind of the barrister?—That the barrister admitted him immediately; Hogan is a respectable young man; he is in trade as a grocer.

13535. Do you know Lord Glengall?—I do.

13536. You have already told us you are in the habit of attending the registries regularly?—I am in the habit of attending them.

13537. Both at the county and the borough?—Yes.

13538. Now have you frequently seen Lord Glengall attending the registries? I have seen him lately.

13539. And only lately?—Only lately.

13540. When you say lately, what do you mean?—The last two or three registries, probably.

13541. Have you ever seen him attend a registry in the borough?—I cannot say I have.

13542. Then it is your recollection, that it is the county registry that you saw him attending?—Yes.

13543. Do you recollect to have seen any other magistrates attending the registry?—Never.

13545. Mr. Hamilton.] The magistrates have no jurisdiction, as such, either in the registration or the civil bill business?—They never assume any; they never come there at all; I never saw them.

13546. Are you aware, in point of law, that they have no jurisdiction in the registration and the civil bill business?—I should suppose they have not, and that that that is the reason of their absence: they attend in considerable numbers at the criminal business.

John Hackett, Esq.

13547. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Now be so good as to attend to these questions and answers that occur in Lord Glengall's evidence: 11616. "Is it any part of the duty of a magistrate to sit on the bench as such during the registry? No, but it is very common in Tipperary." Do you concur in that statement of Lord Glengall?—No.

13548. Your recollection then, as I collect, is, that in no instance has a magistrate sat on the bench, with the exception of Lord Glengall himself?—I do not recollect any instance.

13549. You are quite clear if it were very common in Tipperary you must recollect it?—Decidedly.

13550. Mr. French.] The registry is the part of the duty of the barrister that takes place first?—Yes.

13551. Generally, the criminal business follows?—No, the civil business.

13552. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] How long does the registry generally last?—That depends on the number of notices that are served.

13553. Can you state an average?—Sometimes it will go into the second day.

13554. Mr. French.] And sometimes it is over in about an hour?—No, not so soon as an hour, because the lists are called three times.

13555. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] How long does the civil business generally last?—The civil business holds a week, very often.

13556. And accordingly you do not consider it likely that the magistrates would be in attendance on the first day, or the second day either, when the registry is going on, inasmuch as the part of the business which they have any jurisdiction in, namely, the criminal business, generally speaking, does not come on for a week or more?—Yes, they never attend; I never saw them attend.

13557. Mr. French.] If a magistrate did attend it would be for the purpose of attending the registry?—I do not know what purpose he would attend for; I believe he has no jurisdiction; I never saw a magistrate exercise any.

13558. He has no jurisdiction in the registry?—He has no jurisdiction in the registry, nor in the civil business; I believe that is the reason of their absence.

13559. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Now, as you attend the registries yourself, and as you are constantly resident in Clonmel, you can speak as to the general character of the admissions to register which have occurred since Mr. Howley has become the registering barrister?—I can.

13560. What is generally thought of Mr. Howley's system of registry?—Mr. Howley is most particular in his admission to the franchise; he examines most minutely the claim of every man who comes before him. I have witnessed proceedings here at an election committee since I came, and I think they are exactly similar to what Mr. Howley adopts; he enters into the value of land (I speak of the county) very minutely, very closely, and sees the title to register before he admits the person; it must be quite clear to him before he will allow him to register.

13561. Now, is it your experience that upon those occasions on which you have seen my Lord Glengall on the bench, a system of perjury and fraud is going on in the registration?—I never witnessed it. It dare not come on before Mr. Howley without being punished instantly.

13562. Then when my Lord Glengall states, in his answer to the question 11590, "My object in sitting there (that is, on the bench) is in order that I may be an eye-witness to the system of perjury and fraud I see going on at the registration in Tipperary daily, in order that I may state what I see in the House of Lords afterwards; that is my object chiefly;" do you concur in that statement, that Lord Glegall attends there in order to be an eye-witness to the system of fraud and perjury that is going on in the registry?—I never witnessed fraud and perjury before the barrister at the registries; if you state the number of years I will be particular, for I have paid a good deal of attention to these matters.

13564. Well, do you concur in that statement?—I do not.

13565. Is there any such system now going on?—There is not; Mr. Howley is a man of too much discrimination to allow it.

13566. Then you observe this statement, in 11630: "Their own tenants?" is the

John Hackett, Esq.

the question. "Not exactly so much their own tenants as a class of men who come to attend that registry, for the purpose of bolstering up these people who swear so outrageously." You have heard that statement?—I have.

13567. Now, can you say whether you have ever observed any person or persons in the habit of coming to the registry for the purpose of bolstering up people who swear outrageously?—Never.

13568. Then you do not concur in that statement?—I do not.

13571. But have you ever seen him attend the criminal business at the sessions? —No; I have no recollection of seeing him.

13572. You are aware that is the period when it is the duty of the magistrates to attend?—It is.

13573. So that the result of what you state is this: according to your recollection, Lord Glengall is in the habit of attending at the registry, when he has no business to attend there, and that he is not in the habit of attending during the criminal business, when it is his duty to attend?—Yes.

13574. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you state that positively?—I state that from recollection.

13574.* Has he attended the criminal business at the sessions?—I do not know; I have not attended throughout the sessions.

13575. Chairman.] But your observation, with regard to attending the registry, is confined to the last two or three registry sessions, is it not?—Principally.

13576. Now, which one do you begin with?—Why, I should suppose my attention was called particularly to Lord Glengall's interfering with a person at the registry some time ago; I believe six or eight months ago.

13577. Which registry was it at?—A registry about six months ago.

13578. Was that January or October?—I think it was January.

13579. Was that the first one you ever saw him attend at?—I should think not.

13580. Which was the first one you ever saw him attend?—I think he had been at the previous registry.

13581. Was he at the last registry of all?—I cannot say he was.

13582. Can you say whether he was or was not?—I do not think he was.

13583. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] When was the last registry?—Nearly two months ago, I think.

13584. Was it before you came over?—Before I came over here.

13585. Mr. Lefroy.] Was he at the registry before the January one? I think he was.

13586. Are you positive of it?—No, I will not be positive; I will not say positively; but the impression on my mind is, that he was.

13587. Was he at the one before that?—That I will not say; I think he was in October and July, I believe; I think he was in July, but I will not say that he was, or the one before that.

13588. Have you any distinct recollection of his having ever been at any former registry?—I have noticed him at the registry not very often; I think I have noticed him two or three times.

13589. Chairman.] Altogether, you mean?—Altogether.

13590. But you say you never saw him there whilst the criminal business was transacted?—I have no recollection of seeing him there while the criminal business was transacted at the sessions, but I have frequently seen him at the assizes.

13591. Then it does not quite appear that he did attend when his duty did not call call upon him to attend, and that he did not attend when his duty did call upon him to attend?—I will not draw the inference.

John Hackett, Esq.

13592. Was it a correct inference to state that his Lordship never attended when his duty called upon him to attend?—I said I had no recollection; I will not say positively; he might have been there.

13593. Is it not his duty to attend at the assizes?—I do not know whether it is exactly his duty; I have seen him come in and sit alongside the judge occasionally.

13594. Mr. Lefroy.] Is he a magistrate of the county?—I believe he is; I believe he is so as a Peer of Parliament; I do not know whether he is so otherwise. I suppose Lord Glengall is a magistrate.

13595. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But assuming him to be a magistrate, are you aware that it is no part of his duty as a magistrate to attend the court during the criminal trials?—I really will not speak positively to that.

13596. Did you ever hear a magistrate was bound to attend the court during the criminal trials at the assizes?—Certainly not, at the assizes; the judge allows no interference in these matters.

13597. Now, do you know Archdeacon Laffan?—Very well.

13598. Do you know Mr. Lycet Pennefather?—I do.

13599. Do you know Mr. Cahill, the Crown solicitor at sessions?—I do.

13600. I believe you have taken a very active part in the politics of Clonmel and of the county?—I have.

13601. Perhaps no man on your side of the question has taken a more active part?—I have taken an active part.

13602. I ask you if any person has taken a more active part?—I have taken a very active part.

13603. Perhaps you are as competent to give us information as to the politics of the liberal side of Tipperary and Clonmel as any other person we could select?—I think I am.

13604. You know the individuals who have taken an active part, and you know the system?—I know the individuals who have taken an active part.

13605. And you can speak as to the system generally upon which they have acted?—I can.

13606. You have heard of persons called pacificators?—I have.

13607. Mr. O'Connell.] Are you a pacificator?—I am not.

13608. Mr. Hamilton.] Are you a member of the Association?—I am.

13609. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You are a member of the National Association?—I am.

13610. You have attended its meetings?—I have.

13611. And you can give us information also as to the manner in which things go on there?—I can.

13612. Now, first, I ask you if you have heard of persons called pacificators; you are not one yourself, you tell us; is Archdeacon Laffan a pacificator?—He is not.

13613. Is Mr. Lycet Pennefather a pacificator?—He is not.

13614. Is Mr. Cahill, the Crown solicitor at sessions, a pacificator?—He is not.

13615. Will you attend now to this evidence of Lord Glengall (11806). He is asked this question: "I suppose the word pacificator intended to infer that these individuals cause peace and good-will amongst men wherever they are? Yes.—Is it your opinion, or to your knowledge, do they succeed in causing peace and good-will where they appear? I think just the contrary; and particularly from the speeches which they delivered at the formation of the Tipperary Pacification Society.—What do you consider was the tendency of those speeches? The tendency was to excite the people against the Protestants, by terming the Protestants of Tipperary Orangemen.—Would that expression of Orangemen be likely to cause bad feeling rather than good among the inhabitants of the county? Most decidedly; the speeches I allude to were uttered by Archdeacon Laffan and Mr. Lycet Pennefather." Now, do you observe that my Lord Glengall states there that Archdeacon Laffan and Mr. Lycet Pennefather, being pacificators, uttered speeches at a meeting for the formation of the Tipperary Pacification Society having a tendency to excite ill-will among the inhabitants of the county; do you observe that?—I do.

13616. Then you do not concur in that statement, that either Archdeacon Laffan or Mr. Lycet Pennefather are pacificators?—I do not.

13617. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you concur in the statement that they made such speeches?—I heard no such speeches.

13618. Is Mr. Lycet Pennefather a Protestant?—He is the son of a Protestant clergyman; he is an English and an Irish barrister.

13619. He has been called to the bar in both countries?—He has been called to the bar in both countries.

13620. Now, 11902, this question is put: "You have mentioned two of these pacificators, Archdeacon Laffan and Lycet Pennefather; do you recollect any others who made speeches of the same character as those persons described? No, the only speeches reported at any length were the speeches of those two gentlemen." And again, 11916: "Then it comes to this, that since the pacificators have been appointed, with the exception of Archdeacon Laffan and Lycet Pennefather, your lordship cannot recollect any instance in which pacificators have made violent speeches? Yes; I consider the Crown solicitor at the quarter sessions, who is a pacificator, who was lately appointed by the Government to the situation of Crown solicitor, and who is a member of the Association, I consider him to have made a most violent speech at Clonmel during the registration at the quarter sessions, about three weeks ago." Then, 11919: "What is his name? Mr. Cahill." Now, do you concur in that statement, that Mr. Cahill is a pacificator?—I do not; I was present.

13621. Then Lord Glengall is mistaken with respect to those three individuals?—Decidedly; he must have spoken from some false report.

13622. Now, will you tell us something about what Lord Glengall describes as violent speakers, Archdeacon Laffan and Mr. Lycet Pennefather; you state you were present?—I was; it was at Thurles.

13623. The meeting was held at Thurles?—Yes; it was called a county meeting.

13624. For what purpose was it held?—It was for the establishment of a society for the suppression of outrage; not for pacificators, as his lordship has called them. He has confounded them, I suppose.

13625. Then in that particular also do I understand you to say Lord Glengall is mistaken?—He is.

13626. He is mistaken in the character of the meeting, and the purpose for which it was held?—Quite so.

13627. And he is mistaken in the character of the persons whom he describes as violent speakers?—He is.

13628. Mr. O'Connell.] Had that meeting any connexion with the Association at all?—None whatever.

13629. Mr. Hamilton.] Who was it called by?—The county Tipperary addressed Lord Mulgrave, some time, I think, in March twelvemonth; and in reply to the address, Lord Mulgrave called for the assistance of the sturdy yeomanry of Tipperary to keep peace and good-will, and all that; to support his Government in that way; to assist him in maintaining peace and good order in the country.

13630. And in the suppression of outrages?—And in the suppression of outrages. And in reply to that, there was a county meeting called at Thurles, and there was a society established for the suppression of outrages.

13631. Mr. O'Connell.] Who called that meeting; how was it called?—It was called by a requisition.

13632. Chairman.] To whom?—I believe it was, "We, the undersigned, request a meeting."

13633. Whom was it addressed to?—It was addressed to the public; to the inhabitants of the county, I believe; to the electors of the county.

13634. Mr. O'Connell.] Not a requisition addressed to any sheriff or magistrate, but to the public at large, requesting a meeting?—I am not quite clear whether it was addressed to a particular individual or not; it was last April twelvemonth.

13635. But it is a common way of calling meetings in Ireland?—It is; sometimes if there be a popular high sheriff, the requisition is addressed to him; if there be not, if persons adhere to the measure, it is drawn up in that way: "We, the undersigned electors, request a meeting of our brother electors of the county," or something of that sort.

13636. Chairman.] Which of those two sorts was this requisition?—I think, if you take it from recollection, it was addressed to the sheriff, but I am not quite sure that it was.

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

13637. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you recollect whether the sheriff presided there?—

13638. Chairman.] Did the sheriff preside?—I should not like to give a positive opinion upon that part of the subject as to who did preside; it was late in the evening I drove to Thurles, and it was a very severe day, I recollect.

13639. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you any document in town that would show you?—No, I have no document.

13640. Chairman.] Did you publish any account of that meeting in your paper?—I did.

13641. Did you publish who presided?—I did.

13642. Did you publish the speeches?—I did.

13643. Was it a person of no note that presided, or a person of mark?—It must have been a person of some note.

13644. But you do not recollect who he was?—Not immediately; I think, probably, before I leave the room, I shall recollect it.

13645. But still you are perfectly competent to give the Committee an account of the speeches that were delivered?—Yes, perfectly; and very likely I shall recollect who presided.

13646. You recollect perfectly well what the individual speakers spoke, but you do not recollect who presided upon that occasion?—I did not say that; I recollect particular speeches, but I do not recollect all that was said; I recollect something of what was said by some individuals, but I do not at this moment recollect who presided.

13647. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You have already stated that the representation made by Lord Glengall as to those speeches is inaccurate?—I do.

13648. Do you recollect enough of what passed for that purpose?—I recollect a good deal of what Archdeacon Laffan said.

13650. Do you recollect whether he said anything that was annoying to his Protestant fellow-subjects or not?—I will tell you what I recollect of his speech; it is not much; but what I do recollect was this, that he spoke of the Lord-Lieutenant; that he was entitled to the gratitude of the people, and all that; and he stated that he called on the people to give him their co-operation, by which means, he said, they would put a nail in the Orangeman's coffin; it was a remarkable expression, and therefore I recollect it; they would put a nail in the Orangeman's coffin; a sort of metaphorical expression; I recollect particularly his using that expression.

13651. Did he or did he not speak in such a manner as to create a prejudice against the Protestants of the county of Tipperary?—I do not think he did.

13652. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Did he speak of the Orangemen of Tipperary?—He did.

13653. Chairman.] Is there a large body of Orangemen in Tipperary?—I do not think there is.

13654. Then why did he particularly allude to the Orangemen of Tipperary if they are so insignificant a body?—When I say Orangemen of Tipperary, I probably should wish to correct myself. I think he spoke of the Orangemen without particularizing them. But he made use of that expression, which sticks to my recollection, that by observing the law, by giving their co-operation to the present government in Ireland, they would put a nail in the Orangemen's coffin.

13655. Did he or not insinuate that the Orangemen were anxious for disturbance?—I do not think he did, except you draw that inference from that expression.

13656. Mr. O'Connell.] Is not that the natural inference from that expression?—I do not know that he used any particular expression to denote disturbance on the part of the Orangemen except that.

13657. Chairman.] Now then, with regard to Mr. Lycet Pennefather's speech; what did he say?—Mr. Lycet Pennefather followed very soon after Archdeacon Laffan, and I recollect his speech was something in the same strain. After exhorting them about what the archdeacon had enforced before, for the archdeacon's speech was more like a sermon than a speech, exhorting them to peace and good-will, and all that; but he made use of that remarkable expression, putting a nail in the Orangemen's coffin: and Mr. Lycet Pennefather said, "by so doing you will clench the nail in the coffin."

putting

13658. There was loud cheering and laughter, was not there?—I dare say there was.

13659. Now, did he say anything more than that?—I cannot charge my recollection.

13660. Did he, or not, insinuate that the Protestants of Ireland and all the former governments of Ireland had been anxious to do injustice by the people?—I think he said this was the first governor who showed his readiness to do justice to the people.

13661. Did he not go further, and insinuate, if not actually charge all former governors with maltreating the people in every way?—Not so far as that; I believe he did say that the former governors did not evince a readiness to do justice.

13662. Did not many parts of his speech go to insinuate that the former governors of Ireland were well contented to see disturbances?—I would not contradict your Lordship by saying there was not some inference of that nature in his speech; I think there was.

13663. And altogether did not his speech go to insinuate, if not actually to charge the Protestants of Ireland with being anxious for disturbances?—Certainly not the Protestants of Ireland.

13664. Not the main body of the Protestants?—Not the main body of the Protestants.

13665. You mean to say that?—I do.

13666. Well now, who spoke besides on that occasion?—There were several speakers; they only made observations, just moving resolutions.

13667. Did Mr. Cahill speak or not?—I think he made use of some observations, but rather of a brief nature, and so did the speakers at the meeting generally. It was late in the evening; it was four o'clock when they got to the court-house; between four and five.

13668. You mean to say Mr. Cahill's was not a speech as violent as either Archdeacon Laffan's or Mr. Lycet Pennefather's?—Certainly not; Mr. Cahill is one of the coolest men I know; and since your Lordship has referred to him, I do not know a man whose appointment reflects higher credit on the Government than his. He is a cool man, who understands law well; he is a clever man, and he is anything but an enthusiast; it is hard to rouse him; he is a very quiet man, and a man who understands his duties, and whose appointment has given very great satisfaction to the county Tipperary.

13669. Did Mr. G. Greene address that meeting?—No; he was not there.

13670. Mr. O'Connell.] Who reported for you?—Mr. Linahan.

13671. Chairman.] You recollect all about the speeches, but you do not recollect who was in the chair upon that occasion, or whether it was the high sheriff or not?—I dare say I will recollect it, but it does not strike my memory just now.

13672. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Is it not the fact that your attention has not been called to the circumstance who was in the chair, but it has been called to the circumstance of what was said on the occasion by those two gentlemen; is not that so?—I recollect the meeting very well, and I dare say I will recollect who was in the chair before I leave.

13673. But is it not the fact that your attention had not, previous to your examination, been called to the circumstance of who was in the chair, and it did not occur to you to consider who was in the chair?—It did not occur to me, and I did not lay much stress on the thing; I recollect I nearly lost a very good horse by the meeting.

13674. Chairman.] By whom has your attention been called to these speeches?—I heard last week that Lord Glengall did assail Archdeacon Laffan and Mr. Pennefather.

13675. But the learned gentleman asked you whether your attention had not been called to the circumstance; I want to know by whom had it been called?—Mr. Lonergan and I talked over the matter; he is the solicitor that has been examined here.

13676. Then your attention was called to it by Mr. Lonergan?—We talked over the matter together.

13677. Did Mr. Lonergan know what Lord Glengall said?—Mr. Lonergan was not there at all.

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

13678. Mr. O'Connell.] How did he know what Lord Glengall had said here?—He heard it, I suppose.

13679. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] And you heard too?—I did.

13680. Chairman.] But how did you hear of it?—We talked the matter over.

13681. Who told it to you?—

13682. Mr. French.] Did you see the evidence of Lord Glengall?—I did.

13683. Who showed you the evidence?—I think it was Mr. Lonergan; Mr. Lonergan got it.

13684. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are you aware Mr. Butler was examined the same day?—He was.

13685. Chairman.] Was Mr. Butler in the room at the same time?—I believe he was part of the time.

13686. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Is he gone?—He is not; he is here.

13687. Chairman.] Was he in the room when Lord Glengall gave the evidence to which you have referred?—I believe he was, part of the time.

13688. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] At all events, you saw the evidence?—I did; Mr. Lonergan showed me the evidence.

13689. And you were aware, from that circumstance, that Archdeacon Laffan and Mr. Pennefather had been charged by Lord Glengall with having made violent speeches?—Yes, I heard it last week also.

13690. Mr. O'Connell.] He showed you the evidence, in order to ask you whether you could corroborate or contradict it?—He did.

13691. Now, are you not aware that there is nothing so distinct in the minds of the Catholics of Ireland as Orangemen and Protestants?—Nothing more distinct in well-informed men's minds, generally speaking.

13692. When Lord Glengall himself was an advocate for emancipation, he never was included under the term Orangeman, was he?—Never; I recollect him a great liberal.

13693. Mr. Lefroy.] In your mind, are all liberal Protestants Orangemen?—Certainly not.

13694. Then you do not call all liberal Protestants Orangemen?—If I know they belong to a society of Orangemen, I call them Orangemen.

13695. Mr. O'Connell.] If they take an active part against liberal measures, do not they come under the general description of Orangemen?—Sometimes they are called conservatives when they take an active part against the people on the liberal side.

13696. Mr. Lefroy.] Did you never apply the term Orangemen to any Protestants but those belonging to an Orange society?—Never.

13697. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Did you ever hear of people called Papists?—To be sure; I have heard a Catholic called a Papist.

13698. Did you ever apply the term Orangemen to all the Protestants?—Never.

13699. Mr. Lefroy.] Not to any but those you believe to be members of an Orange lodge?—Never but to those that we believe or have heard are members of an Orange lodge.

13700. You never heard the term so applied?—Never, excepting in that way.

13701. Mr. French.] Do you believe the term Orangeman would be taken as an insult by a Protestant who was an Orangeman?—Certainly not.

13702. Chairman.] Having seen Lord Glengall's evidence, perhaps you will agree with him in this answer: he is asked (11808), "What do you consider was the tendency of those speeches?"—(that means Archdeacon Laffan's and Mr. Lycet Pennefather's.)—"The tendency was to excite the people against the Protestants, by terming the Protestants of Tipperary Orangemen." The next question is, "Would that expression of Orangemen be likely to cause bad feeling, rather than good, among the inhabitants of the county?"—Lord Glengall answers, and says, "Most decidedly. The speeches I allude to were uttered by Archdeacon Laffan and Mr. Lycet Pennefather." You are of the same opinion as Lord Glengall, that by terming Protestants Orangemen, it would cause an excitation of bad feeling rather than good among the inhabitants?—If it had been done so; but I do not think it was done so.

13703. But you mean to say that would have been the effect?—No doubt.

13704. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You say it was not so stated?—It was not.

13705. And likewise, I understand you to say that the Protestants of Tipperary are not termed Orangemen?—Certainly not.

13706. Mr. O'Connell.] Are there not a great many Protestants in the county Tipperary that no Catholic would ever dream of calling Orangemen?—Certainly. I recollect Lord Glengall himself was a very great liberal some years ago, and perhaps went further than some of the liberals of the present day.

13707. Mr. French.] Would you term Lord Donoughmore an Orangeman?—No, I would not; I knew him intimately some years ago, and he was a very liberal man then.

13708. He was always an advocate for Catholic emancipation?—Yes.

13709. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you think he is now an advocate for emancipation?—I think he would belie all his former acts if he were not an advocate for emancipation.

13710. Mr. French.] Would you term any Protestant, then, an Orangeman who had been favourable to Catholic emancipation?—Certainly not; I do not think an Orangeman would be favourable to Catholic emancipation.

13711. You would term the Protestants to whom the popular party are opposed conservatives?—They are generally so termed.

13712. Mr. Hamilton.] Did you look over the report which you published of this meeting previous to its publication?—I think I did; I always do.

13713. Then can you state from recollection whether that report, as published in your newspaper, is consistent with the evidence you are giving now?—I think it is.

13714. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You have heard this evidence of Lord Glengall with respect to the bad tendency of the use of the term Orangemen, as applied to Protestants, in creating ill-will among the inhabitants of the country, and I asked you whether you had heard of a class of persons called Papists, and you answered you had?—Yes.

13715. Is it your opinion that the use of the term Papist, as applied to Catholics, has a tendency to create good-will between Protestants and Catholics?—It is considered an insulting term when applied to Roman-catholics.

13716. Then of course it has not a tendency to create good-will?—No, that would be the inference.

13717. Now, you have heard of the use of that term, I presume, at public meetings on the other side of the question in politics?—I have.

13718. And by clergymen of the Established Church?—Yes, by some schoolfellows of mine, who are clergymen of the Established Church.

13719. Are you aware that it is the insulting term by which Catholics are generally designated at meetings held by persons of the opposite opinions in politics?—Sometimes, not always. I think the best-informed people generally call them Catholics, and I think those who are more infuriated will call them Papists.

13720. And some of those are clergymen?—Some of those are clergymen, who make very violent speeches.

13721. Mr. Hamilton.] Does it occur to you that the term Papist may be used without meaning an insult to those who are called Roman-catholics generally?—A good deal will depend on the manner of using it; it might be used as a joke, 'You are a Papist,' without being deemed insulting; at the same time, I consider such a phrase generally felt by Roman-catholics as derogatory.

13722. Chairman.] Is it not, generally speaking, the antagonist phrase to Protestants?—No, it is not.

13723. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Rather the antagonist phrase to Orangemen?—I should suppose so; I should suppose Roman-catholic would be the antagonist phrase to Protestant.

13724. The other you consider an insulting phrase?—I do, when used as such; it is used as such in furious speeches.

13725. Mr. O'Connell.] You have been asked about imputing to former Lord-Lieutenants hostility to Ireland; is it not the general impression of the Irish people that there has scarcely ever been a Lord-Lieutenant who was at all identified in feeling or interest with the Irish nation?—It is.

13726. Have you any doubt that almost every Lord-Lieutenant that you ever heard of was inimical to the people at large in his policy?—I should make some exceptions; there was the Duke of Bedford.

13727. Lord Fitzwilliam?—Yes; and the Marquis of Wellesley.

13728. Is that impression generally existing?—That is the impression; that the

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

the Lord-Lieutenant at the present time forms a very great exception to the general rule.

13729. Do you take in the Marquis of Wellesley as an exception?—Yes.

13730. You should also mention Lord Fitzwilliam, I think?—I did.

13731. Do you abide by that?—I do; I do not think, generally speaking, he was considered inimical to the people of Ireland.

13732. Do you take in the Marquis of Anglesea?—In some respects.

13733. Do you take in the Marquis of Wellesley in all his conduct?—I do not.

13734. Surely there was scarcely a perceptible alteration in his management of the affairs of Ireland?—I speak of him as being deemed more favourable to the people than some Lord-Lieutenants.

13735. Mr. Lefroy.] What do you mean by the people of Ireland, in the sense in which you use it in that answer?—The many.

13736. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You mean the majority?—I mean the majority.

13737. And not the minority?—Certainly not.

13738. Mr. O'Connell.] You mean the Catholics and liberal Protestants?—Just so.

13739. Then the impression is quite fixed upon the mind of the Irish people, do not you know that it is, with very few exceptions, before the time of Lord Mulgrave they never had an unequivocally impartial Lord-Lieutenant?—Just so; that is the impression now entertained generally, as far as I can collect it.

13740. Chairman.] I suppose that impression is very much confirmed when a person in Archdeacon Laffan's situation and general character goes along with that impression, and at public meetings declares that to be his impression?—It is.

13741. Mr. O'Connell.] That must have been the impression on his mind?—Decidedly; he is a very off-hand man; he speaks his sentiments without any disguise; he is a very excellent man; he is a man of considerable talent.

13742. Chairman.] And a man of great influence?—And a man of great influence.

13743. Mr. O'Connell.] Is he any relation to the late archbishop?—I do not know; he is his namesake, but I do not know whether he is a relation of the late archbishop; he is a man highly respectable in himself.

13744. Mr. Lefroy.] Lord Mulgrave is reckoned the best ruler you have ever had in Ireland within the memory of man?—Indeed he is, from what I have understood.

13745. Mr. French.] Was not Lord Anglesea very popular at one time?—He was; but never so popular as Lord Mulgrave.

13746. Mr. O'Connell.] It was before emancipation that he was so popular, was it not?—He was popular to a certain extent.

13747. When he came a second time he got rid of a good deal of that popularity, did he not?—He was not by any means so popular as Lord Mulgrave; I do not wish to cast any imputation upon any one.

13748. Mr. French.] Do you think the popularity of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland depends very much upon the opinions of a certain influential gentleman?—No; I should think it would depend more upon his own acts, certainly.

13749. Mr. O'Connell.] Does not that influence consist in a concurrence with the popular sentiments?—It does.

13750. Mr. Lefroy.] Was there any other meeting at which Archdeacon Laffan and Mr. Pennefather spoke but that one to which you alluded?—I heard them speak at several meetings.

13751. About the same time?—No, not about the same time; at several meetings subsequently and previously.

13752. What were those meetings convened for?—For various purposes.

13753. Were there any anti-tithe meetings?—There were several.

13754. You have heard them speak at those meetings?—Yes.

13755. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you hear Archdeacon Laffan speak at any of those anti-tithe meetings?—I did.

13756. Mr. Lefroy.] Against the payment of tithes?—Against the payment of tithes; he spoke of the injustice of the tithe system.

13757. Denounced the injustice of it?—He spoke of the injustice of the tithe system; he said, that as long as it was the law, of course we should abide by it; but every endeavour by every constitutional means (he advanced that always), by by every constitutional means within the province of the people, should be used to get rid of it.

13758. Mr. O'Connell.] Were there meetings for petitioning against that?—There were.

13759. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You do not consider there is any crime in that, do you?—Certainly not.

13760. Do you think any imputation ought to be cast upon people for petitioning against that which they consider an unjust law?—No; it bore very hard on a portion of the community.

13761. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you think the speech of Archdeacon Laffan had the effect of promoting the acquiescence of the people in the payment of tithes?—Certainly not.

13762. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Whenever people meet for the purpose of getting up a petition for the repeal of a law which they deem unjust, I believe their acts are not calculated to make them acquiesce in that law which they are seeking to get rid of?—Certainly not.

13763. Mr. O'Connell.] What is Archdeacon Laffan's own parish?—Fethard and Killusty.

13764. Mr. Lefroy.] Have the tithes been withheld for several years?—I have not heard of any complaint about those parishes; I know the rector very well.

13765. Who is the rector?—Mr. Woodward.

13766. Does he receive his tithes?—I do not recollect whether he has received them lately or not; I heard no complaint about him; I believe the parish of Killusty has not paid. I believe that is a part of his union; he has several unions, Mr. Woodward has, several parishes.

13767. Mr. O'Connell.] How many do you think?—I think he has more than three or four; I think I heard he had seven; I know he has several.

13768. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you mean several unions?—Several parishes.

13769. What is the amount of the union?—I think I heard at one time it was worth above 1,000 l. a year; 1,200 l. a year I think I heard the union was worth to Mr. Woodward.

13770. How much has he received since the combination against tithes?—I do not know anything about his receipts.

13771. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you know how many Protestants he has among his flock?—I know he has very few in Killusty; there are several in Fethard; he has a congregation in Fethard. He has no cure of souls at Killusty, that I know of.

13772. Has he a church at Killusty?—I believe not.

13773. And that is the parish in which tithe is not paid?—I think it is.

13774. Do you apprehend it is paid?—I heard no complaint about him.

13775. Chairman.] Do you consider that a compliance with the law?—No, I do not.

13776. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You have been asked about meetings for the abolition of tithes; now be so good as attend to this evidence of Lord Glengall, (11909.) He is asked, "The repeal of the Union has not been heard of lately? No; I said that many of these people who joined the Pacificators' Society were formerly repealers, and have been great persons for attending meetings for the abolition of tithes, and universal suffrage." Now you have had pretty good experience of the meetings in Tipperary?—Yes.

13777. Did you ever hear of a meeting, or ever attend a meeting, where universal suffrage was advocated?—Never; there never was a resolution of that sort at any meeting I was ever at.

13778. Accordingly, in that particular also, Lord Glengall appears to have been mistaken?—I think he was.

13779. Chairman.] Do you mean to say that none of the pacificators were formerly repealers?—No, I do not mean to say any such thing.

13780. Do you mean to say that they never attended meetings for the abolition of tithes?—Certainly not; I do not mean to say any such thing.

13781. And therefore, in those two points, Lord Glengall is correct?—Correct, decidedly; except in his application to pacificators, he is not correct; I gave a decisive answer upon that subject before.

13782. But what I want to know is, whether you mean to state that none of those individuals who are now reckoned as pacificators by you and your friends have ever attended anti-tithe meetings formerly?—If you will allow me, I will explain:

John Hackett, Esq.

explain: pacificators are generally confined to two or three in a parish; there may be two or three of these at a meeting without my knowledge.

13783. I do not ask you whether every pacificator has attended an anti-tithe meeting, but I want to know whether you will state to the Committee that none of the pacificators have attended anti-tithe meetings?—I certainly would not state any such thing; I would state nothing but the truth.

13784. Mr. Lefroy.] Did not you state that none of the pacificators have ever been repealers?—Certainly not.

13785. Mr. O'Connell.] On the contrary, many are repealers still, excepting that they are waiting for the experiment that is making now to see whether it will be carried into effect?—Yes, that is the fact.

13786. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Then, out of the three statements made in this answer by Lord Glengall, it appears that he is right in two and wrong in the third?—Yes.

13787. It could not have taken place without your knowledge?—Not very well.

13788. Have you not frequently attended these meetings?—I have, and been chairman or secretary at several.

13789. And you published an account of them in your newspaper?—Yes.

13790. Meetings for universal suffrage; and therefore if such a resolution was passed, it could not have passed without your knowledge?—I do not think it could; I never heard the question mooted at any meeting for repeal or anti-tithe meetings, and all those sort of meetings that ever took place.

13791. Mr. Hamilton.] Vote by ballot has been occasionally advocated?—Yes.

13792. Mr. Lefroy.] Has Archdeacon Laffan spoken at any of those repeal meetings?—I think he has.

13793. In favour of repeal?—I think he has.

13794. Mr. O'Connell.] The opinion in favour of repeal is still strong?—Yes.

13795. And it is only that the expression of it is suspended for a particular reason at present?—Just so.

13796. That reason is a hope that the English Parliament may render the agitation of the repeal unnecessary?—Exactly.

13797. But you have not the least doubt that if it does not do so they will go back to the repeal?—I have not the least doubt of it.

13798. Mr. Hamilton.] And you have a strong feeling upon that subject?—I have.

13799. Mr. O'Connell.] Is not your own opinion very strong that Ireland is a country that does require a legislature of her own?—Certainly.

13800. Chairman.] You think it would be very advantageous to Ireland that she should have a domestic legislature; is that your feeling?—If we have justice at the hands of the Imperial Legislature, I do not see the use of it; if, on the other hand, we have not, we will again petition to have a separate parliament; to have a domestic legislature.

13801. Therefore, if the Imperial Legislature follows your views of what it ought to do, you do not wish for repeal, otherwise you think it desirable that you should have an independent legislature; is that so?—That may be your construction, but mine is this: that if we petition for municipal reform, and that measure be rejected; if we petition for the adjustment of the tithe question, and that measure be rejected, and such measures which are of national importance be rejected, it is only then that I think the people would revert to the question of repeal; but if the Legislature give to the people what they conceive even-handed justice, they will not revert to the measure of repeal.

13802. What do you mean by the adjustment of the tithe question?—A satisfactory adjustment of the tithe question.

13803. What would be a satisfactory adjustment of the tithe question?—Indeed, I think it should be something more than the measure that is before the Government just now; but I think they would take that as an instalment, with the hope of getting more.

13804. Supposing you only got that, would you think it right then to advocate repeal or not?—We would just follow in the same track we have been going; we have been petitioning the Legislature for a further grant, and I dare say we would follow in the same train for a while before we petition for repeal.

John Hackett, Esq.

13805. Then in a few years you would be dissatisfied with this arrangement?—As long as we feel anything like a sense of injustice in withholding our rights, we mean to complain.

13806. But what do you consider injustice; I want to know whether or no an adjustment of the tithe quèstion on the ground now proposed would in a few years, in your opinion, be deemed injustice?—If it were a satisfactory adjustment, it would not.

13807. But would this be a satisfactory adjustment and a final measure?—The present measure I do not conceive would.

13808. Therefore if you did not succeed in extending that arrangement in a few years, you would then be again ready to advocate a separate legislature?—No, not entirely on that ground alone; but I think I told your Lordship we would follow in the same track we have been going; we would petition the Legislature for a further extension.

13809. You take bit by bit?—Bit by bit.

13810. Mr. O'Connell.] Instalment, he said?—Instalment, I said.

13811. Mr. Hamilton.] You mentioned other measures besides the arrangement of the tithe question and the municipal reform; what measures do you allude to when you speak of other measures?—I do not know that I have used the phrase "other measures." I said municipal reform and tithes; perhaps there may be in my mind some other measures.

13812. Mr. French.] You say the present tithe bill would not be satisfactory; do you consider it would be possible, if the present tithe bill were carried, to get up any agitation on the subject of tithes, the payment only being taken from the small holders and placed on the landowners?—The question I was asked was this, whether it would be the adjustment of the matter altogether; whether it would be entirely satisfactory to the people. I replied by saying, I did not think it would be entirely satisfactory to the people.

13813. Do you think the people would meddle with it if they had nothing to say to the payment?—I think it would be a boon to the people to have it settled in some way or other, for I take it the country is in that state that the people would be glad to have the question adjusted even in that way.

13814. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You think the people would be contented under the present Bill?—I think they would, for some time, at all events; I cannot look into futurity.

13815. Mr. French.] Have you not reason to imagine the people would be contented with the settlement at the present moment?—I think they would, from all I know locally.

13816. Mr. Lefroy.] Then if after that a threat was held out of agitating the question of the repeal, you think that would be an idle threat?—I will not go so far as that; no, I do not think it would.

13817. You think it would be a well-founded one?—If there was no further amelioration of the system.

13818. Mr. O'Connell.] Of the tithe system alone?—The tithe system alone.

13819. Suppose a full municipal reform was carried, and other measures respecting grand jury presentments and police and the magistracy to the satisfaction of the people, do you think that the repeal agitation could subsist upon the remainder of the tithe question at all?—It would be very hard, I think; my own candid opinion is this, that I think the people would be glad to have an adjustment of the tithe question, even if they did not get all they expected; they would be glad to have it adjusted; they are weary of local warfare.

13820. Chairman.] They are weary of agitation, do you mean?—Of the question altogether, and of the consequences which have arisen from it.

13822. Then as to whether it is levied of one party or another, it is a matter of small moment?—If I understood your Lordship rightly, or if I could make myself understood, probably it would be better; my idea is this, that if the tithes were appropriated to national purposes, there would be no great objection. If, for instance, they were applied to the support of the poor, or even for the purpose of education, it would be satisfactory.

13823. Then I understand there can be no satisfactory adjustment of tithes, according

John Hackett, Esq.

according to your idea, unless it is combined with the application of either the whole or some portion of the tithes when levied to other than the Protestant church purposes?—I think so.

13824. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Or the assertion of such a principle?—Yes.

13825. Mr. O'Connell.] In fact, the impression on the minds of a great part of the Irish people is that the allocation of tithes for the exclusive purpose of a church, not that of the people, is an unsatisfactory one?—Is unjust; that is what they say.

13826. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] And therefore unsatisfactory?—And therefore unsatisfactory. They put it in this position; you will hear the commonest people talk of it; they say, 'If our priests asked from a Protestant any support, or endeavoured to enforce it in any way, they would not tolerate it for a moment; and why should they?' They go on arguing in that way.

13827. Mr. Hamilton.] And do you think that a good argument?—That is their argument.

13828. Mr. French.] Do you think it a well-founded argument?—There is a great deal of natural logic in it.

13829. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] It is what is called abstract justice?—Yes.

13830. Chairman.] That is your idea?—That is my idea.

13831. Mr. O'Connell.] Are you not of opinion that every man ought to pay his own clergyman?—Indeed, I am.

13832. Mr. French.] Are you for the voluntary principle?—I am.

13833. Would you extend the voluntary principle to force on the other?——I would not force my opinion, either of politics or religion, upon any man; I never did, and I have never had a quarrel with any man.

13834. You are quite content that the voluntary principle should be established in the Catholic church?—I am.

13835. You see no reason why it should not be forced on the Protestant?—Certainly not.

13836. Mr. O'Connell.] Would you consent, as a Catholic, to have a state provision made for your church?—No; I think it would be injurious to the Catholic priesthood; that is my own private opinion.

13837. Mr. Lefroy.] When land is charged with a certain outgoing, and the holder of it takes it subject to that, what is the injustice in calling on persons to pay that, without reference to the object for which it is paid?—The object for which he is paying it is to be considered.

13838. What is the injustice in your mind in calling on them to pay that outgoing?—That object forms the injustice in my mind; I think if it reverted back to the payers in some shape or other, as I said before, if it went to support the poorer portion of the population, or if it went for the purpose of education, it would be satisfactory.

13839. Did the tithe emanate from the poor?—I cannot say that it did exactly from the poor.

13840. Mr. O'Connell.] Are you not aware it was instituted for the support of the Roman-catholic clergy?—I am.

13841. Mr. French.] There is a strong distinction between the allotment of land, such as the honourable Member asked you, and a tax that not only taxes the produce of the land, but a portion of the labour and the capital first applied, to the support of a minister of a different religion to himself?—Just so; that is the feeling.

13842. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You answered just now you were aware that tithe was originally instituted for the support of the Catholic clergy?—And for other purposes.

13843. But do you consider that there was much abstract justice in forcibly transferring them from the Catholic clergy and giving them to another clergy, for whom they were not instituted?—Certainly not.

13844. Mr. O'Connell.] More especially as that clergy was the clergy of the few?—Yes.

13845. Mr. Lefroy.] How were they forcibly transferred?—By a penal law, I may call it.

13846. Would you say so?—I would; anything that is harsh on the people would be so.

13847. State by what law you conceive they were transferred?—Of course it was the law of the land, but it was not the less unjust because it was so.

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

13848. Was it an Act of Parliament?—I should suppose so.

13849. What Act was it?—Indeed I am not so well versed with the statutes as to be able to say.

13850. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You are not a barrister?—No.

13851. Nor an attorney?—No.

13852. Mr. O'Connell.] Are you aware that one of the objects of appropriating the tithes to the clergy was that of saying mass and praying for souls?—I believe that was one of the objects.

13853. Are you aware that there is an Act in Ireland depriving a clergyman of his living who does not take the oath of supremacy?—I have heard so.

13854. Chairman.] Are we to understand it is your opinion that these tithes were given to the clergy for the purpose of saying mass and praying for souls?—

13855. Mr. O'Connell.] Do not you know they were given to the Roman-catholic clergy?—I do.

13856. To the clergy who at that time celebrated mass; are you not aware of that?—Certainly; but they were given for more purposes than the support of the Catholic clergy. They were given for four purposes; for the sustentation of the clergy, the sustentation of the poor, for the repairing and building churches, and for education.

13857–8. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Which of those four purposes are they now applied to?—They are for the sustentation of the clergy alone.

13859. Is that one of the four purposes for which they were given originally?—Yes, certainly.

13860. Of the Protestant clergy?—No, not at all; you did not particularize, and I said the clergy.

13861. Are they now applied to any of these four purposes?—They are not.

13862. Chairman.] I believe there is a certain portion of the tithes belonging to lay proprietors?—There is.

13863. A very large proportion?—I do not know the proportion; but I know there is a portion of them belongs to lay proprietors.

13864. Mr. O'Connell.] Are you aware these tithes originally belonged to the church?—Yes.

13865. To monasteries and religious houses; are you aware of that?—Yes.

13866. Mr. French.] Was it a quadruple or quadripartite division that was made of the tithes?—We spoke of the four purposes to which they were applied.

13867. On what authority do you say that there was a quadripartite division of the tithes?—Did I not quote an authority just now? I was not aware that this line of examination would have been taken, or I would have prepared myself for it.

13868. Tithe in Ireland originally consisted of three species of tithe, the tithe of agistment, the tithe of corn, and the personal tithe; do you conceive I am correct in that?—I believe so.

13869. The tithe of agistment was taken away by a vote of the House of Commons of Ireland?—Yes, about the year 1723.

13870. The personal tithe in Ireland, I believe, is received now by the Catholic clergy?—They are now dependent on the voluntary principle, if you call that personal tithe.

13871. But the personal tithe for houses; each family pays so much, do they not?—You cannot call that a tithe, if you take it literally.

13872. What do you mean by tithe?—I would call tithe the tenth of any one thing, if you will speak critically.

13873. Do the Protestant clergy receive the tithe of eggs, or anything of that kind?—I heard of their having received the tithe of fowls and pigs, and all that, some years ago.

13874. Do not you consider that head money may be taken as a fair substitute for the personal tithe?—I do not think it is by any means.

13875. You do not think it equal?—No, I do not; in some instances it might be equal to it, but, generally speaking, I do not think it is.

13876. The corn tithe is in the possession of the Protestant clergy at this moment?—Yes.

John Hackett, Esq.

out in a more extensive way than you take it; we generally say there is a property in the church quite sufficient to pay the clergy.

13878. What property is that?—A property in land.

13879. That is the bishops' land?—Yes, what are called church lands.

13880. Mr. O'Connell.] Glebe lands?—Yes.

13881. Mr. French.] Are you aware it was a vested property, to a very considerable extent; that, I think, five-sixths of that property is vested in private individuals?—Yes, by agreement with the bishops, in a great measure; Lord Normanton, in our county, pays a very large fine to the bishop for the renewal of his property.

13882. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] His father was the archbishop?—Yes.

13883. Mr. French.] He holds that property by a species of tenure which is, generally speaking, to be considered perpetual, renewing annually?—I believe it cannot be considered perpetual.

13884. Mr. O'Connell.] Did he not get it by the archbishop?—Yes; and I believe he leases it in the same way.

13885. Mr. French.] Has not an Act of Parliament passed to enable the tenants to convert those leaseholds into fee-farm tenures?—I am not aware of that.

13886. You are not aware that there was an Act of Parliament passed a few years ago?—There might have been, but I do not now recollect it.

13887. Do you think it would be fair to confiscate the property of those tenants for the purpose of supporting the Church Establishment of Ireland?—That is a question that I have not given much attention to, not expecting an examination upon it here.

13888. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You were asked by the Honourable Member for Kilkenny opposite, whether you were aware that the tithe of agistment has been abolished by the vote of a Protestant House of Commons?—Yes.

13889. Do you consider that an instance of appropriation of church property to secular purposes?—I do.

13890. And a very strong one?—It is a strong instance.

13891. Was it not putting so much money into the pockets of the graziers of Ireland?—It was.

13892. Mr. French.] Are you aware it was disputed by the clergy of Ireland that the landlords ever transferred the possession of the tithe of agistment to the Protestant clergy?—It was.

13893. Mr. Lefroy.] What was the religion of the landlords that you say transferred the tithes to the Protestant clergy?—It would be very hard to say.

13894. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Now attend to this evidence of Lord Glengall, (11892.) He is asked, "Then you think that these pacificators, whatever other effects they may have, will have the effect of creating a number of fictitious votes to be put on the registry in Ireland? I am quite sure of it." Now you know something about these pacificators?—I do.

13896. Probably a good deal more. Is it your impression that Lord Glengall is correct when he says he is quite sure, whatever other effects they may have, that the institution of pacificators will have the effect of creating fictitious votes to be put upon the registry?—Not in Tipperary.

13897. Do you believe it to be the case anywhere?—I do not. We have a barrister in Tipperary who is as particular in the admissions to the franchise as any man can be, who examines every man's qualification as closely as it is possible; as closely as a Committee of the House of Commons would here. He is acquainted with the land they hold, and sees the value of the land, and whether they have the franchise in them before he admits them.

13898. Mr. Lefroy.] Is it the object of the pacificators to assist in the registry?—I believe one of the duties of the pacificators is to assist at the registry.

13899. To increase the number of registered voters?—Yes.

13900. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] To increase it by unfair, fraudulent means?—Certainly not.

13901. Chairman.] There were various objects laid down as the objects of the pacificators, were there not?—In our town and neighbourhood, if you go even to Mr. Laffan's, I believe there is no pacificator at all. We forestalled the Association in our county by entering into an association for the suppression of outrage in our county, which has all the effect of preserving the peace of the county to a great extent.

extent. There is a registry association long since established in Tipperary, of which I believe the Hon. Mr. O'Callaghan is chairman.

13902. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Is it the fact then, according to that, there is no pacificator in Tipperary?—Not in our immediate neighbourhood; no pacificator is required, because there is a registry association in existence in the county, and there is also an association for the suppression of outrage, the two duties that are the most prominent of the pacificator's.

13903. And for anything you know, there is no pacificator in any other part of Tipperary?—There may be; but in our part of the county there are not.

13904. Chairman.] Then Mr. Walshe, if he said there was such a thing, was mistaken?—There may be, unknown to me; I do not say positively, but I say in Clonmel I do not know of any. Mr. Butler was reputed to be one; I asked him if he was, and he said he never heard it, except from public report.

13905. Was it not stated by a leading member of the General Association that the design of the Association required the pacificators to report once a month upon these following points: first, the existence of a disposition to riot; secondly, the steps they take to prevent faction-fights; thirdly, to report on the number of persons registered in the parish; fourthly, to report how many more may be registered; fifthly, how many landlords may be induced to give leases to persons in the liberal interest, to enable them to vote; and lastly, to report on the subject of secret and illegal societies. Now are not three of those points referable to registration?—Yes.

13906. Do you conceive that reporting how many more may be registered, and how many landlords may be induced to give leases to persons in the liberal interest to enable them to vote, is likely to produce bad votes or not?—I do not see why it should.

13907. Mr. O'Connell.] Why it should what?—Why it should produce bad votes.

13908. Chairman.] If there is any tendency on the part of persons to claim wrongfully, will not that be an encouragement to those claimants, or rather will not the pacificators who are to make these returns be apt to excite the claimants to make their claims?—I should suppose it was never contemplated to have any such inducement as that; at least I can say I never yet, for my own part, induced a person, or knew of any person to be induced, that had not the franchise in him.

13909. I think you have stated that you never saw perjury committed in any registry court?—Not that I recollect; I never did.

13910. Did you ever hear any person swear that such and such an individual had not the value that he ought to have to be registered?—I did.

13911. Has that person ever been registered afterwards?—He has been sometimes objected to, and sometimes admitted. I only speak of that as a matter of very rare occurrence indeed; but some such things have occurred.

13912. Now, in those cases, how do you get rid of perjury on one side or other?—Very easily. It may be a matter not perfectly understood by the parties: one man may say he has that in him which another man may think he has not, and may be induced to swear he has not.

13913. Then you never heard valuators swear on either side, independent of the party in possession, differently as to the value of a particular occupation?—Yes, and I have known those valuators to have been mistaken.

13914. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] There may be a mistake in judgment?—Yes.

13915. Mr. O'Connell.] Value is matter of opinion and judgment?—Just so. I have known valuators, conscientious men, who have been called upon to value, and who afterwards found themselves mistaken.

13916. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] And therefore it does not follow that perjury has been committed, because two parties contradict each other?—Just so; that was the inference; that there was no perjury or intention to commit perjury on either side.

13917. Chairman.] But you have not been witness to any parties swearing in flat contradiction to each other?—I cannot say flat contradiction, but I have known where there was contradiction to a certain extent.

John Hackett, Esq.

worth a certain sum, and your Lordship might think very different from me; I might yet be ready to swear it was worth it, and your Lordship ready to prove it was not.

13919. But have you never known an instance in which that sort of very proper allowance could not be made for the purpose of deposing to particular facts?—I do not recollect now any such thing.

13920. Then you still adhere to your original proposition, that you have never known wilful perjury in any case of registry in Ireland?—I cannot recollect one case; but as to its being a matter of daily occurrence, I am quite sure it could not without my knowledge, for I generally attend the registries, and pay very close attention to them; and if I knew it myself I would expose it.

13921. You have stated Mr. Howley is most particular as to his admission to the franchise?—Most particular; and so was Mr. Hobson previous to Mr. Howley.

13922. Have they ever admitted any class of voters improperly upon the registry?—I should suppose not; they may have done so, but I should suppose they took a good deal of pains; I was witness to a great many of their acts.

13923. Have they been both of them men of legal ability?—I think Mr. Howley a man of very superior legal ability to Mr. Hobson.

13924. Is he not a man of superior legal talent?—I think he is. Mr. Hobson was a courteous, nice gentleman; I had a good deal of intercourse with him; but as far as I can form an idea of their legal attainments, I think they are on the side of Mr. Howley.

13925. Mr. O'Connell.] Mr. Hobson is dead?—Yes.

13926. Chairman.] Then Mr. Howley, you state, is always very particular as to his admission to the franchise?—Always.

13927. Has he not admitted those freemen with regard to whom you have been examined this day?—He has some of them.

13928. Was any objection taken to the admission of those freemen by anybody?—I do not know that there was. I objected to Going being admitted, as not being the eldest son of his father, for I knew his eldest brother.

13929. Then Mr. Howley, whom you have stated to be a highly respectable and also a highly talented man, with great legal talents, did admit those freemen?—Only some of them; I said some.

13930. He did admit some?—Some; and Going would have been admitted if I had not said he was not the eldest son of his father, because he held that the production of the cocket was sufficient for the barrister.

13931. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you mean was conclusive?—Yes.

13932. Conclusive as to the right to be admitted to register?—Mr. Hobson, I believe, also, did hold that.

13933. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you hear that Mr. Howley felt himself coerced by the decision of one of the superior courts as to the freemen?—I believe I did, with regard to a decision of the Chief Baron.

13934. Chairman.] Did Mr. Howley state himself to be coerced?—I do not recollect the expression.

13935. Did Mr. Howley state his opinion was in contradiction to that of the learned judge?—I will not speak decisively to it, for I have not a clear recollection of it.

13936. Did Mr. Howley admit Mr. Lonergan?—He did.

13937. After your argument?—There was a barrister on one side and an attorney on the other; the attorney did not know so much of local matters as I did, and I stated to the barrister that we would impugn that right before this Committee.

13938. Which right?—The right in which Lonergan was admitted, and that it was against the consent of the party to whom he was attached that he applied for his freedom.

13939. Could Mr. Howley waive any opinion of his own because a Committee of the House of Commons was sitting on a particular subject?—I do not know that.

13940. Is he not the legal judge of these votes in the first instance?—I should suppose so.

13941. And is he not bound to decide according to the best of his ability and knowledge?—And he did.

13942. And he decided in favour of Mr. Lonergan?—He did.

John Hackett, Esq.

13943. After due argument, and after his attention being called to the various points?—I suppose he left that to be decided by a higher tribunal; I do not know.

13944. But still being a person most particular in his admission to the franchise, he did admit Mr. Lonergan on the late occasion?—He did. I recollect I addressed the barrister, and said, "Your worship, we mean to impugn such an admission as this as one of the fictitious votes before the Irish Fictitious Votes Committee," and he said "Very well," or something of that sort.

13945. Then he was not very much frightened at the idea of his decision being impugned?—He was not.

13946. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Now, do you mean to state that the objection to Mr. Lonergan's admission, namely, that the person to whom he had served his time was an honorary freeman, and not a freeman in any right; that being the objection, do you mean to say that that objection was made before Mr. Howley, argued and overruled?—I do not think it was argued so fully as that.

13947. Was it stated at all?—It was stated by the town-clerk that Mr. Duckett had been admitted a freeman, and Mr. Lonergan having served his apprenticeship to him, and produced his cocket, he was admitted as a matter of course.

13948. Then that was not the objection; the objection, as I understood, was, that although he had served his time to Mr. Duckett, and although Mr. Duckett was a freeman, yet being an honorary freeman—— Mr. Duckett was admitted in right of marriage.

13949. Well, being admitted in right of marriage only, and his claim to be admitted in right of marriage being impugned, that his apprentice could not have any right if he himself had no right?—Certainly not.

13950. Was that objection made before the barrister?—I do not say it was made so distinctly as you state it.

13951. Do I understand you to say, then, that you are not quite sure that the legal objection which you mentioned exists to Mr. Lonergan being admitted a freeman, or rather being admitted to register, that that legal objection was propounded before Mr. Howley?—I would not go so far as that, because it was I who objected to it; the lawyer did not object at all.

13952. Did you state what your objection was; you told us you said you would impeach that vote before this Committee; I wish to know whether you stated what your objection to the vote was at the registry?—No, I did not.

13953. Am I correct then in drawing this result from what you have said, that the objection which you now state exists to Mr. Lonergan's admission as a freeman was not made before Mr. Howley as an objection to his being admitted to register?—The impression on my mind is, that after the lawyer had done Mr. Lonergan was admitted; and I said on his admission, "Please your worship, we mean to impugn these sort of votes before the Irish Fictitious Votes Committee."

13954. But did you state what the objection was?—I did not fully.

13955. Did you at all?—I do not know that I did.

13956. Was it stated by any one?—No, the objection was not. Mr. Labarte was examined as to whether Mr. Duckett was a freeman.

13957. And he produced his cocket?—Yes.

13958. And he was admitted?—Yes.

13959. Then is it your impression and recollection that the objection was not stated to the barrister?—It is my recollection it was not stated, because there was no person made any remark about it but myself.

13960. Why, then, the barrister's judgment was not exercised upon this objection?—Certainly not; the production of the cocket I believe he took to be quite sufficient.

13961. Now, then, do you state that distinctly, that in his practice (except in the one instance you assumed) the production of the cocket was always deemed to be sufficient, and a sufficient title for a freeman to be admitted to register?—I think that is the way he has acted all through; and Mr. Hobson acted in the same way, except in the instance of Going, who I objected to.

13962. If that be so, does it not follow that his judgment never can have been exercised upon the objection to the admission of these parties as freemen?—I should suppose so. I should suppose that the production of the cocket and his previous admission to the freedom were deemed sufficient.

13963. Is not that evidenced by the production of the cocket?—Yes.

13964. Do I understand you then to say that the barristers, Mr. Howley and Mr.

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

Mr. Hobson, considered those as conclusive of the right of the party to be admitted to register?—Yes, they expressed themselves so; Mr. Hobson did at one time.

13965. Did not Mr. Howley do so in practice?—I think he did.

13967. Now, do not you consider that rather a departure from Mr. Howley's general practice?—Yes.

13969. Chairman.] You take a very active part, do you not, in the political matters both of Clonmel and Tipperary?—I do.

13970. And you oppose the claims of such persons as you suppose have no claim?—If I thought they had no right I would not encourage them.

13971. In cases of your opponents, have you not been active in opposing such claims as you thought had no right to be put upon the registry, and who, if put upon the registry, would be likely to vote contrary to your views?—I leave that generally to the professional person employed; if I saw anything at the time that occurred to me of assistance to him, I would suggest it.

13972. Are you not cognizant of the proceeding which is about to be taken by that professional person, or those professional persons, in reference to opposing bad claimants?—Beforehand? No.

13973. Have you ever had any communication with that professional person, either before or after the registry, on the subject of claimants who had not a right to register?—I have during the registry, but not before or after, that I recollect; if when a person came up I recollected anything particular with reference to him, I would state it to the professional man examining him.

13974. When was William Duckett admitted to register as a freeman?—I think it was in 1833; I am not sure.

13975. Therefore your attention was called to it, I suppose, soon after that admission?—No, indeed, my attention was not called much to it at that time; it was since that time.

13976. How soon after that?—The objection that we made was perfectly fruitless; our side made some objection to their admission, but they had been previously admitted to their freedom by the corporation, and the barrister holding the cocket as conclusive, he admitted them to register.

13977. But still they were always opposed, were they not?—I cannot say they were; some objections might have been made; I cannot recollect now particularly that they were made, but I do believe they may have been made.

13978. Now, did you not refer in this communication with Mr. Howley on the last occasion to what had passed previously on the subject of the admission of freemen?—I stated what I told your Lordship, that though he was admitted, that vote would be impugned before this Committee.

13979. But you also stated you gave him no idea on what points it might be impugned?—No, I do not think I did.

13980. Did you not refer to the former opposition, or was no reference made in your presence to the former opposition to freemen on the ground you stated?—No, I do not think there was on that occasion.

13981. Then you simply stated to the barrister, "We mean to impugn this vote before the Committee of the House of Commons," without in any way giving him to understand upon what ground?—I do not think I did; it was a thing that was done in a moment, and they go very quick.

13982. Then there was no argument upon it at all?—There was some argument during the time of his admission.

13983. And his attention was called to this point, was it?—There was some argument argument as to whether he was an apprentice all the time. "Was he not an apprentice before Mr. Duckett had been admitted to the freedom?" It was on that point, that Mr. Duckett had not been a freeman all the time of his apprenticeship.

13984. Then am I to understand there was no argument raised as to Mr. Duckett not being in any way a freeman?—There was, for the town-clerk was called, and he produced a book, which stated that Mr. Duckett had been admitted at such a time to his freedom.

13985. Then Duckett's admission was proved, independent of the cocket, was it not?—It was. It was proved by the town-clerk, by the entry from the book.

13986. Independent of the cocket?—Independent of Lonergan's cocket.

13987. But independent of Duckett's own cocket?—

13987*. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Duckett's own cocket was not produced?—No.

13988. Chairman.] I am asking about Duckett's admission to register?—No, I have no recollection of that.

13989. Was Duckett's admission questioned during the argument on Lonergan's?—I think it was; I think it was brought about so that the town-clerk was called, and he was obliged to produce the book to prove Duckett was admitted at a certain time.

13990. Therefore Duckett's cocket had nothing to do with the admission of Lonergan, had it?—No; I believe Duckett's cocket was not questioned on the admission of Lonergan, but there was a question raised as to whether he was a freeman or not, and the town-clerk was called.

13991. Then Duckett's freedom was established, was it, to the satisfaction of the barrister?—The town-clerk read it out of the record, that William Duckett was admitted on a certain day.

13992. But the barrister was contented with that?—He said nothing more about it.

13993. From his admitting the person, he was contented, I presume?—He admitted Mr. Lonergan.

13994. Being a person who was very particular as to his admissions?—He is a particular person, most decidedly. My attention was called to the patience with which he examines persons who claim the franchise, as to the value of their lands, and so on, in the county; he goes very minutely into it.

13995. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] In that instance you spoke of Mr. Duckett, did he come to register?—No, he did not.

13996. His cocket was not produced?—No.

13997. Then the fact to be got at, whether Mr. Duckett was a freeman or not, could not have been evidenced by the cocket, because that was not produced; there must have been some other evidence produced?—Yes.

13998. And that other evidence was the book itself?—Just so; and that was what I said.

13999. Chairman.] Are you aware of the reports from the municipal corporations in Ireland?—No, I am not; I made a report myself of our own, and I got my reporter to make a report of the Cashel and Fethard corporations.

14000. You are not aware then of this sentence in their report: "It seems now, however, to be acknowledged that rights to freedom to this corporation (namely, Clonmel) do exist by birth, service and marriage"?—I think they took it for granted; they merely examined Mr. Chaytor; they took evidence very lightly.

14001. What do you mean when you say the corporation commissioners took evidence very lightly?—I mean this; that when Mr. Chaytor was questioned as to what the rights of the corporation were, he stated that birth, servitude and marriage, as he heard, constituted the rights.

14002. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Did he not add, at the same time, that there was no instance of any admission in right of marriage previous to the Reform Bill?—He continued to say that, since 1801, which was the time of his own admission, to the Reform Bill, that there were no such rights recognised; that he could find for 50 years antecedent to that no such right.

14003. And did he not also add, that for 50 years, or a much greater number of years, from 1740 something, there was no instance in the corporation books of admission to freedom in any right whatever?—He did.

14004. Chairman.] But in spite of all this evidence, the commissioners still report that it seems now to be acknowledged that rights to freedom to this corporation do exist by birth, service and marriage?—I stated that Mr. Malcomson claimed claimed in Lord Mountcashel's time in right of marriage before the municipal commissioners, as he affirmed; and he was refused, having so claimed; that is near 40 years ago.

John Hackett, Esq.

14005. Did the municipal commissioners spend much time in their investigation at Clonmel?—I believe, nine days.

14006. Did they work hard during that time?—Indeed they did, very hard.

14007. Can this Committee rely upon their statements?—I think, generally speaking, they exercised a good deal of discrimination.

14008. And they would not therefore insert anything which was contrary to evidence as it struck them?—That is the inference I should hope for rather than know.

14009. But is not that your belief?—The two commissioners sometimes did not always agree in their opinions; there was Commissioner Hanna and Commissioner King; whatever their private opinions were, when they used to disagree they used to settle out of court or in some other way.

14010. Do you mean to state that Commissioner Hanna and Commissioner King had different opinions?—I think, on some subjects, they had.

14011. But if they both signed the report in which this sentence I have quoted to you exists, do you not suppose they both concurred in that?—To be sure; that is the natural inference.

14012. Then do you mean to say that the Committee can or cannot rely upon the view they seem to establish in this report?—I should suppose they could rely. I give you my opinion as to marriage. There is no record at all on our corporation books, for I had an opportunity myself of seeing a good deal about them.

14013. Then if that is the opinion that seems to have been adopted by the commissioners, Mr. Howley and Hr. Hobson have also adopted that view of the case as to the freemen?—I understand, to make the business short, how the right of marriage was recognised; there came from Dublin printed forms, in which the rights of freemen to admission to that corporation were specified, and that for Clonmel they filled up blanks with the name, and all that, and leaving the rights, as recognised by the Dublin corporation, to stand as matters passed at that time. The people did not interfere much with the corporation, and they could do and did do what they pleased.

14014. You have stated that you supposed the Irish Corporation Bill would amend this; did you suppose that, supposing the Irish Corporation Bill, as it was brought in by the Government, that it would have abrogated the rights of freemen in all the several corporations that were upon the registry to vote for Members of Parliament?—Indeed I do not know whether I should come to that opinion or not.

14015. Well then, in what way would the Irish Municipal Corporation Act amend the registry if it did not do that?—I conceive that the new municipal reform bill would produce those effects which the people generally required.

14016. What effects did they require?—Why, previous to the Reform Bill people were admitted by favour; most of those persons were strangers, and the natives were excluded in a great degree; and to give equal justice to all parties would be what the people, I think, are most anxious to obtain through municipal reform.

14017. The point we are now discussing is how to prevent improper persons being put upon the register for Members of Parliament; and certain freemen who have been put on the registry, in the case of Clonmel, have been impugned as not having the rights of freemen, and therefore improperly placed on the register; I want to know if the Municipal Corporation Bill for Ireland would have relieved the impropriety of their being on the registry, even if it were passed?—I should think, if it were meant to be a boon, that it should enter into what was just and unjust in the acts of the corporation, and decide accordingly. That is my opinion.

14018. Do you mean to say that your feeling and your expectation were that if that bill were passed there would be some means or other devised by that measure to abrogate the rights of freemen?—Of those that were admitted improperly.

14019. That was your expectation?—Yes, that was our expectation.

14020. But supposing they had been admitted improperly, would it not have been necessary to have altered the Municipal Reform Bill for Ireland to have got these these improper votes off the registry?—I am not sufficiently conversant with the provisions of the Municipal Reform Bill to speak decisively upon that subject.

John Hackett, Esq.

14021. You are not aware how long individuals must necessarily remain on the registry when they are once admitted, except through the medium of the House of Commons, perhaps?—Indeed, I am not. I had no idea of being examined on the subject, or I would have refreshed my memory upon it. I read the provisions that have been given of the Reform Bill, but it is some time ago, and they have passed out of my mind, that I should find it necessary to refresh my recollection before I can speak to it.

14022. You are not aware of the contents of the Municipal Reform Bill?—No, not the whole.

14023. But you did expect there would be some provision in that Bill which would purge the Parliamentary register of all improper freemen who might be placed upon it?—I was led to suppose that that was the object of this Committee.

14024. But you said that the Irish Municipal Bill would have that effect; I want to know in what way it was to have that effect?—I should suppose, by a report of this Committee; that there would be some alteration made in the bill, I should suppose, by a report of this Committee.

14025. But I am referring to the Irish Municipal Bill, and not this Committee? —But that is not passed, my Lord.

14026. But I think, in answer to a former question, you stated much opposition was not given to the first man's admission on the registry, because you anticipated, or persons in Clonmel anticipated, that the Irish Municipal Bill would correct all those evils?—Many of them.

14027. And this one inclusive, I presume?—I would not like to speak particularly to it; if I had had a notion that I should be subjected to an examination of this kind, I would have prepared myself for it.

14028. Then your former answer, in point of fact, was not one that you now wish to abide by?—I think any answer I gave, I gave to the best of my judgment; and I do not know that I should wish to have any answer I gave blotted out.

14029. Mr. Hamilton.] Would it diminish your estimate of the importance of the Irish Municipal Bill if you were told it did not affect the franchise in any way whatever, that it did not touch upon it?—I always conceived there was such a provision in it.

14030. If there be not, would it diminish your estimate of the importance of the Bill?—It certainly would not; I may not have so high an opinion of it as I entertained; if I do not mistake, my impression was that it did.

14031. Do you think that impression is a general one in Ireland?—I do not know; I only speak for myself; that is a subject I have never discussed.

14032. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] What do you state was your impression?—My impression was, that the present Corporate Bill would give new rights to the people generally in corporations, and that one of those new rights would be, to give them the power of voting for Members of Parliament under certain provisions.

14033. Do you mean as freemen?—As freemen and as electors.

14034. Do you mean to say your impression was that the Corporation Reform Bill would open to the inhabitants of the town at large the right to their freedom; is that it?—Yes.

14035. That it would admit the population of the town at large to their freedom?—Yes, or at least a large portion of them; that was my impression.

14036. Is that what you meant when you stated just now your impression was that a new set of voters would be introduced by the Reform Bill?—I should suppose it was; I did not make myself so well acquainted with the subject, or I have not refreshed my memory; I did not expect this examination, or I would have prepared myself for it.

14037. You were asked whether you were aware that the commissioners in their report had stated, in the terms which the Chairman put to you, namely, "It seems now to be acknowledged that rights to freedom to this corporation do exist by birth, service and marriage;" you said you were aware of that; now, I ask you, are you aware that that passage occurs after a statement by the commissioners in the preceding three paragraphs, to this effect, namely, they state it does not appear that persons had been admitted to their freedom on any claim of right for a length of time prior to the Reform Bill, probably not for 80 years; then other passages occur, which are not necessary to be mentioned, and then then comes the passage to which your attention was called, namely, " It seems now, however, to be acknowledged that rights to freedom in this corporation do exist by birth, service and marriage;" now, having heard that, be so good as to advert to this circumstance, that the examination by these commissioners took place in the month of October 1833, and to this fact, that in the month of March of that year, it appears by the return which has been laid before this Committee, that several of the persons were admitted by the corporation in right of marriage; you are aware of that?—I am.

John Hackett, Esq.

14038. The commissioners had that fact before them?—They had.

14039. They had the further fact, that in the same month of March several persons were admitted by birth, and that others were admitted in right of service?—Yes.

14040. Accordingly, the commissioners having those facts before them in the month of October 1833, namely, that although for 80 years previous to the Reform Bill there was no instance of any admission under a claim of right, yet that since the Reform Bill, in the very year in which they were making inquiry, persons had been admitted in all those three rights?—Yes.

14041. Having those facts before them, how do you account for their stating, " It seems now to be acknowledged that rights to freedom to this corporation do exist by birth, service and marriage"?—It is very easy to account for it.

14042. What do they mean by that; do you understand them to mean, that now since the Reform Bill, at the time when they were instituting their inquiry, it appeared that the corporation did acknowledge such rights?—Yes.

14043. That such rights appeared to be acknowledged by the corporation?—Yes.

14044. Is that what you state as your evidence?—Yes.

14045. Then you do not understand them to mean by that, that those rights, although acknowledged by the corporation, were recognised by the inhabitants at large, the right, for instance, to the admission by marriage?—Certainly not; one of the rights was not at all acknowledged, that of the right of marriage, because there is no instance at all on record of it; and that was one of the rights that was not acknowledged by the people at large.

14046. But do I understand you to say, that by that passage to which your attention has been called, you understand the commissioners to be speaking of an acknowledgment by the corporation?—Just so, most decidedly. The people had no voice in it at all.

14047. Now, you spoke of general forms that were sent down from Dublin, with blanks to be filled up, and that they were filled up in Clonmel?—Yes, that I heard so; I do not speak to that of my own knowledge.

14048. Are you aware they were mere general forms, sent to all corporations?—Yes, I heard so.

14049. Now, you were asked this, whether you did not conceive that the institution of pacificators had a tendency to induce persons to register, or to seek to register, who otherwise, perhaps, would not come forward, by reason of their property not being of sufficient value to entitle them to register?—That was not the question that was asked.

14050. I will put it thus then; that certain of the duties which are prescribed to them had a tendency to induce persons to register who otherwise would not come forward to register, not having the adequate value in their premises; you were asked that question?—Yes.

14051. Now, does it occur to you, that on the other side in politics, there being persons who employ themselves or who are employed to induce persons to register on their side, that that inducement, whatever it may be, has also a tendency, to a certain extent, to induce persons to come forward to register whose premises may not be adequate in point of value?—I should suppose it holds good as well with regard to the one as the other.

14052. And, in point of fact, there are such persons on both sides?—Yes, there are persons who are zealous for the promotion of their parties.

14053. And accordingly, supposing it was the fact that the pacificators are, in conformity to the duties imposed upon them, bound to make exertions to induce persons to register, and other persons, on the opposite side, making exertions to induce their party to register, the mischief probably would be just as great on the one side as the other?—It would, just so.

14054. Chairman.] Then, in fact, the mischief would be double, would it not?

—That

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

—That would be the natural inference; but I know I gave an explanation before, that it is very hard to register a bad vote in Tipperary.

14055. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] I read a passage from Lord Glengall's evidence, in which he stated Mr. Cahill had made a most violent speech at Clonmel, at the quarter sessions, three weeks ago; were you present?—I was.

14056. State to the Committee what occurred in reference to what Lord Glengall stated?—There was a person named Fitzpatrick came to register; he is a man whom I know myself to be wealthy.

14057. Chairman.] To register for what?—For the county; it was objected by the counsel on the part of the conservatives that he had made some assignment of his property; he was asked about it, and he laughed; he said he was told that by making a sort of fictitious assignment of his property he could elude the payment of tithes, and the people began to laugh, "And then," said the counsel, "you meant to rob the parson by that." Mr. Cahill was the opposite lawyer on the other side, and he said, "No, but he expected to keep the parson from robbing him;" that was the only violent speech. This was taken up by the conservative paper, and made a great deal about; and I believe, though Lord Glengall takes both papers, he adopted the version given by the Constitution.

14058. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] What is the Constitution?—The Constitution is what is called the Orange newspaper in Tipperary, and the version was rather a harsh one. It was all a joke, and both parties laughed at the whole thing as a mere joke; there was no speech-making at all. It was a mere repartee on the part of Mr. Cahill, and we all laughed at it as a passing joke; it was no more than that; there was no violent speech.

14059. It was not said seriously at all?—It was not said seriously at all; and, as I said before, Mr. Cahill is a person that would not, I think, make a violent speech; he is a calm, considerate person.

14060. Guilty of a joke sometimes?—Yes.

14061. Mr. Hamilton.] He was acting for the liberal party?—Yes.

14062. Is he a member of the General Association?—I believe he is; I am not sure; I do not know it of my own knowledge.

14063. Chairman.] However, he is the Crown solicitor at the sessions, is he?—He is, and has given great satisfaction.

14064. And as such, what has he to do as Crown solicitor?—To prosecute all offenders against the laws, at the sessions.

14065. Supposing there were to be a prosecution arising out of a collision on tithe matters, would he have to prosecute that case?—I should suppose he would; and I think he would be most particular in doing so.

14066. Do you think it was a wise joke for a person in that particular position to make, to state publicly that it was to prevent the parson robbing the people?—They knew it was a repartee, the conservative counsel saying first you wanted to rob the parson, and the other side taking the converse of the assertion.

14067. And he is a very quiet, sober-minded man?—He is.

14068. And therefore one who very much thinks before he speaks?—That is his general character; there may be exceptions to general rules.

14069. You think this was an exception to the general rule?—He answered rather in a frolicsome sort of manner.

14071. And a very moderate man?—I mean to say he speaks out his opinions, but he always takes care that those opinions are not such as to subject him to animadversion, except from an opponent in politics.

14072. That they would not subject him to legal consequences, do you mean?—Nor do I think he would go even so far as that; he would be much within such a consideration as that.

14073. Is he Crown solicitor at this moment?—He is.

14074. Was he at the moment when he made this joke?—Yes.

14075. And he was employed as the registering solicitor for the liberal party, was he?—He was; he is a very clever man; I believe it is his cleverness that gets him employment on any side; as a professional man he is now employed on the liberal side, and Counsellor Mulcahy, who is now employed on the conservative side, was the counsel employed previously on the liberal side.

John Huckett, Esq.

14076. And that was very much objected to at the time, was it not?—Not the least; as a matter of professional business he took that up; he is better paid now than he was before.

14077. How do you know that?—He says he is.

14078. Why do you state that the Tipperary Constitution paper, so called at least, is an Orange paper?—It is generally so considered.

14079. Why so?—Because it avows very ultra sentiments on that side.

14080. On which side?—On the conservative side; and speaking more than conservative principles a great deal.

14081. I thought you said there was no person in the county of Tipperary called an Orangeman except he was actually an Orangeman?—That was by the liberal party.

14082. Are the editor or the persons connected with the Tipperary Constitution Orangemen?—Indeed I should suppose they are.

14083. Who are they?—The proprietor is a man named Going, and I always was led to suppose that his father was an Orangeman before him.

14084. Is he himself an Orangeman?—I should suppose he is.

14085. Is he the only person?—He is the proprietor; there is another person employed; I do not know whether he is an Orangeman or not.

14086. And therefore, because you suppose they are Orangemen, you call it an Orange paper?—No, from the ultra sentiments used in it.

14087. Mr. Morgan John O'Connell.] Do you mean the paper or the person advocates the principles which the members of the society advocate?—I said the paper advocated illiberal sentiments.

14088. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] If you spoke of an individual Protestant, and called him an Orangeman, you would mean by that that he was a member of an Orange society?—I would.

14089. But if you spoke of a newspaper called an Orange paper, you would not mean the paper was a member of an Orange society?—No.

14090. You would mean it advocated Orange principles?—Yes.

14091. Now, after what you have stated, I ask you this: do you concur in this opinion expressed by Lord Glengall, namely, "I consider him (that is, Mr. Cahill) to have made a most violent speech at Clonmel during the registration at the quarter sessions"?—Certainly not.

14092. Now, Sir, attend to this other part of the evidence of Lord Glengall, speaking of pacificators: (11826.) "Do I understand your Lordship to say that they are acting in the discharge of their duty as pacificators, or abusing their office of pacificators in using that violent language? I have not seen their private instructions, only their public ones.—Has your Lordship any reason to suppose there are private instructions, or any instructions except what have gone forward? I have reason to believe there are private instructions, and for this reason, that every person in Ireland who at all watches the proceedings of the Association in Dublin must be aware there are committees sitting up stairs, where there are deliberations of a secret and private nature, which none but a member of that committee is admitted into, and from them emanate, I understand, the orders to the pacificators, and it is them to whom the returns of the state of the registries are made." At 11837, he is asked: "And your Lordship added, I think, that secret instructions emanate from them," (that is, from the committees) "private instructions? I do; I believe so.—Emanate from these private committees, and that they are despatched to the pacificators all over the country? I do believe so." Then, 11870, "As I collected from you, your impression was that those were secret committees? That those were committees into which a man could not enter without being a member.—When you say without being a member, do you mean without being a member of the committee itself, or without being a member of the Association? Without being a member of the committee itself." Now, you have heard these answers, in which Lord Glengall states two things; first, that there are private committees of the National Association sitting up stairs, to which no person has access except members of the committee itself; and, secondly, that from those private committees emanate private instructions, which are sent all over the country to the pacificators; now you have told us you are a member of the National Association?—Yes.

14093. Are you cognizant of its proceedings?—I am.

14094. You have attended its meetings?—I have.

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

14095. Have you attended any of those private committees?—I went into the committee-room without being a member of the committee.

14096. Have you ever attended meetings of what are called the committees up stairs?—I have.

14097. Now, is there any such thing as a committee, either up stairs or down stairs, or at all in connexion with the National Association, to which no person has access except a member of that committee?—I know there is not, because I went into the committee-room myself, and I was not a member of the committee.

14098. Then your answer is, I know there is not?—Yes, I know there is no such thing.

14099. Do you consider that your means of knowledge upon these matters is at least as good as Lord Glengall's?—I should suppose better.

14100. And do you state that, to your knowledge, there is no such thing as a committee in connexion with the National Association to which no person has access except a member of that committee?—There is not, to my knowledge.

14101. Is it the fact, then, that there is no committee to which any member of the National Association who pleases may not resort?—I can say, of my own experience, I went into the committee, being a member of the Association, and was not prevented.

14102. Were you a member of the committee which you went into?—I was not.

14103. And did you see others do the like?—There were several others came in and out while I was there.

14104. Who were not members of the committee?—I should suppose so. They went in and out; I went in myself, and I was asked to assist them in forwarding some papers to the country.

14105. Did they know you were not a member of the committee?—Yes. They were forwarding some papers to the country, and they wanted some local information as to the addresses of some parties; they had a book printed, which I think was very incorrect, and I pointed out some places in the printed book that were incorrect to some of the persons there. I went in with Mr. Edmund Power, and there was no hindrance whatever.

14106. Do you happen to know whether he was a member of that committee?—I do not know whether he was or was not; he might be.

14107. But you state to this Committee, that there is no such thing as a private committee to which none but persons who are members of it have access?—Not to my knowledge.

14108. Or to your belief?—Or to my belief.

14109. Do you believe such a thing?—I do not.

14110. Did you ever hear such a thing?—I never did; I heard there were committees, but I did not hear they were secret.

14111. Do you think there could be such things without your knowing it?—I took an active part always whenever I came to Dublin; I always attended the meetings there.

14112. Answer the question: do you think there could be such a committee without your knowing it?—I do not think there could.

14113. Mr. Hamilton.] Are there many committees?—Sometimes there are two or three committees; a finance committee, and a committee for perhaps taking up any local matter; if the Association wanted to make any of their resolutions known through the country, a committee would be made for the purpose of having those addresses sent through the country, or anything of that sort; there are committees for several purposes.

14114. Chairman.] Now the finance committee, what are the duties of that?—I should suppose to manage the financial concerns of the Association.

14115. Is that in any way secret?—I do not think it is.

14116. Do you mean to say that every member of the Association is cognizant of what passes in that committee?—I think he is; the committees are appointed more for the despatch of business and regularity, than for any secrecy at all; there must be a public statement made at some time.

14117. Do you mean to say that every member of that General Association is cognizant of the disposition of its funds?—I do not.

14118. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] He could if he pleased?—If he took the trouble, he would not be prevented.

John Hackett, Esq.

14119. Chairman.] Do you mean to say it would be in the power of any person, being a member of that Association, to know of the disposition of its funds?—I think if he took the trouble of doing it, there would be no barrier in his way. I only speak from my own experience; I was not a member of the committee, and I went in.

14120. But you stated you knew a great deal about the General Association, and professed yourself to be able therefore to give perfect information; what I want to know is, whether any member of the General Association may, if he takes the ordinary or the proper trouble, become acquainted with all the finance operations of that Association?—I should suppose he could; I think there is no barrier placed in his way, except from idle curiosity, or giving them any additional trouble, or anything in that way; your Lordship knows the nature of committees too well for me to define them to you; they are more for the despatch of business than anything else, and I think the question was confined with regard to secrecy.

14121. I want to know whether it is in the power of any member of that General Association to become acquainted with the way in which the money which is collected is spent?—I think it is; if he shows he is not giving any unnecessary trouble, or anything of that sort, he can know it, and ought to know it.

14122. You mean to state there is no secrecy whatever with regard to the disposition of the funds collected by that Association?—I never heard of any.

14123. That anybody belonging to that Association may become acquainted with the disposition of its funds?—I think he can, if his object is not impertinent curiosity; if his object be legitimate.

14124. What do you mean by impertinent curiosity?—Not having any true motive for ascertaining it, but merely from an idle motive.

14126. But supposing a person who has subscribed, and is therefore a member of that General Association, gave no reason, would he be refused access to those documents?—I do not know; I was not refused; and, speaking from my own experience, I never knew anybody else that was; I asked no leave at all; I walked into the committee-room with another gentleman, and was not prevented; I walked in and sat down.

14128. I presume, from what has been already stated by you in evidence, you are an individual very much trusted by that particular party?—I ought to be trusted; I never gave any reason for them not to trust me; my conduct has been before the world a long time, and I have never done anything that I am ashamed of, publicly or privately.

14129. I think you have already stated, certainly modestly, at the same time frankly, that you are a very leading person in politics in that part of the country?—I have taken a very active part.

14130. And therefore your admission into a committee-room of that sort is not the same thing as the admission of an ordinary member?—I do not think there were three persons in the committee that knew me.

14131. How many persons were there there?—There were a great many; 30 persons, I dare say.

14132. Mr. Power was very well known, was he not?—I think he was; I walked in at the same time with him; both he and I were together.

14133. How long did you stay there?—I believe I remained for better than an hour.

14134. Giving very useful information?—I just gave some information as to some things I saw were going wrong; wrong addresses in the lower part of our county, which is a very extensive one, that I happened to be acquainted with, and I said this address is wrong, the address of that gentleman should be so and so.

14135. From your connexion with the press in Tipperary, you could give very important information, could you not, to those parties?—With reference to the addresses of those people.

14136. And therefore your being there was really an advantage to the committee in regard to the business upon which they were deliberating?—If they knew knew me; but, as I said before, I should think there were not three persons in the whole room who knew me; I was a stranger; I live 80 miles from Dublin.

John Hackett, Esq.

14137. Did they not know you after you had been in the room a little time?—I do not think they did.

14138. Did they not know you while you were giving this information that you have described?—Some of them did not.

14139. But did not those persons to whom you gave the information know you?—I could not say they did; they might have seen some person speak to me whom they knew.

14140. Did Mr. Power in any way introduce you?—No; but he spoke to me while I was there.

14141. You walked in with him?—At the same time with him.

14142. Not with him then?—We were not exactly united arm-in-arm; we walked in together; we had been together previously, and I walked in with him; he went in at the same time with me.

14143. You went in like two persons knowing each other?—Yes.

14144. And therefore, to that extent, he was an introducer of you?—He did not mark such introduction by any words, or say anything; I went in without any words passing and sat down, and I thought it was a thing that anybody, a member of the Association, could do as well as I could; at least it was not told to me it could not be done, and therefore, unless I was prevented, I could not know differently.

14145. Do you suppose you would have been allowed to sit down in that way, being perfectly unknown, unless you were accompanied by some person who was known?—I do not know; they did not interfere with me; some persons may have known me, but very few.

14146. You know nothing about the finance matters of that Association?—No.

14147. You never went to the finance committee?—I do not think I did. I do not know; that might have been the finance committee, for aught I know.

14148. You do not know what committee-room it was then?—I do not. It was a committee-room up stairs.

14149. Are you quite sure, that though you were in the committee-room, you do not know what they called the committee?—It was a committee-room; I was told it was a committee sitting up stairs.

14150. For what purpose?—They were forwarding, at the time I went in, some addresses or papers to the country.

14151. But the committee was not described?—I do not think it was exactly described; but it was a committee, I am perfectly certain.

14152. Was it called the committee of correspondents, or anything of that sort?—I do not charge my recollection with its title.

14153. You do not know?—I do not know; but it was a committee. I think Mr. Power said, "Will you come into the committee?"

14154. Had you ever been in any other committee-room but that on any other occasion?—I do not now recollect that I was.

14155. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Now, with regard to these private instructions, which you heard from Lord Glengall's evidence his lordship stated emanated from these private committees, and were sent over the country to the pacificators; does any such thing exist, as a system of that sort?—I am sure it does not; I think I would have heard of it in some way if it did.

14156. Have you any doubt of it?—I have not any doubt. I do not think there is any secrecy at all.

14157. Have you any doubt such a system could not exist without your having heard of it?—I do not think it could.

14158. Then your impression is, that in both those particulars which I referred you to, namely, the existence of private committees, to which no person has access but the members of those committees, and that the fact of private instructions emanating from such committees and being forwarded throughout the country to the pacificators, that in both those particulars Lord Glengall is under a mistake?—I think he is, speaking from my own experience.

14159. Have you any doubt about it?—No, I have not. I have experienced the contrary myself in my own person, or else I would not have spoken of it.

14160. Chairman.] I think you now occupy one of the cellars in Clonmel?—No, I have my cellar let.

14161. You

John Hackett, Esq.

22 May 1837.

14161. You have an office in one of the cellars, have you not?—No, I have not; the cellar under my house is let.

14162. Who is that cellar let to?—To Mrs. Lumbard.

14163. Now then, is your house valued by the commissioners?—It is.

14164. What is it valued at?—I think something over 50 l. a year. I did pay 90 l. a year for it before I purchased some interests in it.

14165. It is in the Main-street, is it not?—It is.

14166. What is paid for that cellar?—£.12. a year.

14167. Is anything paid for that cellar to the commissioners?—I believe not. I believe the original valuators valued the whole premises altogether.

14168. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Including the cellar?—Yes, I think I heard them say they did. They did not value the cellars separately at all.

14169. Chairman.] Well, what do you pay then now; what is your valuation in the book?—I pay over 2 l. taxes; I believe 2 l. 3 s. 4 d., or something of that sort.

14170. Well, what is that upon?—I believe it is upon 50 l. or over 50 l.; I believe it is 7 d. in the 1 l.

14171. You do not know what it is?—I am not exactly sure.

14172. You are not one of the commissioners?—I am; I was the chairman of the commissioners the one before last.

14173. But still you do not know what you yourself are valued at?—I think it is over 50 l.

14174. Just look at that book?—£. 65, I see it is; I have paid as much as 90 l.; I am rated in the incumbency at about 50 l.

14175. Why were you reduced from 90 l. to 65 l.?—It was in the year 1818, that is 19 years ago, I took the premises at 90 l. a year.

14176. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You do not mean to say you were ever rated at 90 l. a year?—Never.

14177. Were you ever rated any rate but what appears there now?—Never; I said I always paid over 2 l.

14178. Chairman.] There is no rate paid for the cellar?—No.

14179. Is the value of the cellar, then, included in the value of the house?—I should suppose it was.

14180. Would your house be worth 65 l. a year unless it were for the existence of the cellar?—It would.

14181. Without the cellar?—Yes.

14182. Then, in point of fact, the cellar is not rated at all?—It is not.

14184. Was your house, without the cellar, worth 65 l. a year in the year 1834?—Yes; it was always worth that.

14185. Then has the cellar ever been rated at all?—I do not know that it has; I do not think it has.

14186. Is it not the duty of the commissioners to take care that all premises whatsoever shall be rated under their jurisdiction?—We took the valuation of sworn persons, who were respectable men, and if they undervalued those premises, it was their fault and not ours.

14187. You think that, as a commissioner, although you are cognizant in your own person of the underrating of certain premises, that still that underrating should continue?—All acts must emanate from the body, and must emanate from a resolution come to by them; the getting a new assessment would cost a considerable sum of money, and the question is, whether we would make up that same money by the addition that would be put upon the houses; to tell you the truth, we wished to be as light on the inhabitants as we possibly could, for our revenue is more than equal to our expenditure.

14188. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You were not a commissioner in 1828, when the valuation was made?—No; I am a commissioner six years.

14189. You are not responsible for that valuation?—No.

14190. Did you not state your cellar was included in the valuation of your house?—I think it is. They stated they did not value cellars at all.

14191. That is to say, they did not value them separately?—No.

John Hackett, Esq.

14192. Then when you said just now you did not know whether your cellar was valued or not, did I understand you to mean you did not know whether it was valued separately or not?—Yes; they never levied any separate tax on cellars at all.

14193. But you are under the impression that your cellar was valued together with your house, as part of the premises?—I think so; that is only matter of opinion. I cannot say what the previous commissioners did.

14194. Chairman.] Are you not aware that persons' houses have been raised in the valuation book of the commissioners since 1828?—Some are and some not. There has been a great reduction in some houses; some houses, according to their situation, will always keep the same value.

14195. But are you aware that cellars, generally speaking, are not valued?—Indeed I am only giving it as matter of opinion; you know the valuators would be the persons to speak to that. Until this inquiry came I did not inquire whether the cellars were valued or not; but I was talking to some of the valuators here, and I think the impression upon my mind is, that they said they valued them with the houses.

14196. Then I am to understand that, though you are a commissioner, and I think you said chairman?—I have been chairman.

14197. That though you have been chairman of the board of commissioners one year, that still you are not competent to speak to whether or no cellars, generally speaking, have or not been included in the valuation?—I stated the impression on my mind was that they were.

14198. Do you consider your own cellar included in your valuation?—I should suppose it must have been; I am only speaking of the valuators' acts now. I will show you a circumstance, that perhaps will explain the thing better, in point of fact, than words. In the incumbency book of the parish my premises are valued only at 50 l.; that is the incumbency to the minister of the parish; I am valued at 50 l., and in this book I am valued at 65 l.

14199. Well, that proves therefore that the minister was very moderate in his demand?—And this also, that they did add the cellar in the valuation.

14200. But I understand your idea is, that the valuation of the town generally is fully equal to its real value?—In some respects it may; but I gave an instance of a very strong nature at the beginning of my evidence to day, of Mrs. Ryan's house, which was set for 10 guineas under its real value, and which is nearly opposite me.

14201. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But his Lordship is speaking of the valuation made in 1828; you were asked whether you considered that valuation of 1828 was a high or a low valuation?—I certainly think it was a low valuation; of the two, it was a low valuation.

14202. Chairman.] Then I am to understand your house is amongst the low-valued houses?—Indeed I think it might be valued a little higher; I did pay 90 l. Irish for it in 1818, and I have since reduced the rent by paying a very heavy fine.

14203. And you have laid out a good deal of money upon it?—I have.

14204. And therefore, taking it altogether, do you think it is, or not, worth more than 65 l. a year?—I think it is worth more than 65 l. a year; I would not have any fair interest for my money if it were not.

14205. But, generally speaking, do you believe that the valuation is, or not, correct?—I think the valuation rather a low one of the two, but it yields a revenue equal to all the expenditure, and more; I should suppose our present chairman will have to hand over a very handsome sum to his successor.

14206. Is that any justification for your not having all the premises properly valued?—I think it is.

14207. You do not think it the duty of the commissioners to put a full value on all the premises, and to reduce the rate?—They may come to that by-and-by; but they were going on smoothly; they followed in the track of their predecessors; those men who were before them were men who ought to be quite capable of forming a judgment as well as the present commissioners, and they acted upon it, and they must be equally as cognizant of the fact as we are.

14208. They were fully as good commissioners, you mean?—Just the same; I do not see any difference.

14209. They were men just as much equal to the business?—Yes.

14210. And just as much liked by the townspeople; you mean that?—They were

John Hackett, Esq.

were mostly corporation men; I do not say they were so much liked by the towns-people as the present ones.

14211. That was because they were corporation men, was it?—That was in the year 1828.

14212. Well, but that was because they were corporation men that they were disliked?—Perhaps it was, in a great measure.

14213. Not from their inaptitude for general business?—No; they were all men of business.

14214. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You are not inclined to panegyrize yourself?—No.

14215. If you were asked whether the board you belonged to was better than any other, you would not like to panegyrize yourself by saying it was?—I would not wish to throw any imputation upon anybody, and I would not wish to panegyrize myself; everybody else was equally anxious to do their duty.

14216. Are you aware that that valuation of 1828 contains instances where houses are valued considerably under the rent they paid?—Yes, it does.

14217. Then if that be the fact, do not you come to the conclusion that that valuation must be a very low valuation?—I said so distinctly.

14218. Chairman.] Are the houses in Clonmel generally rented at their full value, or not?—There may be particular instances in which houses are rated at full value.

14219. Rented, not rated, or let at full value?—I gave an instance, as good a one as possibly could be given, at the beginning of my evidence, of Mrs. Ryan's house, exactly opposite mine; she could get 50 guineas for it, and she has let it for 40; I have not applied myself much to valuations at all.

14220. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But your impression is, that what occurred in Mrs. Ryan's case may occur in other instances also?—It may certainly; I am sure she could get 50 guineas for it, if she advertised.

14221. Chairman.] In that Mrs. Ryan's case, I think the reason you gave was, that if she got the higher rent she would get the worse tenant?—She might; I said so to her when she asked my advice.

14222. Was not, in point of fact, the reason why she received the less rent, because she was afraid, if she tried to get the larger rent, she would not receive anything at all?—She asked my advice, and I stated what I stated to your Lordship, as an inducement to her to give it to a good solvent tenant, and she complied with my advice and gave it to him.

14223. I think you have already stated, that in your own case it was much more an object to you to have a good careful tenant, that you would not run the risk of fire or anything else, at a smaller rent, than another tenant at a higher rent still less careful?—And also having property in the place.

14224. Does not all that come under the description, in reality, of the value of a tenant; that is to say, if one tenant would have to pay by means of money, and another tenant by means of care, is not that, in fact, the same as rent?—It is not every man who would take that into consideration; some will and some will not.

14225. But in the case of a tenant not paying you at all, do not you take that into consideration in the value; does it not come under hazardous insurance?—You will not let a house to a man you think would not pay you.

14227. Now then, as a general question, is it the habit of the landlords of Clonmel at present to let their houses much under the market value?—If you speak generally, I think that houses are let under what they might bring if they were alive to the highest value; there are means resorted to by men who are anxious to get the most money for their places; they will advertise their places, and they will puff them off in some way or other, and get more money for them; but, generally speaking, what I say is, that some of those people are satisfied to give a house under the rent to a good tenant.

14228. Under that rent which they might screw from a bad tenant?—Yes, from a person whom they did not know so well; and if they have a long acquaintance with the person, and they know him to be solvent, and all that, they will prefer him as the tenant at what they call some loss.

14229. Mr. Hamilton.] You were elected in 1831, I think?—Yes.

14230. Was there any excitement at that time prior to the election?—I do not think think there was any unusual excitement; a good many persons attended the meetings.

14231. Were there any placards printed?—Not of an exciting tendency.

14232. Was there any accusing the former commissioners of being monopolists or jobbers?—Decidedly not; I never learnt there were; if there were, I have no cognizance of them.

14233. Mr. Glasscot, I believe, was elected at the same time?—He was.

14234. He is a Protestant?—He is; he lives next door to me.

14235. Can you state the reason why he declined subsequently to act?—He came to the board several times, but he has no clerk nor any person to do his business, and he could not well attend.

14236. Did he ever state any objection to the proceedings of the board, in connexion with the vote by ballot?—Never, that I know of; I understood, and I believe the reason why he did not attend was, that he could not spare time from his business; he keeps no clerk; he is a comfortable man, but does his own business.

14237. Is it the practice to vote by ballot or openly in the board?—Openly.

14238. Mr. Dominic Ronayne, I believe, lives in the same house with yourself?—He did; he does not now.

14239. Had he a separate right of entrance?—He had; I gave him a separate right of entrance. Mine is a very large concern, and I can have two or three entrances to it.

14240. You have attended the registry frequently, with a view to give evidence, I believe?—Never.

14241. There were some placards of an inflammatory character published after the election, I believe, at your office?—I do not recollect there were; I do not think there were; if there were, I have no recollection of them at this moment, or I would have stated it as frankly as I have every other thing.

14242. I hold in my hand a list of the electors at the Clonmel election, distinguishing between their different religions, and round the Roman-catholics who voted for Mr. Bagwell there is a black line drawn; is that within your cognizance?—It is.

14243. The Quakers and Protestants who voted for Mr. Bagwell also particularized?—Not with a black line.

14244. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But you being a Catholic, and your party, who were Catholics, took a distinction between the Protestants and the Quakers on the one hand, and the Catholics on the other hand, who voted for Mr. Bagwell?—Certainly; because they ascribed motives to the Catholics that they would not ascribe to the others.

14245. Mr. Hamilton.] Was it consistent, in your opinion, with the freedom of election to publish a document of this kind?—That was done long subsequent to the election.

14246. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] It was not published before the election?—Certainly not; subsequent.

14247. Mr. Hamilton.] It was not done in the excitement of the election?—It was done subsequent, perhaps three weeks or a month after the election was over. I know it was done a considerable time subsequent to the election.

14248. Was it not calculated to injure the Roman-catholics who were so characterized?—It was not calculated to serve them, certainly. I do not know any injury that it has ever done them.

14249. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You do not consider yourself called on to exert yourself to serve them?—No.

14250. Chairman.] Why did you surround their names with a black line?—I do not know any particular reason for it, except it was to call them what are called in our country black sheep.

14251. Was it not to mark them as objects of popular dislike?—This was subsequent to the election; but I do not know that it occasioned any feeling of that kind.

14252. Was the object of marking them in that manner with the black mark or line to subject them to popular dislike?—I rather think it was the object to separate them, by some mark of that kind, from persons whom they conceived voted on the popular side.

14253. Then you do not conceive a Roman-catholic who does not vote on the same side as you, can vote according to his conscience?—There were particular ticular reasons for my knowing that some of them did not vote according to their consciences, and for that reason I say so.

14254. Do you mean to state that all those Roman-catholics that are marked with that black line did not vote according to their consciences?—I will not state all, but with a very few exceptions.

14255. Why, because there were exceptions to conscientious votes, did you inclose all parties in the black line?—If I were to enumerate the exceptions, in my opinion they would come down to a very few indeed.

14256. Is there any exception?—If I were sworn I would not like to say there was not in that list; that was the list of the second election; I should not like to swear there were any exceptions in the second, but there were in the first.

14257. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you mean to take on yourself to say that none of those men voted from a conscientious motive?—I should not like to say such a thing.

14258. Chairman.] But still you did not think it an incorrect thing to mark them for popular dislike by this black border or black line?—Indeed I do not know; I do not seek to vindicate it one way or the other.

14259. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Such things are often done at elections?—There are many things done at elections that would not be done at other times.

14260. Chairman.] But this was after the election?—Yes, two or three weeks after.

14261. And when the excitement was gone by?—Yes.

14262. And the excitement of the election being gone, you still think it justifiable to hold out these persons to popular dislike?—I did not say that; and if your Lordship is attributing the doing of that to me, all I can say upon the subject is this, that if it were printed by me, I was paid for it, and I printed it by order of somebody.

14263. You do not approve of it?—I never approved of anything of that sort at all.

14264. And you do not approve of this?—I would rather such things were not done.

14265. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You did it in the way of trade?—I did.

14266. Chairman.] And you do not approve of it?—I would rather it had not been done; I do not think there was any good in it, nor do I think any harm resulted from it.

14267. But if you had been consulted beforehand, would you have advised against it?—I always wish to avoid personalities.

14268. If you had been consulted beforehand, would you or not have advised against this proceeding?—I do not know; I cannot say whether I would or not; we felt a good deal indignant against them; we believed they voted from mercenary motives, and we felt indignant against them; I might perhaps have given a tacit consent, but I was not the inventor of it.

14269. Mr. Hamilton.] Why, the Quakers and the Protestants are separately given here, though they are not surrounded by the black mark?—They are given as the supporters of Mr. Bagwell, who, I believe, voted conscientiously.

14270. Then you do not mean to say that the Quakers and Protestants may not have voted conscientiously?—I believe they did vote conscientiously, according to their feeling.

14271. Then putting the Quakers and Protestants' mark, though not in the obnoxious way the others are marked, was calculated to keep up the difference of religious feeling?—I do not think it was done with any intention of the kind; we had very little religious feeling until the election.

14272. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you mean religious animosity?—Religious animosity there was very little, at least in our town, until the borough election in 1832.

14273. Then what intention can you assign for printing the Quakers' names and the Protestants names separately from the Roman-catholics who voted for Mr. Bagwell and Mr. Ronayne?—They follow the Roman-catholics, I believe, as the supporters of Mr. Bagwell, and then Mr. Ronayne's supporters come in the other column afterwards.

14274. There are separate columns, one for Mr. Bagwell's party and one for Mr. Ronayne's?—Yes.

14275. Of the Roman-catholics, the Quakers and the Protestants who voted for Mr. Bagwell, distinguishing them from each other, and those who voted for Mr.

John Hackett, Esq.

Mr. Ronayne?—There were only, I believe, three Protestants who supported Mr. Ronayne.

14276. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are you aware that in other places besides Clonmel, after the excitement of an election is gone by, it has been the practice to make out lists of that kind; for instance, in the city of Dublin, after the last election, were not lists made by both parties?—I heard there were lists made out; I do not know whether there was that distinction by lines.

14277. But there were lists of the persons' names who voted at the election, describing or indicating for which of the candidates they voted?—Yes; and that is usually done after an election.

14278. Are you aware that, generally speaking, after an election lists are made out of the persons who voted for the different candidates, distinguishing the Protestants from the Roman-catholics?—Those things I know are always done, or mostly done, after an election; it is for the purpose of showing the adherents of each candidate, and as matter of information as much as anything else. I know these lists have been used as matters of information.

14279. Do you mean to say that it is always, or generally done, that a list is made out distinguishing the religion of the different persons who voted for each candidate?—I do not say that.

14280. Chairman.] Are there any of them enclosed in black lines in the Dublin case?—I do not know of my own knowledge whether there is or not in the Dublin case.

Mr. Patrick J. Keily, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. P. J. Keily.

14281. Chairman.] DO you wish to qualify your answer to question 10050, where you are asked "Do you think it would take 30 hours to copy that book? I would take 30 hours to copy that book."?—Yes, my Lord.

14282. How do you wish to qualify it?—As the book could not be copied in a hasty manner.

14283. Do you also wish to qualify the answer you gave to question 10108, namely, "And it was his opinion (meaning Mr. Lacy's) that your charge was a fair one;" and to which you state "and Mr. Bianconi and the other commissioners, and they conceived it to be a fair remuneration"?—I then stated and I now state that I consulted the chairman, Mr. Lacy, and I also consulted Mr. Bianconi, and they declined giving me an opinion upon the matter, as it was a matter of difference between Mr. Pedder and me; but other of the commissioners had given me their opinion that it was a charge that was a reasonable one.

REPORT.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE appointed to inquire how far the intentions of the Reform Bill are defeated by creating and registering Fictitious and Improper Votes in Ireland, and who were empowered to report the MINUTES OF EVIDENCE taken before them, from time to time, to The House;—HAVE considered the matters to them referred and have agreed to the following Report:—

YOUR Committee, in reporting this Third Portion of the Evidence which they have taken to The House, feel themselves called upon to state, that the abrupt termination of the Session has forced them to leave the case of the Registry of Fictitious Votes in the City of Dublin incomplete.

The Committee have been able to enter on the Investigation of one class of Voters only, viz. the Freemen; and, with regard to them, the Evidence given has been confined to impugning their legality, and it has been impossible to go so far into the case as to receive any Evidence or Statements in support of their Qualifications.

The Committee regret to be obliged to offer so incomplete and so partial a portion of Evidence in this case; and they also lament that they have not been able to extend their Inquiries into the cases of Fictitious Voters in other Boroughs, or in any degree to enter on the Question of County Constituencies: Your Committee not having prosecuted the Inquiry entrusted to them to its legitimate extent, forbear to offer any opinion on the Tendency or Results of the Evidence which they have taken. They, nevertheless, have no hesitation in recommending a renewal of this investigation in the next Session of Parliament; for that which has already appeared in Evidence fully justifies the recommendation of the continuance of an Inquiry into this very important subject.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE.

Jovis, 25° die Maii, 1837.

MEMBERS PRESENT.

Mr. O'Connell.	Mr. Hamilton.
Sir R. Ferguson.	Mr. Serjeant Jackson.
Mr. French.	Mr. Lefroy.
Mr. Milnes Gaskell.	Mr. Emerson Tennent.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

25 May 1837.

Mr. O'Connell laid before the Committee a Parliamentary Paper, headed "Freemen of Corporate Towns, Ireland," containing "A Return of the Number of Freemen created in each Corporate Town in Ireland returning Members to Parliament, from 1st April to 20th July in the present Year, distinguishing those who have been declared entitled to their Freedom as of Right. Ordered by the House of Commons to be printed, 25th of August 1831." No. 200.

Mr. O'Connell read the following extract from page 4 of the abovementioned Paper: "Dublin city.—Number of freemen created in the city of Dublin, from 1st April to 20th July 1831, 20 freemen. The corporation of Dublin do not declare any persons entitled to their freedom as of right. The freemen created by the corporation of Dublin during the above period are alone qualified to vote for the return of a Member of Parliament." Signed, "Greene and Archer, town-clerks, corporation of Dublin."

Mr. O'Connell read the following passages from the Report of the Committee on Municipal Corporations, ordered by the House of Commons to be printed, 4th June 1833, No. 344, page 205:

"Lunæ, 25° die Martii, 1833. The Right Hon. James Abercromby in the Chair.

"The Right Honourable C. P. Archer, Lord Mayor of the city of Dublin; Sir John Kingston James, Bart., treasurer of the city; and Mr. George Jackson, one of the law agents, called in; and examined.

"4756. (To Alderman Archer.) You are Lord Mayor of Dublin?—I am.

"4757. Have you ever filled the office of Mayor before?—Never before the 1st of October last.

"4758. (To Sir J. K. James.) Are you an alderman of the city of Dublin?—Yes.

"4759. How long have you been alderman?—About 16 years.

"4760. (To Mr. Jackson.) Are you town-clerk, or engaged in the office of town-clerk?—I am engaged in the office of town-clerk.

"4761. How long have you been so engaged?—For about 24 years.

"4762. In what situation are you in the corporation?—As one of the law agents.

"4765. (To Sir J. K. James.) What is the style and title of the corporation of Dublin?—The Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons, and Citizens of the City of Dublin; the aldermen are not included in the style.

"4766. Are there freemen of the city of Dublin?—There are.

"4767. By what title does a person become a freeman of the city of Dublin?—There are three different modes of admission; one by birth, one by service, and another what is generally called by 'grace especial,' or 'special grace.'

"4768. Must a person who claims by birth be the son of a person born in Dublin?—Born not necessarily in Dublin, but born, his father having been free at the time of the birth of the child.

"4769. Then he must be the son of a freeman?—Yes.

"4770. Are all sons free?—All sons may seek their freedom by a certain process; they all have the privilege of claiming their freedom from the corporation.

"4771. When a freeman by birth claims his title, it is acknowledged as of right?—There is a veto, which has been exercised time immemorial, I believe, on the part of both houses, for the corporation of Dublin sit differently from what probably other corporations do.

"4772. Is that veto frequently exercised?—It is sometimes exercised, no doubt, but not what I call frequently.

"4773. Exercised, do you think, in the course of each year?—No; I do not know that there has been a refusal each year.

"4774. Upon what grounds generally is this veto enforced?—With respect to that I probably cannot give a direct reason, because each person composing the distinct houses may have his own reason for voting pro or con.

"4775. Is the veto simply given without any reason assigned?—Exactly. It is necessary probably to tell the commitee, the upper house, as it is called, the lord mayor and board of aldermen, sit separately from the commons; the board of aldermen, when questions arise, divide, and the commons decide by ballot.

"4776. How are persons made freemen by servitude?—A person who has served seven years to a freeman may claim his freedom.

"4777. How do persons seek their freedom by special grace?—Persons wishing to become free, petition for such freedom such of the guilds or minor corporations, as they may wish to be admitted into; upon such admission, the proper officer of the guild certifies the same to the corporation at large; a 'beseech' is then laid before the lord mayor and board of aldermen, at their quarter assembly, who have the power of admitting or rejecting; if admitted by them, the beseech is sent to the commons' house for their decision, and if they concur in the admission, he is then entitled to be sworn in as a freeman.

"4797. Are there two kinds of corporations, in fact, in Dublin; the general corporation, consisting of the general corporation of the city at large, and the particular corporations, called guilds, besides?—Yes.

"4798. Are those guilds numerous?—They consist of 25 different guilds.

"4799. They have their representatives in the corporation?—Yes.

"4800. Do you know the number of each guild?—Not the number of freemen; I know the number of representatives which each guild returns.

"4801. About how many freemen are there altogether?—About 4,000 or 5,000; a person may be free of the city at large, which gives the right or freedom of voting for the representation of the city of Dublin, but does not give a right in the minor guilds.

"4802. When a person claims his freedom by birth, does he seek it in the same guild to which his father belongs?—Yes, he does, generally speaking.

"4803. Are there not many who are free of particular guilds, but who, being merely free of such guilds, did not formerly exercise any right of voting for Members of Parliament?—They did not exercise, nor have they the right of voting for representatives.

"4804. In order to be entitled to vote for the representatives, it was necessary to be free of the corporation at large?—Yes.

"4805. Are there not many persons in the predicament of being free of a particular guild only?—Yes, there are some.

"4806. Particularly Roman-catholics; is there a single Roman-catholic free of the corporation at large?—No, I believe not.

"4807. Are there any freemen of the corporation at large, who are not free of a particular guild?—Yes, there are.

"4808. Then it is necessary for a freeman, though he belongs to the body at large, to take up his freedom in the particular guild to which his father belongs?—It is not necessary for a freeman of the city at large to become a member of a minor guild, unless he particularly wishes it.

"4809. Are there none who are free of the city at large, who have not taken up the freedom of a particular guild?—There are some.

"4810. Will you state all the guilds?—The first is Trinity guild, or guild of merchants; 2d, tailors'; 3d, smiths'; 4th, barber surgeons'; 5th, bakers';

"4811. In most of these guilds they recognise the right of birth and servitude?—Yes.

"4812. But these rights are not recognised as conferring an absolute title by the corporation at large?—No.

"4813. How are the freemen by special grace admitted?—By a petition to the particular guild to which they wish to gain admission; we will suppose, for instance, a gentleman is a merchant in Dublin, and he wishes to be free of the guild of merchants; his friend, or he himself, petitions the master, wardens, and brethren of that guild for admission, and, if he is approved, he is then sent by the particular officer of that guild to the corporation at large, who either admit or reject him as a freeman of the city; if he is admitted he has a certificate from the town-clerks, goes back to the minor corporation, and he is sworn in, both as a freeman of the particular guild before the master and wardens, and a freeman of the city at large before the lord mayor.

"4814. When you say that this petition is sent to the corporation at large, what do you mean by that term; do you mean that it is sent first to the common council?—It is sent to the town-clerks, who prepare a beseech, and submit the same on the quarter assembly day to the lord mayor and corporation at large.

"4815. What body is it in the corporation at large to whom this reference is made, which has the power of determining whether such an individual shall or shall not be a freeman of the corporation at large?—The lord mayor and board of aldermen sitting together, the sheriffs and commons sitting in another place; and accordingly, on the proper day, every three months, by the usages of the corporation and charter, they have what is called their quarter assembly days; upon that day the particular name or names of such persons as wish to become free are, in the ordinary despatch of the business of the day, put by the town-clerks before the lord mayor, who puts a regular question upon each name; so when a person passes the board of aldermen, he goes, in the ordinary way, to the sheriffs and commons; the sheriff there puts a similar question, and if they admit it, they come back again to the board of aldermen, and are so made freemen of the city of Dublin.

"4816. Those persons' names, as the Committee understand, having passed the guild of one corporation, must first be submitted to the upper house, the lord mayor and board of aldermen, and if it passes that house, then it goes down to the commons, composed of the sheriffs and the commons?—Yes.

"4817. Supposing it does not pass the upper house, is it at any time submitted to the commons?—No; the upper house exercise the privilege of rejecting at once such a person.

"4818. Have the upper house an absolute veto upon the admission of any person to the freedom?—Yes.

"4819. Do you not call those beseeches?—Yes.

"4839. (To Sir J. K. James.) Are you aware that since the year 1792 Catholics have been, in point of law, admissible to the city of Dublin corporation?—I have heard that such has been the case.

4840. Are you aware, that not a single Catholic has ever been free of the corporation at large?—No, I believe not.

"4868. To what guild do you belong?—To the guild of merchants.

"4875. Supposing a man to have what we call an inchoate right of becoming a freeman by birth, have the guild power of saying to such an individual, You shall not be a freeman of the guild?—They have exercised the power frequently; I fancy they have the right. I should have mentioned before, in the detail of the business, which is very extensive in that guild, as in every other guild, they have what is called a council of the house, to whom names are submitted prior to the quarter day, on which they they are generally brought forward, and the detail of business goes through that council of the house, and is brought before the master, wardens, and brethren of the guild of merchants on quarter day."

Mr. O'Connell read the following passages from page 17 of the Appendix to the Report on Municipal Corporations, Ireland:—"Report on the City of Dublin, Part 1, presented to both Houses of Parliament, by Command of His Majesty.

"60. There are three classes of freemen: first, those made free of the city at large without having previously obtained the freedom of any of the guilds; secondly, those admitted in the first instance to the freedom of a guild, and then to that of the city at large; and lastly, those admitted to the freedom of a guild, but not to the freedom of the city. The first and last of these classes, particularly the last, are inconsiderable in number, the great body of the freemen being of the second.

"61. Admissions in the first instance to the freedom of the city at large are granted as by grace especial by the aldermen and commons in the general assembly. Freemen, so admitted, are merely honorary. It is not usual for a person seeking this admission to apply for it directly; the course is, for some alderman, or member of the commons, to mention the name to the town-clerk previously to the meeting of the assembly. The town-clerk inserts it in the abstract, prepared by him, of the business to be done at the assembly, and also prepares a petition for the admission of the individual, mentioning in it either some particular public services deserving of such a mark of approbation, or if no such service can be especially referred to, the petition prays, that the individual may be admitted 'for his loyalty to the King and constitution.' This form of expression is considered as connected with the exclusive political principles so long acted on by the corporation. If the individual proposed is married to the daughter of a freeman, the fact is alluded to in the petition as a reason for his admission; but we do not find that any right to such admission is recognized by the corporation. The proposition may originate either with the board of aldermen or the commons; the resolution to admit must pass both. Each body claims and exercises the power of rejecting at pleasure, and without assigning any reasons. Such admissions to the freedom of the city at large have been few since the passing of the Reform Bill. Previously to that Act they were numerous, and occasionally persons were so admitted in considerable numbers, and very many were non-residents.

"Shortly previous to the Emancipation Act, being passed propositions were made in the commons to admit at one assembly 1,000 freemen, the parties proposing them reading the list of the names from the newspapers of the day; but such a proceeding being objected to as irregular, a committee was appointed to select such as it would be eligible to admit, and they selected above 200, who were admitted accordingly.

"The lord mayor sometimes exercises the privilege of creating a freeman of the city at large, during his year of office, or rather of requesting the assembly to admit an individual named by him. There is in form a petition, or beseech, for the admission, stating it to be at the request of the lord mayor, which is, in general, acquiesced in.

"62. Persons who have obtained the freedom of any of the guilds are entitled to apply for admission to the freedom of the city at large. For this purpose the applicant lodges in the town-clerk's office a certificate, signed by the master, wardens and clerk of the guild, stating the admission to the guild, and the grounds of it, and his place of abode, occupation and trade. The certificate from the guild of merchants describes the party as a merchant; the town-clerk then prepares a petition, or beseech, as from the person seeking to be admitted, which states those facts, and the beseech is laid before the next assembly.

'The town-clerk, in cases of admission by birth, first ascertains from the freemen's books that the name of the father of the applicant is entered in them, and that such a person has been 21 years a freeman. The commons and board of aldermen claim respectively to exercise, and have, in fact, long exercised the important power of admitting or rejecting, at their pleasure, those applying from the guilds, whatever be the grounds of their claim, and without assigning any reason for the rejection.

"In the year 1826, on a return to a mandamus directed to the corporation, to admit a person who had obtained, by birth, the freedom of a guild, but had been rejected by the board of aldermen, they returned, that from time immemorial they had exercised this right; and the Court of King's Bench, on argument, decided that the return was good in law.

"3. In numbers, the freemen bear a very small proportion to the population of the city, a fact sufficiently accounted for by the discretionary power of rejection assumed by the board of aldermen and common council, as already noticed, and the exclusive religious and political principles on which those bodies and the guilds have hitherto acted.

"Since the year 1793 the freedom of the corporation and guilds has been by law open to Roman-catholics, yet there is not known to have been to the present time a single individual of that persuasion admitted by the common council. The clerk of the commons, who has held that situation for many years, could only inform us that he had heard of one who had passed, inadvertently, upwards of 30 years ago. In the guilds a similar system generally prevails; and even where a more liberal practice has existed the experiment was defeated by the exercise of the discretionary power of rejection in the board of aldermen and commons.

"The exclusion is not confined to Roman-catholics. The being known, or suspected to be friendly to their claims, previously to the Emancipation Act, was equally effective to disqualify the applicant, though a Protestant; and the advocacy of what are called liberal or popular principles has formed, and still forms a strong ground of objection. In short, the proceedings of the corporation as to the admission of freemen have been, and are avowedly conducted on the most extreme principles of exclusion, religious and political."

Mr. James Martin, called in; and Examined.

Mr. James Martin.

14284. Chairman.] WHAT are you?—A commercial agent, residing at Dublin.

14285. In what part of Dublin?—York-row, Dublin.

14286. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you been engaged in looking at the register of the city of Dublin?—I have,

14287. How long?—Since the 2d of May 1835.

14288. Did you volunteer that occupation?—I did.

14289. How long were you acting as a volunteer?—Eighteen months.

14290. Have you since been employed at a salary?—Since that I have.

14291. How much?—Two pounds a week.

14292. By whom is that salary paid to you?—By the General Association of Dublin.

14293. Has your occupation been precisely the same through the entire time, with the exception of receiving a salary for part of it?—Exactly the same; till about six months that I have taken notes of the evidence of the freemen, which I did not do till the first year and a half; for the last six months I have taken notes of the evidence of the freemen, as I found it was not taken so correctly as we wished it to be done.

14294. Chairman.] Are you a short-hand writer?—No; I take it as quick as I can as it goes on.

14295. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you your book of notes?—I have.

14296. Have the number of freemen increased very much latterly in Dublin?—They have.

14297. Do you know of any exertions made to procure persons to be registered as freemen?—I see constantly a vast deal of names in the clerk of the peace's list of freemen, who are not freemen according to the names upon the list; on my sending to inquire or making inquiry, I find there are persons going about seeking for persons to make freemen.

14298. Do you mean to say, that a number of notices are served for persons to be registered as freemen, who are not free at the time those notices are served?—I do; a considerable number.

14299. Mr. Hamilton.] How do you know that?—By inquiry through the city; seeing them come up after their names are in the list, and their admitting, on their oath, that they were freemen only a few days before, perhaps the day before, before, or the week before, and seeing their names upon the list 22 or 23 days before.

Mr. James Martin.

14300. Mr. O'Connell.] The notice of registry must be 21 days?—Twenty-one days.

14301. And when those notices for registry are served the persons are not free?—They are not free.

14302. Is that a numerous class?—They are.

14303. And it appears when they come to register, that they have been admitted subsequent to the notice?—Some that very day; some 10 days before they come to be registered.

14304. Then it occurs frequently, that there are persons who have given notice to be registered, and whose names have been in the notices at least 21 days before they are free at all?—Yes.

14305. And some of those appear, by the investigation, to be admitted to the freedom the very day they came to be registered?—Yes; they are sworn in that day.

14306. Had you any series of questions put by those opposing the registry of freemen?—Yes.

14307. Is there any law agent?—There are two counsel sometimes, and sometimes one. If we have occasion to argue any question, we sometimes bring one or two more; but there is always one brought by the party to which I belong, Mr. Addy Curran, and constantly counsellor Alexander Seaton. Mr. Curran is there; we retain him by the year.

14308. Did he attend for another body called the Central Club?—He did; but we have acted for the citizens generally, that is, for the liberal party.

14309. Have you with you the questions which you put to the freemen?—I have.

14310. Will you read them?—We ask every freeman that comes up, no matter in what right he claims, "Did you ever pay any, and what money, other than the sum of one shilling to the town-clerks upon the certificate now produced, for or in respect of your freedom or admission to the corporation of Dublin, or any guild of the corporation, or to any officer of either, as for stamp duty or otherwise?" That is the first question. The second question we ask is, "Were you ever elected, admitted, or sworn a member of any and what guild of the corporation of Dublin; and if so, state where, and before whom you were so admitted and sworn?" Then if they claim in right of birth, we ask them, No. 3: "Who was or is your father, or reputed father; was he a member of the corporation of Dublin, or of any and what guild thereof; when was he admitted and sworn; where and when were you born?" If he claims in right of service, we ask him, "Who was, or is the person to whom you alleged you served your apprenticeship; was he a member of the corporation of Dublin, or of any and what guild thereof; when was he admitted and sworn; were you bound to him by any indentures, and of what date; were they ever and when enrolled with the clerk of any and what guild or corporation; where and in what trade, and how long from time to time did you serve under the said indentures; where are now the said indentures?" If he claims in right of marriage, we ask him question No. 5: "What was the name of the person whom you allege to be your wife, and in whose right you claim; when were you married; who was, or is her father, or reputed father; was he a member of the corporation of Dublin, or of any and what guild thereof; when was he admitted and sworn; when was your said wife born?" We put all those questions respectively to every person claiming as to the different rights.

14311. Were those questions answered?—No, the counsel on the opposite side told them not to answer them; we then referred to the barrister to know whether he insisted on their being answered, and he overruled them.

14312. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Who was it that prepared those questions?—Counsellor Hudson.

14313. Is that the gentleman who was one of the Corporation Commissioners?—I do not know whether he was or no, to my own knowledge.

14314. Did you ever hear that he was?—I cannot say that I have.

14315. Were they prepared at the Association?—No, they were prepared in the court, at my shoulder; they were prepared on the occasion. We brought down Mr. Hudson to argue against those freemen one day in the court. Mr. Dobbs overruled his arguments, and after that Mr. Hudson sat down beside me, wrote those queries, and desired me to put them to every one that came up in the court upon the table.

Mr. James Marti

14316. Are there any other forms given to you for your use at the registries?—There is a manual or direction for the registry.

14317. A manual of instructions for the agents of the registries?—Yes.

14318. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you that?—I have.

14319. Was that issued to you from the Association?—Yes, I got this in the Association rooms; it was given to me by Mr. Ray, the under secretary.

14320. Is he the under secretary of the General Association?—Yes; but these were not done by the General Association; these were done by the Reform Registry Association, another body that took up the registry in 1836, but which, I believe, are not now acting.

14321. Has that association ceased to exist?—It has ceased to act.

14322. When was that association formed?—I believe some time in 1836.

14323. Did it come to a termination in the same year?—No, it ended lately, about half a year ago.

14324. How long ago was it that they ceased to act; was it in 1836?—No, I think it was in 1837.

14325. What part of 1837?—I think about January.

14326. Are you sure that they at all existed in this year?—I cannot exactly say.

14327. Mr. O'Connell.] You never were a member of it?—I never was a member of either association.

14328. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Has the General Association taken up the subject of registry?—I believe it has.

14329. Has that Reform Registry Association acted since the General Association has taken up the business of registry?—Yes, it has.

14330. When did the General Association take up the subject?—I cannot tell what period.

14331. Then, how can you tell that the Reform Registry Association has acted since the General Association took up the business of registry?—Because I have been in the Reform Association rooms when the other was acting.

14332. When the other was acting upon the subject of registry?—Yes.

14333. When was that?—I think it was in November 1836 that I had occasion to apply to them for affidavits, and for papers of various descriptions.

14334. Was it in the chambers of the General Association that you got that printed book?—I cannot say where it was I got it, but I think it was the Registry Association.

14335. Where were the chambers of the Registry Association?—No. 6, in Westmoreland-street.

14336. Have they any chambers there now?—I do not know whether they keep chambers yet or not.

14337. Are you sure whether it was in Westmoreland-street or at the Corn Exchange that you got that book?—No; whenever I wanted anything I walked there, and took any book that I wanted.

14338. Were there similar books in both?—There were; they were all issued by the Reform Association.

14339. Are they kept there for use at the registries throughout Ireland for the liberal party?—Yes.

14340. Have they prepared certain forms applicable to all purposes of county registries and town and borough registries.—Yes, so far as affidavits; I have seen this book in the hands of registering agents for the conservative party.

14341. They have taken a leaf out of their neighbours' book?—No, they took the book altogether.

14342. It was so good a manual that the conservatives thought it their interest to learn from the other party?—Yes, it is of use now to both parties.

14343. How long has that book been in use in Ireland?—Some time in 1836; I had it upon the 30th of April 1836.

14344. Are there any other gentlemen employed besides you by the Association in Dublin?—Not in the registry, nobody paid.

14345. Are you a Protestant gentleman?—A Catholic.

14346. Is Mr. Curran a Protestant or a Roman-catholic?—A Roman-catholic.

14347. Is

Mr. James Martin.

25 May 1837.

14347. Is Mr. Seaton paid?—I believe he has been paid, but I never asked anything about his affairs.

14348. You know that Mr. Addy Curran is paid?—Yes, because I generally pay him myself.

14349. Do you pay Mr. Seaton?—No.

14350. Is Mr. Seaton a member of the Association?—I think he is.

14351. Is Mr. Addy Curran?—I think he is.

14352. Is Mr. Hudson?—I do not think he is; I have never seen him in the Association rooms.

14353. Mr. Hamilton.] Have you seen him at the Reform Registry Association?—I have.

14354. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did you see Mr. Curran there?—Yes.

14355. Mr. Seaton?—Yes.

14356. Are the gentlemen who are members of the Reform Registry Association members of the General Association?—Yes; pretty much the same gentlemen are members of every liberal association that exists in Dublin.

14357. Are they pretty much the same gentlemen that go from one to the other, and make speeches at them all?—Yes.

14358. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you ever hear those gentlemen make speeches at the Reform Registry Association?—No, I never heard a speech made at the Reform Registry Association; it is all working at books.

14359. Did you ever see a report of speeches made there?—Never.

14360. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Were you a member of that Association?—No.

14361. Were you a member of the General Association?—No.

14362. Have you ever seen Mr. Piggott at the Association?—I have seen him in the committee-rooms.

14363. When?—It is a long time ago, upwards of a year.

14364. At which Association?—I have seen him at the Registry Association room.

14365. Have you seen him at the Corn Exchange?—I cannot say whether I have or not; but I am sure I have never seen him at any meeting at the Corn Exchange.

14366. Do you know that he is a member of the General Association?—I do not know.

14367. Has he been useful in the preparation of forms and instructions for the registering?—I do not know of my own knowledge, but I think that he would give any advice that was wanted.

14368. Do you happen to know that he did?—No, I do not.

14369. You never heard that he was useful in preparing instructions?—I have heard that he was a very useful active man in everything.

14370. Do you know that he was one of the Commissioners of Corporate Inquiry in Ireland?—No.

14371. Is Mr. Hudson the gentleman that prepared a valuable book upon the law of elections?—Yes.

14372. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you know by whom these instructions were prepared?—No; I suppose by the gentlemen collectively.

14373. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Those persons that you say were admitted in Dublin, some of them upon the very day that they were sworn in as freemen, do you know when they were admitted as freemen?—No further than what they stated themselves the day they were sworn.

14374. Are you aware that the admission is one thing and the swearing another?—I am not aware of the method in the corporation, for they keep it so much to themselves.

14375. Are you aware that the admission and swearing-in are two different things?—No.

14376. You do not mean to say that they were admitted on the same day that they were sworn?—I mean to state, that in the parchment certificate they produced, their admission appeared as of that day, and that they admitted upon their oath that they were sworn upon that day.

14377. Mr. Hamilton.] Are you aware that the certificate is given upon the member of the corporation being sworn in?—I am not aware of the management of the corporation in any way.

Mr. James Martin.

25 May 1837.

14378. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You do not know to what the certificate refers in point of date?—No; that we were always barred from making any inquiry about. I have asked it at different times, but I could never get any answer.

14379. Did you ever make any inquiries of the town-clerk as to the time when those persons were admitted?—I did, but I could get no information.

14380. Then none of your information as to the time of admission of the freemen is derived from the officers of the corporation?—None; our party could never get any information from them.

14381. None of the information you have given here, with respect to the time of admission of freemen has been derived from the proper officers of the corporation, or from inspection of the books?—No; we would not be allowed to search the books.

14382. Your information is derived from what you gathered from conversation of people not connected with the corporation?—From the man himself, upon his oath upon the table.

14383. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you mean to say, that the men admitted upon their oath, that the time of their admission was only the day, or the day before, or about the time of their being registered?—With the permission of the Committee, I will read the note of their evidence.

14384. Mr. Hamilton.] Have you a copy, or can you state the purport of the certificate which you call the certificate of admission?—No; I do not know that I ever had more than one certificate in my hand, and that was got by a sort of snatch, for I would not be allowed to look at it.

14385. Mr. O'Connell.] You were asked, whether Mr. Curran is a Catholic. What religion is Mr. Seaton?—A Protestant.

14386. What religion is Mr. Hudson?—I believe he is a Protestant.

14387. Having been at the Association, you can have no doubt that Mr. Piggott gave his assistance in framing the documents for the registry?—I am sure he did; he is very warm about the registries. I did not see him do it, but I am as sure that he did as I can be of anything I do not know.

14388. And you have no doubt that he is a member of the Association?—He was a member of the Registry Association; and I think I have heard that he was a member of the other, but that, upon his being appointed to some situation in the Castle, he retired, or did not act; and I think I have heard that he took his name off the books.

14389. Have you in employing counsel, ever thought whether the counsel was a Protestant or a Catholic?—Not the least; we have had four counsel, and two of them are Protestants; the only reason that there is the least distinction of religion was, that Mr. Curran is better known to the description of people that we had to register.

14390. Mr. Hamilton.] Then you mean to say, that efficiency is the only consideration?—Yes; I can have no idea of religious distinction, because I am married to a person who was a Protestant, and all my connexions are Protestants.

14391. Are the persons you have mentioned strong partizans?—Like all the rest in Ireland.

14392. Efficiency being the only consideration with you, have you ever employed a gentleman of conservative principles?—No; that would be a very foolish thing to do; he would not be efficient for us.

14393. Mr. O'Connell.] You also bring forward persons to be registered upon the liberal interest?—Yes.

14394. You serve notices for them?—I seek for them, and I inquire whether they are registered or not, and put in notices, and get them served, and bring them up to be registered.

14395. Those are persons whom you conceive to be entitled to register?—Whom I know to be householders, or leaseholders, or persons entitled to register.

14396. Are they closely examined?—Very closely.

14397. Are they cross-examined by counsel?—They are cross-examined sometimes by three or four counsel; sometimes by more.

14398. Who are the counsel employed on the other side?—The constant counsel is Mr. James Hyndman; but we have had on the opposite side Mr. Dolling, Mr. Daly, Mr. Stokes and others, whom I do not immediately recollect; lect; and we have had Mr. Jackson himself once. We have had Mr. Brewster, and we have had Mr. West himself assisting; we have had a great number, in fact.

Mr. James Martin.

14399. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] It was upon the main question of the admissibility of freemen that I was there?—I believe it was.

14400. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you ever know a Roman-catholic employed by that party?—Not one.

14401. You employ two Protestants out of four, but they employ no Catholic at all?—No.

14402. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You are very glad to hook in a Protestant?—I never made a word of distinction about religion, nor the party that I belong to.

14403. What party do you belong to?—The Trades' Union; I am one of the vice-presidents.

14404. Mr. O'Connell.] The Trades' Union you speak of is a political trades' union?—Yes; it is not an union of any particular trades, it is composed of lawyers and doctors, as well as all the various kinds of trades. One of our rules is, that there should be no secrecy, and that that the room is open to any one, and that no distinction of religion shall be mentioned. Our chairman often is, and a great portion of the body are Protestants; I never heard the question of religion asked.

14405. Has Mr. Dobbs assigned any reason for preventing those questions from being put to the freemen?—The decision of the chief baron upon the appeals; he said, that in compliance with that decision he should over-rule all those questions being put, and that the certificate of the town-clerk being presented was quite enough; that he could go no further than that.

14406. Mr. French.] Had not he decided so before the chief baron gave his opinion?—He had, and then afterwards again.

14407. Mr. O'Connell.] At first he decided that he would not allow the examination?—In one case, or I believe two, he allowed it; the roll was produced, and the book, and the beseech and some papers were produced, and then there were counsel brought down to argue against it, and afterwards counsel brought down to argue in favour of the production, and he then set two cases aside to be heard upon appeal.

14408. Do you recollect the case alluded to in which I came down?—No, I was not there at that time; that was previous to my attending.

14409. Were you present at the cases which he rejected for the purpose of appeal?—I was.

14411. Chairman.] By whom was the appeal made?—By the conservative party; he rejected them for the purpose of appealing; he had admitted about 20 upon that sessions before. Mr. Pigott and Mr. Hudson came down to argue it; and then it was agreed that two should be rejected, on the understanding that the opposite party would appeal, and try the question; and that any freemen passing in the meantime their certificate, should be stayed till these appeals were decided.

14412. Are you quite sure that it was declared by the party appealing that they were certain of a decision in their favour from the chief baron?—Certainly.

14413. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Who said that?—Mr. Hyndman and Mr. Collison, and all the parties in the room, and the clerks and all; it was a general shout, in fact.

14414. Chairman.] It was a sort of chorus of them all?—Yes, it was.

14415. What did they actually say?—That they were sure of a decision; that they would go before the chief baron; that they would not go before Mr. Crampton.

14416. That is, they put the chief baron on one side and Mr. Crampton on the other?—Yes.

14417. Did they mention any other judge?—No; we had appealed before to Mr. Crampton, in some other case, and they said, "We shall be sure to succeed before the chief baron.

14418. Why did you mention Mr. Justice Crampton?—We had appealed before before to the Court of King's Bench, and they said that they would not do that.

Mr. James Martin.

14419. Why did you appeal to Mr. Justice Crampton?—Because it was before him that it was heard; we wished to appeal to the King's Bench, some of us that did not understand the law, and afterwards, on inquiry, we found that we were wrong, and wished to have it before all the twelve judges if we could.

14420. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are you quite sure that Mr. Hyndman made that declaration, that they were certain of a decision in their favour from the chief baron?—Quite positive, it was made by them all.

14421. You have no doubt that Mr. Hyndman, the barrister, made that declaration in open court, that they were sure of a decision in their favour from the chief baron?—Yes, I think I have no doubt of it.

14422. Do you state that positively?—As positive as I can be of anything at this length of time.

14423. Then you state it positively, without any doubt?—The impression upon my mind is, that he did; I can say no more than that.

14424. Have you no doubt on your mind?—I have no doubt that it was said often in the court upon that day, and after.

14425. The question is with regard to that particular individual; do you state positively that Mr. Hyndman, the barrister, made that declaration in open court?—I think he did, but I would not like to state it positively.

14426. Mr. O'Connell.] Can you state positively that it was said in his presence?—Yes.

14427. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Who is Mr. Collison, the other gentleman?—He is an active agent for the conservative party.

14428. He is not a barrister?—No.

14429. Is he an attorney?—No.

14430. What is he?—He was a gauger, but I do not know what he is now.

14431. Where does he reside?—At Sandy Mount.

14432. What is his christian name?—Marcus, or Daniel Marcus.

14433. Are you prepared to state positively that that gentleman did state in open court, that they were sure of a decision from the chief baron?—Yes, I think I can.

14434. Do you mean to state it positively and beyond all doubt?—No; I cannot exactly say without doubt of any particular person.

14435. Will you now state any individual, respecting whom you are prepared to state positively that he did in court declare that they were sure of a decision from the chief baron?—No, I cannot, but it was said generally, by the party in court, in the hearing of them all.

14436. Can you name any human being who did, upon that day, or any other day, in court, make that declaration, that they were sure of a decision in their favour from the chief baron?—No; it never struck my mind to keep it so particularly, but I know it was the general assertion.

14437. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you state who of the conservative party were present?—Mr. Hyndman was always present; he must have been present. Mr. Collison was generally present; he must have been there. Mr. Ryan, another clerk of the conservative party, was also there.

14438. Chairman.] Did he state it?—I cannot fix upon any one positively; Mr. Dobbs can state that the court was a perfect bear-garden.

14439. Did Mr. Dobbs hear it?—He must have heard it.

14440. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] The court was a bear-garden, was it?—Sometimes.

14441. Mr. Hamilton.] Who else of the conservative party were there?—Counsellor Dolling, Counsellor Stokes, and Counsellor Daley were there sometimes; and it was a general boast on our side, "We will now hinder you from passing so many freemen, as we will get a decision of the court," and the other side said, "No, we are sure of a decision in our favour from the chief baron."

14442. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are you sure that the observation in court was, that they were sure of a decision in their favour, because the judge was in their favour; or was it that they were sure of a decision in their favour, because the point of law was with them?—I cannot state the words positively; but the impression upon my mind was, that they were sure of it from the judge.

14443. Do you mean to say that anybody said, that they were sure of it because because the chief baron was the judge, and that what they said was not that they were sure of it because the point of law was with them?—It is now a year ago, and it is impossible to charge my memory with the words, but the impression upon my mind is, that that was their expression.

14444. Do you mean to convey to the Committee that their expression was, that the lord chief baron would give a partial decision?—Not a partial one; but that they were sure of a decision upon their side.

14445. When your party stated that they were sure of a decision that would prevent the admission of so many freemen, was it because they thought the point of law was with them, or because they thought the judge would be favourable to them?—Because we thought, from the argument of the lawyers, that the point of law was decidedly in our favour.

14446. Why was not the observation made upon the other side, made in the same spirit?—I cannot tell.

14447. Will you state any one thing that was said, that would fix the meaning of the observation to imply anything but a conviction that the point of law was with them?—Even in private conversation, the gentlemen admitted that the point was clearly upon our side.

14448. What gentleman?—Mr. Hyndman; he admitted that Mr. Pigott's argument nearly convinced him of it.

14449. Did he admit that the point of law was with you?—He would not go so far as that, of course.

14450. Will you state what he did say?—I cannot.

14451. Did he ever say to you that the point of law was with you, and against them?—No; but he admitted that Mr. Pigott had made a most able argument, and had nearly convinced him.

14452. Then it had not quite convinced him?—It could not completely.

14453. Then, notwithstanding the great ability of Mr. Pigott's argument, Mr. Hyndman still remained unconvinced?—Of course.

14454. He gave you to understand so?—No.

14455. Did he give you to understand that he was convinced?—No opponent would do that.

14456. What do you understand by a gentleman saying that he is almost convinced; does that convey to your mind that he is entirely convinced?—If he was not so entirely opposed to me, it might convey the idea that he was entirely convinced.

14457. Did it convey to you more than that he was almost convinced?—It did; it conveyed to my mind that Mr. Pigott's argument had convinced him.

14458. Did any other counsel tell you that the point of law was with you?—No; the other counsel I very seldom spoke with.

14459. Did you hear any one of the conservative counsel admit to anybody that the point of law was with you?—No.

14460. Did you hear any one of the conservative party make the admission that the point of law was with you, nevertheless that they expected a decision in their favour?—No.

14461. Mr. Hamilton.] When did this private conversation with Mr. Hyndman take place; was it during the argument or after it?—It may have been that day or the next day, in remarking about the thing.

14462. Then it was a casual conversation?—Yes.

14463. Mr. O'Connell.] All you can say about it is, that it left an impression upon your mind, that Mr. Hyndman himself had a doubt upon the question unfavourable to his own clients?—It did; we were all of us conjecturing what Mr. Dobbs's decision would be after Mr. Pigott's first argument, and there seemed to me to be great doubt even upon Mr. Dobbs's mind.

14464. Since that decision of the chief baron, Mr. Dobbs considers the certificate of the town-clerk as conclusive?—He does.

14465. You have not the form of the certificate?—No; I never was able to have any one in my hands but one, and that I got rather by stealth.

14466. Have you got before you a note of the case of any freemen of whose case you made a note?—I have; on the 14th of November 1836 there came up to be registered John Wilson Barlow, solicitor, of No. 2, Upper Merrion-street.

14467. What right did he claim?—He came up as a cook, a freeman by birth.

Mr. James Martin.

14468. Did it appear at what time he got his certificate?—He was sworn the 14th of November 1836, the very day he came up.

14469. Do you know when he was admitted?—No; we were not allowed to ask any of those questions. I will read the questions he was asked.

14470. When did you make that entry?—The moment he spoke the words in court. He was examined by counsellor Curran: "Where do you reside?—No. 2, Upper Merrion-street.—Were you out of town the last six months in Kingstown; were others sworn along with you? There was: got the certificate this day in the presence of the lord mayor." The freeman's queries, No. 1, 2, and 3, were put to him. He refused to answer any of those questions, and each question was overruled by Mr. Dobbs. "When and where were you born? In Dublin, upwards of 30 years ago." Mr. Seton objected to 1 and 2. Mr. Curran: "Have you been sworn in the court of Chancery? I was." Mr. Curran objected from book Nos. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 9½, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17.

14471. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Will you state the objections made to that man?—Objection 1. "That the claimant's admission was honorary, and made since the 30th March 1831. 2. That the claimant's admission was occasional and void. 4. That the claimant is not, and has not, for the last six months been a resident of, or within seven statute miles of the place of election in the city, town, or borough. 5. That the claimant has not been for six months a resident freemen entitled to register." We say he was not a freeman till he had taken all the oaths; that was the argument of Mr. Pigott. "6. That the claimant has not proved that any right to freedom, as claimed by him, exists in the corporation. 7. That no such right to freedom as claimed exists in the corporation. 8. That the claimant has not duly proved a legal admission into the corporation. 9. That the claimant was admitted illegally, and in a batch. 9½. That the claimant has not duly proved his being sworn. 10. That the claimant was not duly sworn. 11. That claimant has not given due evidence as to the stamp duty on the entry of his admission. 12. That the claimant has not duly paid the stamp duty on his admission. 13. That the claimant had not any complete title when he gave notice of his intention to register. 14. That the claimant had not any complete title when the registry sessions commenced. 15. That the claimant has not given due notice of his intention to register."

14472. What evidence do you and your employers require of the man being sworn besides the certificate?—Before the decision we require to see his roll, to see his beseech, to see the clerk of the peace's books.

14473. You do not consider the certificate of the proper officer as evidence of it?—Not the certificate of the town-clerk.

14474. Do you know that the town-clerk is the officer of the corporation for those purposes?—Yes, but as far as I understand, he is not the officer of the guild; we wanted to see that he is properly admitted into the guild first.

14475. Do you know that there exists a considerable interval of time frequently between the admission of a member into a corporation and his being sworn?—I heard from some of them that as much as ten years have elapsed; I know it from nothing but their own evidence, for any information upon any subject I could not get.

14476. Mr. O'Connell.] At whose office did you apply for information? I applied to the town-clerk's office for information.

14477. Did you offer to pay any fees that they might require for searches?—I never did; they would not tell us anything at all. We thought it useless to make any offer of that kind.

14478. Mr. Hamilton.] Were those entries made at the time?—Just as the gentleman swore them; they were just done as the person was upon the table.

14479. Mr. O'Connell.] Mr. Collison, whom you mentioned, is employed by the conservative party to look for freemen and attend at the registry?—To attend at the registry, and do everything; he is a very active man.

14480. Have you known any other case?—Here is Thomas Lapham. "14th November, 1836: Thomas Lapham, a shearman, admitted a freeman by birth; lives at Newmarket. Was sworn 31st October 1836. His name is Thomas Burton Lapham, but signs Thomas Lapham. Where do you reside? Newmarket Coombe; is a silk-weaver.—Is there any other Newmarket in the liberty? No; was born in Dublin in 1813.—Who gave you that certificate? Do not know his name; the lord mayor was present, and also Mr. Collison." Then Mr. Curran asked him the freemen's questions Nos. 1, 2, and 3, which he refused refused to answer, and the questions were overruled.—Do you know Henry Lapham? He is my father. Was for the last six months within seven miles of this place. He and his father were admitted freemen on the same day; his father was registered and admitted here on Saturday last. Mr. Seton objected to his passing, as he was sworn the same day as his father. Mr. Curran called on the barrister to reject this man. Others were sworn along with you. Objected by Mr. J. A. Curran from book Nos. 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 9½, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, and No. 18, that the claimant's admission to his freedom was fraudulent, inasmuch as he has sworn that Henry Lapham (who registered his vote on Saturday), his certificate bears date the 31st of October 1836; he also swore that his father was sworn on the same day before him, and that Henry Lapham was his father."

Mr. James Martin.

14481. Mr. Lefroy.] In those two instances, are the Committee right in understanding that the statement there made was, that having been admitted in right of birth upon statements upon oath, they claimed to be registered as freemen by right of birth?—Yes; people come forward; they are put upon a table; their name and their certificate are produced; their name is read out, and we then ask them those questions, and that is overruled; we then try to find out whether they actually resided at the place that appears in the printed list.

14482. Mr. O'Connell.] Are you allowed to examine them upon their oath as to the time of their birth?—The time of their birth we are, if we can prove whether they are of age; we are not allowed to ask any question that touches their admission as freemen, but only as to their actual residence and age.

14483. Mr. Lefroy.] In those instances you have read, were not they examined by the registering barrister, and sworn to their claim as freemen in right of birth?—So far as the parchment is produced, and that is all that we can ask; and he allows us to ask, when were you sworn, and he answers, on such a day.

14484. Does not the claimant state that he is a freeman in right of birth?—No, he answers nothing as to his freedom at all; if we can knock him aside, by proving anything wrong in his notice, we do so.

14485. Mr. O'Connell.] The certificate is considered conclusive?—It is; as to his right of freedom it is conclusive.

14486. Mr. Lefroy.] Does the certificate state the right in virtue of which he is admitted a freeman?—Yes.

14487. Mr. O'Connell.] And then the fact of the right is taken conclusively from the certificate?—Yes.

14488. And all examination upon the subject is precluded?—Yes; we can only examine him as to his age and his residence, to make out whether he is the identical person or not.

14489. All that you are allowed to examine is to find out a variance between the notice of registry and the claimant?—Yes.

14490. Mr. Hamilton.] With respect to that case of the admission of a father and son upon the same day, was that stated in consequence of a question put by you?—We sometimes put a question suddenly to them, and before they can be cautioned on the opposite side they answer it; it is a rule to make a kind of a run on the opposite side to hinder the question, and whoever is the most active succeeds.

14491. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You try to put the question as quickly as you can?—Yes; and then when we got the answer we kept them to it.

14492. Chairman.] Did he ever make a mistake in answering these speedy questions?—Of course they are corrected afterwards if they do; he did not say it was a mistake in that instance.

14493. Mr. O'Connell.] Is there any other case?—Here is one rejected the day after the certificate was brought in: Simon Forrest, a freeman by birth, 15th November 1836; he handed up a certificate in a hurry, and immediately on looking at the certificate it was seen that there was nothing in it. Mr. Collison went out of the court, and returned with a perfect certificate, but acknowledged it was done in the absence of the clerks of the peace or their deputy: rejected him. It was brought into court, and when it came to be read it was a perfect blank.

14494. Can you state whether it was admitted that these certificates were signed by the clerk of the peace, and left at the office for the person to call for them?—

them?—I know that it is admitted in some of the cases, but without looking through the cases I cannot state which they are.

14495. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you mean that there was no signature to it?—There was no writing in it.

14497. Mr. Hamilton.] Was the claimant's name in the certificate?—I cannot say that, but it was admitted that it was a blank certificate. "A certificate was brought in, which was a blank, for the day on which he was sworn; Mr. Collison brought it out of court, and returned with it perfect, but acknowledged it was done in the absence of the clerks of the peace, or their deputy; the barrister rejected him."

14498. You do not know in what respect it was blank, whether it was the date or the right?—No; here is another case: "John Meathe, victualler-butcher, freeman from service, sworn 31 October 1836; there were others sworn along with him. He is asked, 'Who gave you the certificate? Never saw him before or since.' Mr. George Magrath, the deputy clerk of the peace, swears that it was signed by Mr. Archer. Meathe got the certificate in William-street, at the Assembly House. 'It is in the same state now as when you got it? Every word now in it was in it then.—Was that out of your possession since you got it? He refused to answer.—Did you put any private mark on it? It is the same; put no mark.' Again asked, 'Have you any private mark on it?' Court ruled he should answer.—Answer: 'Put no private mark on it.—Has it left your possession since you received it at the Assembly House? No answer.'—Mr. Magrath swore the body of the certificate is written by Mr. Grabham, one of the town-clerks. Meathe got that certificate Monday fortnight. 'Has it been out of your possession since? Declined to answer.' Then, in the latter end he says, 'It was out of my possession; I gave it in court to Mr. Collison; I got it this day.'" So that it appeared from this that when the persons were sworn in Mr. Collison attended before the lord mayor, and that he took all the certificates, and never gave them back again till they appeared in court to register. That was the general evidence.

14499. Is there any other case?—Here is the case of "Matthew H. Black, gentleman, freeman, merchant, by birth, the 17th of November 1836. He was sworn 31st of October 1836; examined by Mr. Curran: lives at No. 20, Ruthervine's Road since his birth; was born in the year 1814; there were others sworn along with him. 'Who gave you that certificate? Do not know.' Mr. Collison took it from him and did not return it until this day. 'Did you examine that the day you got it? I did.—Was it exactly as it now is? It appears to be so; am not sure it is the same; it might or might not; never saw it since until this day.—Mr. Magrath examined: 'Will not swear that the certificate was perfect at the time it was signed, and that the word, "Michaelmas term" was or was not in it at the time it was signed.' Black swears he did not bring it here this day, nor did he produce it here, nor does he know who produced it, or who brought it here. Mr. Collison refused to be sworn as to whether it was altered or filled since he got it. Mr. Curran asked the freeman's questions, Nos. 1, 2 and 3; refused to answer; over-ruled. Mr. Seton made the usual objections from book of freemen's objections. Mr. Curran made objections from book Nos. 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 9½, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17." That is just the usual course.

14500. Mr. Lefroy.] Is the certificate verified?—No; the production of the certificate is considered quite sufficient.

14501. Mr. Hamilton.] Did not Magrath swear that there was no alteration in Meathe's case?—"Mr. Magrath swore that the body of the certificate was written by Mr. Grabham, one of the town-clerks." The next is the 17th of November 1836: "James Connor, Upper Temple-street, gentleman, carpenter, freeman by birth, examined by Mr. Curran; sworn 4th of November 1836; has resided at Delgany in lodgings." Now they argued that Delgany is more than seven miles from the city of Dublin.

14502. Mr. O'Connell.] In point of fact it is?—It is more than 10 miles. "Slept more frequently in Dublin than Delgany; has slept for three weeks in Delgany; his mother had a cottage at Delgany; did not come to reside permanently in Dublin until the 1st of November. Were others sworn along with with you? Yes.—Does not know who gave it to him at the Assembly House; gave it to Mr. Collison; would not swear it is the same; it was perfect in all its parts; got it in William-street Assembly House.—Mr. Curran asked the usual questions, which were, as usual, overruled.—When and where were you born? In Dublin, 14th of November, 1815."—We argued that he could not be of age at the time he put his notice upon the list; it was self-evident that he was not. "Would not swear he was born before the 19th of November 1815; refused to answer. Is there any record kept in the family of his age? Never saw any; his mother always told him that was his age.—Mr. Seton made objections from book, and that he was a minor. Mr. Curran made objections from book, freemen's objections, Nos. 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 9½, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, and also that at the time of his admission and swearing in, and of his giving notice, of his being a minor, and also a minor at the commencement of the registering sessions." He was admitted. According to his own showing, he said he was born the 14th of November 1815. Now he was sworn upon the 4th of November; that was certainly, according to his own showing, 10 days before he was of age.

14503. Chairman.] Do you mean to state that he was admitted upon the 14th of November?—He was registered upon the 19th of November, and he swore that he was born upon the 14th of November 1815, so that he could not be 21 years of age on the 4th, which was the day he was sworn; it wanted 10 days.

14504. Mr. Hamilton.] Are you sure that that is correct, because all the others were sworn upon the 14th?—I am positive of it.

14505. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did you write this at the time?—I wrote it upon the spot; I frequently read it out for the witness before he leaves the table.

14506. Do you write as fast as a man speaks?—No; there were a great many questions I did not take.

14507. Of course you do not write everything as it is said?—No.

14508. You were therefore obliged to trust to your recollection?—Never to my recollection, because I put down the exact fact that he swore to.

14509. Have you never made a mistake in writing down anything?—I suppose I have.

14510. Then, is it impossible that you may have made a mistake in writing this?—Not as to date.

14511. Have you never made a mistake in writing a date?—I suppose I have.

14512. Then what peculiarity is there in this which makes you certain that you could not have made a mistake here in writing the date?—Because a witness generally takes nearly 25 minutes; I insisted upon their putting the questions slow enough for me to write them.

14513. It is impossible then you can have made a mistake in writing it down?—Yes, when it is put so slow as that. When I ask a man, "When were you sworn?" and he says, "the 4th of November," it is impossible I can make a mistake.

14514. Do you mean to say that it is impossible you can make a mistake in any of those entries?—No, it is not; anything is possible.

14515. Is it impossible that you could ever misapprehend what a man said?—I suppose I may; but I often asked a question of a witness over and over again.

14516. Did you ever make a mistake as to inferring the answer that was given?—I may or I may not.

14517. Has your ear ever deceived you as to the sound between "fourteen" and "four"?—I do not think it has.

14518. Is it possible that it might have been a mis-hearing?—It is impossible.

14519. Is it impossible that the note you have made may not be strictly accurate?—It is hardly possible; it is possible, but it is not probable.

14520. People have often an affection for what they produce themselves. Now, making all allowance for your affection for your own notes on that account, must you not admit that there may be inaccuracies in them?—We were taking it down on both sides, and we often compared the dates and such things, and checked it in that way.

14521. You said that you generally read it out?—I often read it out in court, "You say you were sworn upon the 4th of November; is that so?"

Mr. James Martin.

25 May 1837.

14522. Are you prepared to state that you read any one of those entries to the barrister in court?—No.

14523. Are you prepared to point out any one entry in that book that you read to a witness?—No.

14524. You did not always read it, either to the barrister or to the witness?—Certainly not, if there was no dispute.

14525. Chairman.] You stated that there were only two questions which you were allowed to investigate with regard to the freemen; one is with regard to their age, and the other is with regard to their residence, and that the question with respect to their freedom was concluded by the production of the certificate?—Yes.

14526. Do you mean to state that the discussion upon those two questions only generally took 25 minutes in each case?—Yes, and sometimes a great deal longer. When we want to ask a question, sometimes there is an hour's argument whether it will be admitted.

14527. Do you mean to say that upon every individual case an argument arises whether you shall ask more questions with regard to freedom than the simple verification of the certificate?—No, not on every case.

14528. Is there not a regular course of examination objected to by one party, and laid down by the barrister as objectionable?—Yes.

14529. Did you try to enter upon that course of examination in each individual case?—If such a case as this arises, where this gentleman gave his notice as living in Upper Temple-street, Dublin, and it turned out that he resided in Dalgany, then I suppose that would take half an hour, or perhaps an hour.

14530. Do you in each case try to overrule the decision of the barrister, as to your not entering into any discussion upon the right of freedom?—No; since the judge's decision, we took that as a matter settled.

14531. Then the whole 25 minutes is spent in the discussion as to residence, as to age, and as to identity?—As to anything that appears, either name or age, or whether he is the identical same person, or anything by which we think we can set him aside.

14532. Then, in point of fact, there is considerable examination in those cases?—Sometimes, and sometimes not.

14533. If they take an average of 25 minutes, is not that an extended examination?—No; the writing it down takes a great deal of time.

14534. Mr. O'Connell.] You put the questions in every case?—We do; in every case we read out those questions in full, and we read out all the objections in full twice. Mr. Seaton reads them, and I take them down from him; and Mr. Curran makes the same objections, and I take them down from him also.

14535. Why should two parties representing the same interest make the same objections?—It has been done; I cannot tell the reason.

14536. Mr. O'Connell.] Mr. Seaton was employed by one body, and Mr. Curran by another?—Yes.

14537. Chairman.] Have the two bodies the same political principles who thus severally act at the registry?—They have different counsel, and different persons acting for them; but they all support the liberal, and oppose the other side.

14538. Mr. O'Connell.] You acted for the Trades' Union and the General Association; Mr. Seaton, and those acting with him, acted on behalf of the Central Club?—Yes.

14539. They had a different staff from yours?—Yes.

14540. And that multiplied the questions?—It did.

14541. Chairman.] Is that multiplication of questions still going on?—No; the Central Club has ceased to attend.

14542. Mr. O'Connell.] Besides those questions, there arose arguments?—There did; as to identity, perhaps, two men being in the list of the same name.

14543. Chairman.] Then the admission of the freemen is a longer process altogether than the admission of the 10 l. householders?—No, I do not think so.

14544. Then are there no votes registered in Dublin that do not take 25 minutes in discussion?—The Committee will be able to judge, when I say that the average of registry is about 20 a day, and they sit from 10 o'clock till 4, and it it was as much labour as it is possible for a human being to undergo. Mr. Dobbs has a vast deal of patience.

14545. Mr. Hamilton.] You state that occasionally you read out the notes you had made?—Yes; if the witness says, "I did not say so," or the opposite party says such a thing was not sworn.

14546. Can you state whether the accuracy of your note has been ever disputed?—Certainly, it has been by the opposite party; if a man said, that was not what I meant to swear, I corrected it.

14547. Mr. O'Connell.] In what month was Mr. Connor sworn in?—The 4th of November 1836.

14548. Have you any other case?—Here is "William E. Custis, saddler, 17th November, freeman by birth; sworn 7th November 1836. Examined by Mr. Curran; signs his name William E. Custis. 'Were others sworn along with you? Perhaps so.' The question was several times repeated: 'Perhaps there were; I don't know.' Mr. Curran says, "Were you drunk? Perhaps I was;' has lived at Mary-street better than a year; has not resided out of town in the last six months; the lord mayor was present when he was sworn.—'Where were you born? I won't answer.—Where were you born? [second time] I won't answer.' The barrister decided he should answer. 'Was born in the county of Meath.—When were you born? Better than 22 or 23 years ago.—To the best of your knowledge, what year were you born? Won't answer.' The barrister decided that he should answer. 'To the best of your knowledge, what year were you born? [the second time] Won't answer.—Do you swear you don't know the year you were born? I suppose 1809.' Mr. Curran asked the freemen's queries, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, which he refused to answer, and the questions were overruled. Mr. Seton made the usual objections from book. Mr. Seton asked, 'Were others sworn along with you?' Refused to answer otherwise than 'Perhaps.'—'Do you swear you cannot fix a more distinct answer? I cannot.' Mr. Seaton made the usual objections from book of objections." He was admitted.

14549. Is there any other case?—Here is another case: "Mervyn Paget Crofton, Barrack-street, gentleman, freeman by birth; sworn Christmas, 1835." That is the form in which it is in the certificate, when it is in fact in May; it says Christmas 1836; and then it says, "Sworn 9th March." He is asked, "'Were you rejected before? I will not answer you.' Has lived in Barrack-street these six months; is assistant-inspector of pipe water; believes others were sworn along with him; was, he believes, born in Barrack-street; believes 1815. Does not recollect seeing any record in any book or Bible; his father told him the 12th of November was his birth-day; cannot say who gave him the certificate. Mr. Curran asked the freemen's queries, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, which he refused to answer, and the questions were overruled. Mr. Seton made objections from the book of freemen's objections in answer; Mr. Curran made objections from the freemen's book, Nos. 1, 2. 6, 7, 8, 9, 9½, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. 17. Objected also that the claimant refused to answer the question put, and that at the time of being admitted, and of his serving notice, and at the commencement of the present registering sessions, he was a minor."

14550. Chairman.] When was he admitted upon the registry?—On the 18th of November 1836.

14551. Mr. O'Connell.] Is there any other case you think it material to mention?—There is "Samuel Parker, shoemaker, George's-street, south, a freeman by service, registered the 21st November 1836, sworn the 14th November 1836. Mr. M'Grath proved the certificate to be signed by Mr. Laing; he is a shoemaker; others were sworn along with him; resided in Dublin these last six months. 'Who gave you the certificate? Do not know his name; at the Assembly House, William-street.' Mr. Collison then took it from him and kept it since. 'Is the certificate precisely in the same state as when you received it? I think it is; I got the certificate in court, this morning.—Where were you born? I believe in Knutsford or Macclesfield, about 1806.'" We made the usual objections against him, and that he must have been a minor, as he could not tell us when he was born, only that it was in the year 1806. He passed.

14552. By what right did he claim?—Service.

14553. He was a shoemaker by trade?—Yes; and also of the shoemaker's guild.

14554. Is there any other case you have made a note of, as containing any peculiarity?—

peculiarity ?—Here is " John Brown, of Redmond's Hill, in the trimming business, carpenter, freeman by birth, registered the 21st of November 1836, was sworn 31st October 1836. Examined by Mr. Curran. Others were sworn along with him. 'Who gave you that certificate ? I do not know.' Thinks there is no alteration in it since ; was born in the town of Wicklow ; does not know when, but it was much more than 21 years ago." Mr. Curran asked the freemen's queries, and he would not answer, and his evidence was just concluded, when some man in the court told us that he was not the same man at all. He was questioned, " Don't you sleep in Ranelagh ? I do.—Had you any agreement with your son about giving him up possession of the house ? I had not ; I never gave him it up.—Did not your son register out of the house ? He did.—Did you pay the rent ? I did.—Did your son pay the rent ? He did not.—Was the house ever your son's ? Never ; we had merely an agreement about the business ; does not know whether he was doing business for his son or not on the 17th of November last.—Suppose your son swore, six months back, that the house was his, would it be true or false ? I can't say ; he might be mistaken.—Is it more or less than a month since you went to live at Ranelagh ? I cannot tell.—Is it more or less than six months ? It may ; I cannot say.—Is it more or less than 12 months ? It may ; I cannot tell ; it is more, I believe, than 12 months since I went to Ranelagh.—Was it not by your son's permission you slept in it ? No." He was passed. I see a note I put to it in the May Register, 1836 : " John Brown, No. 3, Redman's-hill, who registered in May 1836, as a householder : his father has sworn the house is, and was his, not his son's."

14555. Mr. Hamilton.] Ranelagh is nearer than seven miles to Dublin ?—Yes, it is ; but he had described himself as John Brown of Redman's Hill, and of course it would be impossible to examine whether it was fictitious, if he was living at Ranelagh.

14556. Chairman.] Then that examination went rather to invalidate the son's vote ?—Both ; it went to invalidate his vote and his son's also.

14557. Might not he reside without being a householder ?—He must reside and be a householder.

14558. Might not he be in lodgings ?—He may reside as a freeman anywhere, if he gives his true residence ; but the evidence goes to show that he did not reside at that place.

14559. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Were you fishing then to get evidence to invalidate the son's vote ?—No ; to knock off his own. He gave his residence as Redman's Hill, and in answer to the first question, he swore that he was living at Ranelagh. The whole thing came out in the course of the cross-examination.

14560. Mr. O'Connell.] You took the general objections to him as a freeman ?—Yes.

14561. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you write all that down in court ?—Yes.

14562. In this bear-garden you have spoken of ?—Yes.

14563. Do you think that the circumstance of writing in the midst of a bear-garden is calculated to produce accuracy in the notes ?—No ; there must be a considerable deal more evidence than what I have put down, a great deal more in the wording of it.

14564. Then you did not take down the words of the witness ?—I put down exactly the substance of what he swore, not the identical words of all they say.

14565. What you enter in that book are your own conclusions and constructions ?—No : if a man is asked, Do you sleep in the house ? I put down I do or I do not, whichever he says. I put first the question and then I put the answer.

14566. Do you in all cases write down the answer the witness gives in his own language ?—I do, as near as I can.

14567. Then you have written the whole of what was said by the witness upon that occasion ?—I think I have, pretty much.

14568. How long did that examination take ?—I cannot tell.

14569. Then in those cases where the examination takes 25 minutes, do you write down all the answers that the witness gives ?—Yes, I think pretty much so.

14570. In the language that he utters ?—Yes, pretty much.

14571. Then what did you mean just now by saying that what you had written down was not what the witness had said, but the substance of it ?—Perhaps I might not exactly put down all that he said ; sometimes the witness fenced fenced a long time with the question before he gave a direct answer; and when at last he gave an answer, then I put it down.

Mr. James Martin.

14572. Then you did not take down all that he said?—When he gave an answer I put it down.

14573. Mr. O'Connell.] He said many things that you did not put down?—Yes; many times they said I was not authorized to ask the questions, and I would not put down all that.

14574. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] All that you write down is what you consider the answer?—What any one would consider the answer.

14575. Do you consult any one what you are to write down?—No; but what is obvious to any man of sense to be the answer.

14576. Does the witness say much that you do not take down?—Nothing that I conceive to be the answer.

14577. You put down what you conceive to be the answer?—Yes.

14578. You do not put down anything he says that you do not conceive to be the answer?—No; if he is joking or saying something impudent to myself, I do not put that down; everything that I conceive to be the answer I put down.

14579. Mr. O'Connell.] You do not make it your object to put down all that he says, but his reply to the particular point that is asked?—Yes; if I was to put down all that he said, we would not get through much.

14580. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] And therefore you do not put down all that he says?—I put down the exact answer.

14581. Word for word, as he delivers it?—Pretty much so; to the best of my judgment and to the best of my belief, it is the answer he gives.

14582. In the words in which he delivers it?—As near as I can.

14583. Considering that you go through this process of writing down the evidence in this bear-garden, do you think it is likely that what you have written down in all cases is precisely what the witness has said?—I think it is his answer, precisely his answer.

14584. Who is the principal bear in this garden?—They are all bears alike in it, I think.

14585. I heard that somebody there, of the name of Martin, had made a great deal of noise in it?—There is no Martin but me.

14586. Do you make much noise there?—When it is necessary I do; I am not very modest when it is necessary to be otherwise.

14587. You often conceive it necessary to make a noise there?—When there is any unfair opposition, I conceive it my duty to uphold persons to the best of my power.

14588. Does that produce this bear-garden?—Very often.

14589. When you are engaged in those laudable endeavours to do justice to your side, are you at the time writing down those notes?—No.

14590. Is it during the examination of witnesses that this takes place?—Yes; if there is any dispute, the writing down of the notes ceases till that dispute is arranged.

14591. You were understood to say that you sometimes read to the barrister what you had written?—If any of the opposite party say the man swore so and so, and I say he did not swear so, then I take up the book and read what I conceive he swore.

14592. Do you, upon any other occasions, read what you have taken down to the barrister?—No, unless he refers to a former case as a precedent, I look out for it. If he said that he admitted a man under such circumstances upon such a day, then I look out for it, and read it in open court; but I never read anything for him as an individual privately, but upon the table.

14593. Mr. O'Connell.] Your book does not purport to be a report of all that takes place in each case, but particular points?—Particular points of the freemen only.

14594. And in the cases of the freemen it does not purport to be a report of everything that is said respecting each freeman, but of particular points that you think important?—Particular points that we conceive to be of importance.

14595. Not the entire, but particular points?—Yes.

14596. Do you write with a view to be able to give evidence upon oath before a Committee of the House of Commons?—Certainly.

14597. You

14597. You know that that is one of your objects in taking down those notes?—Yes.

14598. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are you prepared to say that nothing has ever been said by a person coming forward to register, having the effect of qualifying in any respect his answer, which you have omitted to take down?—No, certainly; I think it would be very dishonest if I did so.

14599. Are you then prepared to say that you have in no instance omitted anything which tended to qualify the answer which had been previously given by the person under examination?—Certainly not.

14600. You are prepared to state that positively?—Positively; I would conceive it very dishonest if I suppressed the least item in his favour.

14601. The question does not refer to any intentional suppression; but considering the circumstances under which you made the notes, and the state of this court, brought to the state of a bear-garden, which you say it so constantly is?—Not constantly, but often.

14602. What do you call often?—Perhaps twice a week; whenever there is any dispute.

14603. How often is that; does it happen every day?—No.

14604. Is there loud talking there every day?—Pretty loud; not disputing; not what I call a dispute.

14605. What do you call a dispute?—A difference of opinion.

14606. Does that difference of opinion manifest itself in loud talking?—Generally.

14607. Does what you call a "bear-garden" occur every day?—No.

14608. That occurs about twice a week?—I cannot give any particular time.

14609. Perhaps it is more often?—Perhaps so.

14610. Do you think it is?—I cannot charge my memory.

14611. If it happens twice a week, would you not call that pretty constantly?—No, not at a registry in Ireland.

14612. Taking it as occurring twice a week, are you prepared to say, without imputing any intentional omission at all, that you did not necessarily omit many things which dropped from the witnesses which would have the effect of qualifying the answers?—I am sure not; because I am sure I would be as anxious, if I thought a man had got himself into an extraordinary position by his swearing, to give him every satisfactory opportunity of explaining it as he would himself.

14613. The question does not refer to any intentional omission; but as to the matter of fact, whether you are prepared to verify the reports of cases which you have read to-day to this extent, to affirm positively that in those several cases you have omitted no answer which could have the effect of qualifying the answer previously given by the witness?—I am.

14614. You are positively certain you have omitted nothing of the kind?—I can answer, that when I took down the notes at the time, I was taking them under the conviction that I might have to swear to them; I took them down with all the accuracy and solemnity of a man wishing to do right.

14615. Were you in the habit, before you took up this avocation, of reporting for the newspapers, or otherwise?—Never.

14616. Have you ever reported the proceedings of a court of justice?—Never.

14617. Have you ever reported any examination of witnesses?—No, only for amusement; I never did it professionally.

14618. Are you prepared to state, that you are so skilful and so expeditious and accurate in taking down notes of proceedings of this description, as to make it impossible that you can have omitted a single answer that could have the effect of qualifying the evidence?—No; but to the best of my knowledge, and the best of my belief, I gave it every care that I could, under the idea that I was doing a thing which I would have to swear to; under that feeling, I did it as carefully as I possibly could.

14619. You said you were a commercial agent; what is the nature of your business?—Selling goods on commission; I was originally a merchant.

14620. Are you now engaged in selling goods upon commission?—Yes, whenever I get them to sell.

14621. Chairman.] Are you a voter of the city of Dublin?—No.

14622. Or a freeman?—No.

14623. Or a householder?—No.

14624. Mr.

Mr. James Martin.

25 May 1837.

14624. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] In what right do you administer the questions in court?—As the agent of others; at every sessions some of the liberal party come forward, and appoint me their agent.

14625. You are not an attorney?—No.

14626. Have you had your name inserted in the notices, as if you meant to register?—Yes.

14627. How often have you done that?—I believe every sessions after the first.

14628. Did you ever claim to register?—No.

14629. For what purpose did you enter your name in the notices?—The first time I put down my name I intended to register. When I attended the registries I found that a person situated as I was could not register; I continued my name in, but I never made any effort to register.

14630. You ascertained, the very first time you put down your name, that you were not entitled to register?—Yes.

14631. And yet you have repeated in every instance since the putting down your name in the list?—Yes.

14632. Did you do that thinking that you had a bonâ fide right to be registered?—The first time I did, but not afterwards.

14633. Then, for what purpose did you do it upon each of those subsequent occasions?—It was stated in court, I believe the first time, that any claimant had a right to ask any question.

14634. Then, it was for the purpose of giving yourself an apparent right to interfere, and to put questions, that you inserted your name upon each occasion subsequent to the first?—Yes, it was partly that.

14635. Was not that a false pretence?—No; there was an objection made by different persons to my appearing in court, and the barrister decided that I appeared as agent for a large body of persons, and that others appeared upon the opposite side, and that we were both entitled to ask questions.

14636. Having ascertained that you were a person that could not register, was not it putting yourself forward in a false character to insert your name in the subsequent notices?—No, it was not; I just inserted my name, and that I claimed as a householder.

14637. Did not you, by the notice given to the proper officer, purport to be a person intending to come forward and register?—Yes.

14638. Did you intend to come forward and register?—If I could have come to terms with my landlord, I would.

14639. Did you try in each instance to make that arrangement with your landlord, when you put down your name in the list of notices to register?—Once I did.

14640. Then you did not intend upon the other occasions to come forward and register?—No.

14641. Then you put yourself forward in a false character?—No; I gave myself no character but what I actually had. I made no claim; I did not go upon the table.

14642. Is not the notice the notice of persons intending to register?—One half of them never come up.

14643. Is not the notice the notice of persons saying that they intend to register?—Yes.

14644. Did you intend to register?—The first time, but not afterwards.

14645. Then that notice is false?—So far it is.

14646. Who is your landlord?—Miss Butler.

14647. What do you mean by saying, "If you could have made an arrangement with your landlord which should enable you to register"?—If I could have bought her interest in the house (I occupy the upper part of the house, and have the dominion of the hall-door, and I pay her that amount which would qualify me to register; but she having reserved a part of the house to herself, I could not take the oath as a householder).

14648. You put down your name as householder?—I did; several had done the same thing in the city.

14649. Is that person your landlord now?—Yes; she resides in the county of Wicklow; she reserves a room in that house for herself.

14650. How long have you been her tenant?—Upwards of three years, I think; she took the house about a week before I took the upper part.

169

Mr. James Marti

14651. Were you ever tenant to a person of the name of Tees?—No.

14652. Have you ever had any dealing with Mr. Tees?—Yes; I never had any dealing with him, but he is clerk in an establishment that I have served.

14653. What establishment is that?—Burns', in Abbey-street, wholesale glass business and chemical line.

14654. Is he the man of business of that establishment?—He is not the manager of it.

14655. In what capacity is he?—I believe he is salesman; I think it is Cookson & Co. now.

14656. Were you tenant of those people who were concerned in that house, or any of them?—Never.

14657. You are sure that you never was a tenant of Mr. Tees?—Positive.

14658. Did you ever apply to him for employment?—No.

14659. Did you apply to him to give you goods on commission?—I sold for a house that he did business for, but not to him.

14660. Did you ever apply to him to give you goods on commission?—No: unless he being clerk to another.

14661. Did you apply to him to give you goods on commission in any capacity at all?—No, I applied to the house, but not to him; he might have been in the office at the time, but it was to the house that I applied.

14662. Did you ever represent to him that you were a person of extensive influence; and that if he gave you goods to sell upon commission, you would effect extensive sales for him?—I might to any house that I wanted to sell for.

14663. Did you to Mr. Tees?—I do not think I did.

14664. Could you make such a representation to him and forget it?—I might.

14665. When was it that you had any communication with the house in which Mr. Tees is concerned?—I believe I have not sold anything for them for 18 months.

14666. Mr. O'Connell.] What did you sell for them then?—Soda and glass, and white lead, and any articles that they sold.

14667. Were they paid for, those goods?—Some were paid for and some not.

14668. Are you responsible for them?—No.

14669. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did you get goods to sell upon commission?—I did.

14670. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you get possession of the goods?—No.

14671. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Did you sell the goods?—Yes.

14672. You received the proceeds?—No; I gave them the bills, or whatever settlements I got.

14673. Did you give them the value for all the goods you sold on their account?—I did, unless about 20 l., which they have my bill for, or 19 l.

14674. You gave them value for all the goods you sold on their account?—Yes.

14675. Was your first dealing with that house 18 months ago?—I think it is two years and a half ago, or three years ago.

14676. Have you had more than one dealing of the kind with them?—Ten or twelve.

14677. And you gave them the value for all the goods you sold on their account?—I gave them all the settlements I got except 20 l.

14678. Did you get settlements for all the goods you sold?—Yes.

14679. And you gave them settlements for all the goods you sold except 20 l.?—Yes.

14680. Are you now indebted to them in a sum of over 80 l.?—No; I will explain what that refers to. I do not know where I met Mr. Burns, but he asked me to sell goods for him. I told him that the city of Dublin was in such a state that I would not take upon myself to say whether they were safe or not; but if I sold any goods I would call upon him and let him know who the persons were, and if he chose, to deliver them or not. I sold 700 l. or 800 l. for him, or 1,000 l., and never any goods came into my hands. He delivered them; he made whatever inquiries he liked about them. If I could get more than the price he was allowed to charge, he was content. I might make as much as I liked. I handed him the settlements as I got them; he wished me to draw them, and I drew them. Then in the crash there have come some failures; failures; he may have lost a couple of hundred pounds, but he never looked to me for it. There is the balance of another part, which I bought up on my own account, for which he is my creditor.

Mr. James Martin.

14681. What do you call the crash?—The failures in the city of Dublin. He arrested me for 80 l., and that on an endorsement which he said I was bound for; I said I was not. It was one of those houses to whom I had sold 200 l. worth of goods; their circumstances were getting rather embarrassed. I had heard that, and I wished of course, as agent, to get Mr. Burns out of it as well as I could. I called on the person some days before the bill was due, as I was intimate with the man, and asked him what he could do. He said he had, I believe it was, a 60 l. bill, or 70 l., which would be due in a few days; that he had the entire of the money but 15 l., and that if I could get him a good bill discounted, he could punctually pay the bill. I certainly thought that was a fair proposition as times were; I took a bill of Mr. Lynch's, a doctor in Kilkenny, and made the party endorse the bill. I brought the bill to Mr. Burns; I told Mr. Burns the circumstance, and reasoned with him, that it was better to get an additional security for the money, to shorten the thing. He first swore that he would not do it, but on reasoning with him, he said he would do it, if the man took goods for the remainder of the 40 l. I was wanting to leave the bill with him for 45 l.; he would not do it unless the man took goods at an additional price for the remainder. I went back to the man and told him the circumstance, and asked him if he would take the goods. He said, under the circumstances he was obliged to take it. I went back to Mr. Burns, got the money from him, left him the bill, went to the man, Mr. Mathers, he paid his bill coming due; and I believe at the lapse of 10 or 12 days afterwards Mr. Burns sent the goods direct to him, never coming into my hands at all. Being afraid that this bill might be a forgery, he said, "Martin, do you put your name to it." I considered that the bill came under my former agency, and that I was not accountable; but I never hesitated in putting my name to it. That was in April 1835. The bill was protested, and for nearly two years I never heard a word about it. I was served with the protest as a matter of course. It never was demanded of me, though I met the gentleman constantly. When I went to attend the registry (for Mr. Burns is a conservative), I met him one day in the street. "Oh!" said he, "you have turned patriot, Martin!" and then, the next morning, without a letter being written to me, to keep me from the registry, I was arrested for the money going out of the house. I gave bail instantly, not to be kept out of the court. I consulted some of my friends; they said I had no other proof but the person who was by when the transaction occurred, and that it was ten to one whether he would say that I was exonerated. They proceeded with the utmost hostility to execution. The attorney is Mr. Fitzgerald of Fleet-street. When I called upon him, he made an apology, and said that if he had known that I was the person, he would not have arrested me without writing to me. I told him how I was circumstanced; that I could not pay the money all at once, but that I did not wish to put myself under any compliment to Mr. Burns; that I would pay it by instalments, and I have paid it by instalments of 1 l. a month; I am now in course of paying 1 l. a month; but I would never have heard anything of it, had I not attended the registry. I never put one penny piece of the money in my pocket; but Mr. Burns decidedly said, "It is a good bill, I have had several of them before; let him take goods to the full amount." I understood that the man failed, and came out under the Insolvent Act. Since I have been here I have got word that Dr. Lynch had served notice at my place, that he had taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act. I have paid 20 l. at 1 l. a month; if I am going out of town I leave it with Mr. Fitzgerald a day or two before; but I have not property enough that I could take out of my current expenses 80 l. at once.

14682. Chairman.] When did that arrest take place?—About a year ago; it was the second registry I attended.

14683. When was that?—It was in April 1836.

14684. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] What was the writ marked for?—Forty-five pounds, I think.

14685. And the difference of the 80 l. was costs?—I have never been furnished with the bill of costs; but the attorney said it was 80 l.

14686. Was that demand a demand exclusive of the one which you mentioned before?—Yes; Cookson & Co. hold my bill for 20 l., or 19 l. 15 s.

Mr. James Martin.

14687. Are you rightly understood to have said, that the overture to employ you in selling goods upon commission proceeded from that house and not from you?—I do not know whether it was from me; I suppose I was anxious to get goods to sell upon commission, and I might have walked in and said "Can I do anything for you?"

14688. Are you at present engaged in any other business except superintending these registries for the General Association?—Not latterly; I have got none to do. Part of the business is carried on so high in Dublin, that those persons had nothing to give me to do.

14689. How long have you been disengaged from any other business than superintending the registries?—I have been attending at the registries for the Association only six months; I have been attending the registries of the city of Dublin two years, at my own sole expense.

14690. How long before six months ago was it that you ceased to have other business and occupation?—I believe I had not as much as I could live by after I had been about six months at the registry; before that I could live very profitably.

14691. You have not been engaged in transacting any other business?—I do a little, but not much; I transacted business up to the hour that I came here, whenever I got it to do.

14692. Did you get it to do?—I did, till within about two months; but since I have been engaged for the Association, I have not got much business.

14693. Before you were engaged in selling upon commission, had you any other business?—I was doing business for Mr. M'Kenny.

14694. Is that the gentleman that is engaged in the chemical works near Ballybalk Bridge?—It is.

14695. In what capacity were you then in his employment?—I was collector, salesman, traveller, and confidential examiner of the works; in fact, having the general guidance of the thing left to me generally as salesman, and travelling through the country as collector, to get orders and collect debts.

14696. When did that employment cease?—It ceased about a year ago; I stipulated that he should let me attend the registries every three months, and he was not satisfied with that.

14697. Then you continued in his service till about a year ago?—Till a year or a year and a half ago.

14698. Then you were engaged with him at the same time that you were engaged as commission-broker upon your own account?—Yes; my stipulation with him was, that if I could I might do anything for myself. We made a specific agreement for every thing. If he had a valuable parcel of goods that he wanted to sell, I had a commission; and if I travelled, I then had a commission, and was paid for my expenses and a commission according to the agreement; he is a man that must have his business done very exactly. We parted good friends, and I believe I could go back to him whenever I chose, and we are on perfectly good terms. He thought that I gave up too much of my time to the registry, and I was determined not to give it up.

14699. You are a very ardent politician?—Very.

14700. Very zealous in the cause of the Association?—No; of the country.

14701. The Association and the country in your view go hand in hand?—They do; their views on politics are the same as mine, and therefore I act with them.

14702. You are so zealous and so active in your political pursuits, that Mr. M'Kenny could not keep you?—Unless I attended constantly to his business. I found that I could not do it. I quitted Mr. M'Kenny's employment under the idea of going back to it as soon as the registry would be over. The registry lasted longer than I had any idea of; it lasted 45 days; and in consequence I called upon Mr. M'Kenny and said I could not go back to do his business.

14703. Mr. M'Kenny is a gentleman of liberal politics?—He is.

14704. Mr. O'Connell.] Is he a Protestant?—He is.

14705. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] But you went a little beyond him?—No; I believe believe his opinions on politics and mine agree exactly; but I could not mind his business and give my attention to the registry.

Mr. James Martin.

14706. Are you sure that nothing like the relation of landlord and tenant existed between you and Mr. Tees, or that house, or members of that house that you have spoken of?—Never; I never resided in any house of theirs.

14707. You owed nothing at all as a tenant to Mr. Tees, or to that house?—No.

14708. Is Mr. Tees head landlord to Miss Butler?—No; the Society for the Suppression of Vice is the head landlord of that house.

14709. Where is the house?—It is in York-road, just opposite the chapel.

14710. Opposite to what chapel?—To the Catholic chapel in Whitefriars-street; there are just three houses in the street; a Carmelite chapel; and being a quiet place and very small, I had set my eye upon it, and Miss Butler then took it, and the moment she took it, I took the upper part of the house.

14711. Has your report of the proceedings in the register court been impeached for its inaccuracy?—So far as regards the number that were passed in a day. They would shout out that they had a majority of 20. I looked at my list, and would say it is only 18; and, to my astonishment, I have seen in "Saunders," or in the "Mail," the next day, a majority of 30, when there was not 30 done altogether.

14712. Has the accuracy of your reports of cases that have occurred in court been impeached in the court itself?—No, I do not think it has.

14713. Has Mr. Hyndman, the barrister, ever stated openly in court that your reports of the cases and of the evidence were inaccurate?—I do not think he has.

14714. Are you sure of it?—I am; we have often said to one another jokingly, "Take care what you are putting down, for it is false."

14715. Are you quite sure that Mr. Hyndman has never stated openly in court that your reports of the evidence were inaccurate?—I am quite positive. The impression upon my mind is that he never did it seriously, for if he had done it seriously I would have asked him to look into it and convinced him that he was wrong.

14716. Mr. Hyndman has never declared that no such evidence was given by the witness as you read from your book?—Not as a serious assertion. He has said thousands of times, "Martin, all that you are putting down in that book is false."

14717. Has he ever asserted seriously with respect to any evidence that you read out, "The witness never gave such evidence"?—No.

14718. Then no such thing could have occurred?—I think not.

14719. Are you sure?—No further than if I had had the impression at the moment that it did occur, I would have rectified it immediately.

14720. Are you sure, or are you not sure, that it did not occur?—It is impossible to say, at this length of time, what has occurred.

14721. Then you are not sure whether Mr. Hyndman has, in any instance, told you that the witness never gave such evidence as what you had written down?—I do not think he has.

14722. Are you sure?—I can be no surer than that.

14723. Then it may have occurred?—It may have occurred.

14724. May it have occurred more than once?—It might.

14725. May it have occurred several times?—If it ever occurred, it may have occurred several times; but I do not think it did occur.

14726. Mr. O'Connell.] You cannot take upon yourself now to say all that Mr. Hyndman said?—No.

14727. Nor how often he might have accused you of inaccuracy?—No.

14728. Can you say that if he accused you of inaccuracy, you immediately examined to see whether you had been inaccurate or not?—Instantly.

14729. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you recollect now that you did in point of fact examine?—I recollect several times his saying, "Martin, what you are putting putting down is not right;" and I did not know whether he was joking or not; but I would immediately refer to it, and say "That is not so."

Mr. James Martin.

14730. Then you have now a distinct recollection that Mr. Hyndman did arraign your reports?—I have a recollection of his often saying the thing; but I have no recollection of his having said it as a serious charge.

14731. You have a recollection of his having said it?—Yes; I often said things that I did not mean at all serious, and he often said things that he did not mean as serious.

14732. Then there can be no doubt that he has, in several instances, either jokingly or in earnest, stated, "the witness has not given any such evidence as you have taken down"?—He has; but whenever he has said that, I immediately looked, and if the witness was there, I asked him.

14733. Mr. O'Connell.] You have no recollection of a serious charge of that kind made by him?—No; certainly not.

14734. Mr. Hamilton.] You stated that you compared your books with theirs, when any doubt arose?—Yes; I read it out to them, and asked them what they had down, and if the witness was there, and there was any dispute about it, I would ask the man, "What did you say?" and if it was wrong I would alter it.

14735. As far as the comparison went, can you state whether your memoranda agreed with those made by the opposite party?—I cannot; because I would read that which was in mine, and they would never let me see theirs.

14736. Chairman.] Did the other side take notes as constantly as you did?—They took notes.

14737. Who was the person that usually took notes on the other side?—A Mr. Gale.

14738. Were they entered in a book in the same way as yours?—Yes.

14739. Is the book that you are now reading from, the original book in which you entered those notes?—This is the original itself.

14740. That was the book in which you entered the memoranda of the proceedings?—Yes.

14741. Mr. O'Connell.] And all those entries which you have read, were entries made at the period when they purport to bear date?—Yes; and I signed it instantly.

14742. Chairman.] Had they a similar book on the other side?—They had a large book, and alphabeted, but I never looked at their book.

14743. Mr. Hamilton.] When you referred to your book to show that you had taken down the evidence of the witness correctly, did the opposite party in those cases still object to it as incorrect?—Generally in a joking way, but not seriously; and they would laugh at me and say, "Martin, all yours is wrong;" and we humbug one another in that way, but nothing serious; nothing that I would have thought a charge that affected me, so far as to lead me to examine it over again.

14744. You noted down those memoranda with a view to the Committee of the House of Commons?—To be able to swear to their correctness in any manner afterwards upon anything that might arise; I did not at the time know what course might be taken, but I took notes of the evidence.

14745. With a view to disfranchise improper freemen?—Yes.

14746. Mr. O'Connell.] Is not a caution given in those books of the Reform Association that these things are to be done with a view to give evidence before a Committee of the House?—There is.

14747. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Will you look at your book and turn to the note of the first case you read of John Wilson Barlow, and state whether or not there appears to be any interlineation there, or whether it is all fairly written?—There is a little interlineation of William-street.

14748. Will you refer to the next, Thomas Lapham, and state whether there appears any interlineation there?—No.

14749. Look at the next, Simon Forrest, and state whether there is any interlineation?—No; but there is something struck out in it.

Mr. James Martin.

14750. Will you look at the next, John Meathe, and state whether there is any interlineation there?—There are three interlineations there.

14751. Do you consider the first one, "no answer," an interlineation?—No, I do not; it is on the line immediately after; when it is between two lines I consider that an interlineation; they were both done immediately after, in court; I had begun to write the other line.

14752. Do you consider "the court overruled his answer" as an interlineation?—I do, because it is made between two lines.

14753. Was that inserted there as a correction?—It was inserted there at the moment.

14754. Was it inserted as a correction?—I do not know.

14755. Is there any one of those inserted as a correction?—I cannot tell; I never corrected anything after I left the court.

14756. When was that written?—On the 16th of November 1836.

14757. Mr. O'Connell.] Was it inserted in order to be more accurate?—It was; it was inserted while the man was upon the table.

14758. The entry was inserted in court as it stands now?—It was.

14759. You never made an alteration in any of those after you left the court?—Never; nor after the individual case closed; if anything arose from the difference of the cross-examination, I then altered it to what he said was his answer; but I never, after his examination was closed, made the least alteration.

14760. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You had no rough book, nor any notes in which you first took down the subject-matter, which you afterwards entered in this book?—Save this [producing another paper]; the first day, before I had that book with me in court, when Mr. Hobson made the objections, I took down those upon this paper, which I made in court.

14761. Then after the first day the first entry you made of every case was in this book, and it was not transcribed into this book from any other book or paper whatever?—None whatever.

14762. Now look at the note of the case of M. H. Black, and state whether there is any interlineation there?—There is a correction here; there is the word "it" interlined.

14763. Mr. O'Connell.] That you made upon the spot?—Upon the spot; every entry was made while the man was under examination.

14764. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Will you look at the next, "James Connor, Temple-street"?—There is something struck out here; that was done upon the spot; there is an interlineation there of the word "minor," and the word "time;" I corrected it upon reading it in court; while they were disputing about it, I would read over what I had written.

14765. Will you look at the next, which is James Crofton, and state whether there is any interlineation there?—No; there is just the word "for" struck out.

14766. Mr. O'Connell.] You have stated that you receive 2 l. a week for this employment from the Association; do you recollect that when that was settled you were asked how much you would want?—Yes; and I said 2 l. a week would keep me from loss.

14767. Do you recollect an observation which was made?—The observation was, that it was considered too little; but I said that my family was small, and it would be sufficient, and I did not wish to make anything of the public.

Lord Granville Somerset.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

George Archer, Esq., called in; and Examined.

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

14768. Mr. O'Connell.] WHAT situation do you fill in the corporation of Dublin?—Town clerk of Dublin.

14769. How long have you been town clerk of Dublin?—Since the month of January 1830.

14770. Were you before in the office?—No.

14771. Do you hold any other office but that of town clerk?—Clerk of the peace.

14772. Chairman.] For the city of Dublin?—For the city of Dublin.

14773. Do you call it the county of the city?—The county of the city.

14774. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you had a partner in either of those situations?—The office is held jointly.

14775. Each office?—Each office.

14776. Who is the other gentleman?—Mr. John Long.

14777. Chairman.] I believe Mr. Long is very unwell?—Yes.

14778. And unable to attend?—Yes.

14779. Mr. O'Connell.] You possess every information that he does in all probability?—I do.

14780. Have you filled any other office in the corporation, or for the corporation?—At any other time?

14781. Yes?—But not in the corporation; springing out of the corporation; I have served the office of sub-sheriff.

14782. How often?—Twice.

14783. You have been law-agent for the corporation have you?—Never.

14784. You are a professional gentleman, I believe, in Dublin?—I am.

14785. Who does the law business of the corporation at present?—Mr. Robert Dickenson and Mr. William White.

14786. Who have they succeeded?—They succeeded Mr. Long, my colleague, and Mr. Thomas Greene.

14787. I suppose Mr. Long was law-agent until he became town clerk and clerk of the peace?—He was.

14788. And only gave up those offices on what I presume was promotion?—Yes.

14789. Have you the corporation books here?—I have.

14790. There is in Dublin what is called, "The corporation at large," is there not?—There is.

14791. And there are particular guilds beside?—There are.

14792. How many guilds are there at present?—Twenty-five, I think.

14793. A person by being free of a guild is not free of the corporation at large?—No.

14794. And the corporation at large can reject any person belonging to a guild, who makes a claim of freedom, if they think fit?—They can.

14795. There are two bodies that can so reject, are there not?—There are.

14796. What are they called?—The lord mayor and board of aldermen is one, which

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

which we call the upper house; and the sheriffs and commons is the other, which we call the lower house.

14797. Each of these bodies has, and exercises, the power of refusing freedom if they think fit?—They do.

14798. Each does?—Each.

14799. And has that power?—Yes; the question is put with regard to each freeman.

14800. And they are free to admit him, or to reject him, as they please?—They are.

14801. And they are so free, whether the allegations in his petition or beseech, as it is called, be true or not?—They are.

14802. The claim for a freedom in the city of Dublin is called a beseech?—It is.

14803. And does that beseech go equally to the board of aldermen and to the commons' house?—It does.

14804. To each of them?—To each.

14805. Then before any man can be free of the city of Dublin he goes through two ordeals; does he not?—He does.

14806. The one before the board of aldermen, and the other before the commons; is not that so?—It is.

14807. Which is usually appealed to in the first instance?—The lord mayor and board of aldermen.

14808. And if he passes that, then the commons are appealed to?—The beseech is then sent down to the sheriffs and commons.

14809. That is if it passes?—If it passes.

14810. If it be rejected, the lord mayor and board of aldermen assign no reason for the rejection?—No.

14811. But their good will and pleasure?—None other.

14812. The lord mayor and board of aldermen decide by vote; do not they?—The question is put.

14813. Ayes and noes?—Yes.

14814. If it comes then before the commons, it is decided by ballot, is it not?—I never knew of a question by ballot on freemen; I never heard of it by ballot; only a question of division. Nor did I ever hear there was a division in the commons.

14815. They generally decide unanimously?—Indeed it is generally the case.

14816. It is tolerably well known how they will decide before the question is put, I suppose?—I cannot say that.

14817. But they have the right to negative, if they think fit?—They have.

14818. And without assigning any reason?—Without assigning any reason.

14819. And that right, of course, although the facts stated in the beseech may be unquestionable?—Certainly.

14820. Have you the form of the beseech?—I have.

14821. Will you be so good as to produce it?

[The Witness produced it.]

14822. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] I suppose it is called a beseech the same as writs are called, because of the introductory words at the commencement of it?—Yes, just so.

14823. It is in the form of a request, I suppose, for the franchise?—Yes.

14824. Mr. O'Connell.] Is not the beseech in the following form; "To the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons, and Citizens of the City of Dublin, beseech your Honors, Reverend James Phelan, of Finglass, apothecary, to be admitted into the liberties and franchises of the City of Dublin by marriage, he being married to the daughter of John Giffard, esquire, who came in at Michaelmas Assembly, 1768, by grace especial"?—Yes.

14825. Have you any other form of beseech but this?—No; unless changing the claim.

14827. Especially

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

14827. Especially the words "By marriage, he being married to the daughter of," are printed?—Yes.

14828. In the margin, there is "Easter Assembly, 1837," in writing?—Yes.

14829. "Granted on taking the oaths;" does that "granted on taking the oaths" refer to the commons, or to the board of aldermen?—That refers to the general order.

14830. And there is the word "allowed"?—Yes, the word "allowed;" that is the confirmation of that order by the sheriffs and commons.

14832. And in the margin there is, "granted on taking the oaths, if it shall appear by indenture;" what oaths are these; do these oaths mean the freeman's oath?—No; there are other oaths.

14833. You are aware that the latter part of this oath no Catholic can take; "And I do declare that no foreign prince, person, prelate, state, or potentate"?—Yes.

14834. There is no Catholic admitted free of the corporation of Dublin, to your knowledge?—There is not.

14835. I suppose they could not well be without your knowing it?—No.

14836. Then of course you can state positively there is no Catholic free of the city of Dublin?—I can.

14837. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] When you say Catholic, you mean Roman Catholic?—I mean Roman Catholic.

14838. Chairman.] Do you state that, from the incapability of a Roman Catholic to take the oath necessary to be taken; or from what other source of information do you state that no Roman Catholic can be free of the city of Dublin?—I am quite satisfied there is no Roman Catholic in the corporation of the city of Dublin, from my knowledge.

14839. But is there any oath or any positive impediment of that sort that precludes their being admitted, or is it a simple fact that you know from other sources of information?—I think that oath would not be required in the case of a Roman Catholic's admission, because the law has substituted another oath.

14840. Then I am to understand there is no law which prevents their admission; but it is a simple fact that no one has been admitted?—Precisely so.

14841. Mr. O'Connell.] I believe you are aware that for upwards of forty years, near fifty, no law exists that prevents their being admitted?—I understand not.

14842. But that in fact they are not admitted?—They are not admitted.

14843. And if a Catholic had a claim by birth, marriage, or servitude, he still would not be admitted?—I do not say that; I do not say he would not be admitted, because I know that there was a gentleman not very long ago, who was very near being admitted.

14844. Why was he not?—Because he did not succeed with the board of aldermen.

14845. But still, did he pass the commons?—No; he could not go before the commons, not having passed the board of aldermen.

14846. Then the board of aldermen may reject him, although he be the eldest son of a freeman?—No doubt.

14847. And may reject him, although he has served a regular apprenticeship?—Certainly.

14848. And they may reject him if his claim be undoubtedly true in point of fact, by marriage?—They may.

14849. And if the board of alderman did not reject him, the Commons may do it, notwithstanding the facts be in his favour, may they not?—They may.

14850. Have you any doubt they would if they knew him to be a Catholic?—Indeed I have no doubt but that they would.

14851. You have no doubt that the board of aldermen would reject any person they knew to be a Roman Catholic, no matter what facts his claim was founded on?—I am not so sure of that.

14852. But you are quite sure of the Commons?—I am more sure of the Commons,

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

Commons, because I believe the case of Mr. Ignatius Callaghan, a Roman Catholic merchant, was decided by a casting vote in the board of aldermen.

14853. Considered to be a wealthy man?—Yes.

14854. And I believe at that time he was not a politician?—I declare I do not know how that is.

14855. The technical name of a rejection by the board of aldermen is cushioning, is it not?—The question of admission is postponed, not cushioned.

14856. That is a new way of putting down the rejection, is it not?—It is the usual way.

14857. Now, here is one of your beseeches for birth; it is the same form, except that the words are, "by birth, being the son of"?—Yes.

14858. And those words are printed?—They are.

14859. Now will you show me a beseech by grace especial. [The Witness did so.] The beseech by grace especial only contains these words: "Beseech your honors, John Gedder, of Nelson-street, merchant, to be admitted into the liberties and franchises of the City of Dublin, by grace especial"?—Yes.

14860. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Those persons who are admitted by grace especial, do you call them in the corporation "honorary freemen?"—By grace especial I do.

14862. Mr. O'Connell.] The words "honorary freemen" were not known in the corporation of Dublin until the Reform Bill?—No, but it would apply to freemen of the city at large, such as Mr. Serjeant Jackson suggested.

14863. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Persons who are not admitted into any guild do you mean?—Yes.

14864. They are admitted at first into the corporation at large?—Yes, they are called freemen of the city at large.

14865. Mr. O'Connell.] Are there any beseeches for admission to the city at large in consequence of birth, or service to a freeman in the city, prior to the Reform Bill?—No.

14866. Have you any such subsequent to the Reform Bill?—No.

14867. So that birth and service attach themselves to particular guilds, do they?—Birth, service, and marriage.

14868. To particular guilds?—Yes.

14869. How long have you had this form of beseech by grace especial?—It has been from time immemorial, I should say.

14870. How long have you had the form of beseech for birth?—The same, I take it.

14871. And service?—The same.

14872. And marriage only since the Reform Bill?—Only since the Reform Bill.

14873. There is no instance of a beseech by marriage until after the Reform Bill?—No.

14874. This book that is before me is the alphabetical book of admissions of freemen?—I should, perhaps, explain as to marriage, that marriage conferred a right of claim prior to the Reform Bill, by grace especial. It was recognized in the minor corporations as a ground whereon to claim admission by grace especial. The effect of the Reform Bill was, to do away with the right by grace especial, and to set up the distinct right by marriage, which is the reason why the beseeches then commenced upon that right of claim.

14875. But the other beseeches were printed beseeches before the Reform Bill?—Yes.

14876. Then you had no printed beseech by marriage until subsequent to the Reform Bill?—No.

14877. Now the book before me that you have handed to me, is the alphabetical book of freemen, commencing Michaelmas 1820; is it not so?—It is.

14878. Kept in your office?—Yes.

14879. And under your inspection since you have been in the office?—Yes.

14880. Now in this book I find, that the claim of admission is abbreviated for grace especial; it is "g. e."?—

14881. For birth it is "b."?—Yes.

14882. For service it is "s."?—Yes.

14883. There is no such entry of admission by marriage?—No.

14884. Until after the Reform Bill?—No.

14885. And after the Reform Bill, for the first time, the letter "m." is introduced instead of the other entries; is it not so?—Yes.

14886. Are there several freemen admitted in that way since the Reform Bill?—Several.

14887. And none before?—And none before on that distinct ground.

14888. With the "m."?—No, not with the "m."

14889. The number of freemen admitted before the Reform Bill, the far greater number of them was by grace especial; was it not?—I do not know; the book will show; I should think there was a greater number by grace especial.

14890. There are very few now admitted by grace especial?—Very few.

14891. It merely confers corporate privileges and rights, admission by grace especial?—No more. Admission by grace especial is seldom sought for now.

14892. Shall you be able to state how many have been admitted in each year previous to the Reform Bill; have you documents to show that?—That document will show it; that is up to the year 1820.

14893. And you can from this book make out a list of those admitted in each year before the Reform Bill by grace especial?—I can.

14894. And those who have had birth as the claim of admission?—Yes.

14895. And those who have had service as the claim of admission?—Yes; but it will take a long time to do that; to begin from 1820.

14896. Where do you ascertain the fact that the man who claims is a Protestant?—I do not know; we do not seek to ascertain that question.

14897. How do you ascertain he is not a Roman Catholic?—We take for granted that the guilds would send us none others but Protestants.

14898. That inquiry you leave to the guilds?—We leave that to the guilds.

14899. If any Roman Catholic were to apply it would probably be soon discovered?—I think it would.

14900. So that one way or the other it is ascertained that the individual applying is a Protestant?—Yes, I think so.

14901. Otherwise he would be rejected, or would be likely to be rejected?—I apprehend he would be likely to be rejected.

14902. Your opinion is that he would?—At present my opinion is that he would.

14903. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Have there been many rejections in your time?—Of Roman Catholics?

14904. Of any persons who sought their freedom of Dublin?—There have been some; not a great many, I think.

14905. Upon what grounds have they been rejected?—Inquiries made as to character, and men's moral characters, and not found creditable and sufficient.

14906. Mr. O'Connell.] And the political character of some others?—Yes; and the political character of others has been inquired into.

14907. Now you never rejected a man by reason of his politics being adverse to the Roman Catholic claims?—I cannot call to my recollection any such occurrence.

14908. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] When you say there is no reason assigned for rejection, you do not mean that when the subject is under the discussion of the corporate chambers, that no reasons are assigned in the discussion; but you mean that no reason is given on any record?—Yes.

14909. There are reasons given in the discussion, I suppose?—Yes.

14910. The fitness of a man, I suppose, is considered in the discussion?—Yes.

14911. His moral character?—Yes.

14912. And whether he be a man of constitutional principles?—Yes.

14913. Mr. O'Connell.] What do you call constitutional principles?—The constitutional principles of the corporation, the maintenance of the church and state.

14914. Protestant ascendancy?—Precisely.

14915. You include that?—We do.

14916. In short, your corporation is an exclusively Protestant corporation; is it not?—I should say it was.

14917. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Have you been present at any discussion upon the merits of a person?—Yes, I have.

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

14918. Are you a member of the commons?—No, I am not.

14919. You are not an alderman?—No.

14920. Then ex-officio you attend?—It is my duty to attend the board of aldermen.

14921. In the chambers?—Yes.

14922. And therefore you hear the discussions?—Yes.

14923. And you hear the moral characters of individuals canvassed?—I do.

14924. And you have known instances of men rejected by reason of deficiency in point of moral character?—I have.

14925. Is that the principal cause of rejection, with regard to a large proportion of those that are rejected?—No; but I do not think many rejections take place.

14926. But of those who are rejected, is that the principal cause of rejection?—Yes.

14927. Are you able to call to mind any other grounds of rejection that occurred within your observation, except that of the moral character of the individual being tried and found wanting?—I should say upon political grounds, I should think there have been postponements.

14928. Mr. O'Connell.] Postponement is the term for rejection?—Yes, it means that.

14929. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Have you known any other grounds of rejection, save a deficiency in point of moral character or political?—No, I cannot say I have.

14930. Mr. O'Connell.] Is a Protestant, who is a strong advocate of the Catholics' claim as likely to be rejected as a Catholic?—I do not think he is as likely as a Catholic.

14931. But he would be likely to be rejected?—He would.

14932. A Roman Catholic would certainly be rejected; did you not say that?—No, not with certainty; I mentioned the case of Mr. Callaghan; I cannot say with certainty.

14933. There was no chance of its going through both houses?—Sentiments may change; that was some time ago.

14934. However, you never knew an instance of a change?—No.

14935. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] If a Protestant came, claiming in right of service, birth, or marriage, and it appeared that he was not a man of loyalty attached to the monarchical government and constitution of these realms, I apprehend the corporation of Dublin would reject him?—They would.

14936. Just as soon as they would reject a Roman Catholic?—The same.

14937. They therefore look for an attachment to the constitution of these realms as an ingredient?—They do.

14938. Which they would require in any man they would admit?—They do.

14939. Mr. O'Connell.] But by the existing constitution do you include the Catholic Emancipation Bill?—To be sure.

14940. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you consider that part of the constitution?—I consider the law of the land must be upheld.

14941. But do you consider it a component part of the constitution of these realms, the continuance of the Catholic Emancipation Bill?—I do, certainly; I should consider it part of the constitution, the law of the land.

14942. Do you consider it as a component part of the constitution?—No, I do not consider it a component part of the constitution.

14943. Mr. O'Connell.] But certainly a man who was proposed to the corporation, and was strongly favourable to the Emancipation Bill, would not be so likely to be admitted as a Protestant who was adverse to it?—I think not.

14944. In short, the corporation is in its nature adverse to what are called the Catholic claims?—It is.

14945. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Before the passing of the Catholic Emancipation Bill, was it not deemed a part of the constitution to oppose the Catholic claims?—In our corporation it was.

14946. Mr. O'Connell.] And no Protestant would have been likely to have been admitted who had been considered to have been active in support of those claims?—I think he would not.

14947. Have you here a form of the certificate given to any persons who are admitted to their freedom, who pass the corporation?—No, I have not. I did not know that the form would be required. I can state the substance of it, I think, from recollection.

14948. Mr. O'Connell.] No; it will be desirable to have the exact form?—

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

The witness was directed to send for a blank form of the four certificates; one by grace especial, one by birth, one by service, and one by marriage.

Witness.] There is but one form; it is only the alteration of the claim.

14949. They differ as the beseeches differ, I suppose?—Just so.

14950. Chairman.] They are counterparts of the beseeches, in fact?—They are.

14951. Mr. O'Connell.] Then these forms; there were none known by marriage until after the Reform Bill; no certificates by marriage?—No.

14952. Since the Reform Bill there are many?—There are many.

The witness was directed to make out the number of persons admitted in each year for five years before the Reform Bill, from 1826 to 1830 inclusive, distinguishing the classes.

14953. Chairman.] If I understand you right, this claim of freedom by marriage was known, though it was not much exercised previous to the passing of the Reform Bill; was that it?—It was; it furnished a claim on the ground of grace especial.

14954. Mr. O'Connell.] It furnished an inducement for the ground of grace especial?—Yes.

14955. Chairman.] Now, could you state to the Committee in how many cases, in the preceding ten or fifteen years, to the passing of the Reform Bill, such applicants had been admitted?—No, I could not.

14956. You have no means of ascertaining how many persons were admitted to the freedom on the supposed ground of marriage?—No, I have not.

14957. Could the corporation books in any way furnish that information?—No; the entries in the books appear under the head of "Grace Especial."

14958. Mr. O'Connell.] Those who claimed by grace especial had to make out a case to induce the corporation to grant their claims?—Yes.

14959. And somebody stated something to induce the corporation to grant it; was not that it?—Yes.

14960. Sometimes they talked of their loyalty?—Yes.

14961. I believe that is generally what they talked of?—Very often.

14962. At other times they talked of some service to the city?—Yes.

14963. Chairman.] But is the Committee to understand that whenever a claimant did advance his claim to grace especial upon the plea of marriage, that he was more likely to obtain it than not, if there was no particular objection to it?—I should say he was.

14964. That that would be the foundation of a claim which would be most likely granted?—Yes.

14965. I am talking now of previous to the Reform Bill?—I mean previous to it.

14966. Mr. O'Connell.] That it would be an inducement to them to grant it?—Certainly, I think it would.

14967. Considering him friendly?—Conferring the right on the son-in-law, the son having a claim.

14968. When a beseech comes forward by grace especial, is it usual for somebody in the corporation to state some reason?—Yes, then it generally is.

14969. That is, those reasons you gave, loyalty or service to the corporation, or being connected with a freeman?—Yes.

14970. And it is perfectly in the power of the board of aldermen to reject that reason if they please?—Certainly.

14971. Though the reason may be perfectly true?—Certainly.

14972. You have altered since the Reform Bill the mode of entry, by making an entry for marriage which never was found before?—Yes; I mentioned that before.

14973. Chairman.] I think your first charter was the one granted by Henry the 2nd?—Yes, it was.

14974. To the men of Bristol, was it not?—Yes.

14975. And the citizens of Dublin appear occasionally to have inquired respecting particular customs used in Bristol?—Yes.

14976. And to have received certificates from the authorities of that city; the fact is so, is it not?—That I believe to be the fact.

14977. Mr. O'Connell.] This is the freeman's oath, is it not?—It is.

14978. Mr. O'Connell.] "You shall swear that you shall be good and true to our Sovereign Lord King William IV., and to the heirs of our said Sovereign Lord

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

Lord the King; obeysant and obedient you shall be to the mayor and ministers of the city. The franchises and customs thereof, you shall maintain, and this city keep harmless in that that in you is. You shall be contributory to all manner of charges within this city, as summonses, watches, contributions, tasks, tallages, lot and scot, and all other charges, bearing your part as a freeman ought to do. You shall colour no foreign goods, whereby the King or this city might lose their customs and advantages. You shall know no foreigner to buy or sell any merchandizes with any other foreigner within this city, or franchises thereof, but you shall warn the mayor thereof." I believe that clause has very little meaning in it?—I do not think it has a great deal.

14979. "You shall take no apprentice, but if he be freeborn; that is to say, no bondsman's son, and for no less term than for seven years; within the first year you shall cause him to be inrolled, and at his term's end you shall make him free of this city if he have well and truly served you. You shall also keep the King's peace in your own person, and shall always, whilst you are able and in your power, keep a good musket, carabine, or fusee, in good, clean, and sufficient order. You shall know no gatherings, conventicles, nor conspiracies made against His Majesty's peace, but shall warn the mayor thereof, or let it to your power. You shall not be free baker, butcher, or fisher, without you pay custom; and whatever office that you be lawfully called unto within the said franchises, you shall not refuse. All these points and articles you shall well and truly keep, according to the laws and customs of this city." That is the oath?—Yes.

14980. Mr. Hamilton.] That form is an ancient one, I believe?—Yes, very ancient.

14981. Are there any traces of its origin in the books or muniments of the corporation that you are aware of?—No; I looked at the time when Mr. George Jackson was under examination before a Select Committee of the House of Commons in 1833; but I could not put my hand on any document at that time. I found a document afterwards; it was a document, I think, in the reign of Charles the 1st, and what became of it subsequently I do not know; but I am quite satisfied that form of oath was framed at an earlier period.

14982. Chairman.] I see there is a charter in the 17th Charles the 1st, which recites the charters of the 2d Richard the 3d, and the 2d Edward the 6th; would it be in that?—No, I think not; not in the charters. It is certainly an oath that was framed in early times by the corporation.

14983. I want, for another reason, to call your attention also to the charter in the reign of Richard the 1st, 1192, by John, then Lord of Ireland and Earl of Morton, and he declares the citizens may have all their reasonable guilds, as the burgesses of Bristol had, or were accustomed to have; is not that the fact?—It is.

14984. Mr. O'Connell.] Have they separate guilds still in Bristol, as you have in Dublin?—I do not know.

14985. Mr. Hamilton.] What is the meaning you attach to the words "bondsman's son," in that oath?—The meaning I attach to that is, a description of freemen that was merely permitted to trade. I have seen old documents, showing that what was then considered a foreigner was a man who occasionally came into the old city to trade, and trade was so restricted by the rights the corporation exercised, that a temporary freedom was frequently granted, on the party acquiring it paying a fine and entering into a bond.

14986. Mr. O'Connell.] And that person was allowed to trade?—Yes; and I take it that such person was, according to the terms used in the freeman's oath, a bondsman.

14987. In making freemen since the Reform Bill, have you been assisted by anybody in recommending freemen not immediately belonging to the corporation?—No; we have had no assistance of any body. I am aware that great exertions have been used since.

14988. By whom?—I understand by the conservatives.

14989. Who in particular have you known active in it?—Mr. Collison.

14990. Anybody else?—No, I cannot say I have; I may have seen persons whom I do not know.

14991. How does Mr. Collison show his activity?—He shows his activity by attending the swearing in of freemen, and bringing freemen to be sworn.

14992. Does he ever get the certificates?—Yes, frequently.

14993. Are there any certificates ever signed in blank?—I think they have been sometimes signed in blank.

14994. And left them in the office to be filled up by the clerks, I suppose?—

183

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

Left them sometimes in our office in Green-street, for the convenience of parties registering; the register-court is held in Green-street, and the corporation is held in William-street, and in our absence we sometimes leave blank certificates for he purpose of having them filled up.

14995. That is, certificates in blank, but signed by the corporate officer?—Yes.

14996. How long has that practice prevailed; only since the Reform Bill, I suppose?—No; it prevailed always, so far as I recollect.

14997. Was it the practice before that?—Yes.

14998. Mr. Hamilton.] In whose custody are those blank certificates left?—In the custody of our confidential clerk.

14999. So that they are still in the custody of yourself, or those for whom you are answerable?—Certainly.

14999.* Mr. O'Connell.] Your confidential clerk is a gentleman of the name of Grabham?—Yes; but he has not been in our office for some time.

15000. How long has he left your office?—Since, I think, the end of March last.

15001. Is there any power to fill up a beseech after the assembly rises?—No.

15002. When do the assemblies meet?—Quarterly.

15003. What are the regular days of each quarterly meeting?—They are not stated days; they follow in some peculiar way, according to the charter, but commence in January.

15004. There is one day in January?—There is one day in January, another in April, another in July, and the fourth in October; and that in January is called "The Christmas Assembly." That is, the Christmas Assembly of 1837 has taken place.

15005. Then, is January 1837 called "Christmas 1837"?—Yes, it is; that has been so all through.

15006. Then April 1837 is called "Easter 1837"?—Yes.

15007. July is called, what?—"Midsummer."

15008. And October is called "Michaelmas"?—Michaelmas.

15009. Then the quarterly assembly meets only upon one day in each of these quarters?—One day, unless adjourned. They adjourn frequently.

15010. Have you books to show how many adjournments have taken place in each year since 1820 to 1831, and from 1831 to the present?—I have not.

15011. Can we get that information?—I do not see how you can.

15013. Notwithstanding the adjournments?—Notwithstanding the adjournments. They are always one assembly.

15014. Have not frequent adjournments taken place within the latter years?—Yes.

15015. Have they not been much more numerous since the Reform Bill than before?—I think they have.

15016. Have you not continued them from week to week since the Reform Bill?—There have been three or four adjournments of one quarterly assembly since the Reform Bill.

15017. You never knew so many as three or four adjournments of one quarterly assembly before the Reform Bill; did you?—No, I did not.

15018. And these adjournments since the Reform Bill are for the purpose of passing freemen principally?—Principally.

15019. Can you give us the days upon which the freemen passed since the Reform Bill?—I do not see how I can. I will try, if possible.

15020. What book would contain it?—Probably some of the beseeches; but, in point of fact, there have been these adjournments.

15021. What is the greatest number of adjournments that you remember of any quarterly assembly since the Reform Bill?—I recollect one assembly, when several adjournments took place, the last adjournment nearly running into the next quarter.

15022. What assembly was that?—I cannot recollect; I believe it was some time last year, but these adjournments did not occur with a view to the passing of freemen.

15023. Well, it gave you the opportunity of passing freemen?—No; there is generally but one day for that purpose.

15024. What was the reason of the adjournment?—I think it was induced by the

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

the proceedings in Parliament respecting Irish municipal corporations, and to prevent the necessity of calling what is called a post assembly.

15025. Can you pass freemen at a post assembly?—No.

15026. What investigation as to facts takes place upon a beseech; do you in general take it for granted?—I speak of the board of aldermen; when they are not satisfied by facts coming within their own knowledge, of the character and qualification of the claimant, resort is made to the representatives, or one of them, of the guild in which the claimant has passed, for the necessary information. It is further requisite, before the sheriffs and commons pass a beseech, that the representative of the particular guild to which the claimant belongs or has passed, should confirm it by standing up in his place and making use of the word "Allowed."

15027. And there is no formal examination into the facts?—No, unless what takes place in the corporation below; in the junior corporation.

15028. Then you could not give us the days on which the parties have been admitted since that period?—No, I could not.

15029. Can you swear in persons any day?—Yes.

15030. The swearing in is before whom?—The lord mayor and one of the sheriffs must be present.

15031. Was that so always?—Always.

15032. What other alteration have you made since the Reform Bill?—I do not know of any other alteration.

15033. In 1833 you made scarcely any freemen I perceive?—I believe very few.

15034. The notion of your being able to set up the rights was not prevalent, I suppose, at that time?—I do not know exactly what the reason was.

15035. You made very few in 1834?—Very few.

15036. Can you let us know how many you made in 1835?—Yes, I can; the return which I am going to make will give that.

15037. Now, if you made a man free by grace especial this day, would his son have a right to claim to-morrow?—No.

15038. That is, you do not trace the fact of the birth by any entry in your books?—No; but from the date of the claim, we go back twenty-one years. That is the reason why he could not claim the next day.

15039. You do not conceive that any man is entitled to claim as a son, unless his father has been twenty-one years a freeman?—We do not.

15040. But you have no means of ascertaining, have you, whether the father has been a freeman twenty-one years of the particular guild?—No; only of the corporation of Dublin at large.

15041. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you mean by what you just said about twenty-one years, that the son must have been born at the time when his father was free?—I do. The son, to entitle him to his freedom, must be born subsequent to his father's freedom.

15042. That is to say, at a time when his father was free?—Yes.

15043. Then that may go back further than twenty-one years?—But if it does, that satisfies our inquiry.

15044. Chairman.] Has any legal advice been taken, as to the rights of persons claiming upon the ground of marriage, since the passing of the Reform Bill? —I think not.

15045. Has any resistance been attempted to be made to that right in any way?—Never, that I heard.

15046. Has that question, do you know, ever been argued before the revising barrister?—Not to my knowledge.

15047. Mr. O'Connell.] By resistance, you mean no resistance in the corporation?—I do.

15048. Chairman.] My question was, has any legal proceeding been taken in any way, or by any party, to your knowledge, to resist this assumption on the part of persons claiming on the ground of marriage?—Never, to my knowledge; I believe not.

15049. Have parties been opposed, to your knowledge, before the revising barrister on the ground that they were so admitted?—I am not aware how that fact is.

15050. Would it have come to your knowledge if such a circumstance had occurred?—I should think it would; I do not recollect ever having heard it.

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

15051. Mr. O'Connell.] You do not attend the assistant barrister's court?—No; Mr. Dobbs is in attendance; he is the barrister.

15052. The corporation are now anxious to make freemen on these claims; are they not?—They certainly have an anxiety to have as many freemen as they are entitled to.

15053. That is, to have as many freemen in their interest?—I should say so.

15054. You know they would not make a man free by birth, servitude, or marriage, that they knew would vote against the present sitting members?—I do not say that they are so exclusive as that, because they certainly have made many free that were adverse, and voted always against them since the Reform Bill.

15055. Do you think they would make any man free who avowed he would vote against the present sitting members, and for the members that ousted them?—I think not; at the same time it is not very long ago since two of Mr. M'Causland's sons, nephews of Lord Plunket, were admitted.

15056. But the corporation are naturally anxious to increase the number of freemen in their own interest; are they not?—They are.

15057. And they are people looking out for persons who can make these claims?—Indeed I should say they are; that is my belief.

15058. Have you any books here that will show when the persons were admitted, in whose right the birth, servitude, and marriage, have been claimed?—I have.

15059. Mr. Hamilton.] Admissions in respect of marriage arose from a clause in the Reform Act?—Yes.

15060. By which it was conceived there was a subsequent claim established by marriage?—Yes.

15061. Mr. O'Connell.] It was conceived a new right was created?—It was.

15062. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] And that it was the intention of the Legislature to create a new right to freedom by the Reform Bill?—I do not know that it was understood to be the intention of the Legislature to create a new right to freedom.

15063. Mr. O'Connell.] But that the law did it?—Yes; and I take for granted that the Legislature intended it.

15064. And it was acting upon that idea that you introduced the new beseech for marriage?—It was coupled with the loss of grace especial, and marriage having before furnished a claim for grace especial.

15065. Rather an agreement than a claim?—No, a claim.

15066–7. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] What do you mean by the loss of grace especial; that was not lost until the Reform Bill?—

Mr. O'Connell.] Do you mean the right of voting for a member?—

Witness.] I do.

15068. Mr. Hamilton.] The honorary freemen excluded under the Reform Bill were the same as those who, before the Reform Bill, were admitted by grace especial?—Yes.

15069. Mr. O'Connell.] Then, what the corporation has been acting upon is this: having the power to reject any freemen they pleased, they do not consider any man an honorary freeman unless they admit him by grace especial?—Or the city at large.

15070. Which is the same?—It is the same, but it arises in a different way.

15071. And therefore they have created this new mode of doing the thing by marriage?—They have made this claim as of right.

15072. The marriage?—Yes.

15073. In order to avoid a clause of the Reform Bill which speaks of honorary freemen?—So far as that is concerned.

15074. They have done that to get rid of their being honorary freemen?—Yes, so far as the claim in respect of marriage.

15075. And there never was a certificate by marriage before the Reform Bill?—There never was.

15076. Mr. Hamilton.] And there was not, either in the beseech or certificate, a distinction made between those who were admitted as of grace especial, without any other qualification, and those who were admitted by especial grace, as of marriage?—No, I do not think there was; it furnished a claim of right to especial grace by the statement, it not being known that the party claimed as the son-in-law of a freeman.

15077. Mr. O'Connell.] And do you think there was any right by especial grace at all?—I think there was; I think there was a claim of right by especial grace as well as by birth and by service.

15078. Was

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

15078. Was not especial grace through courtesy?—No; especial grace was a foundation of freemen passing in the corporations below the junior corporations; so was birth and service.

15079. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But was not the one gratuitous, and the other not?—The question was put upon all; but if by especial grace a freeman was passed in one of the junior corporations, that founded a claim of right to admission, or to seek admission in the corporation above.

15080. Mr. O'Connell.] The right you speak of, is only a right to seek admission, not to enforce admission?—No, a right of claim.

15081. Nobody has a right to enforce admission in spite of the corporations?—No.

15082. Mr. Hamilton.] The admission into the corporation at large was an enlargement of the right which was acquired in the minor corporation?—It was.

15083. Mr. O'Connell.] Whenever the corporation chooses to admit a man to the corporation of the city at large?—Yes.

15084. Now in the return you have given me of Easter 1835, there is a John Hanbridge, carpenter, by marriage?—Yes.

15085. Is that the person who was tried for throwing the bottle at the Lord Lieutenant?—I do not know; I should think not; for as far as I recollect, that man's name was Henry.

15086. Am I to understand distinctly that you cannot give me a nearer day of admission than by putting, as you have done in the return, "Date of admission, Christmas Assembly, 1831;" you cannot give me any other date?—I do not think I can.

15087. Christmas Assembly 1831 was before the 20th July 1831, was it not?—Yes; that I have already explained to the Committee.

15088. Mr. Hamilton.] By whom is the beseech prepared?—By one of our clerks, or by ourselves, just as it may happen.

15089. Mr. O'Connell.] In the town clerk's office?—Yes.

15090. Mr. Hamilton.] Upon what document is that beseech grounded?—It is grounded upon a certificate that comes from the junior corporation.

15091. The certificate of admission?—Yes.

15092. Does that certificate state in what right the party has been admitted?—Yes.

15093. When it comes to the town clerk's office, does the town clerk take any steps to investigate the reality of that right?—Yes; and his investigation furnishes the ground of the beseech.

15094. Then the town clerk scrutinises the corporation books to ascertain whether the right set forth in the certificate is a bonâ fide one or not?—Yes.

15095. Then having satisfied himself upon that point he prepares the beseech?—Yes.

15096. Does the beseech recite the right?—It does.

15097. And its particulars?—It does.

15098. Mr. O'Connell.] The junior corporations is another term for the guilds?—Yes.

15099. Mr. Hamilton.] When the beseech goes before the board of aldermen, is there any qualification attached to their granting the application?—I am not aware of any qualification.

15100. I mean in reference to the oath to be taken?—There is a qualification in the order on taking the usual oaths, in the case of birth, and in the case of marriage, and in the case of grace especial. In the case of service it is on taking the oaths, if it shall appear by indenture.

15101. So that the grant of admission is conditional on taking the oaths in all those cases?—Yes.

15102. And on production of the indenture in case of servitude?—Not on production of the indenture, but on proof of servitude.

15103. Mr. O'Connell.] Is it necessary to prove that the servitude was by indenture?—I think it is; but it is not always done.

15104. When is that done?—That is done prior to the swearing in of a freeman admitted by service.

15105. And how is it proved?—There is a jury empannelled of freemen, and the party claiming gives evidence.

15106. Does that occur in each?—Yes.

G. Archer, Esq.

May 1837.

15107. The admission by servitude?—Yes; it does.

15108. Where is that jury sworn?—Before the lord mayor and sheriff.

15109. How many does it consist of?—Twelve.

15110. Have you ever seen that take place?—Frequently; whenever the right by service is claimed.

15111. Then, besides the power of rejecting by each branch of the corporation, a freeman by servitude must go through another ordeal, must he?—He must.

15112. And does in every instance?—Yes.

15113. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you mean to say he produces his indenture in every instance?—Those who have indentures produce them; in several cases they account for the loss of the indentures and prove the servitude in some other way than by the production of the indentures.

15114. Mr. O'Connell.] Then the indentures need not be enrolled?—No.

15115. Chairman.] Then this jury, in point of fact, are to ascertain the facts of the case?—To ascertain the simple fact of service.

15116. They decide upon the fact, but as to the admission, they do not interfere?—No.

15117. Therefore all the power they have, is to see whether or no the man has or has not really served?—That is all.

15118. They have no discretionary power, have they?—No.

15119. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you mean to say the indenture is proved by the subscribing witness; is it ever proved?—It is very often proved.

15120. And very often not?—And very often not.

15121. Mr. Hogg.] As to a claim by birth, how can you ascertain the correctness of the statement?—By referring to our books, we ascertain, before we put forward a beseech, that the father was twenty-one years a freeman prior to the claim of the son.

15122. And who makes that inquiry, or certifies that fact, or proves the identity of the person?—The town clerk certifies the fact, but as to the identity, I know of no means of ascertaining that, except the representation coming from the junior corporations, and the member or the representative of the particular corporation in the commons, stating the fact that it is all right, or using the word "allowed," which means that it is right and that it has passed the junior corporation in the regular way.

15123. Mr. O'Connell.] So that if he be mistaken in fact, or chooses to misstate the facts, he can do the entire by using the word "allowed"?—Yes; misstatement he certainly can make; it is possible.

15124. Mr. Hamilton.] Is the word "allowed" conclusive?—It does not prevent anybody else getting up and challenging the party.

15125. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Is that ever done?—I cannot say; I am not there; that is not my place; I never heard.

15126. Mr. O'Connell.] It has not usually been done?—No.

15127. And you never heard of its being done?—No; I never did.

15128. Then your opinion is, that whenever the representative of the guild cries out "allowed," that all the facts are conceived to be admitted?—Yes.

15129. Chairman.] Do you belong to a guild yourself?—Yes.

15130. Which guild?—The guild of merchants.

15131. Were you present when you were admitted to your freedom?—It is so long ago, I cannot say.

15132. So that you know nothing of your own knowledge upon this point?—Not with regard to the guild of merchants.

15133. But any other guild where this takes place?—Mr. O'Connell alluded to what takes place in the sheriffs' and commons'. That is not my place to attend.

15134. Mr. Hogg.] Is there a previous inquiry into the same facts, before a person is admitted into the guild of merchants?—Certainly.

15135. Both as to birth and marriage?—Yes.

15136. So that this statement and this inquiry, and this authentication of the word "allowed," is all superadded to the previous investigation, before the person is introduced into what you call the senior corporation?—Yes.

15137. Mr.

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

15137. Mr. O'Connell.] Were you ever present on any such investigation in the guild of merchants?—No.

15138. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Or any other corporation?—No.

15139. And therefore you do not know that any investigation of the kind takes place?—I cannot speak of my own knowledge.

15140. Is it not deemed necessary in the case of servitude that the apprenticeship should have been to a freeman; to a person who was free?—Yes.

15141. And of course he must have been free during the whole time of the apprenticeship?—He must.

15142. Now have you not told us that in the case of servitude the only inquiry made by the jury is, whether there was an indenture executed or not?—Yes, or the fact of service.

15143. Therefore the jury do not inquire whether the person to whom the apprenticeship has been served, was himself a freeman or not?—No.

15144. Then that fact is not in any way authenticated?—Yes; we ascertain that fact before the beseech goes forward, that he served his apprenticeship to A. B., who came in at a period antecedent to the apprenticeship.

15145. You ascertain that?—Yes.

15146. And it is deemed necessary that that should be ascertained?—Certainly.

15147. Mr. Hamilton.] It is the invariable practice to ascertain in every case, whether the parties are entitled according to the books?—Yes.

15148. Mr. O'Connell.] Is any beseech sent up that does not pass through your office?—No.

15149. Then are you able to state distinctly that none of those beseeches leave your office until the fact is ascertained that the person in whose name the claim is made was a freeman?—Certainly. They cannot, as we prepare and bring the beseech before the board of aldermen and the lord mayor.

15150. You would not bring forward the beseech unless it was ascertained that the facts put forward were true?—Certainly not, and the tracing of our books shows it.

15151. Mr. Hogg.] Have you ever in your experience known an instance of a person being introduced or admitted into the corporation where the facts as stated in the beseech were untrue?—I never knew it; never.

15152. If such an occurrence had taken place, from your official situation would you probably have known it?—I think I would. I should have heard it.

15153. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Are you aware that the only fact stated in the beseech is the fact of an apprenticeship having been served to a particular person?—Yes.

15154. But it is not stated that that particular person is himself a freeman?—Yes, it is.

15155. Mr. Hamilton.] The document on which you give the beseech is certified by some of the officers of the minor guild?—Yes.

15156. Generally by more than one?—Sometimes they are. Generally by more than one.

15157. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] However, the fact of the apprenticeship having been by indenture is not stated in the beseech?—No.

15158. Mr. Hamilton.] The beseech having been disposed of by the board of aldermen, what becomes of it?—One of the aldermen takes the beseeches when passed from the board of aldermen to the sheriffs and hands them to the sheriffs, and then in the course of the business of the day they are taken in their order and brought before the commons.

15159. Then being disposed of by the commons, what becomes of them?—A deputation from the commons brings the papers from the sheriffs and commons and returns them to the lord mayor.

15160. What entry does the town clerk make of the granting of a beseech by the aldermen and by the commons?—The entry is in a small book.

15161. That entry is never made until the claimant has passed both the aldermen and the commons?—Never until then.

15162. The admission is completed only when the oaths are taken?—It is so held now.

15163. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Was there any period when it was held otherwise?—I think, prior to the Reform Bill, it was held that it was the date of admission, though the oath had not been taken. But that a freeman admitted ten years before

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

before, on coming up at the period when the poll at an election for members of Parliament was going on, upon his being sworn, was entitled to vote.

15164. So that, in point of fact, there were many freemen who were never sworn at all?—A great many.

15165. Mr. Hamilton.] When the oath is administered, the freeman signs his name to the roll?—Yes, he signs his name to the roll, and then he is transferred into this book, and appears in the freeman's book.

15166. And on signing the roll, and his name being entered, a certificate is issued?—Yes, the certificate is then issued.

15167. Is the certificate ever issued previous to the swearing in of the freeman and the signing of the roll?—Never.

15168. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But are you aware that the production of the certificate is deemed to be conclusive by the registering barrister?—So I understand.

15169. That he cannot make any objection to the right of admission to the freeman?—No.

15170. Mr. O'Connell.] That is since the decision of Chief Baron Joy?—Yes.

15171. Now look at this certificate of John Lane Macray; is that the celebrated John Lane Macray?—No, I believe not.

15172. You see in that "certificate last assembly;" what is the meaning of that?—He was postponed; he was on the list at the prior assembly, but was postponed; that is the reason of it.

15173. It runs thus: "Beseech your honours, John Lane Macray of Kingstown, cook, to be admitted into the liberties and franchise of the city of Dublin by marriage, he having married a daughter of .''

"Certificate last assembly."

—Yes; that was the certificate; he came forward at a former assembly on a certificate, and for some reason or other was postponed; perhaps a member not being in the house below to vouch for him was the reason of it.

15174. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] What do you hold to be the law as to the son of an honorary freeman, since the Reform Bill, claiming in right of birth; do the corporation consider he is entitled?—They do; an honorary freeman since the Reform Bill.

15175. A freeman admitted by grace especial since the Reform Bill, do the corporation hold his son is entitled by birth to his freedom?—They do not.

15176. They hold he is not?—That question cannot arise for twenty-one years.

15177. Chairman.] Now, it has been stated by a previous witness to the Committee, that various persons have been admitted to the right of freedom before they have attained their legal age of twenty-one; how do you explain that circumstance?—It is quite possible; and I should think not only possible but probable, that some may have been so admitted, because I know myself and have seen, I am sure four or five times, the lord mayor refuse, on the ground of non-age, to administer the oaths.

15178. Then am I to understand that care is taken not to swear in any persons to their right to freedom till they are of age?—All the care that can be taken is taken.

15179. And that therefore, though individual instances may be pointed out where persons of non-age may have been admitted, yet on the other hand those cannot be cases to any very great extent?—I should say not.

15180. It is a circumstance to which attention is paid before they are sworn in, is it?—Yes.

15181. And pains are taken that no one of non-age should be sworn in?—Certainly.

15182. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You admit marksmen to their freedom, I see?—There are some; very few.

15183. Mr. Hamilton.] The admission is recorded from the date of the oath?—Yes.

15184. If a freeman establishes his claim, and does not come to be sworn, he does not appear on your books?—No.

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

15185. Chairman.] And not appearing on the books, he would not appear on the register, would he ?—Certainly not.

15187. Then in your books, at what period does Mr. Cane appear to have been admitted ?—Sworn 27th April 1835, and admitted at the Christmas assembly of 1805.

15188. Then the record of his admission is in 1835 ?—Yes.

15189. Has he been registered, do you happen to know, since ?—No, I should think not.

15190. Has it ever happened that father and son have been admitted on the same day ?—It is quite possible.

Mr. O'Connell, to Mr. Hamilton.] Perhaps if you call his attention to some name he will be able to recollect.

15191. Mr. Hamilton.] If I call your attention to the name of Thomas Lapham, perhaps you will recollect whether he and his father, Henry Lapham, were admitted or not on the same day, the 31st October 1836 ?—Son and grandson; I should suppose that is quite possible.

15192. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you the beseeches here for Michaelmas 1836 ?—Yes. [The Witness referred to them.] It is just as I said; Henry Lapham claimed by birth, being the son of Henry Lapham who came in at Michaelmas 1789 by service. Thomas claimed in right of being a grandson of the same Henry.

15193. Chairman.] Is the right of grandsons then recognised ?—It is.

15194. Mr. O'Connell.] That is a claim as grandson ?—Yes.

15195. Then birth gives a claim to the descendants for ever; if there was son, grandson, and great grandson, they might all be admitted upon the same day ?—Yes, I think they might.

15196. Chairman.] But in point of fact, is the claim of a lower descendant than a grandson admitted ?—I never knew it rejected.

15197. Mr. O'Connell.] It is unusual that there should be a fourth person being of age; but is there any reason why a great grandson should not be admitted as well as the grandson on his father's title ?—Except practice.

15198. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] In practice great grandsons are not often heard of, and of age; that is not a thing likely to occur ?—No, not very often.

15199. Mr. O'Connell.] But in point of fact, the witness was quite right who stated here that the father and son, Henry and Thomas, were admitted upon the same day and sworn in upon the same day ?—Yes, that is quite right.

15200. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You stated, I think, that Mr. Cane was admitted in 1805 ?—Yes.

15201. And was not sworn till 1835 ?—1835.

15202. So that thirty years intervened ?—Yes.

15203. And have you not stated also, that the swearing in is deemed conclusive of the admission of a freeman ?—Yes.

15204. And that without swearing in he was not deemed admitted ?—Yes.

15205. Accordingly, to apply that rule to Mr. Cane, Mr. Cane cannot be deemed to be admitted until he took the oath in 1835 ?—No.

15206. He was admitted by especial favour, I think I understood you to say ? Yes, in 1805.

15207. Is he on the register ?—I should think not.

15208. Would you consider, according to your conception of the law, that he was entitled to register ?—Not according to the way that decisions have been made.

15209. That is to say, that having been sworn in a freeman subsequent to the Reform Bill, although he was admitted prior, you do not consider he is entitled to register ?—That is a question of law, and the decisions have been such.

15210. The decisions have been, that he is not entitled to register ?—Yes; I mentioned before, that prior to it, he certainly would have been entitled.

15211. Mr. Hamilton.] He was looked upon as an honorary freeman ?—Yes.

15212. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Created since the Reform Bill; is it not so ?—Yes.

15213. Mr. O'Connell.] What is the body called that takes an active part in obtaining information; there is such a body, is there not ?—I believe there is, but really I do not know.

15214. Of course you do not belong to them ?—No.

15215. Chairman.] But can you state any other instance in which the father and the son have been admitted to their freedom on the same day, the son deriving in right of the father, and not going back to the grandfather?—No, I cannot.

15216. Mr. O'Connell.] You cannot state any other but the Laphams?—No.

15217. Chairman.] Are you aware that that often takes place, or do you believe such things have taken place?—I am not at all aware; if that had not been called to my attention I would not suppose such a circumstance had taken place at all.

15218. But that is a case which does not strike you as extraordinary, because they registered under separate rights; although one registered as the son, and the other as the grandson, one did not register under the right of the other?—No; the one was the son, and the other the grandson.

15219. But I want to know if you can call to mind, or if you believe there are cases in which two parties have been admitted on the same day, one of those parties deriving from the right conferred upon the other, in the course of that day?—I declare I could not call to recollection any such case occurring; I think it very doubtful whether there is any other such case.

15220. Supposing the father to be admitted in the morning, might the son claim as deriving from the father, in the course of the same day?—Of course, if the father claimed by birth, the son might claim on the same day.

15221. Mr. O'Connell.] But if the father were to claim by servitude, and was admitted in the morning, could his son be admitted the same day or the next?—Certainly not.

15222. Not for twenty-one years?—No.

15223. Chairman.] There must be twenty-one years' interval between the admission and the right by birth arising?—Yes.

15224. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] At the least?—At the least.

15225. Because he must be the son of a freeman at the time of his birth; is it not so?—It is.

15226. Mr. O'Connell.] Now, there was no inquiry as to when Henry Lapham the elder, the man of 1789, had died?—No.

15227. Can you find out any other grandson admitted in that way?—No; I do not think it is possible.

15228. Chairman.] Are there cases of grandsons admitted whose fathers died, and whose grandfathers were alive?—I do not know whether they were alive or no; I do not think inquiry was made as to the death of the grandfather.

15229. Mr. O'Connell.] Then, for anything that appeared as to the Laphams, the grandfather might have been dead long before the birth of the grandson?—He might.

15230. Chairman.] In point of fact, you do not know whether he was alive or dead?—No.

15231. Mr. O'Connell.] You made no inquiry?—No.

15232. Mr. Hamilton. The stamp is imposed upon the certificate of admission, I believe?—It is imposed in the minor corporations; it is there the stamp is imposed.

15233. Mr. O'Connell.] There is no stamp duty paid to you?—No.

15234. You never receive any stamp duty?—Never.

15235. Do you receive any fees?—I do.

15236. On each admission?—Yes.

15237. How much do you receive upon each admission?—Eighteen shillings.

15238. Is that the same for grace especial, birth, marriage and servitude?—The same.

15239. Is there any other fee paid upon each of these?—No, except a shilling for the certificate.

15240. Have those fees been paid in all the instances in this Return?—They have.

15241. Have they been paid by the individuals themselves, or for them, do you know?—I do not know how that is.

15242. Does Mr. Collison pay any?—He has paid some; I have seen him pay for some; persons said they had not money, and he paid the money for them. When I say Mr. Collison paid, I speak of the shilling for the certificate; I am not aware as to the 18 s., that he ever paid any of those fees.

15243. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you happen to know whether the stamp is different

G. Archer, Esq.

30 May 1837.

on the admission by especial grace, and on the admission under the claims of servitude, birth, or marriage?—It is 3 l. on especial grace, and 1 l. on the others.

15244. Was that the same before the Reform Bill?—Yes.

15245. Was it soon after the Reform Bill, that the distinction was taken with respect to the admission by marriage?—Yes, immediately after.

15246. Chairman.] What do you ground that right of marriage upon?—We conceived that marriage, having furnished a ground of grace especial prior to the Reform Bill, and that grace especial having been done away by the Reform Bill, and the franchise of marriage set up, we on those grounds entertained the claim as of right, upon the foundation of the party being married to the daughter of a freeman.

15247. Mr. O'Connell.] With the same unlimited power to each of the branches of the corporation of rejecting whoever they please?—Yes; just the same.

15248. Mr. Hamilton.] You conceive then, that in point of fact the right, or claim, whichever it may be called, in respect of marriage, existed before the Reform Bill, but that the mode of admission was under the title of grace especial?—Yes.

15249. Chairman.] Do you mean to state, that that right existed before the Reform Bill, the same as other rights did; for instance, the rights by birth or servitude?—I think so.

15250. They are founded upon the same authority?—The same authority in another character; in another denomination.

15251. Mr. O'Connell.] And with an equal right of rejection by each body of the corporation?—Yes.

15252. Chairman.] Was that a right founded upon charter or upon prescription?—I should say prescription.

15253. Mr. O'Connell.] By right, you mean claim?—I mean a claim of right.

15254. Chairman.] And that you say was founded on prescription?—I say so.

15255. How far can you carry back the prescription of that claim of right?—I find it difficult to say.

15256. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] There is no record?—No.

15257. Mr. O'Connell.] The fact was precisely the same as to a man who claimed by grace especial, by birth, or by servitude, before the Reform Bill?—It was.

15258. The corporation admitted him if they chose?—Yes.

15259. They rejected him if they chose?—Yes.

15260. They were not bound to assign any reason for the rejection, if they chose to reject him?—No.

15261. And they could thus reject him whether what he stated was true or false?—They certainly could.

15262. And whether he was a man of good or bad character, or whatever he was?—They had the right of rejection certainly, and exercised it.

15263. Mr. Hamilton.] Has the point been ever brought to the test of a judicial decision, except in the case of Adcocks?—I believe not.

15264. There was a mandamus in that case?—So I understood.

15265. But you cannot state whether there has been a mandamus applied for in any other case?—No.

15266. Chairman.] What were the peculiarities that caused a mandamus to be sought for in that case?—The peculiarities, as I understood, were these: a party sought, I believe by service, to be admitted, and he was rejected, and he brought his mandamus, and that was answered by the corporation returning that they had from time immemorial exercised the right of admitting or rejecting.

15267. Was that return considered valid?—It was, I believe, in that case; I do not know how that case went off.

15268. Now there was a charter in the time of James the 2d, was not there?—Yes.

15269. Which you do not consider valid?—No; it has never been acted upon.

15270. Now as to the claim of rights, or rights of claim; can you trace them prior to that charter?—I think I could not. The book I have only goes back to 1696.

15271. Mr. O'Connell.] Is there one prior?—No; I do not know of any other prior.

15272. Chairman.] I see it is stated by the Municipal Corporation Commissioners, that the present constitution is founded partly on the provisions of several

G. Archer, Esq

30 May 1837.

ral charters, partly on usage and ancient customs, partly on the new rules made in the 25th of Charles the 2d, and principally on the enactments of the statutes of the 33d of George the 2d and the 12th of George the 3d; is that your view of it too?—Yes, it is.

15273. Mr. O'Connell.] You were examined before the Corporation Commissioners?—I was.

15274. Upon oath?—Yes.

15275. Chairman.] Now, with reference to that statement, do you mean to say you conceive that these claims of right are recognised, or if not recognised, are they in any way derogated from by those several charters and those several customs?—I should say not.

15276. They are supported, as far as you can make out, by immemorial usage?—Certainly.

15277. Were you examined before the Corporation Commissioners on this point at all?—Not on that point.

15278. But on the claims of right generally were you examined?—No, I was not.

15279. Are there any rights or immunities belonging to the freemen of the city of Dublin exclusively of parliamentary voting?—Yes; they qualify to become sheriff of Dublin and alderman, and all the corporate offices.

15280. Have they any advantage in point of tolls?—When we had tolls. They have been lost to the corporation for some years past, but at that time every freeman had an advantage by exemption from payment of tolls.

15281. Have the freemen of Dublin any right in other parts of the country besides Dublin?—No.

15282. Have they any peculiar privileges or immunities over their fellow citizens except in the elective franchise?—Not that I am aware of.

15283. Now have they in the guilds any peculiar advantages as to trade or anything of that sort?—No, I think not.

15284. Mr. O'Connell.] Most of the guilds are composed of persons not of the trade of the guild to which they belong?—A great many are so.

15285. In the merchants' there are a great many, are there not?—A great many.

15286. You were a merchant though you were a sworn solicitor at the time?—Yes.

15287. There are clergymen among the merchants, are there not?—Yes.

15288. And half-pay officers?—Yes.

15289. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] And full-pay officers?—Yes.

15290. In fact there is almost every trade there except that of merchant?—I will not say that.

15291. Mr. O'Connell.] But a great body of the merchants of Dublin are not free of the corporation?—The great body of the inhabitants of Dublin are not free of the corporation.

15292. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But the great body of the merchants of Dublin do not belong to the guild of merchants?—No, they do not.

15293. Chairman.] Do I understand you right then, that a freeman has no peculiar advantages or privileges excepting the elective franchise?—No, none other.

15294. Mr. O'Connell.] Except as being officers in their own guilds?—Except as being officers in their own guilds.

15295. Chairman.] They have no advantages that in any way interfere with the general privileges of their fellow-citizens?—No.

15296. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But they had freedom from tolls?—Yes.

15297. Mr. O'Connell.] When did you lose the tolls; about what year?—I think it was ten or a dozen years ago.

15298. Do you remember how much they amounted to?—I believe something between 4,000 l. and 5,000 l. a year.

15299. Chairman.] How is the lord mayor elected?—He is elected under the provision of the Act that is stated there, Lucas's Act; the Act of George the 2d.

15300. He is elected from the aldermen and by the aldermen?—He is returned first by the lord mayor and board of aldermen to the sheriff and commons, and then a ballot takes place, and he is either admitted or rejected.

15300*. Chairman.] Are there frequent elections by the freemen of corporate offices of any sort?—Yes; annually, in their respective guilds.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

George Archer, Esq., called in; and further Examined.

G. Archer, Esq.
1 June 1837.

15301. Mr. O'Connell.] HAVE you been able to make out those returns that were required?—I have; these are the returns that were required.

[Handing in two Returns.]

15302. Is this a return of the number of freemen admitted into the corporation of Dublin from 1825 to 1830, showing the classes and the number admitted in each year; is this return accurate?—It is.

15303. Is this return of the numbers admitted from 1821 to 1825 inclusive, an accurate return?—It is.

15304. Have you no return of persons admitted in those years who did not take the oaths?—No, I have not.

15305. You could not make that out?—I think I could.

15306. Chairman.] You have divided the first return to which you have alluded under four classes; birth 244, service 103, grace especial 251, city at large 89?—Yes.

15307. Now what particular class of freemen do you represent by the term city at large?—A class of freemen by mere favor; freemen admitted at meetings of the corporation, conferred without claim, or the party seeking for his admission.

15308. Mr. O'Connell.] And those persons do not belong to any minor guilds?—No.

15309. Chairman.] Do the freemen admitted under the other three classes all of them belong to minor guilds, or did they?—Yes.

15310. And they were all persons who presented beseeches?—Yes.

15311. But this last class did not present beseeches, and did not belong to the minor guilds?—No.

15312. But previous to the Reform Bill, that last class had a right to vote, had they, for election of members of Parliament?—Yes.

15313. Since the Reform Bill, that last class would not have a right to vote, would they?—No.

15314. Then in point of fact the class of city at large represent what is usually termed honorary freemen?—Yes.

15315. But the class grace especial does not?—I should say not.

15316. And of that class (grace especial) do you conceive the greater proportion were persons claiming under the right of marriage?—Yes.

15317. You cannot state to what extent that claim under the right of marriage extended, can you?—No, I cannot.

15318. Mr. O'Connell.] Could you not make that out by examining the beseeches?—I have not the beseeches here of that period, of 1820.

15319. And besides, in the beseeches for grace especial nothing is said but "by grace"?—The junior corporations state the ground.

15320. How do they state the ground; is it in writing or verbally?—In writing.

15321. Have you any of the documents from the minor corporations, stating the ground of admission?—No, I have not; but I can state what the general grounds were.

G. Archer, Esq.

1 June 1837.

15322. Are there any writings preserved by the corporation of Dublin coming from the minor guilds, and stating these things?—I think there are; I think some can be found.

15323. Have you any of them here?—No, I have not.

15324. Mr. Hamilton.] Those under the three former classes are actually freemen of minor corporations, independently of their being admitted into the corporation at large?—Those by birth, service, and grace especial, were freemen previously admitted into some one of the minor guilds.

15325. And they possessed certain corporate privileges as freemen of the minor guilds?—Yes.

15326. From what privileges were they excluded prior to their being admitted members of the corporation at large?—The privilege of voting for members of Parliament.

15327. Any other privilege?—Yes, the right of custom; I do not know of any other except that.

15328. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you mean freedom from toll and custom? —Freedom from toll.

15329. Mr. O'Connell.] Were they exempt from giving bail in the Recorder's Court?—There would be an exemption in the case of the Recorder's Court too.

15330. And that exemption existed for the men who were only members of the minor guild without being members of the corporation at large?—No, I should think not.

15331. Then they have these two additional privileges, or three while customs were paid, by being members of the corporation at large, that they were exempt from custom; was not that so?—Yes.

15332. That they were exempt from giving bail in the Recorder's Court?—Yes.

15333. And that they had a right of voting for members of Parliament?—Yes.

15334. You have no court of D'Oyer hundred?—No.

15335. Or general meetings of the freemen of Dublin for any corporate purpose?—No.

15336. Mr. Hamilton.] Then, with those exceptions, they possessed all the corporate privileges as members of the minor guilds?—Yes.

15337. Mr. O'Connell.] What are those all?—The right of voting for the officers of minor guilds and participating in any patronage or authority vested in the particular body.

15338. Then they had no share of the general patronage of the corporation without being free of the corporation at large?—None.

15339. They could not be mayors, aldermen, sheriffs, sheriffs' peers; could they?—They could not.

15340. Chairman.] Explain what sheriffs' peers are?—

Mr. O'Connell.] By sheriffs' peers, you mean a person who has either passed the office of sheriff, or fined for it?—

Witness.] Yes.

15341. And these are members of the common council as of right?—They are.

15342. Without election?—Without election, after having served or fined; and they remain members of the common council for life.

15343. Under the title of sheriffs' peers?—Under the title of sheriffs' peers.

15344. And have as much right to speak, vote, and act there as any representative of the guild?—Yes, the same.

15345. Mr. Hamilton.] The honorary freedom, or freedom of the city at large, was only conferred where cause was given for it in the corporation at large?—Some statement was made as a ground of resolution, with a view to confer a compliment in that way.

15346. Mr. O'Connell.] That was given to persons whom they thought deserved it by public service?—Yes.

15347. Such as beating the French?—Yes.

15348. Opposing Roman Catholics, or anything of that kind?—Yes.

15349. Mr. Hamilton.] In the other cases, was it usual for the claim to be rejected, unless cause shown?—I think not.

15350. So that the claim in the first three classes was recognized, and the negative power only exercised on cause being shown?—On cause being shown.

15351. Do you consider then the power of rejecting as being, in point of fact, fact, a veto?—Of course, that is what I understand as a veto; the power of rejection and the power of admission.

G. Archer, Esq.

1 June 1837.

15352. Mr. O'Connell.] You have already said they had the unlimited power of rejection, each body; have you not?—I have.

15353. That is, I suppose, what the honourable Member means by "veto;" they could put a veto on any man they please?—They could enforce a veto on any man they please. What I understand is, that freemen coming from the minor corporations who have a claim of right, and upon which a veto is xercised, contradistinguished from freemen of the city at large.

15354. That is, a claim of right to ask it; is not that so?—Yes.

15355. And to have the question put to the aldermen upon it?—Yes, precisely.

15356. And then the aldermen have a right to say "No," as well as to say "Yes," if they think fit?—They have.

15357. To say whichever of the two they please; is that so?—Yes.

15358. And the common council have precisely the same right?—They have.

15359. So that the amount of the right is, in fact, a mere right to demand?—Yes, a right to demand.

15360. Without any remedy, in case there be a refusal?—I do not know that.

15361. You do not know any remedy?—Except by mandamus.

15362. Do you think that would succeed?—I really do not know how that is. I heard of a case.

15363. That a mandamus was applied for?—Yes; and did not succeed.

15364. Mr. Hamilton.] On reference to the first general Report of the Commissioners of Municipal Corporations in Ireland, can you tell me whether any mode or form of election, or admission into corporate bodies, is stated there to be prescribed in the early charters?

15365. Chairman.] What page is it?—Page eleven. The early charters (it is stated here) do not define the numbers of the corporate body, or prescribe any mode or form of election or admission to it.

15366. Mr. O'Connell.] Is the paragraph numbered?—It is; the first paragraph.

15367. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you tell me whether it is stated there, that there is any right to claim admission, or that the right to claim admission became subject to conditions, limitations, and restrictions?—It is stated, that at a very early period, the right to claim admission as a member of the corporate body became subject to conditions and restrictions.

15368. Those are the observations of the commissioners in relation to corporations in Ireland generally?—Yes.

15369. Is the right spoken of in the last paragraph which you have read, the right of admission or the right to claim admission?—The right to claim admission.

15371. Chairman.] In what year?—I will read the paragraph: "The ruling bodies of these corporations have almost uniformly acted on this clause, as not giving to the inhabitants at large a right to admission, but as vesting in the chief officers and free burgesses a discretionary authority to bestow or withhold the franchise, and to determine who shall be admitted, whether they be inhabitants or others." The soundness of this construction was questioned before the Court of King's Bench in Ireland, in the case of the borough of Sligo, in the year 1824. That court considered, that it appeared upon the affidavits used, that the corporators had been uniformly elected by the provost and free burgesses, and as there was no precedent adduced of admission of any person to the freedom of the borough as of right by virtue of residence or inhabitancy, they decided that the charter admitted of a construction consistent with the usage, and refused to grant a mandamus to admit a resident merchant to the freedom of the borough on the mere ground of inhabitancy.

15372. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] That was the case of the borough of Sligo?—It was the borough of Sligo.

15373. The claim brought forward there, was a claim on the part of the prosecutor in that mandamus to be admitted to the freedom of Sligo, on the ground that he was a merchant living in the town of Sligo?—It was; it so appears.

15374. And he contended, that according to the charter which was produced, all all such merchants inhabiting within the borough were entitled to be freemen?—Yes.

15375. For the charter ran thus; it granted to the inhabitants?—Yes.

15376. Mr. Hamilton.] Do the corporation commissioners state generally that there is no general uniform and absolute right of admission?

Mr. O'Connell.] You had better ask him what they state.

15377. Mr. Hamilton.] What do the commissioners state with regard to a general uniform and absolute right of admission?—It is stated that there is, in fact, no general uniform and absolute right to admission into the municipal corporation.

15378. Mr. O'Connell.] Where is that passage?—It is in page 13.

15379. Mr. Hamilton.] That is in reference to corporations in Ireland generally?—So it appears.

15380. You are aware, I presume, that the Reform Act preserves to corporations in Ireland the rights acquired by birth, marriage and servitude?—I am.

15381. Do the commissioners divide the freemen into two classes, those entitled by birth, servitude and marriage, and those admitted not upon any claim of right but by mere favour?—Yes; the Report states that "the freemen in corporations the most popular——"

15382. Mr. O'Connell.] What page is that?—Page 21. "The freemen in corporations the most popular consist of two classes, those entitled by birth, servitude or marriage, and those admitted not upon any claim of right but by mere favour."

15383. Birth, marriage and servitude, therefore, are there contradistinguished from admission by mere favour?—Yes.

15385. Do you perceive that that is part of a paragraph having in the margin birth, marriage and apprenticeship?—I do.

15386. Now, that paragraph begins thus, does it not: "Being the son of a freeman or married to a daughter of a freeman, or having served an apprenticeship to a freeman, are the common titles"?—Yes.

15387. It goes on, "No qualification of property, or the being a householder, is anywhere requisite to, or regarded in, the claim or title to freedom. In fact, many freemen in Dublin and elsewhere are roomkeepers. In Carrickfergus, Dublin, Kilkenny, Limerick, Londonderry, Waterford and Wicklow, the rights of birth, marriage and apprenticeship appear to be now recognized; but in Limerick that by birth is confined to the eldest son. In Cork and Drogheda, those of birth and servitude only are acknowledged, though that of marriage appears formerly to have been admitted in the former and is supposed to exist in the latter. In Cork, the right by birth is now confined to the first born son; in Wexford, the only title is by apprenticeship; in Bandonbridge, being the eldest son of a freeman; in Naas, the privilege is confined to sons of freemen while resident; in Trim, sons and sons-in-law of freemen are admitted as of right; in Londonderry, the right by birth is confined to the sons of aldermen or burgesses, and that by marriage to the husbands of daughters of aldermen or burgesses; in Dublin, it is necessary that the admission as of right should be previously granted in one of the incorporated guilds, to entitle the applicant to seek admission to the corporation at large from the common council, each branch of which body exercises an arbitrary discretion in granting or withholding the franchise, even when so substantiated." That is the preceding paragraph to the one you read?—Yes.

15388. Mr. Hamilton.] Now look to the First Report on Dublin: do you find in the First Report of the Commissioners on the City of Dublin; do you find it stated that the first charter is a grant by Henry the 2d, of all liberties and free customs which the men of Bristol had, at Bristol and throughout all his territory?—Yes.

15389. Do they subsequently recite the charter as securing to the burgesses of Dublin all their liberties and franchises?—

Mr. O'Connell.] Read the part referred to in your last answer.

Witness.] "The first charter is a grant by Henry the 2d, made at Dublin, but without date (1172 or 1173), to the men of Bristol, of his city of Dublin, to inhabit and hold of him and his heirs with all liberties and free customs, which the

G. Archer, Esq.

1 June 1837.

the men of Bristol had at Bristol and through all his territory. This grant was confirmed by John, when Lord of Ireland, in the lifetime of his father."

15390. That you perceive is a grant to the people of Bristol, of Dublin?—Yes.

15391. Mr. Hamilton.] Now read the second part that I have marked?—"In a claim of cognizance of pleas made in the reign of Richard the Second, and hereinafter noticed, this charter of Henry the Second and the liberties of Bristol are relied on; another charter of Henry the Second is relied on in this claim of cognizance, but its date does not appear; it is the same charter which is published in Leland's History of Ireland, volume i., page 81, from the Sterne manuscripts, and by which King Henry granted to his burgesses of Dublin, that they should be quit of toll and passage, and pontage, and all customs through his whole land of England and Normandy, Wales and Ireland, wheresoever they and their goods should come, and should have all their liberties, and acquitances, and free customs, fully and honourably, as his free and faithful men, and that no one should disturb them in those things contrary to that charter, on pain of 10 l."

15392. Now, will you turn to the Report of the English Commissioners of Municipal Corporations, and state from it whether there is a recital of the same charter; read that charter in reference to Bristol?—Under head "Bristol," in the Report of the English Commissioners of Municipal Corporations, page 1152, I find it stated: "The earliest charter for which any authority can be stated is by Henry the Second, about the year 1164. It is merely a grant to the burgesses of Bristol, of freedom from toll, passage, and custom for them and their goods throughout England, Normandy, and Wales. The next in the collection is a very remarkable one, being a grant in 1172-3, by Henry the Second, of the city of Dublin, to his men of Bristol to dwell in, with all the liberties and free customs which the men of Bristol have at Bristol. It was apparently granted to a colony, which about that time was removed from Bristol to Dublin."

15393. Now will you take the Appendix No. 2, to the Report of the English Municipal Corporation Commissioners, and under the head "Bristol," will you tell me what they recite as being the rights of freedom there?—Under the head of "Freedom, how acquired," I find as to Bristol, birth, marriage, apprenticeship, purchase, and gift.

15394. Marriage then is stated in that Report to be one of the rights acquired for freedom in Bristol?—Yes.

15395. Would you read the paragraph in page 1154 of the second part of the same Report, in reference to the admission by marriage?—Yes; I find under the head of "Bye Laws," that among them is mentioned the custom which still prevails at Bristol, that the husband of a daughter or widow of a freeman is entitled to his freedom.

15396. Mr. O'Connell.] That passage begins, does it not, with these words: "Only a few of these ordinances now have any interest?"—Yes.

15397. Then the words go on which you have read?—They do.

15398. And the paragraph begins with "Before passing to the next and most important charter of Edward the Third, it will be well to notice the compilation of a set of bye-laws which were drawn up by William Colford, recorder of the town, in the 18th year of Edward the Third" (little red book, folio 13). They begin by mentioning, that Stephen Spicer, who was mayor in 1343 and 1344, by common consent, had associated with himself for helping and expediting the business of the town forty-eight of the more principal and discreet men of the town, as assistants and assessors, in form following:—"That they should meet at the Guildhall when summoned by the mayor, and there proceed to business, and that if any of them were absent, the business should be ordered by twenty-four of them, or if there were not so many present, by twelve, and states that many good ordinances of the town having become obsolete, and some nearly forgotten, those three following were agreed on in the presence of most of the abovenamed forty-eight persons." That is the preceding part of the paragraph; is it not?—Yes.

15399. Mr. Hamilton.] Now I wish to call your attention to the Report of the Irish Corporation Commissioners in reference to Dublin, and tell me whether it appears from that Report that the citizens of Dublin have occasionally had recourse to the customs of Bristol, by way of establishing their customs as a branch of the Bristol corporation?—In page 3 it says, "We are not aware of any privileges vileges now exercised or claimed expressly under the authority of this charter, (that refers to the charter of Henry the Second,) but the citizens of Dublin appear occasionally to have inquired respecting particular customs used in Bristol, and to have received certificates of them from the authorities of that city."

15400. In the subsequent page, do you find that the original charter was confirmed by the great charter of Henry the Third?—Yes. "It is one of the articles of the great charter of Ireland, granted by Henry the Third in the first year of his reign, that the city of Dublin shall have all its ancient liberties and free customs."

15401. Do you conceive admission into the corporation at large, in a case in which there has been a previous admission into a minor corporation, is the conferring or the completion of a right; is it the perfecting or the conferring of a right?—It is conferring a right; it is confirmatory of the right, the admission in the corporation.

15402. Is confirmatory of a right?—Yes.

15403. Mr. O'Connell.] How is that; the right in a minor guild refers only to that guild; a man admitted in a minor guild has a right only in that guild?—But unless he comes admitted in a minor guild, we do not entertain him.

15404. Unless by grace especial?—No, unless the city at large.

15405. But a man who is free of the minor guild gets nothing in addition in that guild by becoming free of the city at large; but he gets free of a different corporation?—He gets in that corporation by becoming free of the city at large. He exercises the right in the junior corporation to vote for members for representatives in that corporation to the great corporation; and until he passes the great corporation, he cannot vote either for members of Parliament or for representatives in his own guild, to be returned to the corporation at large.

15406. The man that is free of a minor guild has no right to vote for a member of the common council?—He has not, unless he has passed the city of Dublin.

15407. And then, by passing the city of Dublin, two new rights are conferred upon him?—Yes.

15408. One of those new rights is voting for representatives in his guild, or any guild?—No, not any guild; the particular guild; it must be the particular guild.

15409. The man must be free of a guild before he can be presented?—Yes; upon his passing the corporation of Dublin the effect of it is to give him a right in his particular guild; namely, to vote for representatives in the corporation at large.

15410. Or to be a representative himself if he be elected in the corporation at large?—Yes.

15411. And it also gives him a right to vote for representatives in Parliament? —It does.

15413. Mr. O'Connell.] Whether you use the word confirm or confer a right, that is your meaning?—It confirms the right that he has; it especially confirms the right that he seeks as a freeman of the junior guild.

15414. Until he passes the corporation at large, he has no right to vote for a representative of that guild?—No.

15415. Then the allowing him to vote for a representative is not confirming any thing he had before, but giving him something in addition; is not that so?—It is completing his right in his own corporation.

15416. Is it not giving him something he had not before, and something that he never would have unless he passed the city at large, although he had been fifty years; he may be master or warden of his own guild, without passing the city at large, may he not?—I declare I am not able to answer that; I cannot tell.

15417. Now you know in point of law there is an Act of Parliament directing that no man shall represent a guild but a man of the trade belonging to the guild for which the guild is supposed to be constituted?—There is some provision, I believe, in Lucas's Act.

15418. But, however, it is a provision that is totally neglected, or very much neglected, is it not?—It is neglected, but it is open to petition.

G. Archer, Esq.

1 June 1837.

15419. Do you ever remember a petition?—I do.

15420. Do you remember that the fact was admitted, and yet that the petition was rejected?—I cannot bring it to my recollection; I am sure it has been established both ways.

15421. Do you ever remember my being counsel on a petition before the common council, I believe?—I do.

15422. But there are attornies representing the guild of merchants?—Yes, I believe there were; but not now.

15423. And there were attornies representing several other guilds?—In one or two instances, I think, there are attornies representing them.

15424. Who was your partner in the year 1830?—Mr. William White.

15425. Who was your partner in 1831?—I think he was.

15426. Who was the other town clerk in 1830?—Molesworth Green.

15427. The persons described as Green and Archer, town clerks, in 1830, were Mr. Green and yourself?—Yes.

15428. And it has continued so ever since?—Until the death of Mr. Green, and the election of Mr. Long.

15429. What year was that in?—I think it was about two years ago.

15430. And were Green and Archer town clerks until the death of Mr. Green?—Yes.

15431. And it is now Archer and Long, I suppose?—Yes.

15432. Mr. French.] Do you know of any alphabetical list of the freemen of Dublin admitted since 1756, or a book containing the names and the dates of admission, and specifying the respective rights of birth, marriage, &c.; do you know of such a book having been printed?—I do not; I know of a book commencing, I think, in 1774.

15433. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you any ancient printed list of the freemen?—I do not know of a very ancient one; we have a list that is many years made, certainly.

15434. Printed?—Yes.

15435. Where is that list?—It is in Dublin.

15436. In the custody of the town clerks?—Yes.

15437. Can you state from recollection what the date of it is?—I think it commences in 1774; one book commences in 1774; there is another book which takes up from a period I cannot exactly say when.

15438. Is it prior or subsequent?—Subsequent.

15439. Are these books printed?—They are.

15440. Chairman.] Are they books of authority?—

15441. Mr. O'Connell.] Are they books used by the corporation?—They are so far authority that they were printed for the purpose of elections prior to the Reform Act; that was the object with which they were printed, for use at elections prior to the Reform Bill.

15442. By elections, you mean elections for members of Parliament?—Yes.

15443. And they were used for that purpose?—They were.

15444. And they have been kept as corporation documents since?—Yes.

15445. Is there any such book, printed or manuscript, prior to 1774?—Yes, I have a book here prior to that period.

15446. Manuscript?—Yes.

15447. No printed book is there?—No printed book.

15448. Have you ever seen a printed document of that kind prior to 1774?—Never.

15449. And of course if such a one was in existence it would be in your possession?—I think I should have seen it; it would have been in my possession.

15450. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Was that of 1774, printed under the authority of the town clerk?—It was.

15451. And was it circulated generally?—Except for those occasions it was not.

15452. Was it circulated generally for the purpose of elections?—Copies of those books were placed in the hands of the deputy sheriffs, the manuscript remaining with the assessor to check in case of objection.

15453. Then it was to facilitate the deputies in seeing whether the persons who tendered themselves to vote, were truly upon the list of freemen or not?—Yes, to facilitate reference.

15454. Inasmuch as the manuscript book could only be in one place?—Yes.

15455. Mr.

G. Archer, Esq.

1 June 1837.

15455. Mr. O'Connell.] And it enabled him to reject any body that was not upon that list?—Yes.

15456. And whoever appeared upon that list, he primâ facie was entitled to be admitted?—Yes.

15457. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] There is, I suppose, extant, several copies of that?—I cannot say several, there are some.

15458. There are some in your office probably?—Yes.

15459. Mr. O'Connell.] You can produce one by sending for it?—Yes.

15460. Mr. O'Connell.] Then be so good as send for it.

15461. Show me the manuscript book prior to that of 1774?

[The Witness did so.]

15462. Then the printed list was printed from a book of the description, such as you have already produced?—It was.

15463. And such as you use at present?—Yes.

15464. Now be so good as to look at the admission of freemen in Christmas 1836, I mean that which was held in January 1836?—What name?

15465. Henry Hall; do you find Mr. Henry Hall?—I do.

15466. When was he admitted?—In Michaelmas Assembly, 1835.

15467. What was his claim?—Service.

15468. Have you his beseech here?—Yes.

[The Witness produced it.]

15469. In several of the beseeches which you have produced by service, there was "To be granted, provided it appears by indenture"?—Yes.

15470. Why was that omitted in the case of Mr. Hall?—Some omission of the clerk; but there was no omission intended in point of practice, certainly.

15471. Read, if you please, from another beseech for service, the words that are attached to the grant by the board of aldermen?—"Granted on taking the oaths, if it shall appear by indenture."

15472. The beseech of Mr. Henry Hall appears to be in the following words: "To the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons and Citizens of the City of Dublin, beseech your Honors, Henry Hall, of 22, Lower Ormond Quay, to be admitted into the liberties and franchises of the City of Dublin by service, having served his years of apprenticeship to Edward Carolin, junior, free carpenter, who came in at Michaelmas Assembly, 1813, by service, granted on taking the oaths;" but there should have been in the margin, "On taking the oaths," (the words should have been added) "if it shall appear by indenture"?—Yes.

15473. But it was understood these words were applicable to it?—Certainly.

15474. And it is only a mistake?—That is all.

15475. It is only a mistake of the clerk that those words are not added?—It is.

15476. I believe that is filled in your handwriting, is it not?—It is not.

15477. Whose handwriting is that?—I think that is Mr. Grabham's handwriting.

15478. Do you know Mr. Henry Hall?—No.

15479. Can you state what guild he came from; I suppose from the carpenters'?—Yes, the carpenters'.

15480. Who is the clerk of the guild of carpenters?—I declare I do not know.

Mr. Henry Hall, called in; and Examined.

Mr. Henry Hall.

15481. Chairman.] WHAT are you?—An architect and builder.

15482. Where do you live?—23, Arran-quay, Dublin.

15483. Mr. O'Connell.] How long have you been in business?—Since Christmas 1836.

15484. Have you been in business for yourself since; is that what you mean?—Yes.

15485. You were in the employment of a Mr. Carolin, were you?—Yes.

15486. Which Mr. Carolin?—Mr. Edward Carolin, jun.

15487. Were you ever bound to him by indenture?—I was.

15488. When?—I was bound on the 4th of August 1828.

15489. Where is that indenture?—Here it is [producing it].

15490. Chairman.] You are on the register for the city of Dublin, are you?—Yes, I am.

15491. When were you registered?—My certificate bears date the 2d of February 1836.

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15492. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] When were you out of your time as an apprentice?—I was out of my time seven years from the 4th of August 1828; that is, in 1835, the 4th of August 1835.

15493. Your servitude expired then?—Yes.

15494. Mr. O'Connell.] Was this executed on the day it bears date?—It was lying in Mr. Carolin's hands some time.

15495. When was it actually executed; I expect you to be candid with me; when was this, in point of fact, executed?—It got Carolin's name to it when I was out of my time; when I was seven years with Carolin.

15496. Then it was not signed until after you had been seven years with him?—Not by Carolin himself.

15497. You perceive that Carolin's is the first signature?—Edward Carolin, jun., is the first signature.

15498. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Was it signed by any other person before that time?—Signed by me.

15499. Was it signed by you at the time you were put apprentice to him?—It was signed some time after; I cannot exactly say the time.

15500. Mr. O'Connell.] Then you mean to say this was not signed, either by you or Mr. Carolin, in the year 1828?—No, it is not a usual thing; because the way that is generally regulated is, you are taken on trial for some time previously, and that time is allowed you in your indenture.

15501. Can you tell us in what year this was signed by you, or by Mr. Carolin?—I cannot tell when it was signed by me, because it was lying in Carolin's hands for a good while previously.

15502. What documents are those you have?—They are only my certificates.

15503. Will you have the goodness to show them me [the Witness did so]; what is that other?—It is the copy of a letter I wrote to the Chairman of this Committee, for the summons was issued in a wrong name.

15504. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you state it is usual in Dublin, when young men are put apprentice, that they should remain for a certain time in the service of their masters before the indenture is regularly perfected?—It is generally, except where there is a fee given.

15505. Was there any fee given with you?—No, there was not.

15506. And the usual course is, when young men, who do not bring a fee to the masters, are being put apprentice, that they remain in their employment a certain time upon trial, and then that time of trial is allowed in their time of servitude?—Yes.

15507. And their indentures are dated as from the time they first went?—Yes.

15508. Mr. French.] Do you think that that indenture was signed by you before the end of the year 1829?—I cannot say when it was signed.

15509. Mr. O'Connell.] Look at it; was it not signed by you after Carolin had signed it?—No, it was not; because though Carolin's name goes first, I signed my name there to leave room for Carolin to put his name before mine; because the master always signs the indenture before the person bound to him.

15510. Can you tell us what year at all you signed it?—I could not now.

15511. Was Philip Morris or Mary Ann Hall present when you signed it?—Morris was present.

15512. Who is that Mary Ann Hall?—My mother.

15513. Is she alive?—No.

15514. She was not by when you signed it?—I got her to sign it because I left the indenture in Carolin's hands for Carolin to complete it.

15515. Was your mother present when you signed it?—My mother was; no, she was not; not when I signed it.

15516. Was Philip Morris present when you signed it?—He was.

15517. Where is Philip Morris?—I do not know, indeed.

15518. Who was he?—He was a young man, a friend of mine.

15519. Was he in business?—No, he was not.

15520. When did you see him last?—I cannot exactly say.

15521. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] About how long ago is it since you may have seen him last?—I think about 12 months ago.

15522. Where did you see him?—I met him in Dublin accidentally.

15523. He is a witness to your indenture?—He is.

15524. Do not you know what trade he belonged to?—He was no trade.

15525. Had he any occupation?—He lived with his father at that time.

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15526. What was his father?—He was something in the Custom-house; I did not know his father, but I know he was in the Custom-house at that time.

15527. Did he see you sign this?—I do not think he did.

15528. Then your opinion is that neither of the witnesses saw you sign this?—They did not see me sign it.

15529. Neither of them saw you sign it?—Morris saw Carolin sign it.

15530. How long is your mother dead?—She is dead, I think, about two years.

15531. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] And you say your mother saw you execute it, and Morris saw Carolin execute it?—Yes. My mother did not see me. I handed it over to my mother because it was a form that she put her name to it.

15532. Mr. O'Connell.] You have told me that neither of the witnesses saw you execute it?—Saw me write it.

15533. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] How came your mother, then, to sign it?—Because it was necessary she should put her name to the indenture, that it was with her consent I was apprenticed; my mother was not a necessary witness to it at all.

15534. Is that your mother's handwriting, her name?—My mother's handwriting; I left it with her to be signed.

15535. Look at it again, and look at it very attentively, and recollect, I would beg of you to recollect, you are giving evidence, though you are not upon oath; now I ask you, is that a feigned handwriting at all?—I suppose it is.

15536. Did you ever see your mother write?—I did.

15537. Do you believe that to be her handwriting?—I cannot say it is.

15538. Do you believe it to be her handwriting?—I do not think it is her writing; but if you will let me remark, it is not necessary she should put her name to it at all.

15539. Mr. O'Connell.] Then when was her name put to it; by whom; tell us the fact?—Her name was put to it by me.

15540. Then you know perfectly well that that is your handwriting, and not your mother's?—I do; but it was with her desire I put it.

15541. Then that is your handwriting, and not your mother's?—Yes, that name is my handwriting.

15542. Now could you not tell us where Philip Morris is to be found?—I could not, indeed, I cannot tell you where he lives; but I can tell you where he is, and where he can be met with; he is in Carolin's employment, at present, I think; at least, he was about four months ago.

15543. Now when did you put your mother's name here to this; was it after Carolin signed it?—It was.

15544. Now tell us the fact, when you really put your mother's name to it?—It was after Carolin, some time after Carolin signed it.

15545. Carolin signed it about the time you were going to apply for your freedom to the corporation?—He signed it the day after I was out of my time, I think.

15546. When was that?—The 4th of August 1835.

15547. Mr. French.] Was it before or after your mother's death that you put her name to it?—After her death.

15548. Mr. Hogg.] And why did you put her name to it?—In fact, there was no occasion for her name to be put to it; that was in order that it should appear with her consent that the indenture was performed.

15549. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You said she desired you to put her name to it; when did she desire you?—She desired me to put her name to it; at first she intended, when the indenture was got from Carolin, that she should put her name herself.

15550. Are you sure she desired you to put her name to it?—I am.

15551. Mr. O'Connell.] How long is she dead; three years?—No, only two.

15552. Two years, and how much?—Two years in July next.

15553. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Was this document deposited with Mr. Carolin?—It was deposited some time ago; I cannot exactly say how long.

15554. Mr. O'Connell.] Tell us the honest truth; have you not often said it was made up in order to get you registered?—It was. I served my time regularly to Carolin for seven years.

15555. But there was no indenture?—Well, I conceived that to be an apprenticeship; I was seven years with him.

15556. There

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15556. There was no indenture during those seven years, nor until you were going to be registered?—No, there was not. I had the indenture, and was always wanting Carolin to sign it, but he deferred it.

15557. But there was no indenture until you were going to be made free; to be registered; is not that the fact?—It is.

15558. Then this indenture was made up for the purpose of getting you freed, that you might be registered, is not that the fact?—It was not the fact on my part, nor I do not think on Carolin's part either; I only wanted that to show; because if a person is in business it is pleasant to have his indentures to show if called on for them at any time.

15559. Had you any conversation with Mr. Carolin as to your being registered and becoming a voter?—I had.

15560. Now was it not after that conversation that the indenture was filled?—The day I was out of my time, I told Carolin I was seven years with him that day; "Well," said he, "them indentures of yours that you asked me about, I will fill them for you now;" according to the way that he proposed to take me at first.

15561. In whose hand was this filled up after you had served the seven years?—The body of it in my handwriting.

15562. How soon after you had served the seven years did you fill it up?—The very day.

15563. The day after?—Yes.

15564. Then when you said awhile ago this was executed in August 1828, you said what was not the fact?—I will tell you how it was; I did not recollect at the moment there was an indenture that I had filled up, and that indenture was worn out. I was carrying it about my person for a length of time, and that indenture was worn out, and I copied that indenture from it; it was so defaced that it could not be intelligible.

15565. But Carolin had not executed that?—No, he had not.

15566. Now, when exactly was it that you filled it up, tell us?—That one?

15567. Yes?—I filled up that the very day after I was out of my time.

15568. That is, after you had been seven years with him?—Yes.

15569. Now I call upon you to tell the facts; you may perhaps place yourself unpleasantly, but tell the facts?—

15570. Chairman.] Now tell the whole story?—

15571. Mr. O'Connell.] Tell the whole truth; was not this an arrangement in order to get you free, and to have you registered?—It was not an arrangement on my part, because I was anxious when I was with Carolin for seven years that I should get the indenture from him, that I might claim from Carolin proper man's wages.

15572. Were you not at wages during the entire time?—I was; but I had not the wages while serving my time that I would have had afterwards.

15573. Had you ever served the business at all before you went to Carolin?—Never a day.

15574. What capacity were you in with Carolin; what particular department?—I was working at the bench; I was measuring.

15575. Had you wages from the beginning?—Yes, from the beginning.

15576. Were you paid them?—I was paid them regularly every Saturday night.

15577. There was nothing due to you when you had been seven years with him?—Not a penny.

15578. He had paid you everything?—He had.

15579. Was not this a contrivance of Carolin's; tell the truth; was not this a contrivance of Carolin's? I call upon you to tell the truth; recollect the presence you are in, and tell the truth; was not this a contrivance of Carolin's; I do not say an improper one, but was it not an arrangement of Carolin's to have you pass the corporation and be registered?—I cannot say it was.

15580. Did he not say something of that kind to you, that he would wish you to do so?—Not until I had asked him for the indentures first.

15581. When you did ask him for the indentures he said so?—I will tell you what he said to me, candidly. He said, "In a short time the corporation may be abolished, and it will be useful to you in the way of your business; it will bring you in conjunction with a number of people in your line."

15582. "And it will be useful to you to pass the corporation and be registered"?—"To pass the corporation; because if you do not do it shortly you will not be able to pass it at all, as we expect them all to be done away."

15583. "And

1 June 1837.

15583. "And then you will be registered"?—When I passed the corporation, that would follow as a matter of course.

15584. He said that to you?—He said that to me.

15585. He said it would follow as a matter of course?—

15586. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you mean he said it would follow as a matter of course?—He did not say anything to me about the registering of me; I said that for myself, that it would follow as a matter of course when I passed the corporation.

15587. Did he speak to you about registering?—No, only about passing the corporation he spoke to me.

15588. Mr. O'Connell.] Was this indenture enrolled while you were serving your apprenticeship?—It was enrolled afterwards, it did not require to be enrolled, I think, while I was serving my apprenticeship.

15589. When was it enrolled?—It was enrolled when I passed the commons or passed the guild.

15590. But when was that?—It was in October 1835, I think.

15591. That was just before you passed the city to be registered?—Before I passed the city.

15592. Did Mr. Carolin know how you would vote if you were registered?—Did he know how I would vote? He never said a word to me on the subject.

15593. Did Mr. Carolin ever certify you had served your apprenticeship under this indenture?—In the beseech that was sent in to the commons, it was specified that I served my time to Edward Carolin, junior.

15594. Did Mr. Carolin ever certify you had served your time to him under this indenture?—It was he that proposed me in the commons. I did not see that.

15595. You never saw that?—I saw the stamp it was on in the book; I was shown it, the stamp that my proposal was on; I do not know whether it was written by Carolin or not.

15596. How much did you pay for the stamp?—A pound.

15597. Who gave you the pound?—Who gave me it?

15598. Yes?—I gave it myself.

15599. Who gave it to you?—Who gave it to me? I had a pound of my own money.

15600. Earned from Mr. Carolin?—I cannot say whether it was earned from Mr. Carolin, because I have other ways of getting money besides having it from him. I cannot exactly say whether the pound was earned from Mr. Carolin or not.

15601. Mr. Hamilton.] But it was your own money, bonâ fide?—My own money, bonâ fide my own money.

15602. Mr. O'Connell.] Who proposed to you to have this thing done at all?—To have which done?

15603. To have you made free of the corporation?—Carolin. I told you what Carolin said to me, if I did not get free of the corporation now, I would not be able to do it.

15604. Who proposed to you to get free of the corporation?—Carolin; I told you what he said to me.

15605. Now, can you tell us the very day you commenced with Carolin?—The 4th of August 1828; it was on a Monday, I think.

15606. Show me the letter you wrote to his lordship. [The Witness did so.] Now did Morris know you were making up this indenture?—He did not; he knew nothing at all about it.

15607. When did you first tell Morris of it?—Morris was in the office when I was speaking to Carolin, and he said, "Come here," says he, "and witness this;" and Morris just put his name to it.

15608. It was Carolin that called on Morris to witness it?—Yes.

15609. Morris is still in the employment of Carolin, is he not?—I do not know indeed; I have not seen him for some time.

15610. Have you any doubt he is?—I cannot exactly say that he is.

15611. Your mother was dead, then, at the time this was signed, according to you?—Yes, she was.

15612. It was after her death you put her name to it?—Yes. I had forgotten when I stated before; the other indenture that I had was worn out, and it was with my mother's consent that I went to Carolin.

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15613. Of course it was; but the other was never executed, you told me?—No, it was not.

15614. Were you by when Carolin gave you that certificate of having served your apprenticeship?—I was.

15615. You saw him write that?—I did.

15616. Mr. Hogg.] Was your father living when you first entered into the service of Carolin?—No, he was not; he was just a week dead when I went to Carolin.

15617. How old were you then?—I was 14.

15618. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Is it usual for an apprentice to receive payment or wages of his master?—It is, when he is not an indoor apprentice.

15619. And you were not an indoor apprentice?—No.

15620. And there was a certain allowance made to you from the very time you began?—Yes; Carolin was a friend of my father's, and when my father died, he took me as his apprentice; he was only a week dead when Carolin took me, and allowed me 4*s.* a week for the first year.

15621. And was it understood at the time you went that you should be in the capacity of an apprentice?—Certainly.

15622. Although you received this payment?—Yes.

15623. And you say that is usual?—It is usual; all the apprentices had it.

15624. Had he other apprentices?—He had.

15625. And did they all receive payment in that way?—They did, all.

15626. Permit me to ask you, with reference to your going apprentice, was it understood from the beginning, from the time you first went into his employ, that you went there, or were to go there, as an apprentice?—It was understood from the first day I went.

15627. Was it understood you should be an indentured apprentice?—Yes.

15628. Was that the understanding from the beginning?—It was the understanding from the beginning.

15629. When was it that you originally prepared that indenture, which you say was defaced by being carried about your person for a length of time?—I prepared it shortly after I went to Carolin's.

15630. When you say shortly after, are you able to say it was within the first year?—It was within the first year.

15631. And you filled it up?—I filled it up, and I was always wanting Carolin to sign it, and he always deferred it from day to day, saying, "I have not time now; I will do it for you; there is time enough, because, whatever time you are with me I will allow you when I sign the indenture."

15632. Are you clear in your recollection that you repeatedly applied to Mr. Carolin to execute that indenture?—I am confident.

15633. And that he postponed it in that way from time to time, saying he would do it?—He did, until at last I got careless; Carolin being a friend of my father's, I knew he would not defraud me out of any time I was with him.

15634. Now I ask you, as a witness under examination, and I think, under the solemnity, very little short, if at all short, of the solemnity of being on oath?—Certainly, I consider myself so.

15635. But I ask you, under the solemnity of that obligation, to tell the truth; was it a contrivance on your part, or to your knowledge on Carolin's part, to get up this indenture, as if you were an indentured apprentice, for the purpose of registering you as a voter?—Certainly not; I proposed to Carolin the day I was out of my time to give me the indenture, because I should have the indenture to show to any one I would endeavour to get employment from, if they wanted to look at it.

15636. And when you drew up the document you now produce, and conversed with Mr. Carolin on the subject, was there any reference made upon that occasion to your being an elector of Dublin, or your being registered, and getting this document for the purpose of being registered?—It was not for the purpose of being registered that I got it. When the indenture was drawn up, Carolin said, "I will get you enrolled in the corporation now, and if you do not get it now, it will not be in your power to get it, because the corporations will shortly be done away with."

15637. Mr. O'Connell.] How soon after you made up this indenture were you admitted free?—I was out of my time in August 1835, and I was passed in the October assembly, I think.

15638. Mr. Hogg.] How many other apprentices were there besides you?—

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15639. Mr. O'Connell.] How many others has Mr. Carolin lately passed as apprentices?—While I was with Carolin, I could only say to one more besides myself.

15640. How many were registered with you as apprentices of Carolin?—None; no one at all.

15641. Do you know of any persons having been passed as apprentices by Carolin, or certified for?—Only one.

15642. What is his name?—His name is Dobbin.

15643. What is his christian name?—David.

15644. Now I caution you again, because it will be my painful duty to take some steps about the evidence you have given; I call upon you now to tell the real fact; did you ever tell anybody this was a contrivance of Carolin's to get you registered?—I never told any one of it at all, although they knew in the yard (several people) that I was made free at the time I was.

15645. Did you ever tell anybody that Carolin asked you whether you would vote the right way if he would make you free?—I never did.

15646. Did he ever say if you would vote the right way?—He never said a word about it to me at all.

15647. Can you tell me how many Mr. Carolin has brought into the corporation by service, within the last two years?—I can only state positively to one person.

15648. Can you state from hearsay any others?—I cannot state anything from hearsay at all.

15649. Now, you have not the least doubt this indenture was not filled up until after the 28th of August 1835; you have not the least doubt of that; you recollect that perfectly well?—I do.

15650. You remember you own filling up the entire of it after the 28th of August 1835, do not you?—Yes.

15651. At whose place did you fill it up?—At whose place?

15652. Yes, at whose residence?—I filled it up at my own residence.

15653. Who was present when you filled it up?—I do not know, indeed.

15654. How soon after you filled it up did you produce it to Carolin?—I produced it, I think, that very day.

15655. It is very recently; surely you must recollect; how soon after you filled it up did you present it to Carolin?—I presented it that day; the day I filled it up; the day I copied it from the other one, rather.

15656. Did you or Carolin first sign it; which of you?—I signed it first.

15657. Was Carolin by when you signed it?—No, I do not think he was; he was not by when I signed it.

15658. How long had your mother been dead before you put her name to it?—My mother died in the July or June before I was out of my time.

15659. Answer my question; how long had your mother been dead before you put her name to it?—I think about three months, or two months.

15660. Full two months?—Yes.

15661. When did Philip Morris put his name to it?—When Carolin signed it.

15662. When was that?—The day after I was out of my time.

15663. When did Carolin put the certificate of service upon the back of it?—He put it when I was going to the commons to be sworn in.

15664. Did you swear that you had served an apprenticeship to him under this indenture; did you not swear that?—I swore that that was my indenture.

15665. And that you had served under it?—I swore I had served seven years to Carolin, because I conceived myself, and Carolin too, that I had served a lawful seven years to him.

15666. Conceiving that, you swore you had served seven years under this indenture?—Yes, conceiving I had served a lawful seven years.

15667. You therefore swore you served seven years under this indenture?—I do not say under that indenture. I swore I had served seven years to Mr. Carolin, and that was my indenture.

15668. And did you not swear you had served those seven years under this indenture; was not that the meaning of what you swore?—As well as I can recollect, I was not sworn to the indenture at all.

15669. Were you not sworn to the service?—I was.

15670. Were you not sworn to the service under the indenture?—No, I was not.

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15671. Did you not produce the indenture at the time you were sworn?—I did.

15672. Did you not produce it as that under which you had served your apprenticeship?—I produced the indenture, certainly.

15673. Did you not produce it as that under which you had served your apprenticeship; did you not?—Yes, I produced it in William-street.

15674. At the time you were sworn?—Yes.

15675. Before whom were you sworn?—I was sworn, I think, before Mr. Archer.

15676. Mr. Archer.] You were sworn by me.

15677. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you remember the tenor of the oath you took; the words?—It was to be faithful to His Majesty, and different other things.

15678. Mr. O'Connell.] You were sworn before the lawyer of the minor guild, were you not, first?—No, not first.

15679. How many oaths were you sworn to?—I think two.

15680. Well, where did you swear you had served your apprenticeship faithfully; before whom did you take that oath?—I do not recollect taking that oath.

15681. Did you not tell us just now you swore you had served your apprenticeship faithfully?—I said I was sworn at William-street; but I do not recollect the tenor of the oath I was sworn to; I did not say I swore I had served my time faithfully under that indenture.

15682. But did you not tell us you swore you served your time faithfully?—Faithful to the King, I said.

15683. Did you swear before anybody that you served your apprenticeship faithfully, no matter whether under this indenture or otherwise?—I do not recollect swearing that.

15684. Do you recollect whether you did or not swear anything of that kind?—I do not.

15685. Could you have sworn that and have forgotten it?—I could have sworn it, and have forgotten it, but to the best of my belief I did not.

15686. Since the 28th August 1835, cannot you tell us positively whether or not you swore that you had served your apprenticeship faithfully?—I do not recollect having sworn that.

15687. Can you tell us positively whether you did or not?—I cannot positively. I do not recollect, because it was a very long paper that I read the oath out of; and perhaps them words were in it; I do not recollect them words being in it.

15688. Then you cannot tell us whether you did or not?—No, not positively.

15689. Mr. Edward Carolin is, of course, alive?—He is.

15690. And Mr. Philip Morris; who asked Morris to be witness to this?—He was a boy in the office, and Carolin said "Come over here and witness this."

15691. Then it was Carolin who called him to witness this?—Yes.

15692. Who got you the indenture?—I got it myself.

15693. From whom?—I do not know; from some one on the Quay.

15694. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] A stamp-seller, a law-stationer?—Yes.

15695. Mr. Hogg.] Was Dobbin an apprentice with Carolin at the same time as you were there?—He was.

15696. Was he an apprentice under indentures?—He was.

15697. Were his indentures executed and signed at the time he entered into the service of Carolin?—He was given over by another person to Carolin.

15698. At the time he was so given over, was there any formal transfer of the indentures?—I do not know; I only heard that from himself, because it was a thing there was no secret kept about.

15699. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Have the kindness to take the indenture in your hand. Would you look at the body of that, and see whether it contains any mention of the terms of your serving and being paid at any rate?—It does. It mentions the exact payment that I was to receive.

15700. Read what it states?—"4*s.* every week for the first year, and an increase of 2*s.* for each succeeding year."

15701. Is that embodied in the indenture?—Yes; and "all the time Henry Hall wilfully loses, not to be allowed him."

15702. Now just look at the other parts of it, and see whether the words "to dwell" (the form of that was for an in-door apprentice), see whether the words "to

209

1 June 1837.

"to dwell" are struck out?—Yes, I think the indentures are all printed in the same form.

15703. But you were an out-door apprentice?—I was.

15704. And was that the agreement that was made, that you should be so?—Yes, when I went to Carolin.

15705. Then you filled that up after your time was out, but agreeably to the terms on which you originally went to Carolin's?—Exactly.

15706. Now look at the back of it; the certificate; is that Mr. Carolin's?—It is.

15707. Is it his handwriting?—It is, every bit.

15708. Read it?—"I certify that the within-named Henry Hall served me for the space of seven years, faithfully, industriously and honestly, with the greatest care and attention. Edward Carolin, junior, 13, Talbot-street."

15709. Is that true?—It is; on my oath, that is true; I served him for the full time of seven years, and it was owing to a procrastination on his part, and partly carelessness on my own, that the indenture was not filled up before.

15710. Then all that is stated in that is true?—It is; everything that is stated in it.

15711. Mr. Hamilton.] You are quite sure a previous indenture, though not perfected, existed?—It did; and as well as I can recollect, Carolin saw the torn indenture in my hand.

15712. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you ever taken an apprentice?—No, I have not.

15713. Have you ever certified for any person as having served you?—Never. I might have vouched for people when they have been passing the corporation, whether they were respectable characters or not.

15714. Did you ever vouch anybody ever served an apprenticeship to you?—Never.

15715. Who did you vouch for on passing the corporation; who by name?—I think Mr. Roger Cooper was one; when they asked the people who were in the guild, did any one know him or know his character, I said I did know him.

15716. Who else did you vouch for?—I do not recollect vouching for any one else.

15717. Can you say you did not vouch for anybody else?—I can.

15718. It was after you were made free yourself that you vouched for Roger Cooper?—It was; that was a mere matter of form, the vouching.

15719. Was it true, what you vouched for him?—I said that I knew him.

15720. Was what you said of him true?—It was.

15721. Did you say anything more than that you knew him?—Nothing whatever.

15722. Only that you knew him?—That was all.

15723. Now did you never tell anybody that you had passed several people as apprentices to yourself?—I never told any one that.

15724. Nor any such thing?—I never told any one any such thing.

15725. Did you ever tell any one that Mr. Carolin had passed a great many freemen?—I never told any one a word about it; I might have told people that I vouched for persons in the guild.

15726. Who was it went with you to be registered; who called upon you to be registered?—The notice to register was served for me by Mr. Pike.

15727. Who is Mr. Pike?—He was master of the guild of carpenters at that time.

15728. Do you belong to any particular body; to any lodge of any kind?—No, I do not.

15729. You never did?—Never.

15730. You altered the sums in filling that indenture; look at it, you made alterations?—I altered the figure 4 into letters.

15731. When did you make that alteration?—I made it since the indenture was signed by Carolin.

15732. There is another alteration, "every week;" when did you make that?—That was "per week," and it was altered into "each week."

15733. "Every," it is?—It is "every;" it was "per week."

15734. When did you make that alteration?—At the same time with the 4.

15735. That was after it was executed by Carolin?—Yes.

15736. Mr. Lefroy.] You were going to state why you altered it?—Why it was altered was, because the 4 was very small, and it would have been liable to have have been altered into 14. It is always the rule in making indentures to write the sum in writing instead of putting it in figures.

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15737. Mr. Hamilton.] Your business is that of an architect, or builder? —Yes.

15738. Is it expected, in that line of business, that men should have their indentures, if they are entitled to them?—It is.

15739. So that your indenture was an object to you?—I could have compelled Carolin to give me the indentures, or a certificate that I had served seven years to him, if he had refused doing it; it is a very great object.

15740. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Is it the practice in Dublin, amongst the tradesmen, to prevent persons from going into the employ of anybody, who have not been regularly apprenticed?—It is.

15741. And is it of importance for masters, in that view, to be furnished with the indentures, if, in fact, they had served their apprenticeship, in order to prevent any objection on the part of the union of trades?—Certainly, if the person serves the full time; if the person serves the seven years.

15742. Have there been any formidable combinations among the workmen in Dublin?—There are, at present, two.

15743. Have there been homicides committed in Dublin by either of those persons who were employed in that carpentering and building trade?—There have, several, and in that very employment that I was in, too.

15744. That is in the building line?—Yes.

15745. Among the carpenters?—Yes.

15746. And have the workmen who have entered into these unlawful combinations, and proceeded to these dreadful extremities, made it a pretext, at any time, to accuse men of their coming into the trade without having their indentures, and served their time?—That is one of the principal causes; they have.

15747. And did you consider it an object, as a person having an indenture on account of trade, that you should be armed with a certificate and regular document? —Certainly I did, and at the very time I was out of my time; I can take my oath of that, that I mentioned it to Carolin to complete the indentures for me.

15748. On that ground?—On that ground, certainly, because I could not go to any other man and look for employment from him if I had not my indentures to show.

15749. Mr. Lefroy.] Has this practice of serving apprenticeship without indentures being executed, taken place with other carpenters?—I do not know, indeed; I was peculiarly situated with Carolin.

15750. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] I believe Mr. Carolin is a most respectable man, and in a very extensive way of business in Dublin?—He is.

15751. He has been very forward in resisting those unlawful combinations among workmen in Dublin; has he not?—He has been one of the most forward in it.

15752. Mr. O'Connell.] He has set the men at defiance?—Yes.

15753. Has he been instrumental in bringing any of those men to justice who have been concerned in these unlawful combinations?—Yes, he has, several; three or four.

15754. Sir Robert Ferguson.] Is he not in the habit of employing workmen without certificates of their having served their time?—He is; he must do so.

15755. Mr. Hamilton.] Why do you say he must do so?—Because, if he gets a press of work, he cannot go and examine every man that comes to him to look for work; and men from the country, who do not serve their regular time, will come up to Dublin, and work for low wages.

15756. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you a brother-in-law who is free of any corporation?—I have.

15757. What is that gentleman's name?—His name is Price.

15758. What is his Christian name?—Henry Price.

15759. What is he by profession?—He is a chemist; he keeps chemical works.

15760. Where?—In Lincoln-lane.

15761. Has he served an apprenticeship to anybody, do you know?—I do not know.

15762. He did not serve an apprenticeship to Mr. Carolin?—Not at all.

15763. When was he made free of the corporation of Dublin?—I do not know about him, when he was made free.

15764. Is he married to a sister of yours?—No.

15765. Are you married to a sister of his?—I am.

15766. Mr.

211

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15766. Mr. Hogg.] Did you remain with Carolin after your seven years were expired?—I remained with him, I think, about two months.

15767. After the expiration of the seven years, were your weekly or monthly wages increased?—They were.

15768. Did you claim an increase on the score of having completed your servitude?—Certainly I did.

15769. And did he admit an increase of wages on that ground?—He did.

15770. What was that increase?—I had 1 l. 4 s.

15771. During the last year?—No; I had only 18*s.*

15772. What had you weekly immediately before the expiration of your servitude?—Eighteen shillings.

15773. Did you, when that period was expired, claim an increase on account of the servitude having been completed?—I did.

15774. Did you get it?—I got it; 1 l. 4 s.

15775. Then you got an increase of 6 s.?—Six shillings.

15776. On the ground of your apprenticeship being completed?—Yes.

15777. Do you happen to know if it is usual, that system of antedating indentures among apprentices in Dublin?—It is usual, as I stated before.

15778. Where no fee is given?—Where no fee is given; whatever time you are with them they always allow in the indentures.

15779. And you believe that to be a common practice?—It is a common practice.

15780. Mr. O'Connell.] How much a week had you the last year?—Eighteen shillings.

15781. That is the year 1834; from 1834 to 1835 how much had you; from August 1834 to August 1835 how much had you?—Eighteen shillings.

15782. How long had you that 18*s.*; how many years?—One year only.

15783. How much had you the year from 1833 to 1834?—Sixteen shillings.

15784. How much had you the year before that, from 1832 to 1833?—I think it was 14 s. I had that year.

15785. How much had you the year before that again, from 1831 to 1832?—I had 12 s.; I got an advance of 2 s. every year.

15786. From 1830 to 1831?—I had 11 s. part of it, and I had 10 s. He gave me an advance for more than I was entitled to at one time.

15787. From 1829 to 1830?—I think it was 8 s. I had then, and 9 s.

15788. Eight shillings part of that year, and 9 s. the remainder?—Yes.

15789. From 1828 to 1829?—That was the first year I went to him. I had 4 s., and I had 5 s. part of it; and I think, as far as I can recollect, he gave me 6 s. on one occasion.

15790. Can you state positively he gave you 6 s.?—I can.

15791. These payments you mean are weekly payments?—Weekly; every Saturday.

15792. Who advised you to put your mother's name to this?—No one at all advised me; it was not at all necessary.

15793. To advise you?—It was not necessary to put it to it; if she had lived I would not have put it to it.

15794. Mr. Hamilton.] Was her name to the previous indenture?—I do not think it was.

15795. Was there any name to it?—My name was to it.

15796. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you mean your name was to it as an executing party?—Yes, it was.

15797. Mr. Hogg.] Was there any witness attesting your signature to the first indenture?—No, I do not think there was; because it was when Carolin would sign it that the witness would be necessary.

5798. Chairman.] How long ago is it that Mr. Carolin resisted these unlawful ssociations?—He resisted them before I went to him.

15799. Were the persons in his employ the objects of particular dislike by these associations?—They were particularly so.

15800. Were the persons in his employ likely therefore to have a great number of enemies?—More than any other employment in the city of Dublin.

15801. So that all those persons who had been in his employ, whether apprentices or not, were likely to have created a great number of enemies for themselves, by being in his employment?—They were; and in danger of walking the city; in danger of their lives.

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15802. In every possible way they were sure of being annoyed?—They were.

15803. By accusations, as well as by manual violence?—On every point they were liable to annoyance.

15804. I think you were summoned, in the first instance, by this Committee, in a wrong name; were you not?—I was.

15805. You wrote a letter to me, as Chairman, stating that fact, but professing your readiness to come and give evidence, if required so to do?—Certainly, I did write that.

15806. In consequence of that you received a letter from me as Chairman, stating you had better attend?—Yes, that I was the person.

15807. And without any further summons you did attend?—Yes.

15808. Mr. O'Connell.] Now recollect yourself; it is not my wish to act harshly; I call upon you to tell us the exact truth, of how the arrangement was made for your passing the city to get yourself registered?—I told the exact truth, word for word, as far as I can recollect that it happened.

15809. Now you will remember I have cautioned you upon that subject?—Yes; I told the truth exactly as it happened, word for word.

15810. You have told us nothing but the truth since you came here?—Nothing but the truth.

15811. Well now, I ask you how many fellow-apprentices you had while you were serving your apprenticeship?—I do not know exactly; I could not say that.

15812. Had you one?—There was more than one.

15813. What was the name of that one?—There was one of the name of Wishart.

15814. What was his christian name?—Robert; but he ran away before he was out of his time.

15815. Now, is there anything that a young man knows better, who is serving his apprenticeship, than how many fellow-apprentices he has?—No, perhaps not.

15816. Now, if you were an apprentice, tell me how many fellow-apprentices you had?—If you will just listen to me for a moment I will explain; there are in Carolin's employment four brothers: there is Edward Carolin, Charles Carolin, Robinson Carolin and John Carolin; each of them may take as many apprentices as they like. I had no means of knowing, nor have I, whether the persons were regularly bound to them or not, because they never told me.

15817. Is it not one firm; one house of business; those four Mr. Carolin's?—I do not know indeed; it is one firm, but I do not know how they manage with regard to that.

15818. Is it only one firm?—One firm.

15819. The person who is in the employment of one of them is doing business for all, is he not?—Not always; he is liable to be taken away by one person, and made to do business exclusively for him.

15820. But how many persons were as apprentices in the same employment with you during what you call your apprenticeship?—Is it to Edward Carolin?

15821. To the four?—There were none apprentices to the four.

15822. To any of the four?—To any of the four? There was no one with Edward Carolin but me.

15823. There was no apprentice to Edward Carolin but you?—No one but me.

15824. Now, to each of the other three; how many were apprentices to Charles? —I do not know whether there were any regular apprentices to him or not.

15825. There were no regular apprentices to Charles Carolin, to your knowledge?—Not to my knowledge; but that is not saying there were not; perhaps there might have been some of them regularly apprenticed to him, but to my knowledge I do not know any.

15826. They might have been regularly apprenticed after they had served their apprenticeship; that you would call regular?—No, I would not.

15827. Now, to Robinson Carolin; were there any apprentices to him while you were serving?—Not that I know of.

15828. To John Carolin?—There were two boys, bricklayers; I do not know whether they were apprenticed to John or not.

15829. Do you know any apprentices, during your seven years, to John Carolin?—I know of two; but, as I told you before, I do not know whether they were regularly bound or not.

15830. Do you know whether there were apprentices of any kind?—They were called apprentices.

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15831. What were their names?—One of the names was Whelan.

15832. What was the other's name?—Golding.

15833. Well, now, these are the only two persons that were called apprentices during the time you were serving your seven years?—To John Carolin; he is a bricklayer; he is not a carpenter.

15834. Were they the only two persons that were called apprentices during your time?—To John Carolin?

15835. Yes.—Yes.

15836. You cannot name any for Charles, can you?—I cannot name exactly any for Charles. I cannot call these apprentices that have been with him as apprentices for a space of four years, or more or less than that.

15837. Then you do not call anybody an apprentice until he has served seven years?—No.

15838. Then, during the first, second, third, fourth or fifth year you do not call him an apprentice; is not that so?—I do not consider he has regularly served his time unless he has served seven years.

15839. Do you call him an apprentice during the seven years?—Yes, if he never was at the business before he went to Carolin's, I do.

15840. But if he had been employed by anybody else, he is not an apprentice? —No.

15841. So that nobody is an apprentice but those who come for the first time to Carolin's?—Without going to any other builder previously.

15842. That is what you call an apprentice?—Yes.

15843. Now, as you have given us such limits, tell me how many persons you call apprentices that were in the employment and at Carolin's during your seven years or any part of it?—There were two of the name of Talbot that were serving their time there regularly, until they misbehaved.

15844. When did they misbehave?—They misbehaved some time a little before I was out of my time.

15845. What year?—They were put away by him.

15846. What year?—I think it was in the year 1835.

15847. Are the four brothers of the same calling, all builders or all masons, or all carpenters, or one a mason and another a carpenter, or how is it?—There is one brother a bricklayer and the other three are in the general building way.

15848. And they are all in partnership?—Yes, they are; I do not know whether the father is or not.

15849. Chairman.] Then is the father Edward?—Edward Carolin, senior.

15850. Then there are Edward Carolin, senior, Edward Carolin, junior, Robinson, Charles and John?—Yes.

15851. Then there are five, in fact?—I do not think the father is in the firm at present.

15852. Mr. Hogg.] Did all the people employed there, either as apprentices, workmen or otherwise, know you were serving as an apprentice in your apprenticeship?—Yes, they did.

15853. It was a matter of notoriety?—It was a matter of notoriety that I went there at 14 years of age, and continued for seven years.

15854. Would it not be equally matter of notoriety to you and to others whether the other persons employed were apprentices or not?—There were some there who were serving their time regularly, but as I say, when they had misbehaved, Carolin put them away.

15855. Mr. O'Connell.] Now tell me the names of those who served their apprenticeship regularly and throughout while you were there?—I cannot; I can say one; I can say there was Edward Wildman; he was in Carolin's office from the time I went to the day I left.

15856. Was he an apprentice?—He was in Carolin's office; I do not know whether he was an apprentice; I am not sure. I told you I could not say who were apprentices; I say he was at Carolin's (a boy) at the same time with me.

15857. But you do not know whether he was considered an apprentice?—No, he never worked at the bench, nor served his time to the carpentering business, only in the office. He was about the same age as myself.

15858. But he was an apprentice for what you know?—No, I do not think he was.

15859. He had never served anybody before he served Carolin?—No, he had not.

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15860. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Were there any other young men in the concern during your time?—There were seven.

15861. Who were considered in the concern as apprentices, in the same way that you were considered an apprentice?—There were.

15862. Now will you tell us what were the names of these young men who were in the concern during your time, and who were considered, as you were, apprentices; whether they were bound regularly or not? Have you any unwillingness? I should not like to put a question that might be an annoyance to you or to others. Have you any reluctance to mention the names of those who were put away on account of misconduct?—I mentioned two that were put away.

15863. Then you do not feel any reluctance about mentioning them?—

15864. Mr. O'Connell.] There was nobody else put away but those two, were there?—Yes, there were; or left on their own account.

15865. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Have you any unwillingness to mention their names?—No, I have not.

15866. Then mention their names?—I could mention all the names that I knew, I think.

15867. Will you be good enough to name to us any young men who were in the concern during the time you were there, and who were considered in the same manner as you were, as apprentices during that time, and name those who did not complete their seven years as well as those who did; just give, as far as your recollection will serve you, the names of those?—There was John Towson; he did not fulfil his apprenticeship.

15868. But was he considered, as you were, for the time he was there, as an apprentice?—He was.

15869. Are you able to name any other who was, the same as you were, considered as an apprentice, whether he finished his time or not?—I do not think there were, who had finished their time.

15870. I did not ask you whether they did finish their time?—I cannot name any one who did finish his time in it.

15871. I want to know the names of them, whether they finished their time or not, provided during your time they were in the concern, and were considered as apprentices, whether they finished their time or not?—I have named John Towson; I can name some that are in it yet that have not completed their time.

15872. Were they there in your time?—They were part of the time. There is Barnard Cassady.

15873. Any other?—There was Michael Mara.

15874. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you consider him as an apprentice?—He was a boy there.

15875. Did you consider him as an apprentice?—I tell you I could not consider any of these apprentices, because I did not know whether they were regularly bound to Carolin or not.

15876. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] I am not asking you whether they were regularly bound or served out their seven years, but I am asking you, as far as your memory enables you, to give the names of any young men who were in the concern at the same time you were, and who were considered, as you were, as apprentices?—Well, I have named Michael Mara, and John Towson and Barnard Cassady.

15877. Mr. O'Connell.] Was Barnard Cassady considered to be an apprentice?—He was. He came to Carolin first of all, before he went to any one else.

15878. Is that the only reason you have for considering him as an apprentice?—I think if you had an establishment, and if you took a boy that never worked at any business, you would consider him in the light of an apprentice; that is the light I take it in.

15879. Did you consider him as an apprentice?—I considered him as an apprentice.

15880. For no other reason than this, that he had not served any one else before; is not that the reason that you so considered him?—Yes.

15881. Is that the only reason you had for considering him as an apprentice?—The only reason.

15882. Did you consider everybody who came for the first time to Mr. Carolin to be an apprentice?—That came for the first time to him?

15883. Yes, who had not served any body else, but began his work with Mr. Carolin; did you consider every such person an apprentice?—Yes, every one that he put to work with the carpenters, or to learn their business from him.

Mr. Henry Hall.

1 June 1837.

15884. Now how many of that class were there during the seven years you say you served him?—I have named, I think, five.

15885. Can you name anybody else?—I cannot immediately recollect any other name.

15886. Do you call these five apprentices?—I consider them as such.

15887. Chairman.] When you call these five persons apprentices, you do not mean thereby to convey they finished their apprenticeship?—Certainly not.

15888. All you mean to say is, that they began with Carolin?—They began with Carolin, and on account of misbehaviour or otherwise, some of them left, and some are with him yet.

15889. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] That they were learning their trade is what you mean?—Yes.

George Archer, Esq., called in; and further Examined.

G. Archer, Esq.

15890. Chairman.] WILL you state to the Committee what is the oath that is taken by a freeman when he is sworn in?—That is the freeman's oath [handing it to the Chairman].

15891. Now is that oath the same oath that is taken by every freeman, whether he gains his freedom by one right or another?—Yes.

15892. Is there any peculiar oath taken by a freeman, in addition to that oath, who acquires his freedom from servitude?—No.

15893. Then he does not swear that he has faithfully served his apprenticeship?—No, except when he comes forward to prove before a jury, which in the case of service is always empanelled for the purpose of ascertaining the fact.

15894. Now, will you state the exact words of the oath which he swears before that jury?—It is the common oath to give evidence, to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

15895. But is one of the necessary parts of the investigation that he has faithfully served; are those words regularly used in that examination?—I think not, in all cases.

15896. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] I thought I understood you to say on a former day, the only fact that was inquired into by that jury was the execution of the indenture?—No; the fact of service.

15897. Then the execution of the indenture is not of itself necessary?—It is not of itself necessary.

15898. It is not a necessary fact of inquiry?—No, it is not.

15899. Chairman.] What is the meaning of the words, "If it shall appear by indenture"?—I should explain to the Committee that at the time this oath was framed, enrolment of the indenture was necessary, and the order made is the ancient order following this part of the oath; formerly it was the practice, and I believe some of the junior corporations continue the practice still, to enrol indentures; but that has been given up, I believe, in almost all corporations; if there be one or two that continue it, it is the most; the old order is still preserved, although the enrolment does not take place; the means of showing the existence of the indenture by proof of its enrolment in the minor corporations, do not now exist; and that fact is permitted, and has been for a long time permitted, to be supplied by evidence, although an indenture be not produced.

15900. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] When you say "evidence," do you mean secondary evidence of the contents of the indenture?—I do.

15901. Then, if so, I believe I did not misunderstand you in the former day; if so, then, the jury do inquire into the fact of the existence and execution of the indenture?—They do.

15902. But secondary evidence of the contents of the indenture is admissible in every case?—In every case.

15903. And it is not essential, then, to entitle a party to give secondary evidence of the contents of the indenture, that he should first prove the loss of it?—No, they do not go through that form; but there have been cases, I certainly have seen cases frequently, where the evidence did not go to the length of establishing that there was an indenture, but the fact of service.

15904. And was that deemed sufficient?—Yes, the juries have deemed it sufficient.

15905. Then these qualifying terms of the allowance appear to be nugatory, namely, namely, if it shall appear by indenture: according to you, there are cases in which there was no evidence at all of an indenture being in existence, but there was evidence of servitude?—Yes.

G. Archer, Esq.

1 June 1837.

15906. And that was deemed sufficient?—Yes, it has been so.

15907. Then, in practice, I am warranted in saying that that qualification of the allowance by the board goes for nothing, "if it shall appear by indenture"?—It does in that case.

15908. Mr. Hamilton.] But it operates as a check?—Yes, as a check.

15909. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] As a check; however, that is not enforced?—Not enforced.

15910. Mr. Hogg.] I understood you to say that the indenture was never proved, at least scarcely ever proved, before the jury as a legal document?—No, not in the way of a legal document.

15911. For instance, that the attesting witnesses to the indenture were never, to your knowledge, called?—I would not say never.

15912. At least, very rarely?—Not frequently; not often.

15913. So that the main point is the fact of the servitude?—It is; that is the main point.

15914. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] And that is got at by very loose evidence?—I should say they are not very strict.

15915. Mr. Hogg.] Did you ever know the question asked whether the instrument was executed the same day upon which it bore date, or any force laid upon that fact?—I cannot charge my recollection.

15916. Can you charge your recollection with ever having heard that question asked or that point made, for the purpose of attempting to vitiate the document and render the servitude null?—I have certainly often seen men fail in proving their claim and be rejected.

15917. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] But has that been a failure by reason of their not proving the fact of their servitude satisfactorily, or has it been by reason of not proving the execution of the indenture on the day it bore date?—I think, both ways.

15918. Mr. Hogg.] Have you any distinct recollection of that particular point being ever brought forward and interrogated to, as to the execution of the instrument on the day it bore date?—No.

15919. You have no recollection of that point ever being made?—No.

15920. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] But you have a recollection of cases where the claim failed by reason of the party not being able to prove satisfactorily the absolute service of seven years?—Yes, I have.

15921. Mr Serjeant Ball.] Do you recollect any of those cases within the last three or four years?—Not the particular cases.

15922. But is it in your recollection that such cases have occurred within the last two or three years?—As to the rejections?

15923. Yes.—Yes, I am sure there were.

15924. Within the last two or three years?—Yes, certainly.

15925. Now, with reference to the evidence that has just been given as to persons who were called apprentices of Mr. Carolin; you attended to that evidence?—I did.

15926. Were they admitted to their freedom in right of servitude?—The person just now examined was.

15927. But were the others?—No; I have been looking, and I do not find they were.

15928. Mr. O'Connell.] Does the name of John Thomas Kirkwood appear as admitted in Michaelmas, 1836?—Yes.

15929. In what right?—By marriage.

15930. When does he appear to have been sworn?—The 7th of November 1836.

15931. That was the first day of the registry sessions, was it not?—It was.

15932. The notice for his registry was dated the 17th of October?—Yes.

15933. Chairman.] When was he registered?—The 14th of November.

Mr. James Martin, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. James Martin.

15934. Mr. O'Connell.] WHAT entry have you respecting John Thomas Kirkwood?—He registered on the 14th of November 1836. His certificate appeared appeared to be sworn on the 7th of November 1836, of the guild of smiths, by marriage. He said others were sworn along with him; the different freemen's queries, 1, 2 and 5, that I read the last day, were proposed to him, and he refused to answer them. Mr. Dobbs overruled them, as usual, and then the usual objections were made by Mr. Seton and Mr. John Curran. They made the usual objections, numbers 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 9 ½, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, and 17, and he was admitted. He refused to answer all the questions put to him, and they were overruled; that is, all the freemen's queries were overruled. That is all I have regarding him.

15935. This is the beseech: "Beseech your Honors, John T. Kirkwood, of Upper Ormond Quay, smith, to be admitted into the liberties and franchises of the city of Dublin, by marriage, he being married to the daughter of George Gonne, a freeman, who came in at the Midsummer assembly, 1798, by service."

15936. Chairman.] You put no other question to Kirkwood?—He was asked, I should suppose, about his age, but these were all the questions that were taken; he said others were sworn along with him.

15937. Mr. O'Connell.] But you have no entry about any others?—No, no entry about any others.

15938. Chairman, to Mr. Archer.] Does it appear George Gonne was admitted a freeman?—Yes, in 1798.

Francis James Card, called in; and Examined.

Francis Jas. Card.

15939. Chairman.] ARE you a solicitor or attorney?—I am a solicitor and attorney.

15940. Are you clerk to any guild in Dublin?—I am clerk to the guild of bakers.

15941. How long have you been so?—About 20 years.

15942. Mr. O'Connell.] Be so good as look at that return [handing a return to the Witness]; is that return made by you?—It is.

15943. Is it correct?—To the best of my belief, it is.

15944. You examined the books?—I made it out myself.

15945. Has no other person been admitted in your guild since the month of July 1830 to the present?—1831, this is; this does not contain all up to the present day; there is another return; this is the return for this period.

15946. Chairman.] This return is stated to be a list of persons admitted since 30th July 1831, to the guild of St. Clement and St. Anne, or guild of bakers, Dublin, by which it appears four individuals have passed since the 26th of October up to the 29th of April, inclusive; that is the return, is it?—It is.

15947. Mr. O'Connell.] Do not you admit persons by grace especial in your guild?—We do.

15948. Is there any person in that list admitted by grace especial?—There is not.

15949. Then since the Reform Bill you have not admitted anybody by grace especial?—Since that period we have admitted no person by grace especial.

15950. And you are quite certain upon this; the only point I have an object in wishing you to be precise upon is, that you have not admitted any persons into the guild of bakers since the 20th of July 1831, except the five that are specified here; I wish you to be quite positive upon that?—I am quite positive; that is a return made out conformable to a direction of yours, and I can declare again I am convinced of its being accurate.

15951. In short, you entertain no doubt of its perfect accuracy?—I do not; I made it out myself; it is barely possible, but I think not at all probable, that an error might be in it.

15952. You made it out with due diligence?—Yes; in consequence of your direction.

15953. Intending to have it perfectly accurate?—Yes; intending to have it accurate.

15954. And you have no doubt it is?—I have no doubt it is.

15955. Chairman.] Is yours a numerous guild?—It is.

15956. Can you state from recollection the numbers belonging to it?—I think they are in or about 20, probably a few over or under; I have the list at my hotel, but not with me at this moment.

15957. Mr.

Francis Jas. Card.

1 June 1837.

15957. Mr. O'Connell.] Of the entire number?—Yes.

15958. Chairman.] Are you strict in your admissions to see that all the requisites are complied with?—Certainly.

15959. In the case of service, what sort of evidence do you require of the facts?—The master vouches; the party proposing the admission vouches the service of the apprentice.

15960. And is the master, then, responsible to the guild generally as to the service having been properly performed and completed?—The person coming forward to propose the admission vouches the person entitled to his freedom, the master of the guild then gives the direction to me.

15961. The person coming forward must be a member of the guild, must he?—Yes.

15962. The person who proposes the claimant?—Yes; the person proposed is present, and he is proposed at a meeting of the guild, generally by the person whom he served his time to.

15963. Then you mean by that, the master vouches that the servitude has been passed?—Yes.

15964. He vouches for the correctness of the servitude?—Yes.

15965. Mr. O'Connell.] Is there a beseech presented to your guild, or is the proposition made by word of mouth?—It is made by word of mouth; in general, when the stamps were put upon separate sheets of paper, there was a beseech, merely for the purpose of having the stamp duty affixed to that beseech, and now the beseeches being in a book, the usual way to do it is by a resolution proposed vivâ voce.

15966. Then is an inquiry made as to the particulars of the apprenticeship, whether it be a legal apprenticeship?—The master of the guild has the inspection of the apprentice's indenture and enrolment, and then on coming forward on the guild day those matters are not produced.

15967. But that is left to the master?—Yes, the master of the guild.

15968. He is to inspect the indenture?—He inspects the indenture and the enrolment of the indenture.

15969. And therefore it is his duty to see that the apprenticeship was in conformity with the indenture?—Yes.

15970. Then you consider it necessary, of course, that the apprenticeship should be a regular one under the indenture?—I consider it should be regular and vouched on the day of proposition.

15971. You would not consider this a proper thing, that a man should serve at wages for six, eight, or ten or twelve years, and at the close of that period, or at seven years, have an indenture made up and passed as an apprentice?—Certainly not; I would not do it.

15972. You would think that very wrong?—I would.

15973. You have never done anything or concurred in anything of that kind?—Never.

15974. And you would feel it unbecoming to do so?—I would.

15975. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you know of any practice in Dublin of making an allowance to out-door apprentices, by way of wages?—I do not.

15976. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Have you ever known any practice in Dublin, in any other trades in Dublin, of allowing apprentices to serve their time, or a portion of their time, before indentures were completed, and then allowing the time which they have in fact served as a portion of the seven years?—No, I do not know anything of the practice of any guild but my own.

15977. But if there were any trade in Dublin in which such a practice obtained as that of allowing a young man to remain a while on trial, as it were, with the understanding that that time should be allowed him out of his seven years' apprenticeship; if that were the custom in any trade, would you feel it your duty, as clerk of the guild to which that trade belongs, to reject such an applicant?—I declare I do not know; I have never had a case of the kind.

15978. You never had occasion to consider that?—I have not considered how that might be if the case did occur; I think it is one that would require a good deal of consideration to decide upon; such a one never having occurred to me, I cannot be prepared to answer how the decision might be made.

Francis Jas. Card.

1 June 1837.

15979. Then you do not intend by the previous answer you have given to prejudice such a case as that?—Certainly not; I only speak of the practice of a guild with which I am concerned.

15980. That is the guild of bakers?—Yes.

15981. There is no such practice respecting apprentices in that guild?—No.

15982. Mr. O'Connell.] What would you say to making an indenture?—

15983. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You do not know of any such practice?—No; I do not know of any such practice.

15984. Mr. O'Connell.] And you have been 20 years clerk to the guild?—Yes, about that.

15985. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] And if it were the practice in any trade, as for example carpenters and builders, if it were the practice that a young man should be allowed a certain weekly payment while he was serving his time in consideration of the services he rendered his master, although he was learning the trade as an apprentice, and not living in his house, not being an indoor apprentice, you are not prepared to say that that would be such an irregularity or malpractice as ought to disqualify the young man from receiving his freedom afterwards, on completing his seven years?—I am inclined to think there is not any irregularity in it; I should conceive not; an agreement being made between a master and his apprentice or his friends, I should conceive that he might, either living in the house or out of the house, that he might receive wages or clothes or consideration.

15986. And therefore you did not intend by your previous answer to prejudice a case of that kind?—Certainly not; I believe I was not asked.

15987. I wish distinctly to understand what your opinion really is; then I am to understand you, that if it appeared clearly that such was the understanding between master and apprentice, even in the trade of a baker, that a young man while serving his seven years should receive, he being an outdoor apprentice, a certain weekly allowance, I am to understand you, you would rather be disposed to say you would not reject him at all on that ground?—I should not, if he completed seven years.

15988. Mr. O'Connell.] But you, of course, feel that nothing can open such a door to fraud as making an indenture after the seven years are over and calling it a service under that indenture?—I do not think that would be regular at all.

15989. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you think it would deserve the name of a fraud if there were a bonâ fide intention from the beginning that the individual should be an indentured apprentice, and that an indenture should be made out, although the indenture was not perfected until the time had entirely or nearly elapsed?—It would be a great irregularity.

15990. But you would not call it a fraud?—No.

15991. Mr. O'Connell.] It is possible that it may not be a fraud, but it is probable that it would be a fraud?—It would be a very high irregularity on the part of every one, I should think, concerned in it; whether it would be a fraud I do not know; where the fraud would operate; how it could be called a fraud; I do not know in what way to extend the word fraud to it. I look upon it to be highly irregular.

15992. Mr. O'Connell.] It would lead to an opportunity to fabricate cases; would it not give an opportunity to fabricate cases?—Yes, it would be an inroad to fabrication; any great irregularity might tend to that.

15993. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Have any cases ever come within your knowledge where apprentices had in fact served any portion of their time before their indentures were perfectly in form?—I have no recollection of any such.

15994. Mr. O'Connell.] Your guild is called the guild of bakers?—It is the guild of St. Clement and St. Anne guild of bakers.

15995. I believe there are scarcely any bakers in it; mere bakers?—There are some.

15996–7. But few; your representatives, I believe, in the common council are not bakers, are they?—Mr. Whitton is one; he is a baker. I do not recollect the names of the others.

15998. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] An individual that is descended from a free baker would be entitled to be admitted; if he were the son of a freeman he would be entitled to be admitted?—Yes, born after the admission of his father.

Francis Jas. Card.

1 June 1837.

15999. He would be entitled to be admitted in the guild of bakers?—Yes.

16000. And then he would be called a free baker, though he might, in point of fact, exercise any other profession?—Yes.

16001. And the person who first acquired the freedom of the guild, might himself be a baker, and yet none of his descendants in the line of descent, none of the eldest sons might happen to be bakers?—No.

16002. That often happens?—That often happens.

16003. And yet the whole of them are called free bakers?—They are.

16004. Mr. O'Connell.] You do not deem it necessary to admit a man, either by grace especial or by service, that either by grace especial, or any other way, he should be an actual baker?—No; it is not necessary he should be a baker to be admitted by grace.

16005. The representatives are John Whitton; is he a baker?—Yes.

16006. Is he an actual baker by trade?—Yes, he carries on the baking business; he bakes in Fownes-street.

16007. William Smith, of St. Andrew-street, is what?—He is a baker.

16008. John Ince, of Nicholas-street?—I believe he is a baker.

16009. Michael Smith, of St. Andrew-street, I suppose is a baker?—Yes.

16010. Do you make any persons free of your guild who are under age?—Certainly not; to my knowledge I do not believe it has ever been done.

16011. You consider that every one admitted is of full age?—I consider that every one admitted is of full age.

George Archer, Esq., again called in; and Examined.

G. Archer, Esq.

16012. Mr. O'Connell.] DO you consider it proper that every person who is made free should be of age?—I do.

16013. You consider if a person has an indenture entitling him to his freedom, he ought to be of full age?—I do.

16014. And that has been the practice, as far as the corporation can ascertain the fact, as well as you remember?—As far as the corporation can ascertain the fact, it has been so.

16015. Chairman.] Do you believe, practically, many freemen are admitted under age?—There have been, I believe, some admitted.

16016. Mr. O'Connell.] But that is wrong?—It is not right.

Lunæ, 5° die Junii, 1837.

Mr. Morgan John O'Connell.	Mr. Lefroy.
Mr. French.	Lord Granville Somerset.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

George Archer, Esq., called in; and further Examined.

G. Archer, Esq.

5 June 1837.

16017. Mr. O'Connell.] HAVE you your Evidence there?—Yes.

16018. 15293, in page 19, a question of his Lordship's, and 15295, you gave these two answers: his Lordship asked you, "Do I understand you right then, that a freeman has no peculiar advantages or privileges excepting the elective franchise?—No, none other." Then I asked you, "Except as being officers in their own guilds?—Except as being officers in their own guilds." Then the Chairman asked you, "They have no advantages that in any way interfere with the general privileges of their fellow-citizens?" and your answer is, "No." Now I wish to ask you, having read to you the questions 15293, 15294 and 15295, whether the freemen have not this additional advantage, that they vote for members of the common council?—In their own guilds; I had forgotten that that entirely at the time it was first mentioned; but on a subsequent occasion I did state that additional advantage.

G. Archer, Esq.

5 June 1837.

16019. The common council nominate the sheriffs of Dublin?—They do.

16020. The Four Courts are in Dublin?—Yes.

16021. It is in the centre of the judicial system in Ireland?—Yes.

16022. The sheriffs of Dublin nominate the grand jury of the court of King's Bench in Dublin?—Of course they do.

16023. They also make out the panels out of which all special juries are drawn?—They do.

16024. They make out the panels for all trials at Nisi Prius in the courts of Common Pleas, Exchequer and King's Bench?—They do.

16025. They make out the panels for all juries in the recorder's court?—Yes.

16026. They make out the panels for all grand juries at the commission? —Yes.

16027. And of all petty juries at the commission?—Yes.

16028. And no person has any interference in the selection of these sheriffs but a person who is a freeman of the city of Dublin?—No.

16029. Then you perceive with the freeman of Dublin is vested privileges and advantages which you will admit are important?—Yes; but I should say that as to the selection of the juries the sheriffs are controlled by the Jury Act.

16030. But that control does not relate to the grand juries?—I am not aware that it does; I do not know that it does.

16031. Could you state what the amount of taxation of the citizens of Dublin, in round numbers, has latterly been for the grand jury?—I declare I could not.

16032. You would not be surprised to hear it was 30,000 l. a year at least?—No, I dare say it is; I should suppose from 20,000 l. to 30,000 l.; but I am not aware.

16033–4. Chairman.] Then am I to understand, that although these are very important privileges enjoyed by freemen, namely, the voting in elections for members of the common council, the members of the common council returning the sheriffs, who have the power of nominating or rather selecting grand juries, and so forth, and that although, such being the case, there is a great deal of party spirit in Dublin, nevertheless there have been no attempts, by legal measures, to get rid of any particular class of freemen who have been admitted?—I never heard of any.

16035. Mr. O'Connell.] The city of Dublin have a right to appoint freemen by grace especial?—They have.

16036. Anybody they please they can appoint by grace especial?—I think so.

16037. Now be so good as to tell me what proceedings have been used to get rid of any man that the city of Dublin chose to nominate as a freeman?—To get rid of him?

16038. To deprive him of his freedom?—I know of no means but by disfranchisement.

16039. And that disfranchisement should be by the corporation itself?—It should be.

16040. But out of the corporation you know of no means by which a man, to whom the corporation thinks fit to grant his freedom, can be deprived of that freedom?—No.

16041. And you never heard of the least attempt or notion of that kind?—No.

16042. Chairman.] Do you mean to state there are no means of getting rid of freemen who are improperly put on the roll of freemen through misrepresentation, or any other circumstance of that sort?—I would not go that length, because I am quite satisfied that if the corporation were aware that there was any man got improperly upon the roll, they would take some means or adopt some course to remove that person.

16043. Supposing, for instance, that a party had obtained his freedom on the ground of service, and it were subsequently proved that he had no such legal ground of service, are there no means of removing him except through the medium of the corporation?—I think there are not; I know of no means except through the corporation.

16044. Mr. O'Connell.] Now just fill up that for me; put a fictitious name to it, John Doe?—

The

G. Archer, Esq.

5 June 1837.

The Witness filled up a certificate by birth, and handed it in, a copy of which is as follows:—"Memorandum, that at Michaelmas assembly, 1836, John Doe, merchant, was admitted into the liberties and franchises of the city of Dublin, by birth, and took the usual oaths, and was enrolled. In testimony whereof the same is signed by the town-clerks this 5th day of June 1837. Archer and Long, Town-clerks."

16045. That is the form of a certificate by birth?—It is.

16046. Now give me the form of a certificate (the same name) by service?—

The Witness filled one up and handed it in, a copy of which is as follows:—"Memorandum, that at Michaelmas assembly, 1836, John Doe, merchant, was admitted into the liberties and franchises of the city of Dublin, by service, and took the usual oaths, and was enrolled. In testimony whereof the same is signed by the town-clerks this 5th day of June 1837. Archer and Long, Town-clerks."

16047. Now give me a form of certificate by marriage, in the new form?—

The Witness filled one up, and handed it in, a copy of which is as follows:—"Memorandum, that at Michaelmas assembly, 1836, John Doe, merchant, was admitted into the liberties and franchises of the city of Dublin, by marriage, and took the usual oaths, and was enrolled. In testimony whereof the same is signed by the town-clerks this 5th day of June 1837. Archer and Long, Town-clerks."

16048. Marriage is the new form?—Yes, that is the new form.

16049. That was not known till the Reform Bill?—It was not.

16050. Now by grace especial?—

The witness filled one up, and handed it in, a copy of which is as follows:—Memorandum, that at Michaelmas assembly 1836, John Doe, merchant, was admitted into the liberties and franchises of the city of Dublin, by grace especial, and took the usual oaths, and was enrolled. In testimony whereof the same is signed by the town-clerks this 5th day of June 1837. Archer and Long, Town-clerks,"

16051. Mr. Hamilton.] There is a fifth, by the city at large?—There is; it is only the alteration of the city at large.

16052. Mr. O'Connell.] With regard to the fifth, by the city at large, of course the man does not belong to a guild at all?—No.

16053. And it is generally considered a complimentary thing?—It is generally; in fact, it is not asked for at all.

16054. And very few now for grace especial?—Very few.

16055. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Was any advice taken, to your knowledge, by any person as to this right or claim of marriage?—There was not.

16056. Mr. O'Connell.] Who was it struck off the idea?—I cannot recollect.

16057. But it was done in the corporation itself?—It was; it followed, I believe, immediately after the Reform Act.

16058. These certificates, by birth, marriage and servitude, when produced before the registering barrister; you are present, are you not, when they are produced?—I have been present.

16059. They are now considered as conclusive as to the matter stated in them?—I understand so.

16060. No inquiry is allowed to be gone into as to the period of service or anything of that kind?—I have not generally attended myself the registry court: I could not charge myself with it; but there are gentlemen here who have, and who can speak to that.

16061. Mr. Lefroy.] You have now, as I understand, given us the various forms of admission to the corporation, upon the grounds of birth, marriage, apprenticeship and by grace especial?—Yes.

16062. The form of application, as well as the form of admission, upon those several grounds, are quite distinct?—Yes.

16063. Have they always been so?—Always.

16064. As far back as you can trace that distinction has been preserved?—Always.

16065. So that, in no instance that you can find, has a person founding his claim upon birth, marriage or apprenticeship come to the corporation claiming on the ground of grace especial?—No.

G. Archer, Esq.

5 June 1837

16066. Nor vice versâ?—No.

16067. Then the distinction between admission on the ground of grace especial, and upon a claim founded on birth, marriage or apprenticeship, is a distinction perfectly well known and understood?—Perfectly.

16068. No corporator, or person acquainted with the proceedings of the corporation, could for a moment confound the one with the other?—No, quite impossible.

16069. Or fail to understand that there was a substantial distinction between them?—Certainly not.

16070. Am I right in taking it or granted, that in the exercise by a corporator of a right of admission, where the application was upon the ground of claim for birth, marriage or apprenticeship, he would consider that he was exercising a different right from that which he would have to exercise upon the admission of a person claiming on the ground of grace especial?—I think he would.

16071. You are a corporator?—I am.

16072. Then, as a corporator, should you feel in one case, namely, that of a claim founded on birth, marriage or apprenticeship, that if you rejected it you were rejecting a primâ facie title?—I think so.

16073. That would be your view of it?—It would.

16074. But in the other case, you were merely refusing to grant a gratuitous favour; is that your view of it?—Precisely; and I could illustrate that very strongly, I think, by a case at the time of the Brunswick clubs: there was an endeavour made to pass a great number of freemen by grace especial, coming from one of the junior corporations; and the corporation rejected a considerable number of them.

16075. Chairman.] Did they, at that time, reject any considerable number of persons claiming under the other rights?—No.

16076. Although they came from the same junior corporation?—No.

16077. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you know how many came by birth or service at that time?—No, I do not; perhaps I could tell the number.

16078. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] But there did come some?—Yes, there did come some.

16079. Mr. O'Connell.] When was that?—I cannot at this moment remember.

16080. Have you any document here that will enable you to let us know?—I think it was in 1829.

16081. Mr. Lefroy.] Then, in the exercise of the right of rejection of a claim founded on birth, marriage or apprenticeship, does a corporator feel that in the conscientious discharge of that duty he should require some ground for rejection?—As far as I can speak, that is of the lord mayor and board of aldermen; claimants never are rejected without some discussion with respect to the claim and the grounds of objection.

16082. And then if a primâ facie claim is made out?—It passes at once.

16083. Not so as to the case of a person proposed on the ground of grace especial; is not that considered as wholly within the absolute—I would say, the capricious discretion of the lord mayor and board of aldermen to reject or admit?—Certainly.

16084. Now, in saying you were not aware of any ground of getting rid of a person who had been admitted on an ill-founded claim, did you mean to say that an information in the nature of a quo warranto would not lay in case of its being established that a person claiming on the ground of birth, marriage or apprenticeship had founded that claim upon a false and fraudulent representation?—I did not profess to offer any legal opinion.

16085. Then what, in your opinion, would be the result of its being established by clear and satisfactory evidence, that a person had imposed on the corporation by one of these claims; do you conceive that an information in the nature of a quo warranto would not lay against him to oust him of his franchise in case he appeared to have founded that claim on a false and fraudulent representation?—I should think it would; and I am sure the corporation would press forward an information, in order to oust the person so practising fraud upon them.

16086. Are you of opinion, that in the first instance the corporation themselves could disfranchise him?—I think they could.

16087. And if not, they would be willing, I understand from you, to assist in every way in having him ousted, by an information in the nature of a quo warranto?—Yes, I certainly think so.

16088. Now suppose the corporation improperly and unduly to usurp the right of admitting upon the ground of birth, marriage or apprenticeship, or upon any one of those foundations unduly and improperly, do you conceive that an information in the nature of a quo warranto would not lay against the corporation for usurping the privilege of admitting upon a ground which their charter did not warrant?—I should think that some sort of legal proceeding would certainly lay, but whether by quo warranto I will not pretend to say.

16089. But that would be the usurping of a franchise that did not belong to them, if they admitted him on any of those grounds where their charter withheld that ground of admission?—I think so.

16090. But you have never known any proceedings taken to question this right of the corporation, have you?—I never have.

16091. The right that has been established by the case that has been referred to is, as I understand it, merely a veto on the part of the corporation; a negative?—Yes.

16092. Upon the primâ facie title?—Yes.

16093. That they having the right, consider that they are held to be the judges whether they will admit upon that title or not?—Yes.

16094. But to entitle the claimant to have a primâ facie claim or case, he must make out the facts upon which he professes to rest his claim when he comes on the ground of birth, marriage or apprenticeship?—He must.

16095. Mr. O'Connell.] The corporation, however, have the unlimited power of admitting any man in the community they please by grace especial?—They have.

16096. And they may admit everybody by grace especial if they please?—They may.

16097. With a reason or without a reason?—Certainly.

16098. They may take any facts that they think of importance, as the reason to induce them to do that which they have the unlimited power of doing; may they not?—They may.

16099. For example, before you ever had an entry by marriage upon your books, the fact of marriage was an inducement to grant it under the head of grace especial?—Yes.

16100. It happened to many a man that he was admitted by grace especial, the reason being assigned that he was married to the daughter of a freeman; was not that so?—It was.

16101. Then you have the same right to reject, if you please, as capriciously as you have the right to admit?—Yes, we have the same right, and exercise the right either to reject or admit.

16102. As you please?—Certainly.

16103. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you say that there is a right to reject capriciously?—No, I do not say that.

16104. Do not you recollect in that case which has been already referred to, I allude to the case of the King and Adcock, do not you recollect the court of King's Bench said, in giving judgment in that case, that the presumption of law was that the corporation would exercise a sound discretion; that they appeared to have vested in them a discretion, whether that was a discretion to guard against the admission of improper persons or not; that the presumption of law was, that they would exercise a sound discretion?—I have already stated, the claim under goes discussion.

16105. Mr. O'Connell.] But it is at your discretion?—It is.

16106. Mr. Lefroy.] Is that a sound discretion?—

16107. Mr. O'Connell.] Sound or unsound, it is for you to determine; for example, now suppose the fact of the birth were ever so distinctly proved, of the man being the son of a freeman, if he were, before what is called emancipation, an emancipator, you would have rejected him, in all probability?—I think it is very probable.

16108. And you could do it, if you chose?—We could.

16109. And if now a man, the son of a freeman, whose father had been free

G. Archer, Esq.

5 June 1837.

21 years before his birth, and was still alive, became publicly a Catholic, you could, if you pleased, reject that man?—Yes.

16110. Then do not you think the corporation would reject him?—I should think that it is questionable; at the same time, my opinion is they would.

16111. And you are quite sure they would have a right to do it, if they pleased; you have no doubt of that?—I think so.

16112. That is your judgment as an officer of the corporation; if you were consulted, as the town-clerk of a number of years' standing, and a professional gentleman of intellect, you would tell any corporator, who inquired, that, in your judgment, they had the right so to reject, if they pleased?—I certainly would if I were asked; in fact, the question should be put upon him as upon every other freeman.

16113. But if the question were put to you; you are, of course, from your experience in the office, consulted by the corporators as to their rights and privileges and powers?—Yes, frequently.

16114. And you feel it part of your duty, I will say I believe you, conscientiously and faithfully, according to your judgment, you would feel it your duty to answer that question as part of your duty to instruct the corporation?—I certainly would; if I were asked whether the question should be put upon the admission of such person or not, I would say that the question ought to be put.

16115. And that the question being put, there was the same power to negative that question as there was to affirm it?—Certainly.

16116. Mr. Hamilton.] Has the question ever been submitted within your knowledge to a legal tribunal, except in the case of Adcock?—No, not that I recollect.

16117. So that the question of the power of enforcing a right into the corporation of Dublin rests solely on that decision?—As far as I understand.

16118. You have not heard of a mandamus being applied for, by a Roman-catholic, for example, or in any other case excepting that?—No, I have not.

16119. Now with respect to any mode of getting rid of a freeman improperly appointed, all claiming as of right, must come from a junior corporation, I believe?—They must.

16121. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] But it would not follow, ipso facto, from his being disfranchised from the minor guild, that he loses his franchise in the city at large?—Most certainly not.

16122. It would require that process of the lower guild bringing the case specially before the corporation at large, produce discussion, and then deal with it according to the opinion formed by the body at large?—Yes.

16123. Mr. Hamilton.] Has such a case ever arisen within your knowledge; the case of a freeman disfranchised by a minor corporation?—I have some recollection of a man of the name of Harricks having been disfranchised.

16124. A mandamus will lay against a minor corporation to enforce the right of a claimant to admission into it?—I think I have heard so.

16125. I presume, if a mandamus lays with reference to a minor corporation, a quo warranto will lay also?—I am not lawyer enough to answer that.

16126. Freemen have been occasionally disfranchised by the corporation at large?—They have.

16127. Chairman.] Will you state any one instance that is most fresh in your recollection?—That case of Harricks is most fresh in my recollection.

16128. State the circumstances of that case?—I cannot charge my recollection with the grounds; but they were held to be sufficient.

16129. What year was that in; can you state that?—I think it was within the last seven years; I cannot say the year particularly.

16130. What minor guild did he belong to?—The guild of saddlers; and I think the grounds arose from misconduct on the election of representatives for the corporation of Dublin in that guild.

16131. Mr. O'Connell.] Wishing you to be exact as to the persons that you spoke of as being proposed in a batch, I would point your attention to a paragraph already read in the Report, p. 18. Shortly previous to the Emancipation Act being passed, a proposition was made, &c. &c. That is the transaction to which you alluded a while ago?—Yes.

G. Archer, Esq.

5 June 1837.

16132. Now, having shown you it was a short time before 1829, you probably will be able to find out the exact period; was it as many as 200?—No, nothing like that.

16133. I find in 1828 there were 190 admitted; probably that is the year?—It may be so; I do not know: yes, it is Christmas 1829; it is the same.

16134. That is it?—Yes, it is. I was counting the number; it was not so many as 200; nothing like it.

16135. In the year 1822 I see there were 245 admitted, and in the year 1825 there were 238; now will you be so good as to make out a table of this description for those two years?—Yes; I would have done so, but you said you would not require it for those two years.

16136. The year 1828 was the year in which the 1,000 were proposed in a batch?—The year 1828 was the time when a great number were proposed.

16137. About 1,000?—I do not know indeed.

16138. But a very large number?—Yes.

16139. Now these 81 were admitted by grace especial?—Yes.

Sic. 16140. Forty-one under the claim of service, and 57 under the claim of birth?—Yes.

16141. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you mean to say, that the numbers stated there were all the persons recommended?—No, not at that period, because that covers the whole year.

16142. Mr. O'Connell.] Can you, from any document, make out that large batch; can you take it by itself, that large batch, and give us the particulars of how many under the claim of birth, how many under the claim of service, and how many under the claim of grace especial, were admitted; can you do that this evening?—I will try; I do not know that I can; but I will do my best to do it.

16143. Mr. Hamilton.] Was the proposition of admitting the large number ceded to, or negatived by the board of aldermen?—Negatived.

> The Witness handed in a printed alphabetical list of the freemen of the city of Dublin, commencing January 1774 and ending 15th January 1824; also, a printed alphabetical list of the freemen of the city of Dublin, commencing January 1824.

16144. Chairman.] Those are the printed books which you referred to on a former occasion?—Yes.

Mr. Timothy Allen, called in; and Examined.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

16145. Chairman.] YOU are clerk to the guild of merchants?—Yes, one of them.

16146. How long have you been in that situation?—Since January 1796.

16147. Mr. O'Connell.] It was you who gave in this return?—Yes, that is my writing.

16148. You have taken it from the book, and given it in as an accurate return?—I have, to the best of my judgment.

16149. You intended it to be perfectly correct?—I did, and I think it is.

16150. Then please to sign it as such?—[The Witness did so.]

16151. Mr. Hamilton.] Will you state the process by which freemen are made in the guild of merchants?—In the guild of merchants, when persons apply for freedom, their names are given to me, and then there is a summons issued to the council of the house 11 days before each quarter day; they meet three days before quarter day, that is, there is an eight-days' summons, and on their meeting they read over the list, proceed seriatim on the names, and require vouchers from members present of the truth of the claim, as to their being entitled by birth, service or marriage; the freemen's book is searched, and if it appears to the council that everything is right, the question is put upon each individual, and if he is passed, there is no objection, and he is marked "approved." If the council choose to take time for consideration, it is moved to postpone any person, and if they think he has no claim, the question is put, and he is rejected.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16152. Mr. O'Connell.] By "no claim," you mean if they do not like to allow his claim?—If they think it is impossible he can be entitled, (perhaps his father's name not appearing on the books), that is, as to birth.

16153. Are they entitled to reject anybody they please?—Anybody disqualified, or having no just claim, they certainly are entitled to reject.

16154. Suppose a man applies by grace especial?—That is a grace and favour.

16155. They admit him if they choose?—Certainly.

16156. Is there any obligation on them to admit anybody that they do not think they ought to admit?—I always considered that they act in this way, they are willing to admit any man who has a fair claim.

16157. Do you think if that man was known to be a Roman-catholic, for example, they would admit him?—I have known the guild to admit Roman-catholics.

16158. Yes, they admitted Mr. Callahan?—They admitted 11.

16159. Soon after 1793?—Yes.

16160. But would they now admit Catholics, according to your judgment?—According to the practice, I sincerely say I think not.

16161. Although he might be the son of a freeman?—That would be different; you were speaking of grace especial; if you talk of birth it makes the case different.

16162. Therefore I wish to have from you, whether if a Catholic were entitled by birth, your corporation would not have the power to reject him if they pleased?—Upon that ground merely, is it?

16163. If they please to do it?—I do not think they would have the power, because I think a legal claim is legal, and ought not to be resisted. I think if the law gives it to a party, he ought to have it.

16164. Is it your opinion, in the guild of merchants the man, though he was a Catholic, would be admitted?—I would advise them to do it, it is my duty; I am the person who attends the council, and in case of any point of that kind arising they generally ask, and if they asked me I certainly would tell them the claim ought to be allowed.

16165. And what would they do, according to your judgment; do you think they would allow it?—I am inclined to think they would not; but then there is a dernier resort; the Court of King's Bench is open.

16166. But when a man had got through the guild of merchants, he would not be much the better for that, for his franchise?—No, he would have the corporation of the city still to get through.

16167. But, in your opinion, there would be a right to get into your guild by marriage or birth?—Most certainly there is that right; the law gave it them in 1793, and I think it ought to be conceded.

16168. But if there was a Protestant who took an active part in the present Reform Bill of Dublin, do you think they would admit him?—On that point there is a precedent: two young gentlemen of the name of M'Causland, nephews to my Lord Plunket, on account of their political principles they were postponed.

16169. They were ultimately admitted?—They were: they were postponed for a time in the city afterwards, but they were ultimately admitted. I have a memorandum here of the dates, if I am allowed to refer to it. July 1831 the merchants postponed the two Messrs. M'Causland, and afterwards the same occurred twice. But at the Easter assembly 1832 their petitions were passed by the guild, and their certificates were sent before the corporation. The city postponed them at that assembly; but on the 2d of August 1833 the city admitted them.

16170. Do you you know of any person being active in looking out for people to be made free latterly, since the Reform Bill?—I think I may say I have; it has been the practice, certainly.

16171. Was there any body formed for that purpose?—Not to my knowledge. I have heard of such a thing; I never had any knowledge of it, for I never took any part in those elections, or interfered with them.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16172. Who did you find active upon those occasions?—Why, there were some of the corporation who appeared to be active; and I believe it is well known that there is an office to encourage young gentlemen to come forward.

16173. What is that office called?—I am told it is called the conservative office; I know there is such an office; I have been in it.

16174. Where is it held?—In College-street.

16175. Who did you find the leading man in it?—I have seen a Mr. Collison very active there.

16176. Who else?—Indeed I do not know. I have seen clerks there, but he appeared to me to be the manager, and the chief person. On the 29th October 1828 the corporation of the city passed a resolution to admit persons of uncompromising Protestant loyalty; that is certain. An amendment was moved to admit a large number in printed lists as members of Brunswick clubs; that was negatived; and then there was a committee appointed afterwards, and they recommended a number. In January 1829 there were 105 of those persons passed, recommended by the committee.

16177. Could you tell how many of these were free merchants?—I believe I could. As to them, they were persons esteemed gentlemen of high constitutional principles, and were not, at that time, free of the guild; they were passed the city at large, gratis.

16178. Mr. Lefroy.] On grace especial?—Grace especial.

16179. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you hold any office in the city at large?—I do; I am one of the clerks of the common council as well as being clerk of the guild of merchants.

16180. Then you know that the common council reject any man they please, no matter what his claim may be?—They have that power, I believe; if they abuse that power, as I said before, the Court of King's Bench is open.

16181. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] How many does that council consist of?—Which council.

16182. The common council?—Ninety-six from the guilds, and there may be 44 of sheriffs' peers; but there are now, I believe, at present, only 32.

16183. Mr. O'Connell.] I am told the sheriffs' peers average from 25 to 35?—I believe there are about 30 now.

16184. The general average is between 25 and 30?—The law allows them 44, but they have not been full; they had no fining sheriffs of late to fill up the number.

16185. Who was the last sheriff that fined?—I do not recollect; it was Mr. Lloyd, the apothecary, I believe: he is dead now.

16186. Every person who has passed the office of sheriff, or who has fined to avoid being actually sheriff, is what is called a sheriff's peer?—If the corporation allow them to assume their seats as sheriffs' peers, when they have served their office, they are entitled by virtue of their office.

16187. Then it is a grace to allow those who are merely fined?—You may call it so; but I believe it has been the custom. Some of the charters mention that sheriffs elected may be excused from the office on payment of a fine.

16188. But the corporation at present is under Lucas's Act in that respect?—Yes, that statute constituted the present corporation.

16189. If there were more than 44, would they belong to the corporation?—If there were any more they would sit outside until there was room; they could not vote.

16190. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Then the maximum council is 96 and 44?—Yes, to the best of my recollection.

16191. How many are aldermen?—Twenty-four aldermen and the lord mayor; that is 25.

16192. How many members does your guild consist of?—I should suppose we have perhaps, at present, 600 or 700 in it, or perhaps more.

16193. Is it by far the most numerous guild?—Certainly; it has very much increased, more than other guilds.

16194. Mr. O'Connell.] Great numbers are not merchants?—Great numbers; because, being entitled by birth, service and marriage, it has extended.

16195. You have clergymen of the Established Church?—Yes.

16196. A great many attornies?—Some attornies certainly, some attornies, by birth, and some have been allowed by service.

229

Mr. Timothy Allen.

16197. A good many half-pay officers?—Certainly; every description of persons.

16198. A great number of a very highly respectable class of merchants in Dublin are not members?—Yes, I think there are many that never sought it.

16199. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] The trade and business of a merchant is not hereditary; does not descend from father to son?—No.

16200. And merchants have sons who choose to go into the army?—Yes.

16201. And to the church?—Yes.

16202. And to the bar?—Yes.

16203. And embark in all professions and businesses?—Yes.

16204. And accordingly persons being the sons of freemen or the apprentices of freemen they would have a right to their freedom?—Just so, if they are born free, of course they are entitled.

16205. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you not made by grace especial many of these classes free?—I believe I said something to that effect a while ago.

16206. But I mean attornies; have you not made them free by grace especial?—There have been several admitted by grace especial.

16207. You have made some clergymen free by grace especial?—Yes.

16208. Some half-pay officers by grace especial?—We might, I am not certain as to that; we might have made some gentlemen in the army free; it is a complimentary thing for gallantry during the war, or loyalty; that is a very common claim indeed, it has been allowed very commonly.

16209. Mr. Hamilton.] Are the Committee to understand then, that when the claim is advanced as of right, that the right is strictly investigated?—I think it is always investigated, every claim; whether it is decided upon exactly as we should wish, I do not know; but, as I said before, there is a superior tribunal to set that right if it were wrong.

16210. Mr. Lefroy.] The distinction between a claim founded on birth, marriage or apprenticeship and grace especial, is a well-known distinction?—Certainly.

16211. They are never confounded together?—Not now; marriage was formerly classed with grace especial; but of late, since the Reform Act and the Stamp Acts put them on a lower stamp, they are entitled by marriage certainly, and made a distinct class by grace especial.

16212. Mr. O'Connell.] That is only since the Reform Act?—I think since the Stamp Acts in 1815 and 1816; those two Stamp Acts put them on a 1 l. stamp only instead of 3 l.

16213. Did you after the Reform Bill make any alteration?—None, except in the classing of them.

16214. What was the alteration made after the Reform Bill?—Instead of putting them by marriage in the grace especial class, we put them into the marriage class, separate.

16215. Then it was one of the reasons for granting by grace especial before, that they were married to the daughters of freemen?—It was, certainly.

16216. But you never made a separate class of marriage until after the Reform Act?—No; for the Reform Act gave a statutable regulation.

16217. Mr. Lefroy.] Was it to give them the benefit of the Stamp Acts that you formerly classed those claiming in right of marriage with those admitted by grace especial?—It was the custom; they were always in the grace especial, but upon the lesser stamp.

16218. How long since was it that the Stamp Acts made the distinction between admissions founded on birth, marriage or apprenticeship and grace especial?—1815, I believe; but I am certain 1816, because the schedule is annexed to the Act of 1816.

16219. Then upon what stamp was the admission by grace especial; what stamp was required for that?—£. 3., and it is the same to this day; but the marriage is 1 l.

16220. And that by the Stamp Act of 1816; is the same stamp required upon an admission in right of marriage as upon apprenticeship or birth?—Yes, the very same, 1 l. each.

16221. Now, with respect to the fees that are paid, are the same fees paid upon an admission by grace especial as upon admissions founded upon birth, marriage or apprenticeship?—The officers' fees are the same except a very small trifle; but but there is a fine sometimes in the corporation payable to the city treasurer for the use of the corporation, that makes a distinction.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16222. But is that fine payable by those admitted by grace especial?—By grace especial.

16223. But not by the others?—Yes, the service pays 5*s.*; grace especial, some only 10*s.*; a merchant 1 l.

16224. Then, though there is only a small difference there is a difference with respect to the fees that are paid upon the admission by grace especial from the fees paid upon the other claims?—There is, because I have a fee as clerk of the commons on birth, service and marriage; it is only 3*s.* 6*d.*; by grace especial it is 5*s.*; it makes a small difference.

16225. But whatever the difference is, it is to the prejudice of the claim of admission by grace especial?—It certainly is.

16226. And has that distinction been made in the fees as long as you have been acquainted with the corporation?—Certainly it has. I am acquainted with the corporation since the year 1784, which is about 53 years, and that difference and distinction has always been.

16227. That distinction with respect to the fees payable on the different species of admission has existed as long as you have known the corporation?—It has.

16228. Mr. O'Connell.] And those fees were fixed by the corporation themselves?—No; my fees are mentioned in the old schedule of fees settled by the House of Lords above a century ago. I have never increased them since.

16229. Mr. Lefroy.] And they are the same fees as appear in that schedule of a century and a half standing?—The same.

16230. Chairman.] Do you consider it any importance to a man to become a freeman of the guild of merchants?—We look upon it as an honour to a man to be free of the guild of merchants.

16231. But is there anything besides honour belonging to it, any advantage? —Formerly there was; they might be free of custom; passed through the gates of the city with their goods.

16232. How long is it since that has been abolished?—I think about 20 years.

16233. Has it been abolished since the year 1815?—It never was abolished, but it was resisted by the country people, and the Government would not interfere to enforce it, and it fell to the ground.

16234. Well, since what period has that custom been abolished, whether it was legal or illegal?—It certainly was legal, for it was granted by several charters.

16235. Since what period has that custom been abolished?—I say I think about 20 years.

16236. You state that the Stamp Act, to which you have been alluding, was passed about the year 1815?—Yes, and 1816; there were two Stamp Acts, one in each year.

16237. Was that custom abolished before or at the same time?—I cannot say exactly, I can only speak from mere recollection; but I can be certain as to the stamps, for I have seen the Stamp Acts repeatedly since, and I know the dates of them, 1815 and 1816.

16238. But you cannot state accurately when this custom was abolished?—No, I know about the time; I recollect the time when a popular uproar and objection came against tolls, and the country people used to force through the gates without paying it; and then the Government would not allow guards or police to attend to enforce it, and it fell to the ground.

16239. But you cannot state what year that was in?—I cannot.

16240. Well then, do you state now it is of no importance to be a freeman of a guild?—I think it is, because they can belong to a respectable body of men, and they have several privileges; they can vote for representatives for the guild into the common council, 31 representatives; every third year there is an election. Next November, if we are not superseded, we shall have it again.

16241. Mr. O'Connell.] Can a man vote for a representative in the common council from the guild of merchants, without being free of the city?—No.

16242. Then as a member of the guild of merchants he has no privilege, and not having obtained his freedom from the city at large, he cannot vote for a member of the common council, can he?—I do not think he can; he cannot, because we have had the opinion of counsel on that point to direct us.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16243. Chairman.] And the Committee are to understand that a person though admitted a freeman of the guild of merchants, has no power of voting for common councilmen unless he is further admitted into the corporation at large?—That is the practice; it is founded on the opinion of counsel and the practice.

16244. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] On the other hand, no man that is free of the city at large, or free of any other guild, unless he be likewise free of the guild of merchants, can vote for representatives of that guild?—Certainly not; he is an alien to us if he is not free of our guild.

16245. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you your book here to show when first you made a particular entry by marriage?—Yes; I beg leave to explain. It was asked me if a freeman of the guild of merchants, though not a freeman of the city, has any privilege? He has a privilege belonging to that body, he can attend all the meetings, he can vote for masters and wardens, and of course all the privileges, except voting for common councilmen, and if he is free of the city he cannot vote for common councilmen.

16246. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are the funds belonging to the guild to be administered, considerable?—Very trivial.

16247. Has he any voice whatever with regard to that, as a member of the guild?—The master has the handling of the money, as we call it; he receives all the profits or perquisites into the guild, and makes out his account at the end of the year, and that is laid before the hall, and they have a right to allow or reject any part of that; these members of the guild who are not members of the corporation at large, may do so.

16248. Is he eligible to the situation of master of the guild?—Yes.

16249. And warden?—Yes, and to vote at the election of them.

16250. Although not free of the city?—Yes.

16251. Mr. Morgan John O'Connell.] Are there many persons free of the guild and not free of the city at large?—There are not.

16252. Mr. O'Connell.] How many should you think?—I do not suppose 20, because they generally pass the city.

16253. Mr. Ignatius Callahan is one of those 20?—I do not know as to him; he never passed the guild of merchants; I believe he passed the board of aldermen. In 1822, Christmas assembly, there were a number of gentlemen applied for freedom of the Roman-catholic persuasion.

16254. Did any of them get it?—No; there were only two petitions read, Hugh O'Connell and Francis Codd.

16255. Both very respectable merchants; were they not?—I believe they were; they were not allowed, and the other petitions were withdrawn.

16256. Now, produce the original book, that I may see when you first made the class of marriage.—[The Witness produced it.]

16257. Is this the original book of the entries of the proceedings of the guild of merchants kept by you?—It is.

16258. Do you produce an entry bearing date Michaelmas quarter, 15th October 1832?—Yes.

16259. Do you produce that to show when the first entry appears in any of the books of that corporation, to your knowledge or belief, in which the admission was by marriage, a separate class?—I think there was such an entry in a journal before, and I believe I could refer to it, but not for many years; this is the first I made.

16260. In consequence of the Reform Act?—In consequence of the Reform Act.

16261. How many years before 1832 had you been keeping these books?—Since 1796.

16262. Thirty-four years?—Thirty-six years.

16263. And during that time you had never made any entry of freedom by marriage?—I had, but not as a separate class.

16264. I mean as a separate class?—No, I did not; that is the first.

16265. Have you, since this 15th October 1832, kept marriage as a separate class?—I have.

16266. And was that in consequence of the Reform Bill?—Yes.

16267. Because you conceive that the Reform Bill gave a title to vote to persons admitted by marriage?—I do.

16268. And it was on that account that you entered it here?—Yes.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16269. The entry is, "Robert Law, being married to the daughter of Hans Hamilton; Doctor Robert Collins, married to the daughter of Doctor Joseph Clarke;" was Charles Palmer Archer a member of your guild?—He was.

16270. I see you admitted by grace especial two sons of his?—Yes; out of compliment to the father.

16271. Show me the draft of the return I asked for.—[The Witness did so.]

16272. You have very much increased the number of persons admitted latterly?—There has been an increase, but then there was a decrease also; for there was a long period, as you may see by that return, in which no person was admitted.

16273. What about was that period?—About the agitation of the Reform Bill.

16274. Does this show how many you have admitted since 1832 by marriage?—Certainly; it is expressed there, I think.

16275. Can you make a return by itself out of this book of the numbers and dates of those by marriage?—For how long back?

16276. Beginning from 1832?—Certainly.

16277. When you first made the class of marriage?—They are expressed here, I believe, in the return.

16278. No; that is before 1831. I perceive that on the 12th of January, 1835, there were admitted under the class, "Marriage" 17?—Yes; there were.

16279. Sir Harcourt Lees is a member of your corporation, I suppose?—Yes.

16280. Any man who is admitted by grace especial you admit his son-in-law as in right of marriage?—Every freeman's daughter's husband is looked upon as entitled to his freedom.

16281. By marriage?—By marriage, of course.

16282. Although the daughter might be born before her father was free?—They do not investigate that; I must say they do not; the daughter's freedom is not looked upon as a birth inheritance; and her husband is not put upon proof to show his wife was born subsequent to her father's freedom.

16283. So that if you admit a man who has a number of daughters married, then you would admit all his sons-in-law the next quarter?—Not so soon, I think; it is not usual.

16284. Is there any fixed time?—No, there is not.

16285. Do you see any objection to admitting them the next quarter?—I do not know whether there is any legal objection or not.

16286. But you know of none?—It is not the practice to investigate that so particularly; it is a compliment.

16287. Then you consider the freedom by marriage a compliment?—It may assist the young ladies to get husbands.

16288. It is rather an encouragement to the young gentlemen to get wives?—The inducement is reciprocal, of course.

16289. You do not investigate at what time the daughters were born, whether they were born before their father's freedom or not?—It has not been the custom to do so.

16290. And that must be because you considered it in its nature complimentary?—I have said so already; I think so indeed.

16291. Have you not made more than 100 since the year 1832?—They are all there; I have not reckoned them; I do not think there was half the number. What you have read there is the largest number of marriages we allowed at one time.

16292. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Prior to the time when you made a separate class of those who were admitted in right of marriage, was there any inquiry then made as to the period at which the father of the young lady had become a freeman; whether he was free or not, at the time of her birth?—I never knew that inquiry made at any period.

16293. As regards this class of persons claiming as sons-in-law, either before they were made a special class or after, you never knew that inquiry made?—I did not.

16294. It was not the course of the corporation to make inquiry?—Not the practice.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16295. If it had always been the course of the corporation, as far as you remember, to inquire into the ground of the claim in respect of birth, you would have known it?—Certainly; and the books are always searched to ascertain that the father was upwards of 21 years free on claims by birth.

16296. You spoke of the council of the house, who are they, or of how many do they consist?—There were 31 of the brethren, and those who have served the office of master, and the master and wardens at present in office; all those who have passed through the office of master, and 31 of the brethren; they are the council of the house.

16297. Is it their business as council of the house to investigate the matters of fact out of which the claim of right results?—It certainly is; and they examine perhaps into the character and propriety of admitting those persons, whether they are eligible to their freedom.

16298. First of all, do they examine into the fact whether the father was free in the case of birth?—That is referred to me, because I have the books.

16299. That is referred to you by the council of the house?—Exactly.

16300. Do you then examine in each case whether or not the father is on the roll of freemen?—In almost every case. If I know from my own knowledge, or if the council know from their knowledge, that the father-in-law is a very old freeman, they do not take the trouble of searching the books.

16301. But if you are not aware of the fact from your own knowledge, from intimacy with the individual, or if the council are not aware of it from their knowledge, then you make a reference in every case to the books?—Certainly.

16302. With a view to ascertain whether, in point of fact, the father was a freeman?—Yes.

16303. And do you, in that case, investigate the fact whether or not the father was a freeman at the time of the birth of the party claiming by birth?—They frequently discuss that point among themselves: "Is this young man of that age that he must have been born subsequent to his father's freedom?" They always do that; but then this thing must be vouched by one of the members who knows the parties; and then every brother is considered on his oath to give true counsel; and if there is no objection, and they see they are right, they are passed.

16304. Is it your opinion, as an officer of long standing in the corporation, that they do regard themselves as a body of men on their oaths to investigate justly and truly?—It is my decided opinion that they do look upon themselves as such, and in cases of service there is a jury sworn always.

16305. In the case of an individual coming forward to claim in right of apprenticeship, you say there is always a jury sworn?—That is subsequently, in the city; the guild of merchants have not a jury sworn on persons by service, but they have an enrolment book of apprentices, which would show it at one view.

16306. Do they require to have the indentures of apprenticeship enrolled in cases of all apprentices members of their guild?—That is the rule of the guild.

16307. At what period do they require that enrolment?—It ought to be done within six months; the oath of the freeman is, that he will enrol his apprentice within the first year after he is indentured.

16308. And is that uniformly done?—I do not think it is observed.

16309. At any period of your service, or knowledge of the corporation, has that been invariably observed as to enrolling within the first year?—I do not think it has.

16310. Nor has not been during any period of your service?—I think every freeman who is attentive to his oath ought to do it.

16311. But in point of fact has that been observed?—It has not as it should have been.

16312. Mr. O'Connell.] Though they are sworn to do it?—It is in the oath, as an oath of office.

16313. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] The oath is a long one, and contains a great many particulars?—It does, a great many clauses.

16314. Every man swears that he will keep a musket, carbine or fusee in his house, in good, clean and sufficient order?—Yes.

16315-16. And turn out at a moment's warning?—

(Mr. O'Connell.) No, there is nothing about turning out.

16317. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Now, has it come within your knowledge that indentures indentures have been enrolled in the last year of the apprenticeship?—Indeed I have heard of such things being done.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16318. Mr. O'Connell.] Would you allow it to be done?—I would not enrol it under a wrong date; I should put down the day it was handed to me, let the day be what it would.

16319. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] But you have known cases in which that strictness has not been observed?—I have known in many cases freemen passed who were not able to produce their indentures.

16320. In those cases did you strictly investigate the fact of the servitude?—The jury I suppose did.

16321. I am speaking of your particular guild of merchants; do the council, in cases of applications for admission to the freedom of the guild by virtue of servitude, examine into the fact of the servitude?—They do, but then they very often take the voucher of a brother of the guild.

16322. They consider a brother speaks on his honour?—No, I consider he is giving counsel on his oath; I always conceived it in that way.

16323. The voucher of that brother, then, when appealed to, is as to the fact of the servitude?—Yes.

16324. That the individual claiming to be admitted free in respect of service had, in fact, served his seven years' apprenticeship to a freeman of the guild?—Yes, but they always consider this, we may admit him, perhaps, without a very close investigation, because he has afterwards to go through an examination before a jury in the city upon oath.

16325. Well now, according to your experience as an officer of very long standing in the guild, is there a jealousy on the part of the members and of the council who were the body to investigate these claims; is there a jealousy with respect to persons being fit and proper persons and proper characters to be admitted free?—Yes, certainly; I have always known them to be very particular as to the proper conduct or character of the persons applying, in all cases.

16326. That is an ingredient always inquired into?—Certainly I conceive it to be so, and that it ought to be so.

16327. You consider that that is a very necessary ingredient to entitle a man to admission into the corporation?—I do.

16328. Then you think it a salutary regulation that there should rest in the corporation the right of rejecting in cases where they are not satisfied as to character?—Certainly I do, or a postponing for further consideration.

16329. A postponing, if they have not sufficient information, or rejecting, if they are satisfied of the bad character?—Yes.

16330. Do you think the corporation would degenerate very much, if there were not residing somewhere that power?—Certainly it must, because persons of inferior and unfit character might get in.

16331. Have you in your experience known persons rejected on the score of bad character?—Yes, I have known persons applying that would not be admitted, and were rejected merely on that ground.

16332. Mr. O'Connell.] But you are asked whether you knew anybody actually rejected?—In the guild?

16333. Or the corporation at large; in either?—I have.

16334. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] But I dare say that in some cases, instead of going the ungracious length of a formal rejection, it might be intimated to an individual that he had better withdraw his application than put it to the vote, when at last that result would follow?—That is frequently the case, and, as I mentioned, the list of applications for freedom is made out and put in the summons of the council of the house, and then if they are not eligible they may get a hint from some of the members; sometimes they will go about asking for votes to get them in, and they tell them they will give them a bit of advice—to withdraw.

16335. Is that considered a more kind and considerate mode of dealing with a man, than putting the stigma on him by a formal mode of rejection?—I think it is, and then the friends of that man withdraws his name.

16336. Has that often occurred?—Very often.

16337. And you have even known where a man would not take a hint of that kind and pressed on his claim, you have known him at the guild of merchants rejected?—I think I have, but I am not certain.

Mr. Timothy Allen

5 June 1837.

16338. That is your recollection?—I think I have known some instances of that.

16339. And you certainly have in the corporation at large?—That is done by the board of aldermen; in the first instance they canvass the claims of freemen in their own room, and they reject numbers.

16340. Now you do not attend there?—No.

16341. Mr. O'Connell.] Then how do you know it?—I know it from experience, because I attended the board for 20 years myself when my uncle was town-clerk; I was 20 years his assistant, and used to attend the board.

16342. Then you know of your own knowledge that they do that?—I do.

16343. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do these council of the house report to the guild at large the result of their investigation upon these cases?—They do not make a formal report, but the list, as I mentioned, that is in the summons, is marked off according to their decision, and that is laid before the hall.

16344. When you say the hall, you mean the board at large?—Yes, the guild on quarter day.

16345. Does the hall then follow that species of report?—Almost in every instance, it is very seldom varied from, hardly ever, but once I think it was.

16346. And I am to understand you that that is not a mere idle ceremony, but you consider it is done in the way of business, and bonâ fide and conscientiously done, that investigation?—Certainly, because in a committee a claim can be much better investigated than in an open hall.

16347. Mr. Lefroy.] Although in a claim founded upon marriage, the time of the daughter's marriage, in reference to the father's freedom, is not very strictly examined, yet is the fact of the father being a freeman examined with less strictness in the case of a right founded on marriage than in the case of a right founded on birth or apprenticeship?—No, certainly, they require as much proof of the father being a freeman to allow his son-in-law to become free as they do his son to become free by birth.

16348. Then in that respect, although a right founded on a claim of marriage has been passed under the head of grace especial, the right itself is examined into with as much strictness as a right founded on birth or apprenticeship?—So far as regards what I have mentioned, that the father must have been a freeman.

16349. Mr. O'Connell.] Or be?—If he is living he must be.

16350. Mr. Lefroy.] Now at the time that, in point of practice, a right founded upon marriage was passed, under the head of grace especial, was the right then less strictly examined than it is now, or less strictly examined now than it was then?—I think just the same.

16351. So that no alteration in that respect has occurred since the Reform Bill?—No.

16352. Well, I collected from you, that since the Reform Bill you had entered admissions under the right of marriage differently from what you had done before?—Yes.

16353. Was that with a view to give a new right, or only to mark more distinctly the difference between the pre-existing rights?—It was to make the classes more distinct; because the Reform Act recognizes marriage as a claim as strong, in my humble judgment, as birth or service, for it reserves their rights to elective franchise.

16354. But does not admit a right by grace especial?—No, certainly not.

16356. When you say they were formerly ranged with grace especial, do you mean by that to say, the right by marriage was of the same nature as the right by grace especial?—I think formerly it was only a compliment. We looked upon admission by marriage as a favour; but since the Legislature has made a separate class, we look upon it now as a strong right, and have made that a separate class.

16357. Do you mean to say, formerly no person had a claim founded on a right right of marriage?—He had a claim, and it was in every case almost allowed, where he was a proper man.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16358. He had, then, a claim formerly?—Yes, certainly.

16359. Then your ranging it differently did not give him a new right?—We think it has.

16360. Do you mean to say, it has given him a new right in the guild?—Yes; we looked upon it formerly as a mere matter of favour; we look upon marriage as a right now equal with birth or service.

16361. What is the difference between now and formerly?—Because the Legislature has preserved the right by marriage.

16362. That is your reasoning upon it; but I want to know respecting the rights in the guild; what is the difference between the right founded on marriage now and formerly?—None in practice, except the entry.

16363. None but the difference of the entry?—That is all.

16364. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] And the difference of entry was, that you might form your entries with the distinction taken in the Reform Act?—We so conceived.

16365. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you conceive that that entry gives a new original right, or that it is only a different classification of a pre-existing right?—I think it is the classification of a pre-existing right, confirmed by the Legislature.

16366. You said, when you had that book put into your hands by the Member for Kilkenny, that there was the first entry you had made?—Yes.

16367. And you said something respecting an entry in a former book?—That was an entry by the person who was clerk of the guild at that time.

16368. Have you the book?—I have; I can send for it if you wish to see it.

16369. Is it in London?—It is.

16370. Can you now tell us anything about what was the nature of that entry?—I believe there are several such entries in the book, a list by birth, a list by service, a list by marriage; two or three by marriage.

16371. Mr. O'Connell.] Now, for the first time on the 10th October 1831, you made a change in your entries during your time?—1831; yes, that is the first, I believe.

16372. Now at page 373 the following persons were admitted free, " Birth," Arthur King, son of Stuart King, esq.; George Latouche, son of Colonel David Latouche; Augustus F. Pemberton, son of Alderman Joseph Pemberton; Ernest Augustus Crofton, son of Richard Crofton; Joseph Handcock Scott, son of George Bradshaw Scott; Edward Worth Newenham, son of Edward Worth Newenham; Edward Worth Newenham, junior, grandson of Edward Worth Newenham; Henry Hood Newenham, son of Edward Worth Newenham; John Sutton, son of George Sutton. " Service," Robert Hanna, by service to Robert Hanna. " Marriage," Robert Law, being married to the daughter of Hans Hamilton; Doctor Robert Collins, married to the daughter of Doctor Joseph Clarke. " Grace especial," Charles Palmer Archer, junior; Thomas Meredith Archer, gratis, being sons of the Right Hon. Charles Palmer Archer, now lord mayor; Joseph Parley, for his attachment to the King and Constitution, gratis. Then for the first time you made four distinct classes?—Yes.

16373. Before that you used to make but three?—Three.

16374. Now they ran thus; for example, taking the 15th July 1822, the following persons admitted free, " Birth," Andrew Newton Oulton, son of Richard Oulton, and grandson of Plato Oulton. Now Richard Oulton mentioned in that must have been free himself?—He was.

16375. Then calling him the grandson was only an additional reason for his being made free?—I think so.

16376. " Service," Samuel Brenan, by service to Thomas Thompson; Richard Frazer, by service to Joseph Lamfrey. " Grace especial," Benjamin Colby, esq., being nephew of Captain Woodward, a free brother?—That was a compliment.

16377. " John Anderson, being married to the daughter of Alderman John Exshaw," was that a compliment also?—It was, but on the claim of marriage.

16378. And Benjamin Colby, esq., being nephew, that was the claim he made?—Yes.

16379. Now there are three heads also on the 14th October 1822, birth, service and grace especial?—Yes.

16380. Now,

Mr. Timothy Allen

5 June 1837.

16380. Now, " Grace especial," William Gustavus Adamson, esq., at request of the late lord mayor ?—That was the usual compliment.

16381. Then John Whelan, at request of Sir Thomas Whelan, late high sheriff; Richard Ring, for his services as a loyal yeoman, that was his claim ?—Yes, all the claim he had.

16382. James Freke, being married to the daughter of the Rev. Mr. Sandys; that was his claim ?—Yes.

16383. The Rev. Prince Crawford, for his attachment to the King and Constitution; that was his claim; was it not ?—Yes.

16384. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do not you think it a very good one ?—Sometimes it is very proper.

16385. Mr. O'Connell.] William Espinasse, for his services as a loyal yeoman; was that the barrister ?—No; that is the attorney.

16386. John Barry, for his polite attention in auditor-general's office; all in the same class with the husband and the lady ?—Yes, grace especial.

16387. Patrick Warren, as a long-resident, respectable fellow-citizen ?—Yes.

16388. John Carmichael, for his attachment to the King and Constitution? —Yes.

16389. Sir William Cusack Smith, bart., as a humane and upright judge; that was his claim ?—It was.

16390. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] He used to be thought so, I believe, at one time ?—He was always esteemed as such.

16391. Mr. O'Connell.] So, in the other entries, on the 7th of April, 1823, you have birth, service and grace especial ?—Yes.

16392. The grace especial consists of two classes. Now there is " Birth," Henry Darley, son of alderman Frederick Darley; Hulton Pettigrew, Abraham Pettigrew, sons of Henry Pettigrew; George Campbell, son of James Campbell. " Service," Charles Hamilton, by service to James and John Hamilton. " Grace especial," Henry Jellico, esq., being married to the daughter of Sir A. B. King, bart.; Anthony Dijoncourt, Stephen Dijoncourt, jun., for their attachment to the King and Constitution ?—Yes.

16393. To those that were admitted by grace especial you always put some reason ?—Yes; either being merchants or traders, which is the corporation claim, or as having some other claim.

16394. Now, on the 12th January 1824, there are these entries: " Birth," Edwin Lorenzo Moore, son of Rev. John Moore. Service, John Dalton, by service to Sir Edward Stanley; and you have 18 by grace especial ?—Yes; including some by marriage.

16395. As, for example, William Walshe, esq., being married to the daughter of William Shannon, and Lieutenant John Heazen being married to the daughter of James King, and Julius Cæsar Besnard for his services as a loyal yeoman ?—Yes.

16396. Now, I ask you, the fact mentioned here is apprenticeship, and you always understood it to be an apprenticeship under indenture, by being bound? —That is the most regular way.

16397. Would you not so understand it in your guild, that a man was actually bound ?—I think the more regular way of taking an apprentice is, that it should be by indenture.

16398. Now, is any man bound to another unless he has some written contract by indenture; is not that the way of binding ?—That is the regular way, and the proper way.

16399. Now, do the corporation admit people to be bound by word of mouth ? —I never knew it.

16400. You never knew a verbal binding ?—No, I never did.

16401. Then it was a written binding; you know nothing else can be enrolled but a writing ?—Certainly.

16402. Does not that oath mean distinctly a written instrument of binding ? —I think so, I have no doubt of it.

16403. " You shall take no apprentice, but if he be free-born, that is to say, no bondsman's son, and for no less term than for seven years; within the first year you shall cause him to be enrolled" ?—That is, that the indentures should be brought to the proper office and enrolled, and a certificate of the enrolment written upon them.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16404. And of course you would not conceive any man to be a regular apprentice but a man that was apprenticed under an indenture, a written instrument of indenture fit to be enrolled?—I would not consider it was done in the legal form without an indenture; but I have known instances to the contrary. When persons brought before a jury have been asked for their indenture, and they have given a good account of its having been lost, they might prove on oath the existence of such a thing, but that it had been lost.

16405. That would be a reason why it should not be produced?—But the master would be called for to prove the service.

16406. And sworn, I believe?—The jury have the power to swear him, because my lord mayor is generally present to swear in the jury and the witnesses that are in attendance.

16407. But in your passing a man by service in your own guild would not you, as a conscientious officer, require to be satisfied that he had served by indenture or written binding?—I believe I mentioned before that they require some satisfactory evidence, and they examine frequently the master and the apprentice. The master's voucher, or a certificate from the master, that such a man served his time to him.

16408. By serving his time, meaning that he served under an indenture capable of being enrolled?—Yes, that is the regular meaning of it certainly; but if the jury choose to be satisfied upon the voucher of the master, and upon the apprentice being sworn before the lord mayor that seven years were served bonâ fide without an indenture, they have admitted a man under such circumstances.

16409. I confine you to your guild; is any man entitled to be admitted by service in your guild (you being asked for your opinion by the council) who did not serve under a written contract or indenture?—It is always my duty to give a legal opinion as far as I am capable, which is very little indeed; but I tell them always, if asked, there ought to be an indenture. It is the regular course.

16410. And that is your opinion?—Certainly.

16411. I am not speaking of what the jury may do capriciously wrong, but I am speaking of your duty as an officer of your guild; would you allow a man to pass who admitted he had no indenture?—If I were asked by the council, I should say, "Gentlemen, you should have an indenture produced."

16412. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Has it never occurred to your knowledge that your council have acted otherwise, and that they have been satisfied on the ascertainment of the fact of service?—Frequently.

16413. Then the council are not in the habit of considering the fact of the production of the indenture indispensable?—No, they are not; the indentures in strictness ought to be handed to me, and properly enrolled within a year, and then I would have a certain fee upon them; but I never cared much about that.

16414. And your having a certain fee upon them, without any impeachment at all upon you, may be a very good reason why you should hold the indenture a very regular and a very proper thing?—I am not so very strict after my fees as that.

16415. I know you are not; however, you have said, in your evidence, you consider the strictly regular mode is by indenture?—Certainly.

16416. And you have, as the officer of the guild, a regular fee on that process of producing and certifying the enrolment of the indenture?—Yes.

16417. And although you have stated to your council that, in your judgment, that is the strictly regular and technical mode, nevertheless the council have informed themselves of the fact of the servitude for seven years by other evidence, and have dispensed with the necessity of the existence of an indenture?—Certainly.

16418. Has that often occurred?—It has, very often.

16419. Has it often occurred from the time of the commencement of your services as an officer of the corporation?—It has.

16420. And you had a knowledge of the course of proceeding of the corporation before you became its officer?—I had, because I conducted the business for several years for Mr. Taylor, who was town-clerk and also clerk of the guild of merchants: he was an old gentleman, not capable of taking care of the books, or anything, and I used to do the business for him; and it came to my knowledge during that time.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16421. Then I may say, you have had a knowledge of the course of proceeding of the corporation for more than half a century?—I have.

16422. And during that whole period of time I am to understand, that the council have been in the habit of satisfying themselves of the fact of the servitude of seven years by other means than by the existence of an indenture of apprenticeship?—They have.

16423. And have acted upon that, and admitted the claim of servitude without any indenture existing?—They have.

16424. And that, you say, frequently?—Frequently.

16425. And throughout the whole period of half a century?—Exactly so.

16426. Then it is no novelty, no new invention?—By no means; an old practice, I may say.

16427. Mr. O'Connell.] Then, in that case, no indenture at all was produced?—Of course, when they took a person's word, or his oath, who could not produce the indenture, none has been produced.

16428. What is it you certify; suppose a man is admitted free of your guild by service, what do you certify to the common council, or to the board of aldermen, to get his admission?—There is a certificate drawn out by the clerk, and it is in these words: such an assembly, We the master and wardens of the guild of merchants, do certify, that such a person, of such a street, was admitted to the freedom of the guild of merchants, by birth, service or grace especial, or marriage, as the case may be. Then that is signed by one master and one warden, and lodged in the town-clerk's office, with Mr. Archer.

16429. Have you any here of those certificates?—No, but I could copy one for you.

16430. Then of course the certificate by marriage has only been since the Reform Act?—Yes, it was done before by grace especial.

16431. But you formerly put grace especial into the certificate, if the reason should be marriage?—Yes; or the rather, having married the daughter of such a person, being a freeman.

16432. You formerly put the reason for each grace especial in the same way?—By marriage; the marriage grace especial was put in that way, "the rather" being married.

16433. And, I suppose, being nephew to such a man?—Yes.

16434. And a man who was admitted for his services as a yeoman, that was added?—Yes.

16435. So that wherever you put the grace especial, you added the reason, whatever it was?—Yes, in order that the corporation might know the claim.

16436. And even the man who was so civil as the auditor, you put that, I suppose?—Yes, everything is put down.

16437. Have you your enrolment-book here of indentures?—No, I have not.

16438. Do you certify for persons whose indentures are not enrolled?—Certainly, if the guild pass them, I am bound to certify.

16439. Chairman.] But after you have certified, the individual claimant is to go before another tribunal, is he not, to establish his claim?—Yes.

16440. He has to go before the city at large?—Yes, to become free of the city he must do it, to gain the elective franchise.

16441. Mr. Hamilton.] Were not the indentures formerly stamped; was there not, on the admission of a freeman, a stamp affixed on the enrolled indentures formerly?—There were certain stamps always on indentures; is it the admission stamp you mean?

16442. The stamp of admission was not that formerly affixed on the indentures?—No, it was placed on the petition of the person applying for freedom; the stamp duty payable on admission was affixed to the petition of the person applying for freedom.

16443. Chairman.] Who is responsible to the Stamp Office for the payment of the stamps on the admission of freemen?—In the guild of merchants I am; there is a penalty upon me if I omitted those stamps.

16444. You are responsible that the parties claiming their freedom and admitted to their freedom in the guild of merchants, pay what is requisite as the stamp duty?—What is required by the schedule of stamps.

16445. Is there any investigation instituted by the Stamp Office, or by their officer, into the correctness of the return you make of that stamp duty?—Frequently.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16446. Was there such an investigation previous to the year 1832?—Several times; I have some of them noted down.

16447. Did they ever query the propriety of your reducing the stamp duty on this class of honorary freemen, namely, those by marriage, to 1 l. instead of 3 l.?—No, how could they when the Stamp Act did it?

16448. Therefore the Stamp Office officers recognised the propriety of that distinction?—They did certainly.

16449. Between the years 1815 and 1816, and the year 1832?—Yes, always.

16450. Were they rigorous in exacting the 3 l. stamp duty on all other cases of honorary freemen, excepting those by the claim of marriage?—They were.

16451. How often were your accounts with the Stamp Office subject to scrutiny?—I have some of the years down here when the stamp inspector examined all stamps in the guild of merchants, in the years 1808, 1815, 1820, 1825 and 1828.

16452. Now, upon all those occasions were queries put to you as to your having returned to the Stamp Office the different sums correctly?—Certainly; the way the inspector did, it was to take this journal, go through all the names and make me produce the stamps.

16453. And therefore the officer of the Stamp Office did by that investigation make himself acquainted with the number of parties who were admitted under that right, as well as the number of parties that were admitted under the strictly honorary right?—He did.

16454. And never queried the propriety of this right?—No, they never did, not to my knowledge or recollection.

16455. If this right was one not legally defensible in your guild, was it not his duty to call upon you for the larger amount of stamp duty?—That is the use of the inspector, to see the proper duty is paid.

16456. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You are considered the officer as responsible under the Act to see the proper rate of duty, according to the particular nature of the admission, has been paid by the party?—Certainly.

16457. And you are accountable, and made to answer to the Stamp Office?—I am, and there is a severe penalty on me for any omission.

16458. Chairman.] What penalty would there be supposing you did not return the proper person to the Stamp Office with the proper duty affixed?—A penalty of 10 l. on each, and I believe a deprivation of office.

16459. Was there any distinction between the rigour with which the Stamp Office looked into the accounts previous to the year 1832 and the present time?—No; I must say they have not been so regular in their visits as they ought to be, because here is a great lapse of time since the last inspection.

16460. Mr. O'Connell.] Is it your opinion that the Stamp Office decided any question about rights?—They must go by their own schedule; such a man coming in so and so must pay so and so; they go by their schedule; I have the stamps here; I have brought with me the stamps for all freemen admitted in the guild of merchants from the year 1796, when I became clerk, to the present day; they are all in London; and the present book is here, with all the stamps in it.

16461. Chairman.] My question was, whether the Stamp Office officers were just as rigorous before the year 1832 as they have been since, in the investigation of your stamp accounts?—Yes, they have.

16462. Mr. O'Connell.] What investigation did they make but to cast up what you returned?—They went over the journal, and saw all the entries, and then they said, show me the stamp for each one by one, seriatim all through, and I showed them every stamp.

16463. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do they examine whether it is a claim of freedom on right, or a freedom on grace especial?—Certainly; it is 3 l. on grace especial.

16464. But do they examine that fact?—They do; here is the journal to show them.

16465. They check it by the journal?—Exactly.

16466. Mr. O'Connell.] And they did that at the time you did not make a separate class for marriage; they allowed those to pass then, as well as they have since?—They did, since 1815 and 1816.

16467. Though they found it in the class of grace especial, they allowed it to pass?—They did, on the reduced stamp.

Mr. Timothy Allen

5 June 1837.

16468. Mr. Lefroy.] But the entry showed that it was upon the claim of marriage?—Yes, it did.

16469. Mr. O'Connell.] And they made no difference between the period when you had the class of grace especial, marriage being mentioned as the reason, and when you had the class of marriage by itself?—They have not inspected it since I made the difference.

16470. When did they last examine?—One thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight; they certainly are rather remiss.

16471. Chairman.] Then latterly they have been much more remiss than they were formerly; do you mean that?—Indeed I mean so; I may say I could mention that I have been above 40 years clerk, and there have been only five examinations during that period.

16472. Were those five examinations between the year 1815 and the year 1832?—No, from 1796 to 1828.

16473. How many examinations were there from the year 1815 to the year 1832?—There were three.

16474. Have there been any since 1832?—No.

16476. Now let me have the order for the nephew of the alderman at the same time?—

16477. Mr. O'Connell.] It is Midsummer quarter, 15th July 1822, Benjamin Coleby, esq., being nephew of Captain Woodward, a free brother?—Benjamin Coleby, Midsummer 1822, 3 l. stamp, not being marriage.

16478. Chairman.] Being the nephew of a brother, he was admitted by grace especial?—Merely grace especial under that claim, and he had to pay 3 l.

16479. Mr. O'Connell.] And then they made a distinction between grace especial; when the reason was by marriage they charged but 1 l.?—£1.

16480. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] At no period was such an entry as that of the party being the nephew of a brother considered as conferring a right at all?—No, this was all considered a mere compliment; merely an inducement.

16481. And as strictly honorary freemen?—Yes.

16482. And always so dealt with by the Stamp Office?—Yes, a mere compliment, but they made them all pay 3 l.

16483. But they did not make the man on whom the entry was, that he was married to the daughter of a freeman, pay 3 l.?—No, 1 l.

16484. Chairman.] How soon after that entry was there an inspection?—One thousand eight hundred and twenty-five was the next; 1828 was the last.

16485. Mr. O'Connell.] Will you be so good as look to a person of the name of George Mason as a freeman in your guild?—His name is here.

16486. Show me his admission in your other book.—[The Witness did so.]

16487. By service in your guild, to what trade do you mean, or what business must the service be?—It ought to be a freeman of the guild.

16488. But the guild is the guild of merchants?—Yes, merchants and traders.

16489. Now, may a man be a carpenter, for example, who is free of your guild; would the service to him as a carpenter be a service so as to give a claim to freedom in your guild?—

16490. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Supposing him to be a freeman of the guild?—

16491. Mr. O'Connell.] Supposing a man to be free of your guild, and to be by trade a carpenter and a trader, as such, if a person served an apprenticeship to him as a carpenter, regularly under indenture, would that give him a claim to be admitted by service in your guild?—It would.

16492. Then, if I understand you, any man who is free of the guild of merchants, no matter what trade he belongs to, an apprenticeship to him gives the claim of freedom by service?—Such service and such claims have been allowed.

16493. Have they been rightly allowed?—That is a legal opinion you will excuse me attempting to give.

16494. What opinion would you give if you were to be asked by the guild?—I think if the master can be made out to be a trader, that it is a good claim; because Lucas's Act explains when it says, that the representatives for the guild of merchants may be merchants or traders.

16495. Well, now, for example, George Mason appears to have been admitted Michaelmas quarter, 10th October 1836?—Yes.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

5 June 1837.

16496. He appears to have been entered, "Service to George Brown"?—Very good.

16497. Now, what is George Brown?—I believe this is George Brown the jeweller and silversmith, in Fownes-street; I believe that is the man.

16498. Do you know what George Mason is?—No, I have no knowledge whatever of the man, nor what he is.

16499. Are you aware that he is a writing clerk?—No, I never heard.

16500. Where does that George Brown reside?—In Fownes-street, if it be the same person I mean.

16501. A silversmith and jeweller?—Yes.

16502. See whether he passed any body else on the 10th October 1836, by service?—It will appear in that book.

16503. See whether he also passed a person of the name of Bewley Brown; is there any other George Mason?—I do not think there is; I will search. [The Witness did so.]

16504. You know nothing of this George Mason yourself?—Not personally; I know nothing of him.

16505. He has been admitted to register the 16th February 1837 as a freeman; now, you have a person of that name, and answering that description, as having served Mr. George Brown, the jeweller and silversmith?—It is on that book you read it; it is so.

16506. You have not any other George Mason in your alphabet?—No; I searched 30 years back, and found no other.

Mr. William Jordan Lambert, called in; and Examined.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

16507. Chairman.] ARE you a professional person?—No.

16508. Are you clerk to one of the guilds of freemen of the city of Dublin?—Clerk to the guild of smiths.

16509. How long have you been so?—About five years.

16510. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you the original books belonging to that guild here?—I brought the books that were in my custody.

16511. What are these?—Two of the transaction books and the book of enrolment.

16512. What date do the transaction books commence?—One of them in 1811, I think, and the other is only kept in succession after that. It goes to 1834; 1835 and 1836 I think is the second; I have them both; I can send for them now.

16513. But the second of them brings down the transactions to the present period?—To the present period.

16514. Where are the books of the transactions prior to 1811?—In the chest of the corporation itself.

16515. In whose custody?—In the custody of the master and wardens, each of the officers holds a key; there are three keys to the chest, and it is usual for the master to give one to each of the wardens, and also to keep a key himself.

16516. Could not you have brought the prior ones?—I could, if I had thought of it, I dare say; but I did not apply for them.

16517. Is this your return?—Yes.

16518. Sign it?—I did.

16519. Chairman.] Is that a correct return?—It is.

16520. To the best of your knowledge?—To the best of my knowledge; it is made out since I came here, and I signed it as clerk to the guild.

16521. Mr. O'Connell.] You have signed the indorsement, but sign the close of it.—[The Witness signed his name at the close of it.]

16522. I see you mention here people whose claims were by birth, marriage and service?—Yes, and grace especial, and the general ordinary admissions, in compliance with what you directed.

16523. Is this a transcript of your book?—If I understand you rightly by the word transcript, wherever I met an admission I always took it down in the list, and gave it to you. It is every admission that appears in the books.

16524. And inserted in this?—And inserted in that.

16525. You have the books here?—I have the books out of which I took that.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

5 June 1837.

16526. Mr. O'Connell.] You must bring them the next day. Now, under the head " claims, whether by birth," &c., I see " Thomas Carlile, service" ?—Yes.

16527. To William Truelock ?—Yes.

16528. By service, you mean service as a smith, do you ?—No, not generally, in our guild; if a professional gentleman takes an apprentice, and he serves a lawful apprenticeship to him, we consider that as a good service, though he did not belong to any of the crafts.

16529. Chairman.] Which crafts belong to your guild especially, then ?—The smiths, glaziers, embroiderers, patten-makers, trunk-makers, pewterers, braziers, founders, ironmongers, wireworkers and drawers and girdlers.

16530. Including pin-makers ?—Yes, they are deemed wireworkers.

16531. Now, if you make a person free of the guild of smiths by grace especial, and the person who is admitted be an attorney, will you admit by service that attorney's apprentice ?—I would say so, provided that the grace especial admission was seven years clear to the coming of the indentures; that he was a free smith to all intents at the period of taking the apprentice.

16532. Mr. Serjant Ball.] Supposing he was admitted by grace especial since the Reform Bill, would you still admit his apprentice in right of servitude ?—I cannot say particularly as to that, for there never was an instance of the kind occurred to my knowledge.

16533. Mr. O'Connell.] But if there was a person admitted by grace especial since the Reform Bill, would you admit his son to freedom by birth ?—I could not say as to that; the admission does not lie with me.

16534. But would the corporation of your guild ?—I could not say, because the admission in our guild is very particular; the mode of admitting, I mean.

16535. What is the mode of admitting ?—It is this: prior to any claimant coming forward he presents a petition, (I have some of the copies that I can show you,) saying, the petition of such a one, praying an admission into your honourable guild by service, having served his apprenticeship to such a man; then he sets forth the name of the person, and then claims through that right; the council of the house are then summoned to attend previous to the petition going out to the guild at large; the council then examine it, and at the foot there are the names of the brethren who certify the truth of this petition; that may be signed by one or more of the brethren of the guild as to the truth of the petition; the council of the house only then examine him as to the right of admission, and also as to the truth of it; and when they are satisfied that the petition has come fairly before them it is handed to me, and I read it out at length to the guild, and the guild either pass it or reject it.

16536. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Can you state whether, in point of fact, since the Reform Bill, any person has been admitted to the freedom of your guild in right of servitude to an honorary freeman created first of all ?—No, I can say no such instance has occurred.

16537. Mr. O'Connell.] What apprenticeship do you call service ?—It must be seven years, if I recollect the Reform Bill rightly.

16538. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But can you say there has been no admission in right of birth since the Reform Bill ?—Several.

16539. Listen to my question: by any person claiming as the son of an honorary freeman created since the Reform Bill ?—It is an impossibility, it could not be; the father must be alive at the period.

16539*. I am not asking what is possible or even probable, but I am asking you what is the fact ?—It has never occurred.

16541. Do you conceive if such a thing did occur your guild would admit that person to his freedom, claiming in right of marriage, as having married the daughter of an honorary freeman created since the Reform Bill ?—I am convinced they would not at this stage; I do not know what they would do, nor will I undertake to say what they will do in 15 years' time, which is the proper time for the application.

16542. Do you mean, claiming in right of marriage ?—Yes, in 15 years' time I will not undertake to say what they will do.

16543. But the proposition is at the present day in your guild, no man entitled titled to his freedom as having married the daughter of an honorary freeman, created such since the Reform Bill; do you consider your guild would admit to his freedom a man claiming in right of having married the daughter of an honorary freeman, who has been made such since the Reform Bill?—My own private consideration is, that they would not.

5 June 1837.

16544. But you are a public man; what is your public consideration?—What I mean by my private consideration is, I do not mean to speak as an officer of the body, lest it might be considered I was speaking the sense of the body.

16544*. That is what I wish you to do?—That I cannot do.

16545. Mr. Hamilton.] Are you authorized to speak as an officer of the body?—No, by no means.

16546. Chairman.] Have you ever taken the opinion of the body on that point?—The case never arose.

16547. And you have had no opinion expressed by the body, have you?—Never.

16548. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] When you say you cannot speak as an officer of the body, what do you mean?—I did not say I could not speak as an officer of the body; I can speak as an officer of the body; I am speaking as an officer of the body; but I say I would not like it to go forward that I was speaking the sense of the body.

16549. I am asking you your own impression as to what the body would do in a given case; you are competent to tell me that?—Yes.

16550. What is your impression as to what your guild would do in that given case?—In the case of marriage to the daughter of a freeman coming in by grace especial since the Reform Bill?

16551. Yes; what would they do in that case?—My own impression is, that they would not.

16552. And that they ought not?—And if they referred to me I would, as the officer, advise them not to do so.

16553. Then accordingly your impression is, that a person so claiming has no right to his freedom?—Why, that is my individual opinion.

16554. I am asking you your individual opinion?—Not at this stage; I think in time to come it will be a good claim.

16555. Then are you of opinion, that provided the daughter was born after the father obtained his freedom by grace especial, that it would be a good claim for a person who married that daughter to insist on his freedom?—I am, if she were born subsequently to the father obtaining the franchise.

16556. And do you include, in what you are now saying, the fact that the father obtains his franchise after the Reform Bill, by grace especial?—After that, if such a case hereafter should arise, I think they would do so.

16557. Mr. O'Connell.] Then you conceive no daughter's husband can have a claim to freedom unless the father be free at the time of her birth?—I would not think it a valid claim.

16558. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Then, will it not come to this, from what you have just said, that although if you are aware, by the provisions of the Reform Bill, the father would have no right to register as a voter—you are aware of that—an honorary freeman, created since the Reform Bill?—I am aware of that.

16559. Although the father could have no right to register, yet you think that it is in the spirit of the Reform Bill that the son of that father, or rather, that the son-in-law of that father, should acquire a right to register?—Decidedly so; and at the period the Reform Bill was passing, every gentleman who surrounds me knew that such was understood.

16560. By whom?—In the debates as to it they said the cutting off the grace especial freemen did not cut off the hereditary right derived from them.

16561. After the Reform Bill?—At the time of the discussion.

16562. Who stated that?—I cannot recollect particularly the individual's name; I know that there was such a discussion.

16563. What debates do you allude to?—The debates in the House of Commons, which I frequently have reported as connected with the press.

16564. Mr. O'Connell.] You have under this column, I see, put four different claims, have you not; birth, service, marriage or grace?—Birth, service, marriage or grace; yes.

16565. Do you put, besides that, honorary freemen?—Yes, I did; that is the same as grace, but I did it merely to show that it was by what we call presentation; that it was a mere ordinary admission out of compliment.

Jovis, 8° die Junii, 1837.

MEMBERS PRESENT.

Sir Robert Ferguson.	Mr. O'Connell.
Mr. Hamilton.	Lord Granville Somerset.
Mr. Lefroy.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. William Jordan Lambert, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

8 June 1837.

16566. Mr. O'Connell.] WAS the greater number of those admitted before the Reform Bill by grace especial?—A vast number; I do not think there were the majority, but there were a vast number admitted by grace especial previous to the Reform Bill.

16567. Do you recollect any reason why you admitted any great number in the year 1825?—No, I could not say; I was not a freeman of the guild at that time.

16568. Have you the books here from which you took this list which you have given in to the Committee?—Yes, I have.

16569. Will you produce the book containing the entry of 1825, in the month of October?—Here is the entry of 13th October 1825.

[The Witness produced the same.]

16570. Is there any other admission of freemen in the month of October 1825?—No other, except the day they were sworn and signed the book.

16571. Have you the book containing the entry of 6th October 1825?—I have it. [The Witness produced the same.]

16572. Who kept this book in 1825?—The clerk's name is signed at the bottom; John Joseph Byrne.

16573. Do you see any difference in the ink, between one of those entries in this page and another?—No, I do not.

16574. Is Mr. Byrne alive?—No.

16575. When did he die?—I could not say exactly; about three years ago.

16576. He did not die till after the Reform Bill?—No; I do not think he did.

16577. Chairman.] Had he any access to those books subsequently to the Reform Bill?—I do not think he had; he resigned his clerkship.

16578. When did you become clerk?—I was elected clerk of the guild on 9th February 1832.

16579. Mr. O'Connell.] Can you say whether the former clerk had any access to those books since that time?—I can; decidedly he had not.

16580. Are there beseeches or petitions sent to your guild for freedom?—Yes.

16581. Have you any of those?—I have.

16582. Have you any before the Reform Bill?—No; I have not before the time of my appointment.

16583. Are there none remaining?—Previous to my appointment I think it was merely a written document.

16584. At what time did you begin to print the petitions?—I cannot say exactly, but somewhere between two and three years ago.

16585. Will you produce the form?—This is the petition, setting forth the claim of the party.

16586. Have you the beseech founded upon that?—Upon that passing the guild. There is then a certificate to this effect:—"Certificate of Admission to the Honourable the Corporation of the City of Dublin:—We, the master and wardens of the corporation of smiths, or guild of St. Loy, Dublin, do certify, that at a full hall this day assembled," such a person, of such a street, "was unanimously admitted free of said corporation, by," setting forth the same, birth, service or marriage, marriage, as the son of such a person, or as having married the daughter of such a person, or as having served his apprenticeship to such a person. "We therefore beseech that," such a person, "may be admitted to the freedom of the Honourable the Corporation of Dublin as a free smith, as aforesaid. Given at our common hall," on such a day. Signed by the master, wardens and clerk of the guild.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

16587. Chairman.] You used the word "unanimously?"—If there was an objection I would run my pen across that word.

16588. Then it is not necessary that the election should be unanimous?—It is not necessary; it may be by ballot if it is called for, but it is very rarely called for.

16589. Mr. O'Connell.] Then there is a ballot taken whenever it is required upon the admission of any freeman?—If, upon a petition coming forward, any member should stand forth and dispute the admission of the party, he would then say, addressing the master of the guild, "I move that this petition be rejected." If that be seconded, the master puts the question upon the petition, and that is taken as the decision of the guild upon the admission.

16590. How is the majority ascertained?—By the balloting-box; the black beans and the white beans.

16591. If there be a majority against him he is rejected?—He is.

16592. Every man votes exactly as he pleases?—Yes; and no one knows how he votes; he votes by the balloting-box.

16593. He gives no reason except his bean?—No other reason. It is usual upon making the motion, for the individual who moves the resolution to state to the master the grounds. He will say, "I do not think this is a fair petition," upon such and such grounds.

16594. Mr. Hamilton.] The petition states the name, residence and right of the person who signs it?—Yes, and the right derivable.

16595. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you any beseeches filled up complete that have passed your guild?—I have not.

16596. Can you get them?—I could by sending to Ireland for them.

The witness was directed to send for some petitions and beseeches which occurred in the year 1825, and for some in the year 1836.

16597. Have you beseeches in your guild?—Yes.

16598. When you are asked about beseeches, do you mean beseeches to the guild of smiths?—No, I do not call that a beseech at all.

16599. How is the documentary part of the admission of freemen conducted in your guild?—In the first instance, there is a petition handed to the clerk; he then comes and states what his claim is; I ask him how derivable, and he states it; if by birth, as the son of such an individual who was made free of your guild about such a time; I then turn over the book, a check book that we have, and I ascertain if it appears upon the book that the father was a free smith; if I find that it appears that he was a free smith, I then say, "Very well, as the son of" so and so; then the quarter day comes, and then the council of the house usually meet some time previous to the guild at large; I then submit the petition to the council of the house, and the council of the house investigate the rights of the party; they ascertain if it so appears upon the books, and if it is found to corroborate the statement of the petition; the council of the house then passes the petition, and I take it up to the guild at large, and I read the petition; I say, "The council of the house have sent forward for the approbation of the guild the following petitions," and I then read them out; I say the petition of such a party, of such a street, claiming admission by such a right, so and so derivable. I then hand it up to the master, and he puts the question upon the petition, that the petition be allowed. He usually marks upon the outside, "allowed," with his own initials; and he then hands it to me; the party then comes to me for the beseech; the beseech is a document coming from the guild, not from the party.

16600-1. To Mr. Archer.] Have you such a document?—It is a certificate and not a beseech.

16603. If a person wishes to become a member of the general corporation, he brings a certificate from a minor corporation, which you embody into the form of a beseech,

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

8 June 1837.

beseech, and that beseech is the document upon which the corporation at large determines the propriety of the admission of the person?—Yes.

16604. Therefore, so far as the guild is concerned, they have nothing to do with the beseech?—Mr. Lambert.] When once it goes into the hands of the town clerk we have nothing to do with it.

16605. But that document is a certificate and not a beseech?—It is synonymous with a beseech.

16606. Upon that the documents which have been handed in to the Committee are framed?—Mr. Archer.] Yes.

16607. To Mr. Lambert.] Can you show some of the certificates?—I can show some that were filled up that have not been paid for, that I did not forward.

16608. Mr. O'Connell.] Being paid for is in your opinion essential?—It is very essential to me, as clerk of the guild.

16609. How much do you get?—Fifteen shillings.

16610. Is your evidence this, that a person desirous of becoming free of the guild of smiths comes to you as clerk of the guild, and states the nature of his claim to such freedom?—Decidedly so, himself or relative, or some friend of his.

16611. If he comes to ask it as grace especial, he states some claim he has upon you by loyalty, or something else?—He would come to me and state that he was a respectable ironmonger, or some of the crafts.

16612. Or he would state that he was the son of some free brother?—Yes, in the case of a birth admission.

16613. Or that he has served his time to a free brother; or that he was married to a daughter of a free brother?—Yes.

16614. Then you turn that into the shape of a petition?—Yes.

16615. Was it the habit to draw those up in writing previously to the Reform Act?—I rather think so; but I cannot speak positively.

16616. If such was the habit before the Reform Act, the records are in your possession?—They are with the other records of the corporation of smiths, in the box in Dublin.

16617. Have any been drawn up in writing since the Reform Bill?—Yes, some of them have; it does not follow of necessity that it would be in this printed form; if these words were in writing it would do as well.

16618. May the petition be either verbal or written?—Not verbal; it must be committed to paper.

16619. When did you first adopt a printed form for that purpose?—I think about two or three years ago.

16620. The claim being thus put in writing, the next step is to submit that to the council of the house, and that is done by you?—It is.

16621. They discuss the claim, and decide either for it or against it?—Yes.

16622. If they decide against it, it is put aside?—The power would then exist with any of the brethren to bring it before the guild at large, and so question the decision.

16623. But in general it does not go further than the decision of the council of the house?—The council of the house generally governs the decision of the guild at large. They have confidence in the council of the house.

16624. Then if the council decide against a man, he may get a friend to bring his case before the guild at large?—If there is an individual who at the bottom guarantees the truth of the petition, or two individuals, they are sent for into the council-room, and asked upon what grounds they say that that petition is a fair one. They set that forth, and it would be competent for that party to bring the question before the guild at large, if the claim were negatived.

16625. If the council agree to the claim, it becomes your duty to bring the man before the guild at large?—Yes, to read out his petition.

16626. And to state that the council recommend it?—Yes.

16627. And then the question is put upon it in the guild at large?—Yes; the master then puts the question upon his admission.

6628. And the guild either admit him, or reject him, as they please?—Precisely.

16629. And the mode in which the majority is ascertained is by a ballot?—If demanded.

16630. There is a kind of show of hands in the first instance?—The master will say, "So many as are of opinion that the petition will pass will say, Aye; the contrary, No." If there are a few noes, and no ballot demanded, he will declare that the ayes have it; and if a ballot be not demanded, it is decided in that manner.

16631. But a single person that says that may demand a ballot?—Not unless seconded.

16632. May two demand a ballot?—Yes; if two demanded a ballot, the master ordered a ballot.

16633. As matter of necessity?—Yes.

16634. If there is a majority of beans against him, you hear no more of him for the present?—Yes; he is competent to be brought forward the next quarter.

16635. And to go through the same process?—Yes.

16636. If there be a majority in his favour, he is then admitted?—Yes; and he gets from me this certificate of admission.

16637. This process of ballot takes place whether the application be by grace especial or by birth, or by service or by marriage?—In every case in which it is demanded.

16638. There is no difference between the nature of the claims, if a ballot be demanded by two persons?—No; that is the general rule on all questions in the guild.

16639. Mr. Lefroy.] It appears, in the form of the petition, that the word "right" occurs; how is that part of the petition filled up. What do you understand by claim of right?—I understand by that, birth, service or marriage.

16640. Not grace especial?—Not grace especial; if it were grace especial, I would, of course, omit the word "right," since the Reform Bill.

16641. Was grace especial, at any time within your experience, or from what you can collect from the document, ever considered as a right?—Never, but just as a matter of favour.

16642. And in that respect distinguished from the other grounds of claim?—Precisely.

16643. Are the same fees charged for admission by right, that is, by birth, marriage or servitude, as are charged for admission by grace especial?—The fees are different.

16644. What are they in each?—By birth, service or marriage, the city fees are 18 s.; stamp duty, 1 l.; guild fees, 18 s. 6 d.; clerk's fees, 15 s.; beadle's fees, 3 s. 6 d. That is, by birth, service or marriage.

16645. What are the fees paid upon admission by grace especial?—Stamp duty, 3 l.; guild fees, 2 l. 2 s.; clerk, one guinea; beadle, 5 s. I am informed by Mr. Archer that the city fees are the same, 18 s.

16646. Then not only the fees are higher upon admission by grace especial, but the stamp duty is higher?—The stamp duty is three times as much.

16647. Mr. O'Connell to Mr. Archer.] Your fees in the corporation at large are the same in each of the four courts?—They are so stated.

16648. Chairman to Mr. Lambert.] Are you answerable for the stamp duty to the Stamp-office?—Yes, the Act makes me answerable for every freeman sworn.

16649. Mr. Lefroy.] Have you accounted to the Stamp-office for these duties?—Since I came in; there were very few sworn into the court since I became clerk.

16650. Mr. O'Connell.] You do not swear them into the court before you send them to the city at large?—They must produce to me a certificate similar to this before I swear them in: "Memorandum, that at Easter assembly, 1827, William Jordan Lambert, smith, was admitted into the liberties and franchises of the city of Dublin by birth, and, on the 11th day of June instant, took the usual oaths, and was enrolled. In testimony whereof, the said is signed by the town clerks, this 20th day of June 1827. Allen and Greene, town clerks."

16651. Then you do not swear in any man in your guild, but a man that has passed the city at large?—No.

16652. And that admission is not an admission of right of freedom in your guild, but is an admission to prosecute the freedom of the city at large?—An admission to prosecute the freedom of the city at large.

16653. And no person is sworn in at your guild but a person who has already been sworn in at the city at large?—Either sworn in as a free smith, or free of some of the other guilds; if we saw a certificate of his freedom as a free merchant, or a free saddler, or a free tailor, by ascertaining that he had passed the city, we would then swear him into our guild; but we would ascertain that he had been admitted into the general corporation first.

16654. Chairman.] Can freemen of the guild exercise any rights belonging to the guild, before they belong to the general corporation?—No, decidedly not.

16655. They must become one of the freemen at large before they can exercise any

Mr. W. J. Lambert

8 June 1837.

any rights in your guild?—They must be in some way admitted into the general corporation of the city.

16656. Before they can vote for any of your officers?—Yes.

16657. Mr. O'Connell.] So that the mere passing in your guild confers no right in itself?—Nothing more than acknowledging that the claim is a good one; it confers no right till the oath has been administered.

16658. What is the oath you administer to a person who has passed the corporation of the city at large?—It is here.

16659. Have you any book previous to 1815, but this book which you produce now?—Yes.

16660. Will you make out a return, previous to the year 1815, of the modes in which persons had been admitted prior to that time?—The book was not in my custody.

16661. What book have you previous to 1811?—I have the regular transaction book of the guild, and I can send for it.

The witness was directed to procure the transaction book of the guild prior to 1811.

16662. Chairman.] In this respect, of their freedom having no peculiar privileges before they become free at large, do you differ from other guilds?—I understand that there is a difference. I understand that in the merchants, which is the largest corporation, it does not follow as a matter of necessity that they must first be sworn into the city; they will swear them in prior to their going to the city; they act as an independent guild.

16663. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you know how old this freeman's oath is?—I do not.

16664. What is the first date of the admission of members in the book you have produced containing the oath; is it not 1761?—Yes; that was transcribed from the others.

16665. When was this book first kept?—In 1817.

16666. It was transcribed from prior books?—It was; and it sets forth that it was for the benefit of having them correct that they did so.

16667. This is the oath that, as long as you know anything of the guild, the freemen of that guild take?—The last ten years.

16668. They must also take the oath of the freemen of the city at large?—Yes.

16669. This oath of yours contains this passage: "You shall not take an apprentice but of the Protestant religion, and for no less term than for seven years; the same to be bound or enrolled by the clerk of the guild for the time being?"—Yes.

16670. "You shall not keep, teach or instruct any apprentice but what you shall cause to be enrolled in the said corporation book." That is part of the oath?—Yes.

16671. Do you know what the date of the institution of your guild is?—The first charter that I know of is the charter of Edward I., the 26th of March, and in the 14th year of his reign.

16672. This oath could not have been existing so long as that?—No, because "you shall not take an apprentice but of the Protestant religion," could not have been the oath then.

16673. You are aware, that in the city at large each person is bound to swear before the town clerk "You shall take no apprentice but if he be free-born, that is to say, no bondsman's son and for no less term than seven years; within the first year you shall cause him to be enrolled, and at his term's end you shall make him free of this city, if he have well and truly served you." Now, you perceive that, by your oath in your guild and the oath in the city, the apprentice must serve by indenture or deed, or writing, to be enrolled?—That is set forth in the oath.

16674. And your oath means the same thing when it says, "The same to be bound or enrolled by the clerk of the guild for the time being?"—I should think they are tantamount.

16675. And yours is stronger, for you swear that "You shall not keep, teach or instruct any apprentice but what you shall cause to be enrolled in the said corporation book?"—Yes.

16676. Do you, after taking this oath, pass any man for service who has no indenture?—The rule is departed from.

16677. The oath is departed from?—Yes, it is; persons who do not cause them to be enrolled by the clerks of the guild have frequently had their apprentices admitted.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

16678. Have persons been passed as apprentices who are not even bound by any indenture or writing?—I have never known an instance of that; it is usual to bring the indentures to the council of the house.

16679. Here is an admission to the city at large, in which you perceive that it is made part of the terms of the allowance by you, "provided it be by indenture"?—Yes.

16680. Do you allow any persons to be admitted by service, notwithstanding these oaths and this qualification by the city at large, who have not an indenture at all?—I have not known an instance, since I became clerk, of an individual being admitted by service who had not an indenture.

16681. By indenture you mean a regular indenture?—I mean a regular indenture; they have left them with me to be produced to the council.

16682. In all cases?—No, in most cases.

16683. And of course, after this oath, you must be of opinion that that ought to be done; that the indenture should be produced, or legal evidence be given of its having been lost?—I would say in every instance an oath should be adhered to.

16684. But you perceive that in cases where they admit by service, without such an instrument as is capable of being enrolled, they do depart from the oath?—They do; they frequently do not enrol them.

16685. As the officer of the guild, you are occasionally asked what the law and practice of the corporation is?—Frequently, as by my oath I am sworn to give them advice.

16686. Are you a professional man?—I am not.

16687. If you were asked to advise whether they should pass a man who had no indentures at all during his seven years, what advice would you give them?—In that instance, I would advise them to examine the party as to whether the indenture did de facto exist; and if it did, what had become of the indenture, so that it could be accounted for.

16688. But if it was admitted that it had not de facto existed, what would your advice be then?—If no indenture existed, my advice to them would be, not to admit him.

16689. Mr. Hamilton.] How many years have you been free of the guild?—I was admitted in Easter 1827; that is 10 years free.

16690. The words of the oath are, "Bound or enrolled," with the disjunctive particle?—"Bound or enrolled;" either would answer.

16691. The subsequent part of the oath requires that he shall be enrolled in the same corporation book; what does that mean?—This indenture being enrolled, the master of any individual will bring his indenture to me, and say, "Mr. Lambert, here is the indenture of my apprenticeship; you will have the kindness to enrol it in the apprentice-book." And, upon paying 6*s.*, I enrol it; and I make a memorandum, "Such an indenture produced this day; such a party bound to such a party."

16692. But the words of the oath do not expressly state that it is the indenture that is to be enrolled, but the apprentice that is to be enrolled?—I would say the indenture.

16693. Mr. O'Connell.] You have no form of enrolling an apprentice, except by enrolling his indenture?—No.

16694. Have you the book of enrolment here?—No.

16695. You keep a special book of enrolment?—Yes.

16696. What you call the enrolment-book?—Yes.

16697. Containing enrolments of all the indentures that are duly brought to you?—Yes, in every instance where the application is brought to me.

16698. And that book is a book consecutive to a similar book that your predecessor kept?—It is the same book.

16699. Mr. Lefroy.] The guild have acted upon that term in the oath, and admitted persons who have been bound, though their indentures have not been enrolled?—Yes, that has been departed from.

16700. Or rather the practice has been, to construe the oath as not requiring the enrolment of indentures in every case?—The oath has always been in that respect construed favourably to the franchise; it has not been acted upon rigorously.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

16701. Do the council examine as to the precise time of the execution of the indenture previous to their admitting upon a claim of service?—Yes.

16702. Will you state the nature of the inquiry in the case of service which the council makes?—In the case of service, the master would be called. The petition of the person applying to be admitted by service would be then before the council, and they would ask, "Do you know this individual?" He would say, "Yes." "Was he an apprentice of yours?" "Yes." "Were you free at the time you took him an apprentice?" "Yes." And then, if there was no objection as to character, it would be considered as a good apprenticeship, provided it was seven years.

16703. Then they do not put the question as to the fact of the indentures being executed?—I cannot call to mind an instance in which the party had not an indenture executed. My own impression is, that if the indenture were not produced, if an affidavit of the master were given of the existence of the indenture, it would be held good.

16704. Is an affidavit always produced of the existence of the indenture?—No; if there was a doubt, the party would be called.

16705. Mr. O'Connell.] If the indenture itself is produced, of course there is no affidavit?—No; unless there is a doubt as to the validity of the document.

16706. Mr. Lefroy.] If the indenture is produced, is there any inquiry as to the precise time of its execution?—In many instances they ask, "Did this individual serve the period mentioned in this indenture to you?"

16707. Is it the habit to ask as to the precise time of the execution of the indenture?—By no means; I mentioned that before.

16708. Then it is not the habit to put any question as to the precise time of the execution of the indenture, though it is the habit always to put the question as to the fact of the apprentice having served the requisite time?—Yes; there is a practice in Dublin, which is this: it often occurs that the apprentice will be with a master for some time before the indenture is executed, and then he is allowed to have put into the indenture the time that he served prior to the indenture.

16709. That is a practice prevailing in Dublin with all trades?—Yes; to take an apprentice for some time, and not to have an indenture over him at first, but to allow the time so served in the seven years.

16710. Then the practice in all the trades is to receive an apprentice for some time before the indenture is executed?—There is a practice of that description.

16711. Is there any precise limit as to the time?—I have never known of any.

16712. Chairman.] Would you draw any distinction between the validity of an indenture of an apprentice which was completed during his seven years' service, and an indenture which was not completed until a few days after the seven years' service had expired?—I would, decidedly.

16713. Mr. O'Connell.] You would require it to be executed during the service?—If I was asked individually, I would recommend that I would put more faith in an indenture executed prior to the expiration of seven years than subsequent.

16714. Is not it a mockery to execute the indenture after all the covenants of it have passed by in point of time, and nobody is bound by it?—I have stated that I would not place much faith in it.

16715. Have not you good sense enough to see that it would be a mockery?—It certainly would; it would give no binding.

16716. Would it not open a door for the grossest frauds? For example, suppose a man did not serve a day more than a year?—In the admission there could be no fraud practised of that description, because we would take care to examine the master as to whether it was a valid document, or a fictitious one got for the purpose of obtaining the franchise.

16717. Would it not afford an opportunity of their telling you a lie about the service, as the indenture would be upon the face of it a lie?—It would be always open to a question as to the indenture.

16718. Did you ever know an instance of any one producing an indenture which he admitted was not executed during the seven years at all?—Never an instance.

16719. Did you ever hear of such an indenture being set up in your guild?—Never.

16720. Your own opinion would be decidedly against such an indenture?—Yes; I think it would look suspicious; and unless the party accounted for it very satisfactorily, I would recommend the party not to be admitted.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

8 June 1837.

16721. Mr. Lefroy.] But in point of fact there may have been admissions under indentures executed after the time of the apprenticeship expired?—Such a case might have arisen without my knowledge.

16722. Mr. O'Connell.] But you would stop it, if you knew it?—If my opinion were asked, I would certainly desire that the admission should be looked upon with a great deal of care, and that the party should be examined.

16723. Examined as to the fact of the apprenticeship having been boná fide served?—Precisely.

16725. Then, in such a case, could the freeman comply with this oath, "You shall take no apprentice, but if he be free-born, for no less term than seven years, and within the first year you shall cause him to be enrolled." Could that oath, in such case, be kept by an indenture made after the seven years were over?—No; I think the strict meaning of that oath is as it was expressed just now.

16726. Chairman.] Do you mean to say, that it is intended that there should be a written document under that oath?—Yes.

16727. And that that written document should be enrolled with you as clerk?—It would be acting up to the spirit of the oath to do so, but it is a practice that has been deviated from.

16728. Mr. O'Connell.] Would it not be acting also up to the letter of the oath?—Decidedly.

16729. Mr. Hamilton.] Is there a word about indentures in the oath?—I do not think the word "indentures" occurs.

16730. Mr. O'Connell.] Is not some contract capable of being enrolled necessarily implied in the very words of the oath?—Yes.

16731. Mr. Lefroy.] Does the word "contract" occur in the oath?—No.

16732. Mr. O'Connell.] Can you enrol a verbal agreement?—I might. It says, "You shall not take an apprentice but of the Protestant religion, and for no less term than seven years, the same to be bound or enrolled by the clerk of the said guild for the time being."

16733. Does not it go on, "You shall not teach, keep or instruct any apprentice but what you shall cause to be enrolled in the said corporation?"—Decidedly.

16734. Do they enrol every one?—No.

16735. Then they violate that oath?—Parties that take apprentices that they do not enrol do so.

16736. Who have taken this oath?—Who have taken this oath? I cannot state positively, but I have no doubt there were such cases.

16737. You do not enter any man free of your guild but who has taken the oath?—I would consider no man a free smith who did not take the oath.

16738. Would you consider any man capable of taking an apprentice so as to recommend him for his freedom if he was not a free smith, and had not taken the oath?—No, I would not; not an apprentice that would have a claim upon the franchise.

16739. Mr. Lefroy.] Your answer, that the oath has been departed from, depends upon your construction of the term "enrolled" being an accurate construction of the oath?—Exactly.

16740. But you do not mean to say, if you are mistaken in that, that you persevere in saying that the oath has been departed from?—The construction put upon that part of the oath of late years, and within my recollection, has been as to its not being necessary to be enrolled.

16741. Then others have construed the oath differently from the way in which you have construed it?—Yes.

16742. Have those been persons of experience in the corporation?—Persons of experience in the corporation have taken apprentices and have not enrolled them.

16743. They have construed it differently from your view of the interpretation of it?—Yes.

16744. Mr. O'Connell.] After having been sworn by the city at large, that within the first year of the apprenticeship they shall cause them to be enrolled, if a man does not enrol them with anybody does he keep that oath?—I think the oath indefinite; indefinite; I would not know what construction to put upon it when it does not say by whom the apprentice is to be enrolled.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

16745. Suppose he is not enrolled by anybody?—If he is not enrolled by anybody, I do not think that is acting up to the oath.

16746. Mr. Hamilton.] Does it say where he is to be enrolled?—No, to me it is most indefinite; Mr. Archer can explain it.

16747. Mr. O'Connell.] Does not it say, that he is to be enrolled by somebody somewhere, and if the man is not enrolled anywhere, nor by anybody, is not that a violation of the oath?—I would deem it such.

16748. Mr. Lefroy.] If you could understand the oath, you would say it was a violation of it?—I cannot understand that oath fully.

16749. That is the oath upon which you are now questioned?—Yes.

16750. Mr. Hamilton.] The oath is so very indefinite, that it is difficult to say in what case it is violated and in what case it is not?—Yes.

16751. Mr. O'Connell.] Is not it clear, that it is not violated if the person be enrolled?—I say this, that by that oath, if I were a person in business, I would not know where to get my apprentice enrolled.

16752. If a man came to you with an indenture, if he was a free smith, would not you enrol him at once?—I would, but that is in compliance with the guild of smiths' oath; that is definite.

16753. If you did not know any other place to go to, to get him enrolled, would not that be keeping your oath?—It would, as it regards the oath to the guild, but not to the city.

16754. Would it not be also keeping your oath which you took to the city at large?—I conceive a distinction must be made, that a freeman who had taken that oath to the city at large upon his admission might not belong to a guild at all; I do conceive that oath perfectly indefinite.

16755. Do not you conceive it would be performed if you were a free smith, and enrolled a man within the first twelve months of his apprenticeship within your own guild; do not you think you would in that case have complied with this oath?—I would not think it; I think the oath contemplates something besides the guild.

16756. As you have taken the oath, will you state what it was the oath contemplated?—I only presume so.

16757. When you swore that what did you mean?—When I swore this I cannot exactly say what I meant, for I knew I would have no occasion, not being in trade, to take an apprentice. But I would say this, that I do not know what the meaning of that oath is as to the word "enrolled;" that is to say, I do not know before whom I should go myself if I wanted to enrol an apprentice under it.

16758. Did you take that oath?—I did.

16759. Would you take it again, to-morrow, if necessary?—I would, knowing that I would have no occasion to exercise it in that respect.

16760. Suppose you were a blacksmith and made free of the guild of smiths, and took that oath, how would you understand it?—By applying to the town clerk for information upon the subject.

16761. Would you take it to-morrow?—I would.

16762. When you took it, did you know the meaning of that passage?—When I took it I knew I would have no occasion for any meaning in it.

16763. Had you a meaning?—My impression is, that not ever intending to have an apprentice, I passed the matter over without any particular meaning.

16764. You said you would take the oath to-morrow, if necessary?—If in business.

16765. If you were made a freeman for the first time to-morrow, you would take that oath?—I would.

16766. What would be your meaning in it?—My meaning in taking it would be precisely as it states; knowing that I never would have any occasion to regard that passage.

16767. That is, that if you ever had an apprentice you would enrol him?—I would know that I would never have an apprentice.

16768. The meaning would be, that if you had an apprentice you would enrol him?—I would apply to the town clerk for information upon that passage, to know whether it meant that he should be enrolled.

16769. And if he agreed with you that it meant in the guild of smiths, you would enrol him there?—Yes.

16770. And if he told you that it was at any other place, you would do it?—If he

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

8 June 1837.

he told me of any other place, and I found that it was the previous practice, I would act upon it.

16771. And you would comply to the oath by enrolling him accordingly?—Yes, I would act according to the practice, whatever it was.

16772. If the clerk of the corporation told you there was a public enrolment office in the corporation at large, and that was the meaning of the oath, would you make the enrolment in the manner he said, whatever the practice of others might be?—I would act according to his explanation.

16773. And not by the practice of others?—If I found that the practice had been departed from, it would serve to depreciate my value of it being necessary.

16774. Though you swore to it?—I would go upon what I knew to be the construction.

16775. Is there any mental reservation in it?—I would adhere to it, if there is a known definite expression which I can comply with.

16776. Do not you know what enrolment is?—I understand the language perfectly; enrolling a deed or document.

16777. Then, if you swore to enrol a deed or a document, whatever the practice of others was in violating that oath, would you violate it?—I would not conceive it violating it.

16778. You having sworn to enrol it, if others did not enrol it, would you follow their practice?—No, I would not; I would enrol it.

16779. Are there any rules and regulations, triennial or otherwise, belonging to your guild?—Yes.

16780. Have you those?—No, the master has them.

16781. Have you a copy of them?—I think I have a printed copy.

16782. Chairman.] Do you not also, in the freeman's oath, swear, "You shall know no foreigner to buy or sell any merchandizes with any other foreigner of this city or franchises thereof, but you shall warn the mayor thereof"?—Yes.

16783. Do you believe that all the freemen think they break their oath, unless they go constantly to the mayor with that sort of information?—I do not, for they do not act up to that at all.

16784. You are aware, also, that the oath says, "You shall know no gatherings, conventicles, nor conspiracies made against His Majesty's peace, but shall warn the mayor thereof." Do you think that part of the oath is regularly observed?—I think that part of the oath is very indefinite.

16785. Do not you also swear that you shall always, "while you are able and in your power, keep a good musket, carabine or fusee, in good, clean and sufficient order?"—Yes, that is another part of the oath.

16786. Do you believe that all the freemen of the city of Dublin, who have the power of having such a musket, carabine or fusee, do keep a musket, carabine or fusee, in good, clean and sufficient order?—They do not keep one at all.

16787. Then, do you infer that parties swearing these various things, and not observing them, are all guilty of a breach of that oath?—No, I distinguish as to what is the practice.

16788. Then there are certain parts of that oath which, by practice, have become of non-usage, and therefore, though the parties do still take this oath in compliance with usage, they do not observe it in those various points?—In various points they do not observe it.

16789. Mr. O'Connell.] The usage is not to do what you swear to do?—The usage has not been to keep that part of the oath.

16790. Are not you able to keep a carabine?—Indeed, I am.

16791. Do you keep it?—Indeed, I do not.

16792. But you have sworn to keep it if it was in your power?—Yes.

16793. And because other freemen do not keep the oath, you consider yourself at liberty not to keep it?—No, I do not conceive that part of the oath means anything but for the protection of the city in case of danger.

16794. Is not the oath positive, with the single qualification of it being in your power, and you say it is in your power, to keep it?—It is.

16795. You have sworn that you shall always, whilst you are able, and it is in your power, keep a good musket, carabine or fusee, in good, clean and sufficient order; you have no carabine?—No.

16796. You have no musket?—No.

16797. You have no fusee?—No.

16798. Then of course you have none in good, clean and sufficient order, though you you are able, and have always been able, to keep one if you pleased?—Yes; I could have kept one since I became a freeman if I chose it, and if I conceived any danger to the city I would keep one, I dare say.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

8 June 1837.

16799. Mr. Hamilton.] You regard it as an ancient oath, taken to a certain extent more for form's sake, than as an oath more solemnly administered?—Yes.

16800. Mr. O'Connell.] The oath ends thus: "All these points and articles you shall well and truly keep, according to the laws and customs of this city, to your power, so God you help, and by the holy contents of this book;" and upon that you kissed the Word of God?—Yes; according to the laws and customs; and I look upon it that the laws and customs of the city now are, that there is no necessity for my having one.

16801. Though you swear to do it?—The last sentence is evidently placed there to define the nature of the oath.

16802. Do you mean the words, "according to the laws and customs of this city?"—I do; the "laws and customs;" the word "custom" must be interpreted the same as the word "right."

16803. Then is what you mean this, that if it has been the custom to violate an oath, you may violate it?—No; but if the mode of acting up to the oath had been defined by the custom, I would have acted upon it.

16804. When the words are explicit, why do you want further definition?—The oath gives a definition.

16805. It says, "You shall always keep a good musket, carabine, or fusee"?—Then the conclusion explains it.

16806. Do you understand the word "customs" there to mean, that if it be the custom not to do a thing that you swear by your oath you will do, that you do not violate the oath by not doing it?—I construe the oath in compliance with the last clause, which sums up and defines the whole. It says, "All these points and articles you shall well and truly keep." Then it sets forth how you shall keep them, namely, "according to the laws and customs of this city." It certainly by that does not mean the laws and customs observed when that oath was first made, but according to the laws and customs of the city subsequent to the period of their framing the oath as they think proper.

16807. Do you understand by that phrase "according to the laws and customs," that if the custom has been not to keep a musket, carabine, or fusee, which you swear that you will always keep, that that custom excuses you from not doing that which you have sworn to do?—I do. I think by the words "according to," it thereby gives the excuse.

16808. Chairman.] You do not admit that you have sworn to do it, if the custom is contrary to the words in the former part of the oath?—I have taken the oath as it is here stated; but then, what I mean to state is this, that I took it with this meaning, that I would act up to it according to what the custom would be. The Committee will see this plainly in this manner. The oath says, "that I shall know no gatherings, conventicles, nor conspiracies made against His Majesty's peace, but shall warn the mayor thereof." I would also view that in the same way as indefinite.

16809. What you mean to say is, that you construe the particular enactments of the oath by what you conceive to be the existing custom?—Precisely so.

16810. And therefore if those particular customs do not require you to pursue precisely what is there laid down, you do not conceive that you have sworn falsely, or violated the oath you have taken?—Decidedly so.

16811. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you think that that phrase was ever binding upon anybody, that you shall always keep a musket, carabine, or fusee?—I should think it was binding in times of rebellion.

16812. Was it binding in the words at any time?—No, I think not. I do not think the party taking that oath would immediately purchase a fusee or a carabine.

16813. Do you think he was bound to have one if in his power?—No, except in the way just mentioned.

16814. When the oath was first introduced, of course no custom adverse to the oath could exist?—If no custom adverse to the oath existed, I think he should have acted up to the spirit of it.

16815. When the oath was first introduced, a man who took the oath was bound to keep a musket?—Yes; that would be my impression.

16816. Then the man who first began the violation of that was guilty of breaking his oath?—I cannot give an answer to that.

16817. What is your judgment upon that?—My own impression as regards that oath is, that the change of times brought it into disuse, that part of it.

16818. The change of times must have been commenced by somebody?—It must.

16819. The first man who, though able to keep a musket, or fusee, or carabine, did not keep it, was not he guilty of a violation of the oath?—I could not say upon what ground or judgment he came to that conclusion.

16820. In your judgment was not he guilty of a violation of the oath?—The first person that violated the oath knowingly, was guilty of a violation.

16821. But a man that violates it now is not guilty of a violation?—I do not conceive that a man violates it now; within the last ten years such has not been the law or custom of the city.

16822. But the oath is continued to be administered?—I cannot say; I never heard a person sworn to it since I was sworn, and it is ten years ago since I was sworn.

16823. Chairman.] Do you know the date of the oath?—No.

16824. Do you know the date of your guild oath?—No.

16825. Mr. O'Connell.] Can you ascertain the date of your guild oath?—I think I should be able by inquiry.

16826. Do you admit persons to their freedom who are under age?—No, we do not.

16827. You require that the person should be twenty-one at least?—We would decidedly, before he would exercise the franchise.

16828. Do you admit him under twenty-one?—No, we do not; such a thing may exist, but we would not do it if we knew it.

16829. Can you now accurately state what the trades are that belong to your guild?—Yes, accurately; smiths, glaziers, pewterers, braziers, founders, embroiderers, trunk-makers, tin-plate-workers, patten-makers, wiredrawers and workers, ironmongers and girdlers.

16830. Chairman.] What do you mean by girdlers?—That is unexplained; I think it is the persons that formerly made the belt or girdle that went round the waist. I think about the 17th century and long before, it was the habit and custom to use a belt.

16831. Then upon that you find some difficulty in answering positively?—There has been a difference of opinion as to what a girdle was; some say it alludes to a part of the saddle.

16832. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you enrol as an apprentice in that book of enrolment any person that does not belong to one or other of those trades?—Yes; I would do so if it were presented to me.

16833. Supposing an attorney was a free smith?—Supposing a shoemaker came into the guild of smiths by birth, and he took an apprentice, I would enrol him decidedly.

16834. And that would be as good a service in your guild as the patten-makers or trunk-makers?—I would conceive it as good.

16835. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you state anything with respect to the mandamus which was applied for by Messrs. Adcocks, in reference to your corporation?—Yes, and Henderson.

16836. Their admission was first by mandamus?—It was; we were obliged to admit them.

16837. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you resist it?—I cannot say; I was not in the guild at the time; I do not think they did.

16838. Sir Robert Ferguson.] Does it appear by the proceedings that they took the opinion of counsel?—They took the opinion of counsel, as it appears upon the face of the books. The entry is "Tuesday, 13th November 1824. In consequence of notices of writs of mandamus being served on the following brethren, viz. Mr. John Woods, master; Mr. James Scarlet, Mr. Henry Brierly, wardens; Mr. John Pattison, Mr. Wm. Mallet, representatives; Mr. Charles Smyth, P. M.; Mr. John Joseph Byrne, clk. gld., a meeting of the council of the house were assembled to take into consideration the propriety of laying the case of Messrs. Adcocks and Henderson before counsel, when it was unanimously agreed to lay said case before counsellor Perrin. Thursday, 18th, another meeting of the council of the house, which meeting assembled pursuant to notice, to take into consideration the propriety of accepting Mr. Ford's (the attorney for Messrs. Adcocks and Henderson) proposal to Mr. Collett, the attorney for the corporation, to waive all claim to costs on on the condition that the mandamus should go without opposition. Mr. Mark Flower moved that Mr. Brierly (the master's warden) should proceed to Mr. Ford, to notify to him the consent of the corporation to accept of his proposal which motion being seconded by Mr. Joseph Smyth, same was carried."

16839. Mr. O'Connell.] Is there any other entry in this book touching that subject?—No other, except the swearing in the parties.

16840. Are there any documents that show anything else upon the subject?—Yes; I have two drafts of the opinion of counsel upon the subject.

16841. Have you the cases also?—I have the opinions, not the cases; they came to the opinion that, by our bye-laws, we could not resist the mandamus, and that we had better admit them.

16842. Has Mr. Collett the cases?—I cannot say.

16843. Is he alive?—Yes.

16844. Where are the original opinions?—We have not them in the chest, but I dare say the attorney for the guild has them.

16845. Chairman.] This came on before you were a member of the guild?—Before I was a member.

16846. Does that oath for excluding Roman Catholics from apprenticeship continue to be administered to the present day?—It does.

16847. Has there ever been an application made to the guild to alter that oath?—I do not think there has been an application, but I have upon my mind Mr. Mark Flower remonstrating against its continuance.

16848. What is he?—He is a very extensive pin-manufacturer; a highly respectable man.

16849. But his remonstrance was unsuccessful?—He carried it no further; he was an advocate for the admission of Roman Catholics generally into the guild.

16850. But nothing was done in consequence?—No.

16851. Was he much supported in the guild?—In the guild of smiths there is a difference of opinion as to that subject.

16852. Were you ever called upon to assist in any way in your official capacity at the Registry Association?—Yes.

16853. By whom?—By Mr. Collison.

16854. Did you go to the association?—I never went so far as that. He just called upon me and mentioned to me that "Such a person is anxious to get free of his guild; will you draw up his petition?" I asked, "Has he a claim?"

16855. Did he speak to you about the association?—Never; I never was there but twice in my life.

16856. Where was that?—At College-street; I had occasion twice or three times to go there.

16857. What occasion had you to go there?—I think I went there about the admission of a person of the name of Carlile; he was not paying the fees at once, and I went to ask Mr. Collison to endeavour to urge him on to pay what the fees were, and when I called upon him subsequently he paid me.

16858. Had you any suspicion that Mr. Collison might have the means of enabling him to pay?—Yes, I think he has the means if he wished to do so, from his circumstances in life.

16859. From any association or any body?—I could not say positively.

16860. What is your opinion?—My opinion is that he acts for some association or some committee.

16861. What is that committee called?—I cannot say exactly, but I think it is the Protestant Registration Committee or Association.

16862. It does not meet at the Corn Exchange?—I am convinced of that.

16863. Where does this Protestant Registration Committee meet?—At No. 3, College-street, at Coleman's the confectioner's.

16864. Chairman.] Are you in the confidence of that association?—Not at all.

16865. Nor a member of it?—Nor a member of it.

16866. Have any advertisements been put into the paper about it?—Frequently.

16867. Stating its existence and its objects?—Yes.

16868. Mr. O'Connell.] You recognise the claim by marriage in the manner you have specified. Do you recognise a claim by the husbands of all the daughters?—Yes, I would say so, if the daughters were born at the time of the father being free. That has been departed from in a few cases; it was looked upon as a compliment to the father to grant it till the Reform Bill, and it was then recognised as a right.

Mr.

Mr. Timothy Allen, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

8 June 1837.

16869. Mr. O'Connell.] IS this return, put in by you in consequence of a requisition upon the last day, signed by you?—It is.

[The same was delivered in.]

16870. Do you ever in the guild of merchants, in case of a dispute about admitting a person, ballot upon the question?—It is not generally the course, but such a thing has taken place.

16871. If a person be negatived or admitted, and the question is put, is there not a right in any two members of the guild to have the question decided by a ballot?—Certainly; every question may have a ballot demanded upon it.

16872. And with respect to the admission of persons to their freedom, whatever claim they may make to their freedom, that right exists in case two members of the guild choose to exercise it?—Though it be decided by acclamation in the first instance, a ballot may be afterwards demanded.

16873. And that whatever the nature of the claim may be, whether it be birth, or marriage, or servitude, or grace especial?—Certainly.

16874. Then, if a ballot be required, you proceed in the usual way to ascertain the majority by black beans and white beans?—That is generally the course; or a division may take place of the members upon either side of the house; the "ayes" to the right, and the "noes" to the left.

16875. You say, that if a ballot is demanded, it is conceded?—A ballot, being demanded and seconded, must be had.

16876. And then the question is decided by secret ballot?—Yes; the beans are put in secretly into the balloting-box, and collected by the tellers.

16877. And nobody knows how another person votes?—I suppose that is the meaning of the ballot.

16878. Each person has an opportunity of voting as he pleases, without signifying the way he votes, and without assigning any reason?—Certainly.

16879. Therefore in your corporation no man can have his freedom, no matter how plain the claim of right may be, in point of fact, without undergoing a ballot, if two members choose?—If it is demanded; but it is very rarely the case.

16880. Mr. Lefroy.] That is the mode of exercising the judgment which the corporation have a right to exercise upon the claim of any person to admission to his freedom?—Certainly. When there is a difference of opinion, the only ultimate way of deciding it is by a ballot, if demanded and seconded.

16881. Do the members of the corporation consider themselves as exercising less a judgment upon the claim, because that is expressed by ballot, than if it was expressed in any other way?—It is the only way of ultimately deciding a contrariety of opinion.

16882. It is only a mode of expressing the different judgments of the members?—It is a decided mode of finishing a difference of opinion upon the point.

16883. Mr. O'Connell.] It expresses the opinion of the majority; but nobody knows who the majority are?—They ought not to know it.

16884. And nobody can know what reason induces any particular member to vote as he does?—No.

16885. Do you enrol indentures in the guild of merchants?—Indentures of apprenticeship have been enrolled.

16886. You are aware that the condition is, where the admission is by service, that "if it shall appear by indenture"?—Always.

16887. Then, according to the rule of the corporation of the common council, the indenture is always mentioned in the admission as a condition of the admission?—Yes.

16888. Has the common council any place for enrolling indentures?—The guilds have. There is no enrolment office of the city.

16889. You are aware of the freeman's oath?—Perfectly.

16890. Then, when a freeman swears that he will cause his apprentice to be enrolled within the first year, he means enrolled in his own guild?—I should think so, because I never knew an enrolment in the city.

16891. You never knew an enrolment anywhere but in the guild?—No.

16892. And of course an enrolment in the guild would be a compliance with the oath?—It would.

16893. The oath is express that the person shall, within the first year, cause the apprentice to be enrolled?—It is.

16894. It appears that, in point of fact, that is not done in many instances?—In many instances it is not; it has been very much relaxed of late.

16895. But the oath continues the same?—It does.

16896. It is more relaxed of late than it was formerly?—It certainly has for many years been relaxed; in my own guild formerly we would have from ten to twenty enrolled in a year, and of late years I do not think upon the average there have been two. Upon the average I do not think there have been three per annum the last twenty years.

16897. The admissions by service have increased very much, particularly since the Reform Bill?—The entire body of admissions have increased, and the services of course.

16898. Have the grace especials increased since the Reform Act?—No, quite the contrary; because the Reform Act gives them no encouragement.

16899. Then when you said that the entire body had been increased, you did not mean to include the grace especials?—No, there have been a few grace especials, but not many.

16900. In the common council, if there be a difference of opinion as to an admission, is the question put upon the admission?—Yes, put upon each.

16901. There is a right in the common council to demand that the person shall be balloted for?—Certainly.

16902. May one member in the common council call for a ballot?—He must be seconded.

16903. Then if any two require that the question shall be decided by ballot, it must be decided by ballot?—Yes; but that has not been the practice.

16904. But the right exists?—Yes, because it is the rule of the house.

16905. So that no man can compel the common council to admit him without the ordeal of a ballot, if any two choose to demand it?—If it is demanded, he must go through it before be can be admitted.

16906. And that ballot is the same in the common council as it is in the guild of merchants, a secret ballot?—It is conducted in the same way, by beans and a balloting-box.

16907. And with a perfect power to each individual to conceal his vote?—Yes, but it is not the practice to do it on beseeches, nor in the guild either.

16908. Is not the probable reason why it is not usual, that, as the question is first put publicly, there is a tolerably distinct judgment formed of how the majority is, and people do not like to go through the trouble?—That may be one reason; a ballot would not be demanded unless the party had an idea that they would carry a majority upon the ballot.

16909. If they thought that people who voted publicly one way might privately another way?—That might be the supposition, but I would not conceive that a man could do such a thing; I think that a man ought to tell his honest sentiment out.

16910. Chairman.] You are not an admirer of the ballot system?—It is a way of deciding questions, but I think it is more manly to speak out.

16911. Mr. O'Connell.] Does not the corporation of Dublin in all its branches recognise the ballot upon every question upon which any two members choose to demand it?—Yes, but that is not the common practice; perhaps at an assembly there will not be above two or three ballots in the course of a day.

16912. But you do decide questions by ballot constantly?—Yes.

16913. And at almost every assembly there is a call for a ballot?—Yes.

16914. Are not the sheriffs nominated by the common council by ballot?—They are chosen, but that is done by lists of names given in. Lucas's Act requires the ballot upon that.

16915. There is nowhere where the right to ballot is more extensive than in the corporation of Dublin?—Certainly.

16916. Chairman.] Is it well known who votes either way?—No. Attempts have been afterwards made to make out lists, but I believe they are never correct.

16917. Mr. O'Connell.] In voting for sheriffs, if a person endeavoured to find out how each individual voted, he would be apt to be foiled?—Yes; that is very true.

16918. Chairman.] How long has the custom of enrolling apprentices been disused to a large extent?—It is not disused; but for twenty years back enrolments have not been attended to, and have not been made in the books of the guild of merchants as they were formerly.

Mr. Timothy Allen.

8 June 1837.

16919. Then for the last twenty years that part of the oath has not been very strictly observed in the guild of merchants?—It has not.

16920. Mr. O'Connell.] But the oath has been always administered?—Yes; to every freeman.

16921. As that practice is only diminishing, and is not quite extinct, do not you think that any man who swears that within the first year he will cause his apprentice to be enrolled, and does not enrol him, violates the oath?—As much as oaths of that kind are attended to, it certainly is improper.

16922. You have taken the oath?—I have.

16923. If you had an apprentice would not you feel yourself bound by that oath?—I think I should. On the last day the oath about the musket, carabine and fusee was mentioned; that is not observed.

16924. Have you the oath of the guild of merchants?—I have. [Producing the same.]

16926. And that oath, though it is taken by every member, is not observed?—Not strictly.

16927. You keep an enrolment book?—I do.

16928. And you are always ready to enrol according to this oath?—I am; and it is my duty.

16929. You have a fee upon it?—I have.

16930. So that it is both your duty and your interest?—Certainly.

16931. And accordingly a book is kept to this day?—It is.

16932. And there are enrolments made in it till the present period?—Very seldom; but there are some.

16933. What is the date of the last?—I think that for the last twenty years there have not been three a year.

16934. Were there any last year?—I think not one.

16935. Or the year before?—I think not.

16936. Have you a book of bye-laws and regulations?—We have an ancient book of bye-laws, but the journals contain the bye laws. There is no entry in this ancient book for a long period.

16937. Do you print your bye-laws?—No.

16938. Is there any other oath taken but the oath which you have shown?—Not in the guild; not by the freemen.

16939. Can you state when you last enrolled anybody?—I think about three years back.

16940. The meaning of swearing to enrol is to enrol in the particular guild?—Of course it is.

16941. There is no other place?—There is no enrolment in the city at large that I ever heard of.

Mr. Lewis Henry De Zouche, called in; and Examined.

Mr. L. H. De Zouche.

16942. Chairman.] WHAT are you?—Clerk of the Corporation of Tailors, in the city of Dublin.

16943. How long have you been so?—Since the 28th of May 1835.

16944. Who was clerk of that corporation before you?—William Jackson, an old man; he was clerk for nineteen years.

16945. Had you assisted him in the transacting of the business, previous to your appointment?—Never.

16946. Your first acquaintance with the business of the corporation was from the date of your appointment?—Yes, officially.

16947. How long have you been a freeman of the corporation?—Since July 1825.

16948. Did you attend at all to the general business of the corporation previously to your appointment?—Very much.

16949. Are you a professional man?—No; I am an upholsterer.

16950. What was your ground of admission?—Birth.

16951. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you possession of the books?—Yes, I have.

16952. Have you made a return of the number of persons admitted from 1831?—Yes, I have. I also made a return of the number of persons admitted from July 1821 to July 1831, separate from the other.

16953. Have you the books here?—I have them in London.

Mr.
L. H. De Zouche.

8 June 1837.

16954. And you can produce them when wanted?—I can.

16955. Have you the oath taken by the corporation of tailors upon the admission of freemen?—I have.

16956. Have you made any alteration in your mode of proceeding since the Reform Bill?—None.

16957. How do persons become free of your guild?—They are admissible by birth, service and marriage; we conceive them admissible also by grace especial.

16958. What steps does a person take in order to get admission?—The person, or another for him, puts forward a beseech to the guild.

16959. A beseech or a petition?—It is the same; we call it a beseech in our guild.

16960. Chairman.] That is a different document from that which he afterwards produces to the general corporation?—There is a certificate from the guild to the corporation of the city; there is, first, a beseech to the guild, and then, if he is admitted to the guild, there is a certificate forwarded to the town clerk's office and through the town clerk to the corporation of the city.

16961. And then upon that certificate the guild draws up a beseech to the corporation of the city?—This is answered correctly to the preceding question, as it is to the town clerk our certificates are sent, and by them to the city.

16962. Mr. O'Connell.] There is first a beseech to your own guild; have you any of those beseeches here?—No, I have not; they never were preserved, to my knowledge.

16963. Have you a council of the guild?—We have.

16964. When that beseech is presented, what is done with it?—It is first laid before the council, and if it passes there, it is sent down to the lower house of the junior brethren, and then may either pass or be negatived there, and in the event of its being passed it is forwarded to the town clerk's.

16965. The council first deliberate upon it, and either agree to it or disagree?—Yes.

16966. They are free to do either one or the other?—A good deal depends upon the character of the individual.

16967. They are free to reject him or to receive him?—I rather think they are not free to reject a legal claimant.

16968. Is not there a vote upon it?—There is, but it is rather determined by the man's character. I will instance a case: there was a person brought forward some time ago; he was wishing to prosecute his claim by marriage; his father-in-law was a person who was not of good character; in fact, he was a drunkard; and the son-in-law coming in under his auspices, he was looked upon as a doubtful character and his beseech was postponed. till a person, separate from his family, gave him a good character, and then he was passed.

16969. If a man be a bad character, you do not admit him?—I do not recollect an instance but the one I have mentioned.

16970. In your opinion, can you reject him for being a man of bad character?—I think he would be rejected. I only give it as my private opinion. I cannot instance any other case in which the guild have rejected a man.

16971. If a man has served his apprenticeship to a free tailor, and is a man of good character, you are likely to admit him?—Yes.

16972. Mr. Lefroy.] You conceive that in that case he has a right to be admitted?—I conceive he has.

16973. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you know Mr. Jeremiah M'Carthy?—Yes, by character.

16974. Is not he a man of good character?—He is esteemed such.

16975. Did not he serve his apprenticeship to Mr. M'Gill, the master of the guild of tailors?—I do not know that.

16976. Being a man of good character, and supposing the fact established to you, that he had served a regular apprenticeship with great credit to one of the most respectable men in the guild, Mr. M'Gill, would or would not he be admitted?—It would be against one of our bye-laws; he is not a Protestant.

16977. He is a Roman Catholic?—I believe he is.

16978. You have a bye-law, excluding all but Protestants?—I recollect now that I think the charter confirms us in that law.

16979. Have you the charter here?—I have a copy of the charter.

16980. What is the date of that charter?—It is King William's charter, confirming our other charters. I think we have a charter from John.

16981. There is no Protestant mentioned in the charter of John?—No, I think there is not.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

William Knight Dehany, Esq., called in; and Examined.

W. K. Dehany, Esq.

9 June 1837.

16982. Chairman.] YOU are Solicitor to the Excise?—I am.

16983. You are a barrister as well?—I am.

16984. How long have you been solicitor to the excise?—I have been the solicitor of excise in England since the year 1829; I was previously in the same office in Scotland, and in Ireland also.

16985. How long were you solicitor to the excise in Ireland?—From the year 1827 to the year 1829; about two years; rather better than two years.

16986. Would you state to the Committee generally, as far as the excise revenue is concerned, what is the law with regard to the granting of licences to sell spirits by retail in Ireland?—Does your Lordship mean the rate of licence?

16987. What I want to know is, whether or no there is any scale of duty?—There is; the scale of duty will be found in the licensing Act, the 6th of Geo. 4, c. 81.

16988. Will you have the goodness to take the Act, and state to the Committee how the scale of duty is arranged under the Act?—The scale of duty to retailers of spirits is rated according to the value of the house; if the dwelling-house in which the retailer shall reside or retail such spirits, at the time of taking out the licence, shall not, together with the offices, courts, yards and gardens therewith occupied, be rated, under the authority of any Act of Parliament for granting duties on inhabited houses, at the rent of 10 l. per annum or upwards, or shall not be rented or valued at such rent or annual value or upwards, the licence duty is two guineas. If at 10 l. and under 20 l., four guineas; at 20 l. and under 25 l., six guineas; 25 l. and under 30 l., seven guineas; 40 l. and under 50 l., nine guineas; and any amount above that, ten guineas.

16989. Would you state to the Committee in what way the excise officers are directed to ascertain the value, for the purpose of stating what duty each person licensed shall pay?—Previously to the repeal of the duties on inhabited houses in Great Britain the assessment for the house-duty was taken, and was bound to be under this the assessment upon which the rate of licence was ascertained.

16990. What year was that duty repealed?—That was repealed two or three years ago; but I should add, that that did not apply to Ireland. The Committee are aware, of course, that the inhabited house-duty was not in force in Ireland, and therefore the Act of Parliament the 6th Geo. 4, c. 81, by the 5th section, directs that where there were not those means of ascertaining the rate, not having the house assessment, that the party applying for the licence is to produce a certificate, signed by himself and the owner or landlord of the house, stating the true rent for which the premises are let, or if the full rent has not been reserved in consequence of any fine having been paid at the commencement, or any improvement by the tenant, but a lower rent is reserved, then the true annual value. If the officers of the excise should be dissatisfied with that certificate, they are authorized to take other means of valuation, which are either upon their own judgment ment at times, or, where there is any difference between the excise officer and the applicant, a surveyor is resorted to.

16991. Supposing the excise officer to be dissatisfied with the value stated by the applicant for a licence, what means has he of ascertaining the true value?—He may call in a surveyor. The Board authorizes him to call in a surveyor and have it valued; but unless he shall see ground for being dissatisfied, the usual course is to be contented with the certificate of the rent signed by the landlord and by himself.

16992. Is the judgment of the excise officer in any degree regulated by the rate of assessment under local Acts?—They have at times referred to them, but the Board has seldom, indeed never authorized them to go by those; they have looked at those by way of forming for themselves some judgment of whether they should be satisfied with the rent certified by the landlord and the tenant, or should make a further representation for additional inquiry.

16993. You are aware of the Act of the 9th of Geo. 4, c. 82, by which local commissioners may be established in Ireland for the purpose of rating the inhabitants for certain local purposes?—I never looked into that Act.

16994. Supposing the excise officer to be dissatisfied with the value stated by the applicant, would he be justified in apportioning a higher class of duty, and leaving the applicant to disprove the estimate of the excise officer?—It would be a circuitous proceeding for the applicant to do that; it must be either by his refusing to take out the licence at the rate at which the officer insists on his doing so, and then being prosecuted for not having a licence; he may make his defence before the magistrates on that ground, so as to be exempted from fine, or if in strictness fined, to get exonerated from the fine imposed; or he might take out a licence at the rate at which the officer would state, and then proceed before the magistrates as for an over-payment, his licence being higher than he was himself of opinion he ought to have taken out, and so try the question of value.

16995. Would the natural course of proceeding be, for the excise officer to grant the licence at a lower rate than what he believes the value of the house to be, and then to prosecute the parties for selling spirituous liquors without a proper licence?—We have hardly had a case of that sort arise, because the officer does not do it merely of his own authority; if there is any dispute about the valuation, it is reported to the Board, and the Board directs him what measures to take, which is usually by the employment of a surveyor, and that has put an end to the dispute, or not exacting to the highest amount; if there is a doubt upon it, it is always given in favour of the party asking for the licence.

16996. I presume, by not exacting the highest amount, you mean a matter of 10*s.* one way?—Precisely; supposing it was a measuring cast, whether it came within 20*l.* or 25*l.*, one of the points on which the licence differs, it is a considerable importance to the individual, and in a case of that sort the Board would take the lower rate.

16997. They would allow an individual whose house was worth ten guineas, to take out a licence for 10*l.*?—Ten pounds is the sum, if under 10*l.*; if above 10*l.* we should call upon him to take out the licence at the rate of 10*l.*

16998. That would be a higher class than if under 10*l.*?—Yes, each individual case must depend upon its own circumstances.

16999. Is it the duty of your officers to take care that persons do take out the licence according to the proper class?—Certainly.

17000. Is it not just as much their duty to see to that, as to see to the proper discharge of any other duty under the direction of the excise?—Certainly it is; and we have accordingly from time to time reports of that description, that they are not satisfied with the certificates presented.

17001. Can you state to the Committee whether, in your opinion, the licences of persons holding houses for the retail of spirituous liquors are, generally speaking, properly assessed in Ireland?—I believe they are; but I speak upon the impression that the officers do their duty as they ought to do; that the certificates of rental are produced, and that they see that those are such as they should be satisfied with, or at least should have no cause of dissatisfaction.

17002. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You are not the solicitor of excise for Ireland?—No.

17003. There is another gentlemen who acts as solicitor of the excise in Ireland?—Yes.

17004. You act here?—I act here; we have cases referred from Ireland; if there

W. K. Dehany, Esq.

9 June 1837.

there is any doubt on the mind either of that gentleman himself, or of the Board on his opinion, it is referred to me ultimately.

17005. When questions arise?—Yes.

17006. But as to the ordinary routine, that is not within your province?—No; the ordinary routine can hardly be said to be within my province, except that every case may come before me.

17007. Those are the extraordinary cases that come before you?—Yes.

17008. Chairman.] By extraordinary cases, you mean cases involving some peculiar difficulties?—Yes, or some particular principle.

17009. But I believe you are at the head of the whole of the law department of the excise?—Yes.

17010. And that, therefore, the gentleman who acts in Ireland is subject to your general control?—He is; I do not, by my own immediate direction, interfere with him, but he would be bound to act by my opinion, communicated to the Board. I have an instance of that in these papers on the subject of licences, which I have brought with me, where upon the mode of rating he had taken, in my opinion, an erroneous view of it. He thought that the part of the premises which was occupied for the sale of spirits was alone to be taken into consideration in the rating, under the Act of Parliament; I was of opinion it ought not to be that; that you must take the whole of the premises which are occupied, according to the terms of the Act.

17011. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] That is, when your opinion is adopted by the Board, the solicitor in Ireland is bound by it?—Is bound to act upon it.

17012. But if your opinion should not be adopted by the Board, I take it the solicitor in Ireland is not obliged to follow your directions?—No, he would follow the directions of the Board.

17013. So that whenever the Board adopts your opinion, then the solicitor in Ireland is bound to adopt the order of the Board?—Certainly; I know no case in which, if we have differed, the Board has not either adopted my opinion, or if they had a doubt upon it, submitted it to the Attorney-general.

17014. But still it is the order of the Board that he is bound to follow, and not your opinion?—Yes.

17015. Chairman.] That is the case with regard to law matters in England?—Yes.

17016. That you act under the authority of the Board in all those concerns?—Yes. I will just read to you the description of order which is made in a case of the kind. I just now mentioned I was of opinion the solicitor of excise in Ireland had taken an erroneous view of the Act, and I differed with him, and the order of the Board upon it is, "Report against and communicate Mr. Dehany's opinion to Mr. Saurin, and acquaint him, that the licence duty has invariably been imposed in this country and in Scotland, since the passing of the 6th of Geo. 4, c. 8, on the principle there laid down."

77017. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Give us the date of that?—26th January 1835.

17018. Have you any reason to know, or suppose, or believe that, prior to the date of that order or minute of the Board, Mr. Saurin's opinion had been acted upon with respect to the mode of laying the duty?—No, I think not; I think it was the first time the question was brought before him.

17019. But have you any reason to suppose that the practice may have gone on without notice?—No, I should apprehend the contrary; that many of the collectors, that is, the principal officers, having been in England and in Great Britain, where the contrary was the practice, that they would have gone on what was the usual practice.

17020. But you have no reason for that other than conjecture?—No; my impression certainly would be, that the practice would have been contrary to that which Mr. Saurin reported it ought to have been.

17021. Do you happen to know how the question came to be raised in that particular instance?—The question came to be raised in that instance upon an application that was made from several parties who had been registered as voters under the Register Act in Ireland for the 10 l., and who made an application to show their rents did not amount to so much. And the collector upon that reported and gave a description of each of the premises, and it appeared, on taking the whole premises together, that they were worth, in each instance, I think it was 10 l.; but Mr. Saurin supposed that they ought not to be rated at that, because cause the part that was merely used for the purpose of retailing of spirits would be, taken by itself, of less value.

W. K. Dehany, Esq.

9 June 1837.

17022. Chairman.] Will you state to the Committee, referring to the 2d & 3d Will. 4, c. 88, s. 7, namely, the Reform Act for Ireland, whether you conceive that the way in which parties are to be considered as holding a tenement worth 10 l. under that Act is the way in which, under the Excise Act, they ought to be considered as holding a tenement worth 10 l.?—[The Witness referred to the Act.]

17023. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Have you ever read that Act before?—No, I never have.

17024. You never have considered it?—I have not.

17025. You are a gentleman at the bar?—Yes. This would not apply to our excise licences, because other lands or tenements may be jointly taken in with the house in which the party carries on his business, and which would give him the 10*l.* franchise, at the same time that would not be the rate by which we should assess him. We have had cases of that description.

17026. I was going to ask you whether or no you, in any manner, consider the registry of voters for Members of Parliament for boroughs a criterion of value?—I will state shortly what has occurred upon the subject, on reference to some papers. In October 1834, the collector of Mallow collection reported that his attention had been drawn to the subject of several persons in his collection and district being registered as 10 l. voters who were paying their licence duty at a less rate, and that in consequence of that he had had a revaluation of their premises, and it raised the licences in many instances; no question occurred there as to whether he was to be bound by the registry or not; the circumstance suggested it to him to take a closer view of their premises, and he ascertained then that they ought to pay, according to the value of them, a higher rate of duty.

17027. What was the result?—It was opposed, but the most of them paid the higher rate of duty; it was proved the tenements were of greater value; the circumstance of their having registered only brought it to the collector's notice.

17028. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Then the value they put on the premises when they came to register turns out to have been the true value?—Yes.

17029. And the value they put upon them for the purpose of the excise turns out an undervalue?—Yes.

17030. Chairman.] That was in the year 1834?—Yes.

17031. What part of the year 1834?—22d of October is the date of the collector's report.

17032. In consequence of that case, was the opinion taken of Mr. Saurin?—Not on that case.

17033. Was the attention of the Board drawn generally to this particular class of cases in Ireland?—No, not particularly, the attention of some of the officers was; and in November 1834, the collector at Sligo, I think it was, raised the rates of duty upon several of them.

17034. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] At Londonderry do you recollect any instance?—I have some other instances. Upon their being raised they applied to the Treasury, and there was a report, the collector's report, gave a description of the premises according to his opinion of them, as relative to the excise in each instance where the party had been raised.

17035. Does the principle that occurred there apply to other cases?—Upon this the parties in only two instances were relieved, but some of them afterwards did get relief again, upon this occasion they paid their higher licence duty, but the question being by some of them agitated again in the second year, they had not so high a rate of duty. The question was considered in a legal point about December 1834. There was a case from Londonderry; it was the case of a person of the name of Morrough.

17036. Chairman.] Are there any principles laid down in that case applicable to the ascertainment of value?—It was upon this that the opinion was given, that we could not be guided by the register, because it was stated that he was registered as a household qualification, taking in the value of his trade, and his licence was calculated according to the value of the house alone; we were decidedly of opinion that the licences ought not to exceed four guineas; that was the lower licence.

17037. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Whose opinion is that?—The solicitor's opinion on

W. K. Dehany, Esq.

9 June 1837.

on the collector's report, stating that which also the party states in his petition to the Treasury, that the principle upon which he was allowed to register, as decided by the registering barrister, was that, no matter what rent he paid under 10 l., if he derived from his business the clear yearly value of 10 l. over and above the rent.

17038. Mr. Lefroy.] Is that the statement of the petitioner?—It is.

17039. Which also is repeated by the collector in his report?—Yes.

17040. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] That is from Londonderry?—Yes.

17041. Do you happen to know who the registering barrister was there?—No further than from the petition itself, Counsellor Hamilton; no further than that, because my information does not go beyond this document.

17042. Chairman.] In consequence of that petition was any inquiry made by the excise department into the principles by which the registering barrister was guided in ascertaining the value in cases of applicants for the elective franchise of the borough?—No inquiry was made; we assumed, as it was stated in the petition, and also repeated by the collector in his report, that principles of that description had been adopted in the registry, and we thought them inapplicable to our course of ascertaining the value; we were only to go upon the value of the premises, and according to that statement other circumstances than that of mere value had been taken into consideration.

17043. Do you conceive that it is your duty to ascertain the value upon houses for the purpose of excise licences, by ascertaining also the clear yearly value of the house and premises?—We take the value of the house and premises; we take the certified rent in the first instance, and if we have no reason to be dissatisfied with that, no further inquiry is made.

17044. Mr. Lefroy.] Then, primâ facie, you take the rent as the value?—Yes.

17045. Chairman.] Do you believe, taking the rent as the value, that, generally speaking, the revenue is collected upon proper principles?—I believe it is.

17046. And in conformity with the intention of the Act of Parliament?—I believe so.

17047. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] I think you stated that the principles on which you estimate the value, and the principles on which it is estimated under the Reform Act, are not the same; did I understand you to say that?—No.

17048. Chairman.] Your answer to a former question of mine, as to the comparison between the Reform Act and the Excise Act, was to this effect, I believe, namely, that there were various other matters which might be cumulative of the value of a house and premises in the case of the Reform Act, which were not to be admitted in the case of the Excise Act?—I stated, and the answer occurs to me again, that according to the Reform Act, which your Lordship showed me, there were other premises or land or tenements which might be taken, in conjunction with the premises which were occupied for the purpose of the sale of spirits, and that, therefore, that would not be applicable to our mode of rating, which takes only the premises on which the trade is carried on.

17049. By the premises on which the trade is to be carried on, do you include all the premises within what may be termed the house and curtilage?—Yes.

17050. Therefore you would take in everything that was fairly attached to the house as the value of the premises?—Yes, the garden and so on, according to the terms of the Act of Parliament.

17051. Gardens, outhouses and sheds, provided they were all within?—All within and used as part of the same premises.

17052. But you would not take into account premises actually distinct from the premises to be licensed, although they belonged to the same occupier?—No.

17053. That is the distinction?—Yes, that is the distinction we have made in reference to the Register Act, as to our mode of assessing. There have been cases where the licence has shown the party registered at a higher rate of duty than his premises were rated at, and then we endeavoured to raise his rent; and, upon inquiry, it turned out that there were some other premises or land which, for the purposes of the registry, had been reckoned in for his 10 l., but which it would not have been proper or legal for us to have taken in.

17054. I believe the principles on which you reckon value are the great distinctions in the way in which you come to the proper rate of persons, as contradistinguished to the elective franchise as allowed by registering barristers?—We have not inquired into the mode of determining who should be registered, because that circumstance we considered not at all applicable to us; when we saw that there were other premises that could be taken in, and that conjointly they would would amount to 10 l., it would give a perfectly legal franchise, at the same time the party's rate of licence would be different from our not taking in the same amount of property.

W. K. Dehany, Esq.

9 June 1837.

17055. But you do not reckon in the value, for the purpose of taxation, anything beyond what may be termed the fair marketable price of the premises, supposing on the one hand a person wishes to let them, and on the other a person wishes to take them?—The rent we consider the great criterion; the bonâ fide rent or annual value. The rent, if a rack-rent. If there is to be a fine, or there have been improvements in consideration of which the tenant has it at a lesser rent, then the annual value.

17056. Mr. Lefroy.] You do not take into consideration then the use that may be made of the premises, as rendering them more or less productive?—No, we do not. That we consider would come into consideration in the rent.

17057. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Then should you consider this a fair test of value, namely, what a bonâ fide solvent tenant would be willing to give for the premises?—Yes.

17058. Be so good as look to that fifth section, and look to the words after "rent"?—Yes; "or if the true rent by reason of the payment of any premium, or performance of any condition, or otherwise."

17059. Now do you observe the words "or otherwise"?—Yes.

17060. Do not those terms import that the Legislature contemplated a case in which the rent should not be the true value, not only where there was a premium or a fine paid, not only where there were conditions to be performed, but also on some other ground not explained, such as improvement; the term "or otherwise" may embrace that?—It may embrace a great deal, certainly. So far it has been taken into consideration here; because the brewer is rated in the same way in proportion to the amount; and in some instances where a brewer has let premises at a less rent upon a condition that the party takes all his beer of him, then we go to the higher value.

17061. Chairman.] But I understand in England as well as Ireland your criterion of value is that which the owner on the one hand and a taker on the other, supposing the premises were in the market, would be willing to give and take?—Yes.

17062. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Do you take situation into account; it is not the mere value of the brick and mortar and materials that you take into account?—No, I always conceived that the landlord would take that into consideration; that the rent would be guided by that.

17063. Generally speaking, the rent is the test of true value; is it not?—It is.

17065. Chairman.] At all events it would guide the marketable value?—Yes.

17066. And the marketable value is that which you think ought to be the criterion on which to assess the licence?—Yes.

17068. But supposing the lease still subsisted, would not that be a case in which, by reason of the neighbourhood having improved, the premises might be worth considerably more than the rent at which they were estimated when the lease was made?—I have not known a case of that sort arise.

17069. In that case the rent would be anything but the true value?—Yes.

17070. Considerably under?—Yes; on a case of that description arising, if it were brought before us, we might call on the party to pay a higher rate.

17071. Chairman.] And I suppose the converse of the proposition also, that if an old lease seemed to exact more rent than the premises were positively worth, that the applicant in that case would not be obliged to pay the higher rate?—

I am

W. K. Dehany, Esq.

9 June 1837.

I am afraid, under the Act of Parliament, there would be rather a difficulty in that, because the rent is fixed; and if we are dissatisfied, it rather tends to show that we may raise, but we can hardly lower.

17072. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] You cannot go below the rent, although you may go above it?—Yes.

17073. Then am I to understand it is quite imperative on the excise officer, whenever he knows the rent is of a certain amount, to insist on being paid up to that amount the duty?—Yes. The party is called upon, in the first instance, for his certificate of the rent.

17074. So that in every case where the rent is 10*l.*, of course the man must be assessed 10*l.* licence duty?—Yes; he would be called upon for a 10*l.* licence, or at least a licence proportionate to that rate.

17075. Mr. Lefroy.] A question was put to you upon the effect of the words "or otherwise." I will read the context, in which those words stand, "or if the true rent, by reason of payment of any premium or performance of any condition or otherwise, shall not be received and payable to the owner or landlord by the tenant or occupier of such house or premises, then and in such case stating the estimated rent or true annual value of such house or premises, and the rate of duty payable by such tenant or occupier for such licence, shall be paid, taken and received according to the rent or value so certified." Be so good as look at that context. Now, taking those words in the context, does it appear to you possible to suppose the Legislature meant by the words "or otherwise," that you should take into consideration the use that might be made of the premises; is there any thing to lead to that conclusion?—Not the use of them, because there is only one use to which they apply them when they come for the licence, which is that they are for the sale of spirits.

17076. And therefore it does not appear to you that you would be justified in any way in taking into account the use that the person applying for the licence would apply the premises to, save only for the purpose for which he is desirous of having them licensed, in estimating the value?—Do I understand the honourable Member to ask, whether we should take into consideration that the premises were used for any other purpose? For instance, if converted into a butcher's shop it would then be a greater value.

17077. Precisely so?—We should certainly not take that into consideration.

17078. You would not feel that the word "otherwise," justified you in having regard to such circumstances in estimating the true value of the premises?—Certainly not; because at the time that the party is applying for his licence, it is only occupied for that particular purpose, and therefore whilst so occupied it cannot be of greater value, though by converting it into something else it might become so.

17079. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] And it would be the value to the applicant for the licence that you would take into account, and not the value to a third person?—Certainly; not what a third person might make of it for other purposes.

17080. You would not take that into account?—Certainly not.

17081. But you would consider what would be the value of the premises to the applicant for the licence; suppose the premises had never been occupied before as a place for the retail of spirits, would you not consider that the value in all probability to the person who applies for the licence,—that comes in for the first time to convert that into a place for the sale of spirits that had not been a place for the sale of spirits before?—I do not think that would enter into our consideration.

17082. In estimating the value of the house, would you not consider that the circumstance of its being a place of standing for the retail of spirits, and a well-known place, that that ought to be taken into account?—That would be taken into account, I should consider, in the rent.

17083. But I am taking the case in which, for any reason, you did not consider the rent as the true standard of value; but supposing you to get at the value from other circumstances, would you not take that into account in estimating the value?—In a case of that description we should employ a surveyor.

17084. Have you any doubt, for instance, suppose it to be your case, supposing you were looking for a house to set up a place for the retail of spirits, would you not be more likely to give a higher rent for a place that had already been a spirit shop than for one that had not?—Certainly.

17085. And accordingly that collateral circumstance should be taken into account in estimating the value?—But, as I before said, I should consider that to be taken into consideration by the landlord in his rent.

W. K. Dehany, Esq.

9 June 1837.

17086. But assuming for a moment that the rent, for any reason, is not, in the particular case I put, the true test of value, and that you are to look for the true value, to ascertain it from other circumstances, would not that be one of the circumstances to be taken into account?—It would, according to situation. It would be in the same way with situation.

17087. And according to the former occupation of the premises; in what way they had been before occupied?—I should certainly consider it would be a circumstance which, if they were in the market for the purpose of being let, would operate upon the rent that would be asked and given, and so far it comes round to your question.

17088. And so far it would be a test of value in your mind?—Yes.

17089. Mr. Lefroy.] But if the rent were given, the circumstance that the premises might be in the most possible advantageous standing for carrying on the spirit trade, would not your estimate be considered as increasing or affecting the value of the rent, being once a given quantity?—Do I understand the question to be, that supposing the party to have taken a house at a fixed rent, without reference to the trade to be carried on, his subsequently applying to carry on the trade of a publican in it, which might be a successful one, would make it more valuable to him?

17090. Yes?—Whether we should consider that as a house of an increased value in consequence?

17091. Precisely so?—We should not, because we should say it was a speculative point arising out of his business; what he would have made of his business would be nothing.

17092. You would not make that in any kind of way a criterion of value?—No. The rent, and the rent which could be obtained, would be all that we should look to.

17093. Chairman.] There has been a return made by the excise department of the names and residences of all persons who received excise licences for the sale of spirits in premises under the value of 10*l.* since the 1st of October 1832?—I am aware such a return has been made.

17094. I need not ask you whether you believe it to be correct?—I take for granted it is; it does not fall to my department to check it, or in any way to make it out. That is from the accountant.

17095. It is signed by Mr. Cottrell, the general accountant?—It is.

17096. And therefore it is officially correct?—It is an official document, and as such presumed to be correct, I apprehend, unless there are any reasons for impeaching it.

17097. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] I think you stated that in some cases, (you specified Mallow, I believe), in consequence of a statement from the excise officers of the district, that there were publicans who had registered as 10*l.* householders, whose licences were below the 10*l.* standard, but in consequence of a statement to that effect to the Board, the officers received directions to raise the licences?—The officers gave an intimation to the parties that they should raise their licences, and reported to the Board upon it, who approved of it.

17098. And the licences were raised accordingly?—And the licences were raised accordingly.

17099. Did that occur in other cases besides Mallow?—In several cases it occurred, where the officers seeing that parties had been registered gave intimation to them to raise their licences; in some of them they were raised, but in others I believe almost the majority of the licences were not raised.

17100. Was there any general direction given by the Board for what I may term a review of the licences, throughout Ireland, in consequence of this statement from the officers in Ireland?—None that I recollect.

17101. Then there has been no general inquiry as to whether the licences are not upon too low a scale?—No, there has not; I am not aware of any.

17102. And accordingly it is only in those cases in which the attention of the Board has been called to the fact by the officer on the spot, that the licences have been raised?—Only in those cases.

17103. And of course there may be other instances in which the licences are too low in reference to the value?—There may be.

17104. In which a party is ranged as a 10*l.* householder, and in which he ought to pay a 10*l.* licence; there may be other cases to which the attention of the Board has not been called?—There may be cases of that sort; the Board has given

W. K. Dehany, Esq.

9 June 1837.

given directions that the rent is all the criterion; which we give the officers to go by, unless there is some cogent reason to be dissatisfied with that.

17105. But as there have been cases in which the Board, at the instance of the officer on the spot, has raised the licence, there may be other cases in which the same objection holds to which the attention of the Board has not been called?—There may be. As I before said, the rent is with us the criterion.

17106. Chairman.] And by rent, you mean the marketable value?—The rent as certified by the landlord under the Act of Parliament; that is required by the Act of Parliament, and taken as conclusive.

17107. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] Have you ever heard of cases of collusion between landlord and tenant, to represent the rent lower than it really is?—Yes, I have.

17108. Many cases?—Cases that we have acted upon as such, and have put the parties to proof. I have very little doubt of it.

17109. And you ascertained it, and had no doubt of it?—I will not say we ascertained it by any actual decision, or taking steps upon it.

17110. But you have no doubt of the fact?—I have known a case of this sort which we could not get over, where the 20*l.* is the range, and the party has let at 19*l.* 19*s.* only; we could not say, though we had no doubt it was for the very purpose of evading, by the shilling, the increased rate of duty upon it; we could not possibly say, the subject of it being liable to that increase would prevent a tenant perhaps giving the 20*l.*, though he would go as near to it as he could. That is quasi collusion, though we could not say fraudulent.

17111. Now, may there not be other cases in which there is actual fraud, in which both parties concur in a misrepresentation of the rent?—Certainly, we have had cases of that sort.

17112. You observe the Act does not direct the certificate to be verified by oath, merely a statement?—No; a mere statement, the production of the certificate itself.

17113. Chairman.] Do you think there is much fraud?—The question has not been raised in such a way as to make us inquire into it, but I do not apprehend there is.

17114. You think the activity of your officers is such as to prevent anything very extensive in that very collusive mode of proceeding?—I think it is. It is a difficult subject for them to form a judgment upon.

17115. But where it comes to a shilling or half-a-crown, or anything of that sort, it is more difficult than where there is a discrepancy of 10*s.* or 12*s.* or 20*s.*?—Clearly.

17116. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] There is such a thing as misconduct among your officers sometimes, I suppose?—I am sorry to say there is.

17117. Bribery occasionally?—Yes.

17118. And you have known instances of that sort not easily detected; but you have a very strong persuasion that it exists?—There is no doubt that it exists; but I do not think in cases of this description so much, it is generally on a larger scale.

17119. They do the thing in the wholesale, not the retail?—Licences are not of so much value.

17121. And the collector, generally speaking, is a higher class of officer, and a person you would more trust than the lower class of officers?—Yes.

17122. And you do not suppose that the collectors, generally speaking, are not trustworthy, do you?—No, certainly not.

17123. Mr. Serjeant Ball.] But it is not the course for the collector to take any very considerable pains to go into the details of the value of houses when licences are applied for?—No, that is with the supervisors; but I should say, upon the whole, that the disposition of the officers was rather to increase the amount of licence duty than decrease it.

17124. They do not go much out of their way to investigate the thing, unless the fact is very glaring?—We have frequently reports of their suggesting that the licence duty of parties should be raised, on the ground of their premises being of higher value than they put them.

17124*. Then it is rather a common thing for parties to represent the value of their premises to be lower than it really is?—It is not an uncommon subject of representation, the difference of opinion between the officers and the parties as to their value; in some instances they have objected to produce their certificates, to throw them upon a different value. In others the certificates themselves have been objected to by the officers as not being sufficient.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

G. Archer, Esq.

12 June 1837.

Mr. Archer, again called in; and further Examined.

17125. Chairman.] DO you wish to substitute another return for one of those that you handed in on the 1st of June last?—I do.

17125*. What is the difference between the return you then handed in and the return you would wish to substitute for it?—In the return of numbers in the year 1825, in the former return, the numbers for that year were 238, and I now find it ought to have been 274.

17126. This last return also distinguishes the different years and the different classes?—Yes.

17127. To that extent, therefore, it is more accurate than the other?—It is.

Mr. Lewis Henry De Zouche, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. L. H. De Zouche.

17128. Mr. O'Connell.] IS this your signature?—It is.

17129. Do you give in this return as the one required of freemen made in the corporation of tailors since the 20th of July 1831?—I do.

17130. Have you got the oath taken by the incorporation of tailors upon admission?—Yes, I have.

17131. Is this it?—It is.

17132. "You shall swear to be true to our Sovereign Lord King George the Third, his heirs and successors, of Great Britain, France and Ireland:" do you continue that style?—Yes, it is continued; but as regards France, it is considered as a dead letter.

17133. "To be good and true unto the tailors of the fraternity of St. John the Baptist, within the city of Dublin, whereunto you are now admitted. You shall not withstand or disobey the summons of the master and wardens of the said mystery for the time being, by their officer appointed for that purpose, but to the said master and wardens you shall be obedient and obeisant at all times, without you have a reasonable excuse. You shall not discover the lawful counsel of this fraternity or mystery that you shall have a knowledge of, which should be sacred within yourself. You shall not take an apprentice for no less term or time than seven years; and at the beginning of your apprentices' term, or before, you shall bring them to the master and wardens for the time being to be regularly bound, and the indentures duly enrolled, according to the custom and laws of the said fraternity. You shall not refuse any office you are able to take and is put upon you by the master, wardens and brethren of the aforesaid fraternity. You shall not entice or withdraw any man's apprentice or covenant servant until reasonable departure between them, the master and servant. This and all other good rules and ordinances made, and to be made, not repealed or reversed, you shall obey, keep and maintain, as nearly as God shall give you grace:" that is the oath?—Yes.

17134. Then this oath requires that at the beginning of the apprenticeship term, or before, the apprentice shall be brought before the master and wardens to be regularly bound; do you perceive that?—I do.

17135. Is that done?—It is not done; it is not the custom at present.

12 June 1837.

17136. Then is it the custom not to comply with that part of the oath?—The custom is——

17137. Answer the question, and add anything you please afterwards. Is it the custom not to comply with that part of the oath?—It is the custom not to comply with that; so far the custom has been dispensed with for, I believe, many years: I never knew it to be acted upon according to that oath.

17138. But do you know the oath has been taken?—I do.

17139. By every man who is admitted free of your corporation?—Yes.

17141. "You shall not take an apprentice for no less term or time than seven years"?—Yes.

17142. You swear that?—I swear that.

17143. "And at the beginning of your apprentices' term, or before, you shall bring them to the master and wardens for the time being to be regularly bound"?—That is not complied with.

17144. "And the indentures duly enrolled, according to the customs and laws of the said fraternity"?—That is not complied with.

17145. Have you any book of enrolment of indentures?—I have not, nor never saw one.

17146. Then you do not enrol at all?—Never; that is, as far as my knowledge goes. It was the custom at the time that law was made.

17147. Mr. Lefroy.] How do you know that?—I presume it to be so; I do not know it myself, I am only speaking on my belief.

17148. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] How long does your knowledge and experience go back?—Since July 1825.

17149. Did you know anything of the corporation before you became a member of it?—I did not.

17150. Mr. Lefroy.] Have you collected, from your search into the records of it, anything as to its previous practice?—No, not beyond this old transaction book.

17151. How far does that book go back?—To 1791.

17152. Then as far as that old transaction book goes, that is 1791, you are enabled to speak to this matter, respecting the custom of the corporation?—I did not look over every page of it, but I believe the custom was then what the custom is at present.

17153. And you have not been able to ascertain that there ever, at any time, was a different custom?—Indeed I have not been able to ascertain it.

17154. Mr. O'Connell.] That is, you do not find this oath was complied with by any entry?—I do not find that it is.

17155. That it was ever complied with?—I had no access to any book, but merely the books I have here, and they are the only books I have in my possession.

17156. You have no doubt it is constantly taken?—I have no doubt it is constantly taken; but in that sense, according to the custom of the city of Dublin.

17157. Mr. Lefroy.] Is not the oath according to the laws and customs of the corporation?—That is the oath.

17158. Mr. O'Connell.] "And the indentures duly enrolled according to the custom"?—

17159. Mr. Lefroy.] Just so, according to the custom; then do you mean to say, if there was no custom for the enrolment of the indentures, the oath would have been violated?—If it was the custom to enrol the indentures, and it was not complied with, I consider it would be a violation; but because it is not the custom, I do not consider it a violation.

17160. Mr. O'Connell.] Let me just understand you, "You shall not take an apprentice for no less term or time than seven years;" is that complied with?—I believe it is, as far as my knowledge goes.

17161. "And at the beginning of your apprentices' term, or before, you shall bring them to the master and wardens for the time being to be bound." That is not complied with?—It is not.

17162. That is violated in every instance?—I rather think it is the change of custom that produces that.

17163. But in point of fact it is not complied with?—In point of fact it is not complied with.

Mr.
L. H. De Zouche.

12 June 1837.

17164. Then there is a custom to violate it?—I do not consider it a violation; that is my opinion, and I believe it is the opinion of others.

17165. You do not think then a man who swears, that at the beginning of his apprentices' term, or before, he shall bring them to the master and wardens for the time being to be regularly bound, that he does not violate his oath who does not bring him at all?—I really think there is a reservation in the words, according to the custom.

17166. A mental reservation?—No, I cannot call it a mental reservation.

17167. The custom is only introduced thus, "And the indentures duly enrolled, according to the custom and laws of the said fraternity," and they are not enrolled?—They are not enrolled.

17168. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are you sure, "According to the custom of the city," is not confined to that last clause, and does not run back and pervade the whole?—I declare I think it is according to the general custom.

17169. Mr. O'Connell.] You know the oath of the freemen of the city of Dublin?—I do.

17170. "You shall take no apprentice but if he be free-born, that is to say, no bondsman's son, and for no less term than for seven years; within the first year you shall cause him to be enrolled;" is that complied with in your guild?—It is not.

17171. "And at his term's end you shall make him free of this city, if he has well and truly served you;" now is this complied with: "and shall always whilst you are able, and in your power, keep a good musket, carabine or fusee in good, clean and sufficient order"?—I believe that related to some centuries back, so that it has no connexion at all with the present times; and that it was decidedly according to the usages and customs of the then days, when it made it necessary for the magistrates to arm the citizens.

17172. You take that oath; do not you?—Yes, I take it.

17173. You are able to keep a musket?—I consider I am.

17174. Do you keep it?—I do not.

17175. Do you keep a carabine?—I do not.

17176. Or fusee?—None.

17177. And you have not kept them at any time since you took the oath?—I never kept them, because I considered it was not according to the present usages of the city of Dublin.

17178. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you observe, at the closing of this oath, these words: "All these points and articles you shall well and truly keep, according to the laws and customs of this city;" do you consider that that clause qualifies the oath to this extent, that the persons taking it are bound to observe the particulars therein contained, so long as they are upheld by the laws and customs of the city?—Precisely; that is the view I take of it.

17179. And you consider that this qualification does not extend merely to the clause immediately preceding the qualification, but to all the particulars contained throughout the oath, modifying them all according to the laws and customs of the city?—Precisely so; that is the view I take of it.

17180. You do not advocate anything of mental reservation?—Indeed I do not.

17181. Mr. O'Connell.] The question is, what you do advocate, so that although you swear positively to do one thing, you do not do it?—I certainly think there is a very great doubt in the construction of the oath as applied to the present day. I must admit that, and I would wish to acknowledge it; but I do decidedly think that the latter clause does modify the preceding part with which that is to be taken.

17182. "And all these points and articles you shall well and truly keep;" but you do not keep them all?—According to the customs of the city.

17183. According to the laws and customs of the city. Then you think it is a law and custom of the city not to keep a former part of the oath; do you not now; come, do you; do you think it is either a law or custom of the city to swear an oath, and not to keep it?—I really think that there is not a violation of the oath.

17184. Answer my question; add as you please afterwards?—I am giving my opinion.

17185. Do you think it a law and custom of the city not to keep the oath that you have sworn to?—I can only repeat the same answer.

17186. You can tell me whether you think it a law and custom or not?—No; I do

12 June 1837.

I do not think it is a law and custom to break an oath, for I really do not think the oath is broken according to the custom of the city of Dublin.

17187. That is enough. Now you told me you would not admit respectable persons, such as Mr. M'Carthy, though he had served his apprenticeship to a master of the guild, because he was a Roman Catholic?—I then referred to a charter. I did not then recollect there had been Roman Catholics admitted: I only gave my own private opinion upon that occasion; I did not give it as to how the guild might act in case Mr. M'Carthy might come forward.

17188. Have you any charter prohibiting your admitting Roman Catholics?—I will show you what I alluded to; it is in that book.

17189. Have you any printed book of the laws?—None. Now the passage in the charter I referred to, I will read for you; "And further, whensoever any of the said art will accept any for an apprentice, to come before the master and wardens aforesaid, and the clerk of the said fraternity or guild aforesaid for the time being, who shall view directly whether such apprentice be of free condition, English nation, and good conversation." Now the law that I referred to, was the law on the admission of an apprentice, and I presume is an explanation of that; it is the 9th page.

17190. That clause in the charter is the one you alluded to as excluding Roman Catholics?—Yes; and I consider this an explanation of it. They order, "That no brother shall take or receive any apprentice into his house but such as are of good conversation, and of the Protestant religion, upon pain and forfeiture of 20 s. sterling; and to discharge and put away the same apprentice upon command of the master for the time being." That was what I referred to.

17191. You are not aware that every bye-law keeping Roman Catholics out of the freedom of corporations has been declared void since the year 1793?—Yes; for we admitted Roman Catholics in 1793, several.

17192. You admitted them into your guild?—Yes.

17193. Chairman.] When was that bye-law made?—In 1789.

17194. Mr. O'Connell.] When do you swear in to your guild; before the person has passed the city at large?—No.

17195. Then you have never sworn in to your guild any Roman Catholic?—No; I only mean in reference to my own knowledge. I find by reference to the transactions, that they were sworn upon that occasion.

17196. Without passing the city at large?—They were sworn, certainly.

17197. Without passing the city at large?—Yes.

17198. You are aware that no Roman Catholic has ever passed the city at large?—I heard so, but it was a departure from the custom to have sworn them into our guild.

17199. It was soon after 1793, was it not?—In 1793.

17200. Show me the record of their admission?—

[The Witness did so.]

17201. "The petition of Daniel Doyle, of Fishamble-street, tailor, (Roman Catholic,) praying to be admitted free of this corporation by grace especial, agreeable to an Act of Parliament passed in the present session, for the further relief of His Majesty's Roman Catholic subjects, for such fine as the corporation think fit. The petition of John Milliea, of Ross-lane, tailor, (Roman Catholic,) praying the like. The petition of John Walsh, of Castle-street, tailor, (Roman Catholic,) praying the like. The petition of Roger Sweeney, of Jervis-street, tailor, (Roman Catholic,) praying the like. The petition of John Lyons, of Abbey-street, tailor, (Roman Catholic,) praying the like. The petition of Thomas Boyle, of Abbey-street, tailor, (Roman Catholic,) praying the like. On reading the above report, the corporation in full hall assembled resolved unanimously, That the above persons be admitted free of this guild for the separate fines annexed to their names," (and there is no sum annexed to their names here), "agreeable to the laws of this house, and pursuant to an Act passed this present session for the relief of our Roman Catholic brethren." Oh! here are the fines. Do you find any admission since that of a Roman Catholic?—No; I think there were not any.

17202. You have no doubt there were none since?—Indeed, I have no doubt; there was a post hall called for the express purpose of swearing them in.

17203. Mr. Lefroy.] On admissions by grace especial, it would appear, from that entry, as if it were in the power of the corporation to impose such fine on that sort of admission as they thought fit?—There was a fine on the admission of each each formerly, but a greater fine on those applying by grace especial, than on any other. There was no fine, I believe, by birth.

Mr.
L. H. De Zouche.

12 June 1837.

17204. Chairman.] Since when has that fine been modified?—Since my admission into the corporation there has not been any fine at all payable; I mean payable into the guild.

17205. Mr. Lefroy.] But formerly there was a fine in all cases; but a higher fine on admission by grace especial?—A higher fine on admission by grace especial.

17206. Were there any limits, that you are aware of, to the extent of that fine on admission by grace especial?—I think the highest amount was 5 l.; it might have been reduced in some cases, but I cannot state positively. I think it was reduced.

17207. And what was the fine when it did subsist; what was the highest fine on the admission, under the rights of birth, marriage, or apprenticeship?—I think that by service it was 2 l.; I cannot state positively; but I could, I dare say, by reference to some of the admissions, state what the usual fines were on the other admissions.

17208. Mr. O'Connell.] What is the date of the entry you showed me?—1793.

17209. Mr. Lefroy.] Have you any reason to think that the fine on admissions upon marriage and birth was higher than upon service?—It was less; that is my impression; but I would, rather than give my impression, refer to the book.

17211. And, under date, Monday, 7th October 1793, I find an entry, "We, the Committee of Œconomy, are of opinion that the freedom be granted to Andrew Walker of Patrick-street, tailor, by service, he having served his apprenticeship to Mr. James Walker, who is free of this guild. On reading the above report, it was resolved that Andrew Walker be, and is hereby admitted for the fine of 40 s.?"—Yes. Well, that was by service.

17212. Now, can you show me any fine by marriage?—I think I can; I think it was 30 s., if I mistake not. I recollect one instance in this book where the fine was 30 s. on marriage.

17213. Mr. Lefroy.] Now, can you tell us, as to birth, how much it was?—£. 1.; sometimes it was remitted.

17214. Then you have got the rights of admission by birth, marriage, and apprenticeship?—The fines respectively, were 1 l., 30 s., and 40 s.; and 5 l., grace especial.

17215. Mr. O'Connell.] Can you say whether the corporation might not have exacted larger fines if they pleased?—I do not think they could; but they certainly did not, as far as my knowledge goes.

17216. When a man is proposed in your corporation, what does he do in the first instance?—He sends forward a beseech to the guild.

17217. Have you any of those beseeches?—I have not; in fact, those are documents that are not preserved.

17218. When his beseech comes before the corporation, what is done then; how does it come before the corporation in the first instance?—The beseech is brought before the council, seven of whom constitute a quorum; and they try the claim; and if it is found to be a good claim, it is then sent down to the junior brethren to the lower house, and it is then put and passed.

17219. Have those seven a right, as you conceive, to reject, if they do not think fit to admit the man?—They have not.

17220. They have only a right of advising?—A right of advising, but no right to reject.

17221. Then, when their advice comes to the corporation below, they may either reject or admit?—I can only answer so far as the vote goes, because the question is put regularly from the chair in the lower house.

17222. I am speaking now of those seven; they have a right to advise either to admit or reject?—They may advise.

17223. But when it comes down to the corporation below, the question is put from the chair?—Yes, it is.

17224. And the corporation below have the right to reject or to admit, if they think fit?—I think that is the right that they have, because the question is put regularly; and

12 June 1837.

and I would presume that a question could not be put, if they had not the right to reject.

17225. Have you the ballot in your corporation?—No, except in cases of election for common council.

17226. Suppose two of your corporation are not satisfied with the question when it is put, the decision upon it by votes or by division, have they a right to call for a ballot on that proposition?—I never knew it,

17227. Do you know whether the right exists or not?—I do not; but I know by reading this book that they formerly admitted those who were proposed for grace especial admission, by ballot, but they have not in my memory.

17228. Does it appear by that book, whether they admitted any other by ballot except grace especial?—No, it does not.

17229. Have you any resolution or rule, touching the ballot?—None.

17230. Are you sure there is none?—I am quite certain. We have never adopted the ballot since I have been a member, except merely in cases of representation for the guild, those that go into the common council.

17231. Then no man, according to you, is free of your guild at present; no man is sworn in, as you have no instance of swearing in, except those six Roman Catholics in 1793; you do not consider him a full brother of your guild, until he shall have passed the city at large?—No, I do not consider him so; he is not admitted to the franchise; he is presumed to be not entirely admitted until he is sworn into the guild; he is merely admitted in the first instance until he passes the city.

17232. Now those six Roman Catholics they could not have voted for your representatives in the corporation at large?—They did vote; I perceive they did vote.

17233. And would you allow anybody else to do that now?—It was considered right then; it was agreed, and there was the opinion of counsel taken on it.

17234. Chairman.] When was it argued?—Counsellor Huband's opinion was taken, and it was decided that they had a right to vote for the common council in the guild, after they had been sworn.

17235. And that advice has never been corrected or altered since, has it?—It was acted upon in their case and their votes admitted.

17236. But that advice has never been renewed since?—No.

17237. But the custom has been never to admit any parties since those six Roman Catholics, until they should have been admitted in the corporation at large? —I think it was the custom even at that day, but it was not acted upon in their cases.

17238. Then this was a special exception in their favour, which exception has never been made since that period, up to the present?—I think it was not made in favour of any one else.

17239. Mr. Hamilton.] That custom depends on the obeying, or not obeying of an ancient mandate of the corporation at large; are you aware of that?—Not exactly.

17240. The practice is different in different corporations?—I should suppose it is; but I really know nothing of any other.

17241. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you admit any body into your corporation who is a minor?—I cannot say; there is no rule for it, and I am not aware that any were admitted.

17242. You appear to have very few rules in your corporation?—Very few indeed.

17243. You are quite convinced you would not admit a Roman Catholic now? —I can only give my own opinion upon that.

17244. Well now, what is your opinion?—It is my opinion they would not be, but how far they would be justified in refusing, is another matter; I think they would not be justified in refusing.

17245. Mr. Hamilton.] Has a mandamus ever been applied for by a Roman Catholic?—Never; in fact there has not been any opportunity to seek for a mandamus, because I think there has not been any application from a Roman Catholic since those six were admitted.

17246. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You do not remember any beseech sent in on behalf of any Roman Catholic?—I do not, not to my knowledge; I do not recollect one.

17247. Mr. Hogg.] None since the Irish Reform Bill?—I do not recollect one.

17248. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you find in the books of the corporation the copy of any

12 June 1837.

any mandate issued by the corporation at large, respecting the swearing in of freemen?—I do not recollect any such document.

17249. Chairman.] Nor are you aware of the existence of any such mandate in other guilds?—Yes, I heard of a case in the smiths' corporation.

17250. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you mean an admission of that kind?—No, a mandate for nonswearing.

17251. Mr. Hamilton.] You stated the oath appeared to you in some respects objectionable; have the corporation any power of altering that?—I think they have not the power of altering the oath; I think the oath was prescribed by the Legislature.

17252. And although detached sentences of that oath be taken, and it is your opinion that the terms of those detached sentences are not complied with, yet, if you take the whole oath, in your opinion it is complied with, at least not violated? —Entirely so; that is my opinion.

17253. Mr. O'Connell.] You tell me distinctly, you never knew of an enrolment of any apprentice in your guild?—I never knew of such in our guild.

17254. Of course there is no old book of enrolments among your books?—Indeed I do not know; I cannot say, indeed.

17255. If you should find such a one when you go home, would you promise to inform his lordship, by letter, you have found it?—I will communicate at once with his lordship if I can find it.

17256. Chairman.] Has your guild any property?—Yes.

17257. To what amount?—I think it amounts to about 86 l. a year at present.

17258. From what does it arise?—They have houses in Back-lane, fronting their guild hall; they have also some tenements in the town of Wicklow; then there is a place called the Baskin, and they derive also some rent from a place in Oxmantown-green.

17259. There are also fees on the admission of brothers, are there not?—At present there is not.

17260. No fees at all except those you receive as clerk of the guild?—Yes; the beadle receives a fee from each new brother.

17261. But none that goes to the guild purse?—None at all.

17262. What do they do with this money?—There are the particulars in one of the books.

17263. I only want to know in what way the money is disposed of?—I receive an income, and also the beadle.

17264. I want to know how it is spent?—I shall be better able to tell your lordship if you will allow me to refer to the book.

17265. Well, refer to the book; then how do they dispose of it?—In the year 1797, the Corporation Hall having fell into ruin, there was borrowed, on mortgage of property, number 5, called Loughboy, the sum of 300 l. Irish, to put the hall in proper repair; of this, there is at present due to the mortgage the sum of 200 l. Then we dispose of it in the following way: Interest on mortgage of 200 l., 12 l. a year; clerk's salary, 20 l.; beadle's salary, 12 l. 12 s.; coals, candles, &c. 2 l. 13 s. 4 d. repairs, on an average, 23 l. 6 s. 8 d.; printing and stationery, 5 l. 13 s. 9 d.; master's allowance for serving office, 11 l. 11 s.; quit rent, 14 s. 11 d., that is for the guild-hall; insurance, 1 l. 1 s.; precept for Lord Mayor for election, 1 l. 1 s.; interment of poor brothers, 1 l. 1 s.; that is the average; then for annual charity sermons, 3 l. 3 s.

17266. Then do you subscribe to the interment of your poor brethren?—Yes.

17267. That is the habit of the corporation, is it?—It is.

17268. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you know by what title you have the lands or tenements in Wicklow?—They were granted to us by charter, and King William confirms it.

17269. Your corporation, about the year 1793, was a liberal one?—It was.

17270. They granted their Tailors' Hall to the Catholic convention?—Yes.

17271. They granted their Tailors' Hall to open a society of United Irishmen? —I believe they did.

17272. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] I should hope they would not do so now?—No, they would not.

17273. Mr. O'Connell.] You would not grant it to the Catholics now?—I think not.

17274. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] My question is as to the United Irishmen; you are quite sure they would not grant it to them now?—No, because, first of all, the freedom was voted to Archibald Hamilton Rowan, and afterwards he was disfranchised.

12 June 1837.

17275. Mr. O'Connell.] Are you aware that that society was not a secret society?—It was conceived not to be so.

17276. Mr. Hamilton.] It held its meetings publicly?—Yes, it did.

Mr. John Allen, called in; and Examined.

Mr. John Allen.

17277. Chairman.] YOU are son of the clerk of the guild of merchants?—I am joint clerk with him.

17278. Are you a professional gentlemen?—I am a solicitor.

17279. Are you also a freeman of the guild of merchants?—I am.

17280. And of the city of Dublin also?—Yes.

17281. How long have you been so?—Since the year 1813 I have been free; since 1815 I have been clerk of the guild.

17282. Mr. O'Connell.] You have the book containing the oath of the free brethren, that every member of the guild of merchants takes?—That is a copy of it; I have not the oath itself, but that is an exact copy of it.

17283. You have an exact copy of it in this book?—I have.

17284. "Oath of free brethren: You shall swear to be true and faithful unto our Sovereign Lord the King, and to the fraternity or guild of merchants of the city of Dublin, and it you shall support and maintain to your power in all right; also you shall be true to the brethren that be merchants thereof, and them you shall maintain and support in their right against all others. Also you shall be true to the rules and ordinances ordained, or that shall be ordained by the authority of the masters, wardens and brethren, for the benefit of the said brotherhood. You shall take no apprentice for less term than for seven years, and within the first year you shall cause him to be enrolled; you shall answer to all due summons, and duly pay your quarterages; you shall not adhere to any other guild to the hindrance and wrong of this guild; also you shall not merchandize with any non-freeman's goods, nor be broker for any alien to the wrong of the brotherhood. These, and all other things belonging to the said brotherhood and guild, you shall support and maintain to the best of your power, so help you God." That is the oath which the free brethren take?—Yes, it is.

17285. Have you here the book of enrolment of indentures of apprenticeship?—No, I have not.

17286. But there is such a book?—There is such a book, but it is very seldom used.

17287. Now no man can be free of your guild who does not take that oath?—Certainly.

17288. And in that oath you perceive that, without any qualification, he swears he will have no apprentice for any less term than seven years, and within the first year he shall cause him to be enrolled; that is not done in general?—Very seldom.

17289. So that a number of people take this oath, and do not perform it?—I believe so, indeed.

17290. Now there has been a great many made free by apprenticeship, particularly since the Reform Bill?—There has been a good many; in 1835 there were a good many.

17291. And do you know that in any instance of them, or that in more than two or three instances at most, the indentures were not enrolled?—Very seldom enrolled.

17292. What proportion of those who were admitted as apprentices by service in your guild, were the indentures enrolled for, do you think?—I do not suppose more than, perhaps, two or three, or four or five in the year.

17293. And about how many in the year do you make?—That varies very much.

17294. Not above one in twenty enrolled?—I dare say not.

17295. Mr. Hamilton.] Is it not the habit of your corporation to swear in freemen, previous to their being admitted in the corporation at large? No, it is not; they are sworn in the first time they attend, the first hall day they attend in our guild, but they must be sworn in the city before they are sworn in our guild.

17296. Mr. O'Connell.] And may be sworn in your guild before they are sworn in the city?—Yes.

17297. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you find in the books of your corporation any mention of a mandate by the corporation at large, issued in the year 1775, in reference to swearing in freemen of minor corporations?—There was by the lord mayor at that time.

Mr. John Allen.

12 June 1837.

17298. Your corporation do not feel themselves bound to obey that mandate?—We do not.

Mr. William Clinton, called in; and Examined.

Mr. W. Clinton.

17299. Chairman.] WHAT are you?—I hold a situation in the Registry of Deeds Office.

17300. Are you clerk to any guild in Dublin?—I am clerk to the corporation of barbers and surgeons.

17301. How long have you been clerk to that guild?—Since May or June 1829; May 1829.

17302. Were you a freeman of that guild before?—I was.

17303. How long?—October 1824.

17304. That was your first admission to the guild, was it?—It was.

17305. Are you a freeman of the corporation at large?—I am.

17306. Were you sworn in to the guild of barbers and surgeons before or after your admission into the corporation at large?—Subsequent to my admission.

17307. Mr. O'Connell.] How long have you been in the registrar's office?—I have been in the register of deeds office since December 1832.

17308. Appointed, of course, by Mr. Moore?—By Mr. Moore.

17309. Have you made a return of the number of persons who have been admitted in your corporation, from the year 1820 to the year 1831?—I have. I made it from 1831 to the present, and you told me to go back ten years, which I did.

17310. How does a person get into your guild: I mean the form of proceeding for admission into your guild?—On the quarterly day of meeting, a member stands up and moves that A. B. be granted his freedom by birth, service or marriage, as the case may be.

17311. Or grace especial?—No; there is no grace especial since the Reform Bill.

17312. Well, but before the Reform Bill?—By grace especial, we admitted before the Reform Bill.

17313. And was any reason, before the Reform Bill, given for the grace especial?—The candidate was presumed to be a man of sound constitutional principles, and a man of unblemished character, and as such he was proposed by a member of the guild, and seconded.

17314. And the question put upon it?—And the question put upon it.

17315. And they rejected him or admitted him as they thought fit?—As they thought fit.

17316. If the party is not satisfied with the rejection by open vote, is there in your guild a right for the person to demand a ballot?—Yes, there is.

17317. How many persons must concur in demanding that ballot?—The mover and seconder; if the demand for the ballot be seconded, it is always conceded.

17318. As a matter of right?—It has always been done so; I should think so.

17319. And your opinion is, that they have it as a right; that it is a right that should be conceded?—That might be a legal opinion, and I am no lawyer.

17320. But if you were asked, as the clerk of the guild, whether they were bound to allow it, what would you say?—I would say that it ought to be conceded.

17321. You are bound probably by oath to give them advice?—Yes, to the best of my judgment.

17322. And then, upon that oath, acting upon your judgment, the judgment you would give would be that it ought to be conceded?—That it ought to be conceded.

17323. And then of course they would vote by secret ballot?—We have black beans and white beans.

17324. And every man conceals his vote if he chooses?—If he chooses he may.

17325. Of course no man is called upon for any reason why he votes?—No.

17326. Do you admit minors to the freedom?—Persons under twenty-one years of age, you mean.

17327. Mr. O'Connell.] Yes?—I cannot say that we do.

17328. Is it your judgment that you ought not?—I think we ought not.

17329. That is your judgment?—Yes, that is my judgment. It would be useless, useless, because they could not have the franchise in the city until they were twenty-one, because they are sworn to it before the registering barrister.

Mr. W. Clinton.

12 June 1837.

17330. But I am speaking before the Reform Bill (that is quite another question); but now, when a man is made free of your guild, do you swear him before he passes the city at large?—No.

17331. Then the admission to your guild is inoperative, unless he passes the city at large?—It is.

17332. Have you any specific form for swearing him into your guild after he has passed the city at large?—Yes.

17333. Have you that form here?—I have. He must first, not only pass the city or guild, but must bring a certificate, signed by Mr. Archer and Mr. Long, the town clerk, that he is not only passed, but sworn in. After the oath of allegiance he takes that oath.

17333*. Have you an enrolment book of indentures?—No.

17334. Do not you enrol at all?—No. I believe it has been the practice; but it has never been in my time.

17335. Then, can you say that there is no enrolment book in your guild at all?—None in my custody; nor none, that I know of, in the custody of the guild.

17336. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] If there is any such enrolment book, ought it to be in your custody as the officer of the guild?—It ought not; because they are so very jealous of their rights, that there are three locks and keys; the master holds one, and the two wardens one each; and I never can get a book but with their approbation. I must get the keys from them.

17337. Have you ever examined the contents of that chest?—I have.

17338. Are you able to say whether or not among the books there is any book for the enrolment of indentures?—I have brought every book belonging to the corporation with me, and there is no such thing.

17339. Have you brought the whole contents of that locked chest?—I have; I brought all.

17340. And did the master and two wardens intrust you with their respective keys?—They did.

17341. And you have examined all the books, and there is no enrolment book among them?—No, none.

17342. Chairman.] How far back do those books go?—Here is the oldest; this is dated 1698; and that is the oldest transaction book.

17343. Are you aware of any appearance of an enrolment book from that period up to the present moment?—I am not aware of any enrolment book.

17344. Then, from 1698 to what period does that go?—The 17th January 1757 is the last date I see here.

17345. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you a book of bye-laws?—They are in that book.

17346. Do you print any quarterly statement of bye-laws?—No. Here are the bye-laws, I believe, from the very earliest commencement.

17347. You do not admit any Roman Catholics?—We have not done so.

17348. You have never admitted any, have you?—No, I never knew of one.

17349. And of course you would not do so now; the corporation would not?—I could not take on me to answer for the body.

17350. But what is your opinion? You can form an opinion?—I think there would be an objection.

17351. By objection, do you mean they would not be admitted?—I do not think they would.

17352. I believe you have no doubt upon that head?—If they had a legal claim, I could not take on me to say how they would act; it would be rather presumptuous of me to answer that question.

17353. Cannot you reject without assigning a reason, by ballot?—The majority of votes has in every instance decided the person's claim, 17354. And decided it as they chose themselves?—Yes.

17355. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Has there been any beseech sent in to your guild?—No.

17356. There are no beseeches in your guild?—No.

17357. Has there been any application made on the part of Roman Catholics for admission since you have been an officer of the corporation?—No.

17358. Therefore there has been no trial made of what would be the decision of the guild, on a demand by Roman Catholics?—No.

17359. Mr.

17359. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you entertain the least doubt that they would be admitted?—I do not think they would be admitted.

17360. Are they likely to believe the same?—It is more than probable they do.

17361. Mr. French.] Do not you think that is the reason why you have had no application from them?—I could not take on me to answer that question; I do not know what may have prevented persons from applying.

17362. I only ask your opinion?—I should think it would prevent their applying.

17363. Mr. O'Connell.] Was not the corporation in the habit of petitioning against emancipation?—Yes.

17364. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Have you known persons admitted in your guild on the claim of right as apprentices?—Yes.

17365. Do you require in your guild, that the indenture shall have been enrolled in order to admit them?—No.

17366. Do you require that they should produce their indentures at all?—Not before the guild; that is done before the jury of freemen, after they have passed.

17367. Then in order to pass your guild, on a claim of right as an apprentice, is not necessary to produce any indenture?—No.

17368. Have you known any cases where apprentices were passed that had not served, in fact, by indenture at all?—I do not know any case.

17369. Do you make inquiry in your guild of whether there is in fact an indenture or not?—The person proposing and the person seconding, are always presumed to be responsible that the party did serve his time, and that his claim is unquestioned and unquestionable.

17370. That he did serve seven years?—Yes.

17371. To a freeman?—Yes; and that at the time of his first going as an apprentice the master was a freeman.

17372. These are the essential points you look to, and you hold the proposer and the seconder responsible upon those points?—And if it be not matter of notoriety that the master was a freeman at the time, there is a reference made to the books to see when he was admitted a freeman; and the same remark applies to those applying in right of birth.

17373. Then when you ascertain the master was in fact a freeman, and that the individual is stated to have served seven years to that freeman, you then pass him through your corporation?—Yes.

17374. And you allow the corporation at large to take its own measures afterwards, as to indentures or any thing else they may think fit?—Yes.

17375. Mr. O'Connell.] Was not your guild one of those that were most actively hostile to the Roman Catholic claims?—I do not know whether superlatively so.

17376. Were you a great deal so?—I have known several petitions to emanate from the barbers corporation against the Roman Catholic claims.

17377. Were you not in the habit of calling on the other guilds to join you?—No; I never knew of any application of the sort.

17378. Did you ever see this resolution of the year 1828: "That this meeting do recommend the various corporations of this city, at their next quarterly day, to petition His Majesty and the Legislature against granting any further political privileges to the Roman Catholics of the British Empire, and also to petition for the repeal of so much of the 33d of the late King, as granted power to papists to vote at elections?"—I forget it; I do not recollect it even now.

17379. Is not this your handwriting?—No.

17380. Whose handwriting is it?—A man of the name of Gillespie.

17381. You were not at the meeting of the 27th of September 1828?—No.

17382. Chairman.] I think you did not come into office until 1829, did you?—Not till 1829.

17383. Are there any other trades besides that of barber belonging to your guild?—Barbers, surgeons, apothecaries, and periwig-makers.

17384. What is the date of your first charter; do you know?—I think it is one of the Henrys, but I am not positive; the charter upon which we principally act, is one of Elizabeth.

17385. Mr. O'Connell.] These are the returns you have given in?—Yes.

17386. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Of how many does your corporation now consist?—I think at present, honorary members and all included, there are about 110.

17387. You have passed no honorary freemen since the Reform Bill, have you?—I believe Lord Winchelsea got his freedom, and I believe Mr. Long, of Mary-street. I gave Mr. O'Connell a list of every single person.

17388. Mr.

Mr. W. Clinton.

12 June 1837.

17388. Mr. O'Connell.] For the period of ten years, from the 20th July 1821 to the 19th July 1831, it appears you have admitted forty-seven persons, according to this return?—There must be more than that; and I do not suppose one-sixth of those ever prosecuted their freedom.

17389. Just count these, so that you may be able to say how many are in that return?—126 I reckon.

17390. Now among these 126 there is but one entry by marriage, James Mills; is that so?—No, here is one here, Thomas Egerton; that is the only one.

17391. And this is the entry of it; whose handwriting is that?—Gillespie's.

17392. "That Thomas Egerton, of blank, be admitted to the freedom of this guild by birth, he being married to the daughter of James Mills, an old and respectable freeman of this guild." You see that is an admission by birth?—Yes; he never came forward to be sworn. I do not know the man; I never saw him.

17393. Chairman.] What is the date of that?—11th of October 1824.

17394. M. O'Connell.] Now is not that the only entry by marriage previous to the passing of the Reform Bill?—Up to that time it is.

17395. And you tell me that man even never came forward to be sworn?—No, nor never prosecuted his freedom.

17396. Then for the period mentioned in this, from the 20th of July 1821 to the 19th of July 1831, there was not a single admission by marriage in your guild, if that be not one?—That is the only one. I made a faithful transcript of the books; searched them diligently.

17397. Now since 1831 you have several admissions by marriage?—Yes.

17398. Do they admit by marriage to any daughter?—Being married to any daughter of a freeman.

17399. Most of the admissions in your guild were complimentary or grace especial, before the passing of the Reform Bill?—The return will show that better than I can from memory: I would be afraid to say from memory.

17400. Look at it. [The Witness did so.]—Those two classes are the most, complimentary and grace especial.

17401. And you say you have continued to admit some persons by complimentary and grace especial since?—No, not grace especial, only complimentary, and I believe there are but two instances.

17402. There are five persons?—Five, are there? I did not know there were so many.

17403. Mr. O'Connell.] There are six persons, in three instances. Then you have substituted marriage in this, for grace especial in the former one?—No; they are two distinct claims.

17404. Then you have nobody by grace especial since the Reform Bill?—No; there has not been a single application made since the passing of the Reform Bill for a freedom by grace especial; and those persons who receive a complimentary freedom, do not derive their franchise from that freedom.

17405. Mr. Hamilton.] What is the difference between complimentary freedom, and that by grace especial?—Complimentary freedom is a freedom that merely gives the party admitted to the privilege of the guild, the right to vote for masters and wardens, for any question under discussion in the corporation; but he cannot vote for Members of Parliament, nor for members of the common council; he can only vote for members of the common council from the guild of which he was an original member, out of which he was originally admitted.

17406. Mr. O'Connell.] Then complimentary is for somebody who was a member of another guild before?—Yes; that is it.

17407. So that no man in fact is free of your guild, who has not passed the corporation of the city?—No, in point of fact he is not.

17408. Now you know there has been a registry association, for the purpose of increasing the number of persons to be registered in Dublin?—There has been a registry association formed, but whether that is its exclusive object, I will not take on me to say.

17409. That is one of its objects?—The object would be to bring forward as many persons who have claims as possible, I should think so.

17410. Had they any communication with you?—No.

17411. Nor you with them?—Nor I with them. I have been in the room frequently.

17412. What is the name of that association?—I think it is called the Central Protestant Registration Society, or Committee; I do not know which name it is.

Mr. W. Clinton.

12 June 1837.

17413. It is called the Protestant Association?—Yes, or Conservative; either Protestant or Conservative, I am not sure which.

17414. And who did you see acting as the chairman there?—I never was at a meeting of the body.

17415. Who did you see acting there?—The only persons I saw in the room were Mr. Collison, Mr. Hyndman, a Mr. Baxter, and a clerk, I think his name is Ryan.

17416. Did you go there about money?—No.

17417. Did you get any money from them?—I got money from Mr. Collison, that had been given to him by two persons that had been admitted into our guild.

17418. Did you get money from Mr. Collison but once?—I got money at that time from him.

17419. Did you get money from him but once?—I will tell you, but I wish to be cautious what I am saying; I got money from him for two persons of the name of Waller (James and Richard) and Mr. Lestrange, which money he received from the parties.

17420. Did you see him receive it from the parties?—No, I did not, but it was through him I got the money. He got it from them, of course.

17421. Chairman.] What year was that in?—It is not more than six months ago, I think.

17422. Mr. O'Connell.] April and July 1836?—They were admitted then, but they did not come forward until, I think, about six months ago.

17423. Mr. Hamilton.] Are you aware there is a society also to prevent the registration of freemen?—I have heard there was such a society.

17424. You have been there, I suppose?—Never.

17425. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are you aware that there is an association in Dublin, one of the branches of whose occupation in business is to assist in the registration on the other side?—Yes.

17426. Are you aware whether or no they are making very great exertions to bring forward candidates for registration?—Judging from the Dublin papers, and the placards that I see posting through the streets, I should say they are making every exertion.

17427. Mr. O'Connell.] Are not there three of them?—I believe one is defunct. The house is shut up.

17428. Which one is that that is shut up?—It is called the Central Independent Club. The only knowledge I have of it is seeing a brass plate on the door.

17429. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do not you think it a necessary thing to have some effort made on the other side to stem this torrent that has been made?—Indeed I do.

17430. Mr. O'Connell.] Then the mode in which you ascertain the facts respecting any man is by the statement of the person who proposes him?—That and a reference to the books, if it should be necessary; unless it is a matter of notoriety that the party through whom the individual claims his admission has been a freeman, there is always a reference to the books.

17431. Have you found any entry purporting at all to be connected with marriage, prior to this of Thomas Egerton's?—Not within that time, or of course it would have been included in the return.

17432. Did you search before that?—I did not.

17433. Will you be so good as to show me the entry of the 27th of April 1829?

[The Witness did so.]

17434. Whose handwriting is that?—That is my own handwriting.

17435. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you ever attend the registration court at all in Dublin?—Unless from curiosity, never.

17435*. Have you attended it often from curiosity?—I have gone in there frequently, but have never remained there very long. It is near my own office, and I sometimes slip in there for ten or fifteen minutes, if I have so much time to spare; but I am not in any way connected with it, nor never was.

17436. Has there been, in point of fact, a number of persons of a very inferior order, poor persons brought forward to register: have you seen them?—I have seen persons whose appearance was questionable, but I can say no further.

17437. Had they the appearance of being very poor persons?—They had the appearance of being a very low grade.

Mr. W. Clinton.

12 June 1837.

17437*. Mr. O'Connell.] You register yourself, I suppose?—Yes.

17438. Your office does not disqualify you from voting?—No.

17439. Now be so good as to show me the entry of the 16th October 1836.

[The Witness did so.]

17440. John Baseggio was a foreigner?—He was.

17441. Either an Italian or a Swiss?—He was.

17442. He was a Protestant?—He was; he said so, at least.

17443. He professed the Protestant religion? You are aware that by professing the Protestant religion he became naturalized, and entitled to all the rights of a native citizen in Ireland?—I do not know that that would entitle him; but before he was considered a Protestant I heard a person in his employment say he had letters of naturalization when Sir Robert Peel was Secretary. I did not see the letters.

17444. Chairman.] Has your corporation any property?—No.

17445. None at all?—None.

17446. Are any fees paid to the corporation on the admission of members?—Yes; to the corporation and to me, both.

17447. Will you state what the fees are, paid to the corporation?—10 s.

17448. Is it the same with regard to every claim?—The same with regard to every claim.

17449. What are the stamp duties that are paid?—£. 1.

17450. Is that upon every claim the same?—Upon every claim now the same.

17451. What were the stamp duties that were paid previous to the passing of the Reform Bill?—£. 3. by grace especial, and 1 l. otherwise.

17452. Mr. O'Connell.] When you say "otherwise," you mean by birth and service?—Yes.

17453. You never knew a fee paid on a claim of right by marriage?—No, I never did.

17454. In your book can you point out an entry,—I think you told me you could not,—of a claim by marriage prior to these returns?—I could not, for I did not look; probably I might if I went back; I only went back to the time you required me.

17455. Chairman.] Are you responsible to the Stamp Office, as the clerk of the guild, for the due payment of the stamp duty, on the admission of freemen to your guild?—I do not know what the law may be; I suppose I am the officer who should see it paid.

17456. Do you, in point of fact, pay the duty to the Stamp Office?—I get the money from the persons claiming admission, and pay it over to the Stamp Office.

17457. Do they investigate your accounts in any way, so as to see you pay accurately what is paid?—The guild see that the parties have their stamps.

17458. But I want to know, whether or no the Stamp Office look to see that you pay on account of persons who are admitted the proper stamps?—They have investigated, but not since I was appointed.

17459. How often do you pay over the money that is received?—Whenever I receive it.

17460. Forthwith?—Forthwith.

17461. Are there any queries made of you, as to upon whose account you pay these monies?—No.

17462. Do they give you any acquittance?—Nothing but the stamp.

17463. What office do you pay it into?—I go into one office, I think it is called the comptroller's, or the receiver's office.

17464. It is the head office in Dublin?—Yes; I pay the money there, I get a small card, and I bring the card with the book I am to get stamped, and give it to the clerk, and return again in half an hour.

17465. Then it is the book that is stamped?—Yes.

17466. Does the Stamp Office officer look at the book before he stamps it?—I do not know whether he does or not; I give it into the officer's hands.

17467. Is it stamped in your presence?—No.

17468. It passes through the office; it is in the possession of the office, and out of your possession for a certain time?—It is.

17469. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you that book?—I have.

17470. Mr. Lefroy.] Does it appear upon the face of that book, on what rights the different persons are admitted?—It is a duplicate of the certificate of admission.

17471. Chairman.] I see your last entry is Mr. George Cowan, of Wellington-Quay,

Mr. W. Clinton.

12 June 1837.

Quay, in the city of Dublin, 16th January 1837; and that he was admitted to the freedom of the said guild of barbers by marriage, being married to the daughter of William Davison, an old freeman?—Yes.

17472. And the stamp duty upon this is 1 l.?—£. 1.; there is no other stamp duty now.

17473. And this book was handed into the Stamp Office, before this particular admission was stamped?—Yes; I have sometimes left them in blank.

17474. In this case was it in blank, or not?—I rather think that was.

17475. Can you point out any one that was not in blank?—I could not indeed.

17476. But they permit you to put this in blank, do they?—Yes.

17477. Mr. O'Connell.] I suppose they know you?—No, they do not.

17478. Do not they know you belong to the Registry Office?—Indeed, they do not.

17479. Chairman.] I do not see any more blank stamps here?—No.

17480. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you any book with blank stamps?—No; I have not a single stamp but what is there.

17481. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] And is it the course of business to enter the admission first of all, and then to get it stamped?—I do not believe it is indispensibly necessary.

17482. But what is the course with you; do you generally write the admission on a stamp, or first write the admission on paper, blanked, and then get it stamped?—Sometimes I get the paper stamped, and fill it in at my leisure; and sometimes I may fill in the certificate, and get it stamped.

17483. When you say there has been no other stamp since the Reform Bill but a 1 l. stamp, do you mean because there are no honorary freemen's admissions?—No grace especial. The honorary freemen are not subject to the stamp duty.

17484. And is that the reason why there is no other class of stamps, since the Reform Bill, but the 1 l. stamp?—I should think so.

17485. Have you any other book of admission, prior to the Reform Bill?—Yes, they are all here.

17486. A stamped book?—Yes, there are some there; some with 3 l. stamps.

17487. They are impressed then on grace especial cases?—Yes.

17488. Mr. O'Connell.] Do I understand you right, that you do not call any man an honorary freeman, but a complimentary freeman, who is free of another guild?—That is what I conceive to be an honorary freeman.

17489. You do not call the grace especial man, an honorary freeman?—No, he his a bonâ fide freeman.

17490. Should you not put a 3 l. stamp on grace especial men?—There are no grace especial men since the Reform Bill.

17491. But before that?—£. 3. before, certainly.

17492. Your honorary freemen pay no stamp duty at all?—No, they are not subject to stamp duty; because some of the aldermen and sheriffs of Dublin are free of several guilds. It is usual to give the freedom to past lord mayors, and sheriffs, if they conduct themselves to the satisfaction of the minor guilds, and in that case a man would have twenty-three stamps to pay for.

17493. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Before the Reform Bill, into what classes did you consider the freemen divided, freemen who claimed of right, and those who came in by grace especial?—Grace especial, marriage, service, and birth. We considered the freemen's claims precisely similar to what they are now, with the exception of grace especial, which we conceive entirely abolished.

17494. By the Reform Bill?—That is our conception; we may be wrong, but that is my idea.

17495. Mr. Hogg.] Tell me what you call a grace-especial member of your corporation?—A grace-especial man is a man who has no legal claim, but who is admitted by the favour of the corporation.

17496. Does he come into the corporation at large at once, or is he first admitted into a minor guild?—First into a minor guild; when he is passed there he is proposed by a member and seconded; the question is then put by the master, and if carried in the affirmative, he gets a certificate signed by the master, wardens, and the clerk, in the following words: Corporation of barbers and surgeons, apothecaries and periwig-makers, or guild of St. Mary Magdalen, in the city of Dublin: We the master, wardens, and brethren of the corporation of barbers and surgeons, or guild of St. Mary Magdalen, in the city of Dublin, do hereby certify that A. B., of such and such a street (Prussia street, say), in the city of Dublin, was on on Monday the 12th day of January 1837, admitted to the freedom of the said guild by grace especial; or if by birth, by birth, he being the free born son of A. B., an old freeman of the guild; or if by marriage, he being married to the daughter of C. D., an old freeman of this guild; or if by service, he having served his apprenticeship to E. F.

17497. It is the same form of certificate?—Yes, in testimony whereof we have hereunto signed our names, so and so, and then that is lodged in the town clerk's office.

17498. Before the Reform Bill, when you admitted an honorary member to any guild, was that person a person admitted by what you call grace especial?—We have no knowledge of that, because he was free of another guild.

17499. Sometimes it is usual to admit persons as a matter of honour to the freedom of any guild or any corporation?—Yes.

17500. Now before the Reform Bill, if you wished to pay that compliment to any person who had no legal claim, and that compliment was paid, and the person was admitted upon that compliment, would you call him admitted by grace especial?—If he had not been free of any other guild previous to this, he would then be a grace especial freeman; but if he had been a freeman of another guild, and he was admitted to the freedom of the barbers, he would then be classed as an honorary freeman, or complimentary freeman of that particular guild; but if he had not been free of any other guild previous to it, he would be a grace especial freeman, and would be bonâ fide a freeman.

17501. Mr. Lefroy.] As an honorary freeman would he have either to pay fees or stamp duty?—No, as an honorary freeman certainly not; we never charge honorary freemen.

17502. Then the difference between an honorary freeman of that sort and a grace especial freeman was simply with respect to the charge of fees?—And the privileges. The privileges varied, because the grace especial freemen could vote previous to the Reform Bill for Members of Parliament, and the honorary freeman cannot; he can vote out of the guild of which he was originally a member.

17503. But could he not be admitted in the city at large, and afterwards vote as any other grace especial man?—He votes for the guild to which he originally belonged.

17504. Your guild seems to have been very angry at the passing of the Emancipation Bill?—I believe they were not very much pleased.

17505. I find this paragraph in an address to a Mr. John Stewart, in 1830: "At a period when our chartered rights, as freemen and as Protestants, were basely bartered and tamely surrendered by those whose sworn duty it was to defend and preserve them inviolate, you, sir, warmly co-operated with us in our last glorious though ineffectual struggle for the preservation of our once Protestant constitution:" you are the William Clinton who has signed that?—I am. He was a past master; he had been master of the guild.

17506. Mr. Hamilton.] The general feeling amongst the corporation of Dublin was that they were instituted for the purpose of upholding the Protestant constitution?—It has been, and, speaking of a thing of which I have no certain knowledge, I think it is their feeling still.

17507. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you not say you thought it was instituted in the reign of King John?—No, not King John; and though the charter is there, I never looked at it; Elizabeth is the one we act upon.

17508. But you have charters before Elizabeth?—We had in one of the Henrys. I really do not know which.

17509. What is the date of the first of your charters; you have a charter in the reign of Hen. 6, A. D. 1447, (that was not for the support of Protestancy); are you aware of that?—I believe Protestancy was not in vogue at that time. Elizabeth is the last charter we have. There is no other charter here.

17510. You have got your charters expressly for the praise of God and the honour of the blessed Virgin Mary?—

17511. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are you aware the Church in Ireland was not a Roman Catholic Church till the reign of Hen. 2?—It is my opinion. But that would be bringing me into an argument I would not be competent to say anything about among so many Honourable Members.

17512. Mr. Hamilton.] Do not you know the feeling of the corporation is, that in

Mr. W. Clinton.

12 June 1837.

in the reign of King James 1, it was then to uphold the Protestant constitution?—It is.

17513. Mr. Hogg.] Have you a copy of the certificate you before alluded to?—No, I have not.

17514. Is there a blank left for what you filled up, whether it was by birth, by marriage, or by service?—I generally write it on a sheet of paper; we have no printed paper.

17515. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you no book of admissions to the freedom of your guild from 1756 or 1757 till the year 1792?—No, I have not.

The Witness was directed to make out a return of freemen admitted from 1792 to July 1821.

17516. Where do you say the bye-laws are?—In this book.

17517. Is there any bye-law recognizing the right of claim by birth?—I do not know whether there is a bye-law; for the right has never yet been questioned.

17518. I find this bye-law: "That all such who are sworn brothers by service shall pay 20*s.*, and all such as become free by fine shall pay 40*s.*"?—That is grace especial.

17519. No, because grace especial was ten pounds at that time?—I never knew it was higher than forty shillings.

17520. I have two entries here of 10 l. Is there not this bye-law of the 11th of November 1793: "Resolved, that every person hereafter claiming freedom of this corporation by grace especial, shall pay as a fine 10 l. sterling, provided always that it shall be in the power of the corporation to reduce the said fine to any sum not under 40 s., and that the determination on every such petition shall be by ballot"?—I was not aware of that; 40 s. was the usual fine by grace especial, and 20 s. by birth, service or marriage, and the fees have been reduced to 10 s.

17521. Do you see any entry of birth or marriage in the bye-laws?—No.

17522. Now will you be able, by the next day, to make those out?—I will.

17523. Mr. Hamilton.] Refer to that book, and see if you see any admission by birth as well as service?—Yes, I do. Here are the bye-laws: "That such persons as are admitted by birth or service shall pay 20 s., and all others shall pay 40 s.; that no person shall be admitted free, by fine, for less than 40 s. except such person has served His Majesty, or has been bred in the Blue Coat Hospital; that no person admitted to the freedom of this guild by birth, service or fine, shall obtain a certificate until he pays the fine."

17524. So that there is a recognition in that bye-law of admission by birth?—Certainly.

17525. Mr. O'Connell.] By birth as well as by service, is it not?—Yes.

17526. Chairman.] What is the date of that?—1698 the first; 1760 the second; 1761 the third.

Jovis, 15° die Junii, 1837.

Mr. Hogg.	Lord Granville Somerset.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. William Clinton, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. W. Clinton.

15 June 1837.

17527. Mr. O'Connell.] DO you now deliver in the return you have made, pursuant to the directions you got on Saturday?—Yes.

[The Witness delivered in the same.]

17528. That is a return of the freemen, as they appear to have been made in your guild, from 1792 to 1821?—Yes, bringing it up to the return I made upon the former occasion.

17529. Do you know when the stamp-duty was first imposed upon freemen in Ireland?—I do not.

Mr. W. Clinton.

15 June 1837.

17530. How far back have you any stamp-books?—I have no stamps but these from 1825.

17531. Are there none in your guild before 1825?—There are, but I have not them.

17532. Who has them?—I believe they are retained by the individuals.

17533. Do you know of your own knowledge anybody that has one?—I do not, but I have heard several of the freemen say that they purchased their own stamp and kept it.

17534. Can you name anybody that said that?—I heard a man of the name of Verdon say so.

17535. Is he alive?—He is.

17536. What is he?—He is an attorney; I think I heard him say it; I know that I heard a man of the name of Reddy say it, but he is dead.

17537. Verdon appears by the return to have been made a freeman on the 16th of October 1809?—Yes.

17538. By what right was he made free?—By birth.

17539. Mr. O'Connell.] Will you show to the Committee the entry of the 17th of January 1803?—[The Witness produced the same.]

17540. There are the two following entries: "William Maguire, Esq., admitted to the freedom by birth unanimously, being the free born son of Arthur Maguire, Esq., an old free brother." The next is George Giles, of Youghall, in the county of Cork, Esq., also unanimously admitted to the freedom of the corporation, on account of his being married to the daughter of the said Arthur Maguire. The first is admitted by birth, and the other is admitted on account of marriage?—Yes; this Mr. Giles was married to the sister of the gentleman that got his freedom.

17542. Mr. O'Connell.] The next entry by marriage is on the 16th of January 1804; these three entries appear: "John Roe, of Capel-street, admitted to the freedom of this corporation by service, he having served his apprenticeship to Charles Sims, an old free brother of this corporation. David Gaas, son of Mr. Joseph Gaas, was unanimously admitted to the freedom of this corporation by birth. Robert Compton, of the city of Dublin, admitted to the freedom of this corporation, he being married to the daughter of Mr. Joseph Gaas, an old freeman of this corporation"?—Those are the entries.

17543. On the 18th of April 1814, there are these entries: "The right honourable the Lord Mayor's letter to the master of this corporation being read, which requested that this guild would not swear in a freeman till he had passed the city at large, Patrick Connor, No. 1, Bedford-row, barber, was admitted to the freedom of this corporation, being married to the daughter of Anthony Gardiner, an old free brother of this guild." "16th July 1821: Francis Frederick Brierton, of ——, was admitted to the freedom of the guild, married to the daughter of John James Johnston, a freeman of this guild; and on the same day James Ball, of ——, son to Edward Ball, Esq., an old freeman of this guild, by birth"?—Those are the entries.

17544. The Committee have now all the entries by reason of marriage before he Reform Bill?—They have now, as far as I can make it out, from 1792.

17545. Chairman.] This is a return of the names of all freemen admitted into the corporation of barbers and surgeons, from the beginning of the year 1793 to July 1821?—Yes.

17546. Will you state how many persons have been admitted, according to this return, by right of service in that time?—Thirteen.

17547. Were there any admitted by right of service, according to this return, from the month of January in the year 1807 down to the year 1816?—Here is one in April and one in October.

17548. Then for upwards of nine years there was no individual admitted by right of service?—No.

17549. Mr. O'Connell.] What trade must a man be to be admitted upon a claim of service in your guild?—A barber, surgeon, apothecary or periwig-maker.

17550. Then if he be not of that actual trade, you do not admit him in your guild

Mr. W. Clinto

15 June 1837

guild by service?—I do not know how that point would be decided; if a professional man, for instance, got his freedom by birth, and he follows another trade, and another man served his time to him at that other trade, I do not know how his claim would be affected by it.

17551. You have not any recollection of anybody claiming by service but one of those four trades?—I have not.

17552. Then your opinion is, that these four trades are the trades upon which you would admit a claim of service?—Yes.

17553. Mr. Hamilton.] In your stamp-book in some cases there is a memorandum, with initials at the corner of the certificate above the stamp, and in other cases that memorandum is wanting; can you explain the reason of that?—Where it is wanting, the book was stamped in blank.

17554. Then where it was not wanting, it was not stamped in blank?—No, it was not; every settlement that is executed, when it is brought to the Stamp-office, the person signs it, with the date.

17555. Will you refer to the certificate of Francis Frederick Brierton, and state whether that was stamped in blank or not?—It was not stamped in blank.

17556. What was the stamp upon it?—£. 1.

17557. In what right is it stated that he was admitted?—Marriage.

17558. So that in that case the Stamp-office affixed 1 l. stamp upon the certificate not blank?—Yes.

17559. Chairman.] What is the date of this?—In the year 1825; that is the date he was sworn into the guild.

Mr. William Jordan Lambert, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. W. J. Lamb

17560. THE Committee understand that you wish to make some addition to your answer 16507?—I wish to say that I was editor of the Dublin Dispatch newspaper; I have all the Irish correspondence of two London papers; I am also a reporter; I have always been connected with the press, and with the London press.

17561. What salary have you had?—I had five guineas a week here; and I have 1 l. 10 s. from one paper, and I have 2 l. from the other; I have in all 4 l. 10 s. a week in Dublin.

17562. Then the Committee are to understand that you have lost 4 l. 10 s. a week by your attendance here?—Yes.

17563. In your answer to question 16563, you mentioned the debates in the House of Commons; did you mean to state that you reported those debates yourself?—Yes, many of them.

17564. Mr. Hamilton.] Was an opinion ever taken by your guild in reference to the right of the guild to enforce admission into the corporation at large, though the individual himself might not possess that right?—There was no opinion taken upon the subject as to the right of the party to be admitted into the city; there was an opinion taken upon the question, whether, if the corporation of smiths applied to the city to admit any member who had been previously admitted into the guild, they could compel them to admit him.

17565. Have you that opinion?—I think I could send the opinion over.

17566. They were sworn into your corporation without being admitted into the corporation at large?—Yes; an opinion was taken upon it, that they could not be sworn into the city; but if our guild applied to compel them to be admitted into the city, it would be successful.

17567. Can you you give the Committee that opinion?—I can.

17568. Mr. O'Connell.] That was the case which the King's Bench decided?—Yes.

17569. Is not Adcock's case the case in which the court of King's Bench decided that they could not compel the corporation, by mandamus, to admit in right of birth?—In right of birth and service both.

17570. Although your corporation had admitted and sworn them in?—Yes, we were obliged to do so.

17571. Mr. Hamilton.] The Court of King's Bench decided that the minor corporation should admit them?—Yes; an opinion was taken, and then the parties consented to waive their costs, and have them sworn in, which we did.

17572. Mr. O'Connell.] The Court of King's Bench decided no question respecting respecting your guild?—Precisely so; it would appear that we were guided by Counsellor Perrin's opinion.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

15 June 1837.

17573. Mr. Ford, the attorney for the mandamus, consented to waive all claim of costs, and you consented to admit the parties into your guild?—Yes, having previously got an opinion that we could not resist it.

17574. Then those persons admitted into your guild, two by birth and one by service, applied for a mandamus to the Court of King's Bench, to compel the corporation at large to admit them, and the King's Bench decided that they could not compel the corporation at large to admit them?—By a mandamus coming from the individuals.

17575. That was the case upon which the decision was made, that those individuals could not, by mandamus, compel the corporation at large to admit them by right of birth or by right of service?—Precisely so.

17576. Mr. Hamilton.] Had a mandamus issued to your corporation to admit those individuals?—Yes.

17577. Mr. O'Connell.] You never returned to that mandamus?—Upon the mandamus coming the council of the house met, and they came to a resolution that Counsellor Perrin's opinion be taken; and when we found we could not legally resist it, we consented, upon the proposition of waiving costs, to their being sworn in.

17578. Mr. Hamilton.] Did you take any opinion as to the right of the guild to enforce admission against the general corporation?—We took an opinion in case the corporation refused to admit one of our members upon our applying; I think that opinion is among the papers.

17579. Mr. O'Connell.] Can you state positively that you ever saw such an opinion?—No, I cannot positively state so.

17580. Mr. Hamilton.] If the opinion exists will you send it to the Committee?—I will.

17581. Do you recollect whose opinion it was that was taken?—It was before I came into the guild; the corporation refused the admission of some freemen that we were anxious to have admitted into the corporation, and that was cited, amongst the rest, to show that if we pleased to go to law with the great corporation we could enforce it; but I will look for it, and if I find it I will send it to the Committee.

Mr. Edward Carolin, called in; and Examined.

Mr. E. Carolin.

17582. Chairman.] WHAT are you?—A builder and architect living in Talbot-street, Dublin.

17583. Are you a freeman of the guild of carpenters?—I am.

17584. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you know anything of Mr. Blennerhasset Wood, clerk of your guild?—I do not.

17585-6. What is the name of the master of the guild of carpenters?—Mr. Grant.

17587. Chairman.] You do not interfere much in the business of your guild?—Very little.

17588. Mr. O'Connell.] Can you state how many you have passed in the guild as free by service within the last five years?—No, I could not.

17589. As apprentices?—The only apprentices passed as having served with the establishment with which I am connected are two.

17590. What are their names?—The one is Hall, and the other I do not recollect his name.

17591. Do you know anything of William Morrison, No. 1, James-street?—I do not.

17592. Do you know Robert Pike, junior?—I think I have seen him, but he has been but a short time a freeman.

17593. Did you ever take any part in any election of the guild of warden or master?—I have, frequently.

Mr. Henry Price, called in; and Examined.

Mr. Henry Price.

17594. Mr. O'Connell.] WHERE do you live?—I reside on Arran-quay, but my business is conducted in Lincoln-lane.

17595. What is your business?—A chemist.

Mr. Henry Price.

15 June 1837.

17596. Are you free of any corporation in Dublin?—I am.

17597. Are you an Irishman by birth?—I am.

17598. When did you apply for your freedom?—I did not make a personal application for my freedom, but it was made for me by a friend of mine, I think about seven years ago.

17599. Who is he?—He is dead now; his name was Kincaid.

17600. When were you made free of the city of Dublin?—I think about seven years ago; it was previous to the election of Perrin and Harty for the city of Dublin.

17601. Of what guild were you made free?—Of the saddlers.

17602. Did you claim as of right, or of grace especial?—I claimed by birth.

17603. Who is the master of the saddlers at present?—I think his name is Henzell.

17604. Was your father a freeman?—Not to my knowledge.

17605. Was an uncle of yours free?—I think not.

17606. Was your grandfather free?—I understood so.

17607. You are not sure of that?—I cannot be positive, but I always heard it from rumour.

17608. Do you remember him?—I do not; I never saw him.

17609. Was it the reputation of your family that your grandfather died before you were born?—It was.

17610. And your father is dead also?—He is.

17611. About how many years before you were born did you hear in your family that your grandfather had died?—I could not say.

17612. Was it eight or ten years?—I should suppose it was.

17613. Where did your grandfather live in his lifetime?—I think Newcastle-street.

17614. Did you ever hear what business he was of?—I think I heard he was a saddler.

17615. Have you been registered under the Reform Act?—I believe I was registered lately; I have my certificates.

17616. Do you belong to the Protestant Registering Association?—No, I do not.

17617. Do you belong to any political body?—The only body I belong to is the Irish Metropolitan Conservative Society.

17618. Where did they meet?—In Dawson-street.

17619. How long have you been admitted into that society?—About six months.

17620. Is that the one that has taken the place of the old Orange lodge?—I cannot say.

17621. Do you use the Orange colour there?—I believe it is quite optional what colour.

17622. How did you become a member?—I was proposed by a gentleman, a friend of mine; that is all that I know of it.

17623. Had you belonged to the Orange Society before?—Never.

17624. Chairman.] Was not the election of Perrin and Harty previous to the passing of the Reform Act?—It was.

17625. O'Connell.] Did you vote at the election of Perrin and Harty?—I did not.

17626. You were not registered till the 16th February 1837?—Yes.

17627. You did not pass the corporation till the 31st of October 1836?—That was the day I was sworn in.

17628. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you know whether or not you had passed the corporation previously?—Yes, I had; I passed it at the time I stated.

17629. Mr. O'Connell.] In what guild?—In the saddlers'.

17630. What is the other paper you have in your hand?—This is the certificate of my register as a housekeeper, dated the 2d May 1836.

17631. You registered on the 2d May 1836, as a housekeeper; you afterwards registered on the 16th of February 1837 as a freeman?—Yes.

17632. And you produced upon that occasion the following certificate: "Memorandum, that at Michaelmas assembly 1836, Henry Price, saddler, was admitted into the liberties and franchises of the city of Dublin, by birth, and took the usual oaths, and was enrolled; in testimony whereof the same is signed by the town-clerk this 31st of October 1836;" then your admission to the corporation at large was not till Michaelmas assembly 1836, according to this?—That is the time I was sworn in.

17633. Is not it manifest that you were not admitted into the corporation at large till Michaelmas 1836?—I do not know that, but I know that I was admitted into the guild.

17634. Then you were admitted in 1836, by birth?—I was admitted at the time I stated, before the election of Alderman Harty.

17635. What was the Christian name of your grandfather?—I think it was Henry.

17636. Do the conservative society that you spoke of attend to the registry?—I have never attended there but twice.

17637. What is their business?—I do not know; I never attended any place but the reading-room.

17638. You never attended any meeting of the society?—I never attended in any place but the reading-room.

17639. What did you pay for that privilege?—I paid 15*s.* a year.

17640. Was your father an Irishman?—He was.

17641. Did you ever say that he was a Scotchman?—No, I do not think I ever did; he had resided for some time in Scotland.

17642. Were you born in Ireland or in Scotland?—In Ireland.

17643. Had your father married in Scotland, and had a family before he came over?—No, he was married in Dublin.

17644. What was your mother's name?—Gomme.

17645. Mr. Hamilton.] Was your father a freeman?—Yes.

17646. Was your grandfather, upon your mother's side, alive at the time of your birth?—No.

17647. Mr. O'Connell.] Is your laboratory for the purpose of bleaching salts and vitriol, or for chemistry generally?—It is for the purpose of making acids, nitric and muriatic acids.

17648. Who was it that first informed you that you would be made free of the corporation at large?—I received a note from College-street.

17649. From anybody there?—I think it is headed the "Registration Committee."

17650. Have you that note?—I have not.

17651. Who had signed it?—I do not think it was signed.

17652. Mr. Hamilton.] Was it printed?—It was a printed notice.

17653. Mr. O'Connell.] What did that note state to you?—The note merely stated, "Sir, you are requested to attend to-morrow at the Assembly-house, to be sworn in free of the city."

17654. And you went the next day, and were sworn?—I did, knowing that I had passed the previous time.

17655. Seven or eight years ago?—Seven or eight years ago; I knew what it referred to, and I went.

17656. Did you know that you had not passed the city seven years ago?—I knew, at the election of Alderman Harty, that I had not passed the city, because I wanted to vote; the Lord Mayor did not swear me, because he said I had not passed the city at large.

17657. Then you had no intimation that you would pass the city at large till you had that note?—I quite forgot the matter, because I registered as a householder.

17658. The first intimation you had of being free of the city at large, was getting that note?—The note did not mention that I was free of the city at large; it merely said, "Sir, you are requested to attend to-morrow at the Assembly-house, to be sworn in free of the city."

17659. Can you be sworn a freeman without being free of the city at large?—I know nothing connected with the freedom.

17660. You do not know who drew up your beseech?—I suppose it was Mr. Kincaid.

17661. That is seven years ago?—Yes.

Mr. Hen

17662. But last Michaelmas, you did not know who drew up your beseech at that time?—I took no part in it at that time.

17663. But that was done without any consulting with you whatever?—I heard nothing about it till I got that note.

17664. Was there any name to that note?—No.

Mr. Henry Price.

15 June 1837.

17665. Did you never inquire who those people were that so kindly wrote to you?—No.

17666. Mr. Hamilton.] You understood that it was the Registration Committee in College-street?—Yes, it was headed so.

17667. Mr. O'Connell.] Was that the exact heading of it?—I think it was "The Protestant Registration Committee."

17668. Can you state positively what was your father's Christian name?—It was Thomas.

17669. Can you state positively what was your grandfather's Christian name?—I cannot positively, but to the best of my recollection it was Henry.

17670. Have you no book or entry at home that would tell you?—I could readily find it out if I was at home.

17671. Do you know where he was buried?—I do not.

17672. Did you ever hear where he died?—I do not know that, I think he died in Dublin.

17673. Upon what occasion did your father leave Dublin and go to Scotland?—I think it was in his youth he went; my father was born in the north of Ireland.

17674. In what part of the north had your grandfather been residing when your father was born?—I do not know.

17675. Do you know what trade or occupation your grandfather followed?—I think he was a saddler.

17676. Do you know where he followed that trade of a saddler, if he was a saddler?—I think, in Castle-street.

17677. He had left Dublin some years before his death?—No, I am not aware of that.

17678. Was it before his coming to Castle-street that your father was born?—I am speaking now of my maternal grandfather.

17679. Then your paternal grandfather was not free at all?—No.

17680. Then the way in which you were admitted by birth was by being the grandson of a freeman in the maternal line?—Yes.

17681. Your father was not free of the corporation of Dublin?—No.

17682. And your grandfather, Price, was not free of the corporation?—No.

17683. Then it was your mother's father that was free of the corporation?—

17684. Henry Hall is married to your sister?—He is.

17685. Was he married in his mother's lifetime?—No.

17686. How long has he been married to your sister?—I think about a twelve month ago this month.

17687. Is he still in Carolin's employ, till he came here?—No.

17688. Is he in any employment?—He was in Mr. Armstrong's employment.

17689. Who is Mr. Armstrong?—A builder.

17690. How long was he in Mr. Armstrong's employment?—I think, two or three months.

17691. Has not he been in any employ since he left Mr. Armstrong?—He left Mr. Armstrong to come here.

17692. Did he go from Carolin's to Armstrong?—No, he was with another person; he was conducting business for Mr. Battersby.

17693. Did he go from Carolin's to Mr. Battersby?—Yes, he did.

17694. And from Battersby to Armstrong?—Yes.

17695. Do you know when your maternal grandfather died?—I do not recollect the time.

17696. Do you recollect him at all?—No.

17697. Was he dead before you were born, according to the reputation of the family?—He was.

17698. Was he dead several years before you were born?—I dare say six or seven years.

17699. You say that from the repute of your father and mother?—Yes.

17700. Is your mother living?—She is.

17701. Did you ever hear of anybody except yourself for whom the right was claimed through his mother?—No, I did not.

17703. Mr.

Mr. Henry Price.

15 June 1837.

17703. Mr. O'Connell.] You registered as a freeman by birth?—Yes.

17704. Were you ever at the guild?—I was.

17705. Were you sworn in there?—I was.

17706. Was not that after you were sworn in, in the city at large; was not it after last October?—I think it was.

17707. Are not you convinced that it is not 12 months since you were sworn in?—It is not 12 months.

17708. Then must it not have been since October?—Yes; I attended upon a summons from the guild.

17709. And that was after the letter that you got from the Protestant Registry Association?—I think it was.

17710. You heard nothing at all of your passing the city at large till you got that notice to go and be sworn?—Nothing.

17711. Who went with you to be sworn?—I went by myself.

17712. Was Mr. Collison attending there?—I saw Mr. Collison in the room.

17713. What did you pay for being sworn?—I paid for my certificate 1 s.

17714. Did you pay anything else?—I paid the fees to the clerk of the guild; Henzell, the clerk of the guild, called upon me for the amount.

17715. How much did you pay?—I think it was 12 s. 6 d.; and the day I attended the guild to be sworn in I gave the beadle 2 s. 6 d.

George Archer, Esq., called in; and further Examined.

G. Archer, Esq.

17716. Mr. O'Connell.] HAVE you the beseeches for the Michaelmas quarter 1836?—I have.

17717. Were you rightly understood to say that being the son of a freeman was that which gave a claim by birth, provided the father had been 21 years free?—Yes.

17718. Have you introduced the right of grandsons?—Yes.

17719. When did you introduce that?—A long time; I cannot say how long.

17720. Do you mean grandsons maternally as well as paternally?—No.

17721. The grandson in the male line only?—Yes.

17722. Have you ever known an instance before the Reform Bill of anybody claiming as grandson in the female line?—No.

17723. Have you since the Reform Bill?—I have.

17724. So that there has been introduced since the Reform Bill the right of birth through the maternal line?—Yes.

17725. Will you look at the beseech of Mr. Henry Price, in Michaelmas 1836?—[The Witness referred to the same.]

17726. When was the first person who was made free under the claim of birth in right of the maternal line?—I could not say; it was subsequent to the Reform Bill.

17727. Chairman.] Can you state how many persons have been admitted as freemen since the passing of the Reform Bill under that right?—By going through all the beseeches it would be possible to find it out.

17728. Mr. O'Connell.] The entry is: "Henry Price, of ——, saddler, to be admitted by birth, being the grandson of the late Barnaby Gomme, who claimed in the Michaelmas assembly 1768, by service." Were you apprized that Henry Price was not born during the lifetime of his grandfather?—I cannot say that.

17729. Would not that make a difference?—I do not think it would.

17730. Here is another, Mr. Sherwood, of Burland, the grandson of John Curtis; that, of course, was in the maternal line?—Yes, from the alteration of name it would appear so.

17731. Do you know who it was that first suggested the making grandchildren in the maternal line free of the corporation by birth?—I do not.

17732. Who could have certified for Mr. Price if he did not look for his freedom himself?—I cannot charge my recollection now who could have certified for him; he must have entered the minor corporation under that claim, and the same proceeding must have gone forward with respect to his claim as in any other case.

17733. You were not apprized of the fact that he had not been looking for the freedom himself, but that it was done without his knowledge?—No.

G. Archer, Esq.

15 June 1837.

17734. Chairman.] Your simple duty was to ascertain whether he had a right to be admitted or not?—Yes.

17735. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you think that it was about two years after the Reform Bill before any claim in the maternal line was admitted?—I think it was, but the return would show that.

17736. Were you professionally called upon to express an opinion as to that right?—No, I was not.

17737. Mr. O'Connell.] Were not they endeavouring to make as many freemen as they could?—I certainly think there was that anxiety; I said so before.

17738. Mr. Hamilton.] Are you now prepared to deliver in a statement of the number of electors in the city of Dublin up to the 31st of January last?—I am.

[The Witness delivered in the same.]

Mr. Henry Price, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. Henry Price.

17739. WHAT was the Christian name of your mother's father?—I think it was Henry; I think his name was Henry Gomme.

17740. That is the name that you heard from your mother that he was called?—I think it was, but I could very easily ascertain.

17741. Would you be surprised if his name was Barnaby?—I am not certain.

17742. Did you ever hear Barnaby given as his name?—Perhaps I was confusing the name of an uncle of mine and my grandfather's, but I was under the impression that my grandfather's name was Henry.

17743. Mr. Hamilton.] Are there any of the brothers of your mother alive now?—There are.

17744. Mr. O'Connell.] What are their names?—One George and the other Thomas.

17745. What was your grandfather?—He was a saddler.

17746. Where did he live?—I think in Castle-street.

17748. How old are you?—I am 27.

17749. Was it in Dublin you were instructed in chemistry?—It was.

17750. Did you serve your time to anybody?—I did.

17751. To whom?—To my uncle.

17752. What is his Christian name?—James Price.

17753. He is a chemist also?—Yes.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. William Jordan Lambert, called in; and further Examined.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

16 June 1837.

17754. Mr. O'Connell.] ARE the Committee to understand that all the entries which were read out of your books previous to the Reform Bill, giving a right by birth, are entries of the son; that is to say, the person claiming by birth claimed as the son of a free brother?—Not invariably; there are grandsons; but I cannot give the Committee good information upon that, for I was only clerk a short time previous to the Reform Bill.

17755. Were not all the admissions by birth before the Reform Act, admissions in right of the father, or paternal grandfather?—I looked accurately to that so far far as 1811, and there appear very few, if any, claiming by the grandfather; I think there are some maternal.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

16 June 1837.

17756. Can you show any?—Unless I had the books, I could not lay my hand upon any: but it strikes me that there are some instances. I mentioned on the last day that there are several persons that have come in by maternal and paternal right. For instance, I perceive there are two of my father's workmen, the two Woolleys, locksmiths, and a Mr. F. Bentley. But the clerk of the guild of that day did not set forth as of what right; he merely said, "The following persons were admitted by birth," without particularizing upon the transaction book out of what right derivable, that is setting forth the name of the party from whom they claimed the right; by which means, as I mentioned the last day, there is no way of ascertaining but by the copies of the petitions, which Mr. Pattison always sets forth to the council of the house: the petition of A. B., claiming a right by birth as the son or grandson of such a person; and then in the petition, the right derivable is set forth, though I perceive it is not in the year 1825 entered in the book. The clerk of the guild was a very irregular person, and, as it appears, a very ignorant person.

17757. Are the petitions preserved that those persons presented?—I should think many of them are in the box; I have some of them.

17758. Have you those of 1825?—I think I have.

17759. Do you mean that you have them here?—No, certainly not; they were written for four days ago; I think they will be on their way, for a great part of them lie in my own house, and I desired my mother to forward them.

17760. Chairman.] With regard to the two individuals whose names you alluded to before, of the name of Woolley, can you state of your own knowledge, though not officially, under what right they derived their claim?—I could not say positively without I had the documents.

17761. Mr. O'Connell.] Ought there not to be a document showing in what way they claimed to be allowed to prosecute their freedom?—And such a document was in existence, or they never could have got their freedom at the time.

17762. And if it be in existence you will take care that the Committee shall have it?—If I have it they shall; and there is one gentleman, Mr. William Bentley, who is entered as claiming by birth. Now, I know he claimed as a grandson.

17763. Do you know whether maternal or paternal?—Maternal; for his grandfather had a remarkable christian name. His father's name was Esaias; and there are some that derive by maternal right, that I can speak to from knowing the parties. I think my father made one or two of the Woolleys free, being grandsons of a freeman, for the purpose of getting them to vote; but this is only my recollection, but I can speak positively to Bentley.

17764. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you state positively that the extraordinary name was that of the grandfather?—I can say that it was stated so; and it will appear in another entry in the book when he was sworn in, that he was sworn in as a grandson. In the return which has been delivered in to the Committee, I find these cases in 1829, on July the 29th: "William Williams, grandson of Ralph Williams; Robert Warren, grandson of Nathaniel Warren, and William Geary, grandson of Timothy Geary."

17765. Mr. Lefroy.] Had you no beseeches prior to 1811?—I think there are some that are printed and filled up.

17766. Mr. O'Connell.] The entry with respect to Williams in that bill, is under the date of the 30th of July 1830?—It is.

17767. And it runs as follows: "It is moved and seconded, that the council of the house retire to transact such business as may be necessary; which being complied with, the council of the house return to the hall and submit petitions of the following persons which have been approved of by them, to the brethren at large, for their sanction to prosecute their freedom in this guild, each petition being read and the question put separately thereon; namely, John Bennet, as the son of our late brother Thomas Bennet, passed by birth and allowed to prosecute his freedom accordingly." Is not the next person the William Williams you spoke of?—Yes.

17768. "William Williams, as the grandson of brother Ralph Williams, passed by birth and allowed to prosecute his freedom accordingly."—Yes.

17769. Then there is William Orpen, as son; Thomas Clements, as son; William Anderson, junior, as son; "Robert Warren, as grandson of the late

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

16 June 1837.

Nathaniel Warren, who was a brother of this guild, allowed to prosecute his freedom accordingly?"—Yes.

17770. Then there is "Thomas Paine, of Henry-street, as being married to the daughter of a free brother of this guild before his said daughter was born; passed by birth or marriage and allowed to prosecute his freedom accordingly?"—Mr. Allen can explain that. At one time there was an idea of coming in by being married to a daughter, and they put it upon birth or marriage. There is another of the same date: "William Leeper, as being married to the daughter of Richard Whittaker, who was a free brother of our guild before his said daughter was born; passed by birth or marriage and allowed to prosecute his freedom accordingly?"—Yes.

17771. Does not it contain also this entry: "The petition of Francis Dowling, glazier, as having served his apprenticeship to brother John Hodges, who was a freeman of this guild before the said Francis Dowling was bound an apprentice, passed the council of the house; and the same being submitted to the corporation at large was rejected, on the ground of its being proved in the hall that he had preferred the Roman Catholic religion to that of the Protestant, which latter he was when bound an apprentice?"—Yes. It was considered that Mr. Hodges had violated the principles of his oath by taking a Roman Catholic apprentice. There was a great desire to admit him; they said at one time, out of compliment to Mr. Hodges, that he should be admitted, and then they found afterwards that it could not be shown that he was a Protestant when he was bound.

17772. It appears that he was "rejected upon the ground of its being proved in the hall that he had preferred the Roman Catholic religion to that of the Protestant, which the latter he was when bound an apprentice;" so that, what was proved was, that he was a Protestant when bound an apprentice, and that he became a Roman Catholic afterwards?—What I have stated was the fact; I do not know how it may be entered, but I recollect the matter making a very great noise.

17773. Were you clerk of the guild at that time?—No, I was not. The present lord mayor was anxious because we were afraid, as was the fact, that he could be forced into the guild by applying to the Court of King's Bench.

17774. Mr. M. J. O'Connell.] Do you mean that he was refused rather as a censure upon Mr. Hodges, for having violated the rule of the guild, than as a censure upon the party himself?—Upon both grounds. It is not likely that a Roman Catholic would get into the guild without it had been ascertained that he could compel us.

17775. Mr. O'Connell.] But, in point of fact, you have not admitted any Roman Catholic?—The two Adcocks and Henderson were Roman Catholics, and took the oaths accordingly.

17776. Chairman.] You have no doubt that this entry was made at the time, and that it is in the handwriting of the then clerk of the guild?—Decidedly.

17777. Mr. Lefroy.] In what respect do you say it is a mistaken entry?—I recollect being in the hall; he passed the council of the house, and then some one stood up in the hall, and pointed out that he was a Roman Catholic, and objected to his admission upon those grounds. Mr. Hodges said then, that he would certainly push him, for he was a well-conducted man, and some conversation then took place as to whether Mr. Hodges had not acted incorrectly in the spirit of his oath in taking him apprentice.

17778. Mr. O'Connell.] That oath is positive, not to take a Roman Catholic apprentice?—It is, "That you shall not take an apprentice of the Roman Catholic religion."

17779. Mr. Lefroy.] In what respect is the entry in that book incorrect?—I say as the word "latter" refers to his being a Protestant when bound, I think there must be a mistake, because the feeling was, that he was a Roman Catholic when he was bound, or Mr. Hodges would not have any blame at all.

17780. Mr. O'Connell.] But the entry is directly the reverse?—It is; and I would abide by the books in giving evidence.

17781. The book says that Dowling was rejected upon the ground of its being proved in the hall, that he had "preferred the Roman Catholic religion to that of the Protestant, which latter he was when bound an apprentice." Does not the word "preferred" show clearly that he had been a Protestant at one time, and that he afterwards became a Roman Catholic?—Yes; I know that it was often often afterwards suggested to Mr. Hodges to bring him forward again if he paid the fees, upon which he would get it.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

16 June 1837.

17782. But as he could not pass the city, it would not be worth his while?—I do not think the city would refuse him now if he passed our guild, because the feeling has changed very much since that time.

17783. Under this oath, "You shall not take an apprentice but of the Protestant religion, and for no less term than seven years; the same to be bound or enrolled by the clerk of the guild for the time being:" do you interpret the Protestant religion, to be any person that is not a Roman Catholic, no matter whether he be a Presbyterian or a member of the Established Church?—I would say so. I would say any person, who I understand in the meaning of a Protestant, not being of the church of Rome.

17784. It is not construed to be limited to a Protestant of the Established Church?—By no means; we have a great number of Presbyterians.

17785. And Protestants of all kinds?—Yes; and Baptists, and Seceders, and Methodists.

17786. And Unitarians?—I do not think we have any Unitarians.

17787. Chairman.] All you know of it is, that a person entering your guild does not profess the Roman Catholic religion?—If a Roman Catholic, or if twenty Roman Catholics came to me now, applying to come into the corporation of smiths, by birth, service or marriage, I would at once advise them to make a claim, and possibly, if it were put to vote, they would admit them, for we could not resist them.

17788. Can you discover to what particular form of the Protestant religion a person applying to you for admission to the guild belongs?—I never asked once.

17789. All that you ascertain is, that he does not belong to the Roman Catholic religion?—Not at all; this is only applicable to masters taking apprentices, not to any other claim whatever; and even though he did take an apprentice, as was seen in the case of Henderson, as it appears upon the entry in the book, we would admit him, for we know that we could not resist him.

17790. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you swear any other oath to each person admitted into the guild?—He takes the oath of abjuration.

17791. And a declaration against the mass, and the invocation of saints?—Protestants take it.

17792. Mr. Hogg.] The effect of that would be to exclude Roman Catholics from being admitted by service?—It would depend upon the way in which the master would view the taking of that oath.

17793.] A rigid adherence to that oath would exclude Roman Catholics from being admitted by service?—Not their admission; even though they were Roman Catholics, I think we would be obliged to admit them.

17794. If a master, notwithstanding that oath, took an apprentice that was a Roman Catholic, still he might be admitted?—The moral guilt would be solely thrown upon him.

17795. There would be no legal exclusion?—No.

17796. Mr. Hamilton.] Suppose a Protestant apprentice became a Roman Catholic subsequent to his apprenticeship, would there be any blame upon the master?—No blame upon the master whatever.

17797. With respect to the oath of abjuration, and the declaration against the invocation of saints, is there not a provision in the Act of 1793, exempting Roman Catholics from it?—Yes; I would not administer it to Roman Catholics.

17798. So that the oath by which Roman Catholics would be excluded was not administered?—No.

17799. Mr. O'Connell.] You have produced a book entitled, "Rules and Bye Laws of the Corporation of Smiths"?—Yes, this book was submitted, as it states, by the committee.

17800. Chairman.] What is the date of the publication of that book?—1817. The committee met, and they drew up all those rules and bye-laws, and directed them to be printed; but I understand that though they really contain the spirit of our bye-laws, they did not pass the hall in this form.

17801. Therefore that book in that form has never been sanctioned by the corporation of smiths?—Never, though it contains the spirit of the rules.

17802. Mr. Hogg.] That is the substance of the bye-laws in a convenient form

Mr. W. J. Lamber

form for practical use, though it has not actually received legal sanction?—I understand since I came over that it has not received their sanction.

17803. Mr. Hamilton.] Is there any entry in the books of the corporation respecting this?—Yes. At the time that the Committee was appointed, in page 51, 9th January 1817, the following resolution was also moved and seconded: "Resolved, that the council of the House, or a committee thereof, be summoned to take into consideration the bye-laws of the corporation, and to arrange the same so as to form a more perfect code; and that the same, when sanctioned by the corporation at large, be printed for the use of the members of the guild, and that they do report to the corporation on its next sitting. The following persons were then appointed of the Committee," and it then recites the names as in the printed book.

17804. Is there any other entry subsequently?—Then "Thursday, 10th April 1817, the Committee appointed on the last quarter-day to revise the bye-laws of this guild made their report; ordered, that the same do lie upon the table until the next quarter day." Then the next quarter day comes, Wednesday, 18th June 1817. The hall was then adjourned to another day; and upon the adjourned day there is no notice taken of the rules and regulations.

Lunæ, 19° die Junii, 1837.

MEMBERS PRESENT.

Mr. Milnes Gaskell.
Mr. Hamilton.
Mr. Hogg.
Mr. Serjeant Jackson.
Mr. Lefroy.
Mr. O'Connell.
Mr. Morgan John O'Connell.
Lord Granville Somerset.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. George Irwin, called in; and Examined.

Mr. G. Irwin.

19 June 1836.

17805. Chairman.] WHAT are you?—I am a solicitor.

17806. Are you clerk to any guild in Dublin?—I am.

17807. Which guild?—The tanners and the weavers.

17808. Mr. O'Connell.] Then you are clerk to two guilds?—I am.

17809. Chairman.] Have you any books belonging to those guilds with you in London?—I have.

17810. What books?—I have the transaction book of the weavers, and also a stamp book of admissions.

17811. And with regard to the tanners, have you any books?—Yes; the transaction book of that body, and the list of the brethren.

17812. Have you got them with you?—They are at my lodgings in John-street.

17813. Mr. O'Connell.] Is the oath of a freeman of your guild in any of the books which you have?—Yes, I have a book of that sort.

17814. Does it contain the freeman's oath?—Yes.

[The Witness was directed to go and fetch the Books.]

17815. How long have you been clerk of the guild of tanners?—About 30 years.

17816. You were sworn into your office on the 8th of November 1808?—I was so.

17817. Were you free of the guild before that?—I was.

17818. Do you produce the transaction book beginning 5th of November 1816?—I have one before that.

17819. This book contains copies of the charters, does it not?—Yes.

17820. And it also contains copies of the oath taken by every brother of your guild?—It does.

17821. This is the oath, is it not: "You shall swear to bear faith and true allegiance to our Sovereign Lord the King (naming him), his heirs and successors, and be obedient to the master and wardens of this corporation, and to the true and just government thereof; you shall give due attendance every quarter-day and other days of attendance that you shall be thereunto warned, except sickness (or some other lawful excuse); you shall duly pay your quarterages and all other fines laid on you by said corporation; you shall not commit any manner of contempt against the said master and wardens, or give counsel so to do; the master's lawful commands you shall observe; you shall not refuse any office the house thinks you fit to serve, nor take any apprentice for less than seven years, and enrol him within the first six months of his time; and, according to your power and knowledge, shall do and perform all other acts and things that belong to a brother of this corporation, So help you God." That is the freeman's oath?—Yes.

Mr. G. Irwin.

17822. Have you an enrolment book of apprentices?—No.

17823. Has there been any such enrolment book in your time?—No, none.

17824. Then this oath for enrolling apprentices has not been observed; in your time, no apprentice has been enrolled?—I believe not; I do not believe any apprentice has been taken all that time in the guild of tanners; they got apprentices in another way, and common servants and labourers; I do not know of either a tanner or a weaver during that time.

17825. How many claims for freedom are there in your guild of tanners?—Very few.

17826. Show me the entries of freemen being admitted in the guild of tanners; have you any such?—I have.

17827. How many constitute the guild of tanners?—Twenty-four.

17828. There are only 24 in the guild of tanners?—No.

17829. How many representatives have you in the common council?—Only two.

17830. Then do you annually elect a master and wardens?—Yes.

17831. Have you any property?—No, indeed; what property there is is raised from the subscriptions and quarterages.

17832. When did you make that list of the corporation of tanners?—In 1832; I have made no list since.

17833. Now show me the earliest admission in your book of any man to the freedom?—The first I have is in the year 1733, I think.

17834. Does nothing appear of him but his name?—Nothing there.

17835. Does it anywhere else?—Yes, it does in the resolution of admission, that is the signature when they are sworn into the corporation.

17836. Now show me the resolution of the admission of that man?—What is the date?

17837. 1734, you said; the 5th November 1734?—I have not that here.

17838. Are all your guild Protestants?—They are.

17839. For how long back have you enrolments?—I have enrolments going back as far as 1743, but I have not the book here.

17840. Now I will give you one in 1743?—I have 1732 here.

17841. Well, then, if you have 1732 you must have 1734; perhaps you do not know it, but 1734 was before 1732?—I have enrolments here from 1732.

17842. Have you any book in 1744?—I have in 1744.

17843. Will you look for May 5th 1747?—"At a hall held for the corporation of tanners, Dublin, on Tuesday, the 5th of May 1747, being quarter day, present the master, wardens and several of the brethren, Mr. George Bambruck, having been formerly admitted, was this day sworn free of said corporation, and gave bond to stand to the laws of the house, and to serve offices."

17844. Now can you find out when that man was admitted?—Perhaps by referring back a day or two before that; they are generally sworn a day or two after they are admitted.

17845. Mr. Hamilton.] Has such a bond been given in your time?—No.

17846. Do you happen to know the nature of the bond?—I do; to abide by the laws of the house, and pay quarterage, and to fill any office imposed upon them.

17847. Was that a qualified or a full admission of freedom when a bond was given?—When a man gave a bond, he signed it at the same time as he was sworn in.

17848. When he became, to all intents and purposes, a freeman?—Yes.

17849. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you swear any man in before he has passed the city at large?—No, not in my time.

17850. Then can you show me any admission; I find that a Mr. Thomas Birbeck

301

Mr. G. Irwin.

19 June 1837.

Birbeck and Mr. Thomas White were sworn in the 13th of May 1747; now look back, and see if you find either the admission of Birbeck or White?—Those are the only two I find the actual admissions of. I got several since.

17851. Now, the first two admissions you find in this book are they not these: "At a hall held for the corporation of tanners, 7th February 1743, Mr. John Barber presented a petition, praying to be admitted a free brother of said corporation, which was left as usual to four brothers, the council of the house, who brought him in to pay 1 l. 2 s. 9 d., and a treat, left to himself, which he accepted of, and gave bond to stand to the laws of the house, and to pay 10 l. whenever he follows the tanning trade in the city of Dublin or suburbs thereunto adjoining, and was accordingly sworn a brother of said corporation." That appears to be the first entry of a freeman?—Yes, in that book.

17852. And this is the second: "At a hall held for the corporation of tanners, Dublin, on Thursday, the 18th of April 1745, present the master, wardens and several of the brothers, Mr. Isaac Dickinson, currier, petitioner to be admitted a free brother of said corporation, and was brought in to pay 1 l. 2 s. 9 d. sterling, and not to serve any office in the said corporation for the space of five years, which he accepted of; at the same time, Mr. John Andoe, distiller, was admitted to quarterage, at 7 s. 6 d. a quarter, during the pleasure of said corporation." What is the meaning of admitted to quarterage?—I should suppose, from what I heard people say, that persons who were not tanners by trade did the business, and the same thing refers to the weavers; that a person who was not in the trade of a tanner, for following the trade used to pay a quarterly sum to make him what is called a quarterly brother, entitled to use the trade.

17853. How many have you made free since the Reform Bill, do you think?—One, I believe.

17854. Only one?—Counsellor Peile, son of the surgeon.

17855. Then you have made nobody else since the Reform Bill?—Nobody.

17856. I perceive that your corporation has for many years done very little but meet to adjourn?—Scarcely anything.

17857. Excepting electing representatives to the corporation at large?—They meet on other occasions on matters of trade.

17858. Have you any salary as clerk to the tanners?—No, I have no salary.

17859. Have you any emoluments?—Some small fees.

17860. What do you estimate they amount to annually?—Under 5 l.

17861. Now is the weavers a more numerous corporation?—It is.

17862. How long have you been clerk of the guild of weavers?—Nearly the same time, rather longer of the two, I believe.

17863. Have you any enrolment book of the guild of weavers for enrolling apprentices?—No.

17864. Do you enrol apprentices in that guild at all?—There was not a second enrolled.

17865. Was there any one enrolled?—Yes, one person.

17866. Who was he?—Really I forget the name, it is many years ago.

17867. In what was he enrolled?—In a transaction book of the corporation.

17868. Can you show me that enrolment?—I cannot.

17869. Have you the book here containing it?—I have not.

17870. In the weavers you admit the claims to freedom by birth, do you not?—Yes.

17871. By service?—Yes.

17872. By marriage?—Yes.

17873. And by grace especial?—No, not since the Reform Bill.

17874. But before the Reform Bill, did you?—Before the Reform Bill we did.

17875. But since that you do not admit any by grace especial at all?—No, not any.

17877. Well, what is the other way?—The other way is: a member stands up and proposes such a person to become free, without its being reduced to a petition. I propose

I propose such a one to become free, free born of such and such a person, or having served his apprenticeship, and on this being vouched by faithworthy brethren, persons who vouch for the fact that they know it, he is admitted.

17878. And if there be an opposition to him, how is it decided?—It is put to the question of ayes and noes; the master puts the question, when it is spoke to, that this person do pass, and then it is decided by the ayes and noes.

17879. If any body, if two persons desire a ballot, are they entitled to a ballot upon it?—They are, if they require it.

17880. And that ballot would be a secret ballot, would it not?—It is by beans.

17881. Nobody would know what reason induced any person to vote by ballot, or how he voted?—They are always very candid in stating their objections.

17882. And having passed your guild in that way, do you swear them in immediately?—No.

17883. What delay intervenes?—A very short time; that transaction takes place at the quarterly meeting of the guild; as soon as they pass the corporation, there is a certificate granted of it, signed by the master and wardens and clerk.

17884. As soon as they pass the guild of weavers, they get a certificate?—Yes.

17885. Well, they are not sworn in upon that certificate?—No, the certificate is to the lord mayor of the city, certifying that they have passed the guild; then they go before the lord mayor and aldermen and council at the quarterly assembly.

17886. Now, if rejected by the lord mayor and council, do they come back to you to be sworn?—No, there is an end of it if they are rejected by them.

17887. But if they are admitted, and in that case only they come back?—With a certificate and we swear them.

17888. So that the freedom of your guild depends altogether, the completion of it depends altogether on the decision of the corporation of the city at large?—It does, and most of the other corporations, I believe.

17889. Show me the oath taken in this guild of weavers. [It was handed to Mr. O'Connell.]

17890. Is the guild of weavers numerous?—Indeed they are.

17891. Have you admitted more since the Reform Bill than you did before?—I think we have; perhaps more.

17892. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Have you any idea how many persons have been admitted as of right to the freedom of the corporation of weavers since the Reform Bill?—I should not be surprised if there were 60 or more.

17893. Can you inform us how many of those may have been admitted by servitude?—Yes, I could, and by birth.

17894. Tell us how many have been admitted by service since the Reform Bill?—On the 2d of April 1832, Matthew Singleton was admitted by birth.

17895. I want to know how many were admitted by service since the Reform Bill?—J. P. Green, admitted by service, July 1832.

17896. Well, that is one?—Joseph Long, by service.

17897. Mr. O'Connell.] What are you reading from?—From the entry of their admission.

17898. The stamped entry?—Yes.

17899. Does it appear by that when they were admitted?—It does; some of these are not sworn in; some persons who were admitted on stamps were not sworn in.

17900. Who paid for the stamps if they were not sworn in?—The party himself pays it on the proposal. Matthew Lynch, by service.

17901. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Is that three?—That is three. James Shaw, by service.

17902. That is four.—William Dunn, by service.

17903. That is five.—Patrick Parnell, by service; Benjamin Wray, by service; George Henry Adins, by service: that is all.

17904. Then there have been nine now by service since the Reform Bill passed?—Yes.

17905. Were they more numerous before or since the passing of the Reform Bill, those who claim of right?—Much on an average.

17906. Do they require, when they admit in right of service, the production of the indentures in your guild?—They do; they always ask for the indentures.

Mr. G. Irwin.

19 June 1837.

17907. Are they always produced?—They are not always produced.

17908. Would it be fatal to the claim in your guild if it were not produced?—No, it would not; for after they pass our guild, and go to the corporation of the city, there is a jury empannelled to inquire into the service, and they ascertain the validity of the service by the indenture, or, by the loss of it, if it is proved before them on oath; a jury of freemen.

17909. And have you ever known any case where a party was admitted on proof of seven years' service without the production of the indentures, or the proof of the loss of the indentures?—No, never.

17910. Are you always present at the admission?—Very often, I am.

17911. Mr. O'Connell.] Then perhaps the one or the other is necessary, either to produce it, or to prove it existed, and was lost?—It is.

17912. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do they require they should have been enrolled?—No, indeed, they do not require to be enrolled.

17913. I think you said there was only one case in your memory where they had been enrolled?—I only recollect one case; there is a small fee paid on the enrolment, and they wish to save the small fee; that is the fact.

17914. How much is that?—Five shillings and sixpence.

17915. And it has not been the usage to enrol, except upon one occasion that you mentioned?—I never recollect a second.

17916. Did you state at what period you commenced to be clerk of this guild?—About the same time as the other.

17917. And have you been acting uniformly in both the guilds since?—I have.

17918. Personally, and not by deputy?—Personally.

17919. So that you have been privy to the transactions of both guilds for that period?—I do not suppose I have been five times absent from both corporations for 30 years.

17920. Mr. O'Connell.] When were you sworn in as an attorney?—In 1796.

17921. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Is the course the same in the tanners as to admissions?—Just the same.

17922. Do the tanners require that there should be a service under indenture?—I do not know a single apprentice in the tanners; they employ people of different descriptions.

17923. Did you ever know an admission of right into the tanners at all?—By birth, several.

17924. By marriage?—And by marriage; yes, one marriage, a Mr. Atkinson, who was married to a daughter of Mr. Ord of Cork-street.

17925. How long ago is it since he was admitted?—More than 20 years ago.

17926. Is he a tanner?—He was; he is dead; his son is a tanner and master of the guild.

17927. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Would you be able to turn to the admission of that gentleman who married the daughter of Mr. Ord?—I would.

17928. Can you specify in each case the right in respect of which the party was admitted?—Yes.

17929. Mr. Hogg.] Is it the usage for tanners to take apprentices in Dublin?—I believe not; I do not know of any that have taken apprentices.

17930. Then you do not believe that in Dublin it is the usage for tanners to take apprentices like other tradesmen?—I believe not; I do not think it is.

17931. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Is the tanning a declining branch of trade in Dublin?—I think it is; there are very few of the trade in Dublin.

17932. Has it ever been in a more flourishing condition than it is now within your memory?—I cannot say, for it has been on the decline ever since I knew it.

17933. Mr. O'Connell.] Has it not increased since the taking off the excise?—I do not know, indeed.

17934. Do you not know enough of it to say that?—No, I do not.

17935. When was Atkinson admitted?—Atkinson was admitted in 1819, by marriage.

17936. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Just read the entry of his admission?—"John Mathers Atkinson, of Blessington-street, tanner, be admitted free of this guild by grace especial, being married to Martha Ord, the free-born daughter of our late much respected master, Thomas Ord, deceased."

17937. Now your entry there is by grace especial?—Yes; at that period the city of Dublin would not recognize the right of marriage, and it was mentioned to be by grace especial.

Mr. G. Irwin.

19 June 1837.

17938. Mr. O'Connell.] And did not recognize it till after the Reform Bill?—Yes, long before that.

17939. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] It appears this entry is made by you?—Yes.

17940. I perceive that the admission here, "admitted free by grace especial," as you read it, is "grace e" and written on an erasure?—Is it so?

17941. Have the goodness to see how that is?—"Grace especial;" no, I do not think it is on an erasure.

17942. Mr. O'Connell.] There is no fraud; it is a fair entry?—It is.

17943. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] I do not impute any fraud at all; but look at that now a little carefully, and tell me whether there was not something else written on that, and whether the colour of the ink is not different; whether it is not written on an erasure?—I do not think there is an erasure.

17944. Did you not write that yourself?—I did, just as it stands there.

17945. Will you see whether "right" did not originally stand on the same space as is now occupied by "grace e"?—I never made an entry in my life by right in those words.

17946. Are you sure of that?—I am.

17947. You say that, before the passing of the Reform Bill, they did acknowledge the right of marriage?—They did.

17948. How long before the passing of the Reform Bill?—I believe shortly after that time they admitted the right of freedom by marriage.

17949. Did you not say, in answer to a question by the learned Member for Kilkenny, that before the passing of the Reform Bill, they did acknowledge the right of marriage?—I know they made objections to it.

17950. Did you not say they acknowledged the right of marriage before the passing of the Reform Bill?—I think I may have said it.

17951. Do you say it now?—Indeed I think so; that strengthens my mind on the subject, because that was before the Reform Bill, a long time.

17952. Mr. O'Connell.] Atkinson's entry is before the Reform Bill?—Yes.

17953. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you not see the way it is entered; there is "grace e"?—That is grace especial.

17954. Did you not say that they acknowledged the right of marriage before the passing of the Reform Bill?—I really cannot say that; I know, at some period, they had an objection to admit persons by marriage—the corporation of the city.

17955. Did they get over that objection before 1832?—Certainly they did.

17956. And have you known persons admitted in right of marriage before 1832?—I have, long previously.

17957. Mr. O'Connell.] In the corporation at large?—Yes; for instance, I recollect a person of the name of Rounds, and a person of the name of Coyle, an attorney; he came in in right of his wife.

17958. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] And were they admitted in that right?—By marriage; yes.

17959. Mr. O'Connell.] In what corporation?—The guild of weavers.

17960. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You have a distinct recollection of that?—I have.

17961. Of both those cases?—Of both those cases.

17962. Do you state that those are the only cases in which they were admitted in respect of that right?—No; I think there was another person, of the name of Lacy, who lived in Castle-street; he was also admitted in right of his wife, and that was a great many years before the Reform Bill.

17963. Can you give the periods at which those three persons that you have respectively named were admitted?—I cannot.

17964. Mr. O'Connell.] Are they not in your book?—That book is not here.

17965. Who has that book?—The master has it; I expect I shall have it to-morrow or the day after.

Mr. Hamilton.] Refer to the entry of Edward Singleton, of Cork-street, in January 1822, and tell me in what he was admitted.

17966. Chairman.] What book is that?—A memorandum book.

17967. Is that book correct in its entries?—Yes.

17968. Mr. O'Connell.] Is that the original book of entries?—That is a kind of blotter.

17969. Chairman.] Are those entries in your handwriting?—They are.

17970. Mr. Hamilton.] Referring to that book, tell me in what right Edward Singleton

Mr. G. Irwin.

19 June 1837.

Singleton was admitted?—As being married to Sarah, the free-born daughter of Isaac Harrison, late a free brother.

17971. In right of marriage?—Yes.

17972. Can you state whether he passed the corporation at large?—He did.

17973. Mr. O'Connell.] Is the book to be produced here that contains the entry taken from that blotter?—The book is here; I am going to refer to it.

17974. Now you are going to refer to a book that shows how much you received; are you going to refer to the transaction book?—I am going to refer to the stamp admissions.

17975. No, but the transaction book; have you that here?—Yes, I have that here. "1st January 1822, Edward Singleton, of Cork-street, weaver, by marriage, he being married to Sarah, the free-born daughter of Isaac Harrison, late a free brother."

17976. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you state whether he passed the corporation at large?—He did, and is a member of the corporation at this moment.

17977. Now, would you refer to an entry under the date of 1st July 1820, of the admission of Robert Hovingdon?—"Robert Hovingdon, of the Coombe, by birth, he being married to Sarah, the daughter of Isaac Harrison."

17978. Chairman.] When he is stated to be free by birth, having married the daughter of so and so, does that intend to state that his freedom is derived from his wife?—By marriage; yes.

17979. Mr. Hamilton.] His wife being entitled to her freedom by birth?—Yes; being the free-born daughter of Isaac Harrison.

17980. Now refer to the case of Joseph Sinclair Mayne, of the same date, and tell me in what right he was admitted?—"Joseph Sinclair Mayne, proposed to become free by birth, he being married to Rachel, the daughter of Joshua Lacy, a free brother."

17981. Now refer to the admission of Richard Austin of Sackville-street, the 2d of October 1820, and state in what right he was admitted?—"Richard Austin, of Sackville-street, proposed to become free, he being married to Mary, the daughter of Patrick Kirwan, a free brother by birth; admitted."

17982. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you the stamped admissions of these people?—I have.

17983. Show me them.—I will.

17984. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are you the person accountable to the stamp department for these stamps?—No; they are paid to the master, and the master pays them into the Stamp-office; I have not the book of stamps before 1821.

17985. Mr. O'Connell.] Where is the former book of stamps before that?—That is in the corporation.

17986. Chairman.] Now, can you state whether these two persons, Mayne and Hovingdon, were admitted into your guild, and sworn in?—I have not here the transaction book of that date.

17987. But does the transaction book prove they were admitted into the corporation of the city of Dublin at large, and eventually sworn into your guild?—No, that is not an evidence of that. The roll on which the parties are sworn is signed by them when they come back to the corporation.

17988. Who has got that?—It is in the hands of the master; it will be here to-morrow, or the day after.

17989. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you state whether they were admitted into the corporation at large?—I know they are members of the corporation at this moment.

17990. Now turn to the entry under the date of 1st April 1824, and tell me in what right William Sinton, of the Corn-market, was admitted?—"William Sinton, of Corn-market, weaver, be admitted free of this corporation, he being married to Anna, the free-born daughter of Joshua Jackson, late a free brother."

17991. Chairman.] Then I perceive by that entry that in this guild they admit the rights of granddaughters?—They do.

17992. Now do you know whether that individual was admitted to the freedom of the corporation of the city at large?—He was, and is a member of the corporation, and has been a warden of it.

17993. And in that right?—And in that right.

17994. Just refer to the stamp book, and read the entry of the 1st of April 1824?—"William Sinton, of the Corn-market, weaver, be admitted free of this corporation, corporation, he being married to Anna, the free-born daughter of Joshua Jackson, late a free brother."

17995. Chairman.] Is that in the stamp book?—Yes.

17996. What stamp duty did he pay?—He paid 1 l.; birth, service and marriage, pay 1 l.; grace especial, 3 l.

17997. Now look at the 1st January 1822?—"Edward Singleton, of Cork-street, be admitted a freeman, he being married to Sarah, the free-born daughter of Isaac Harris, late a free brother."

17998. What stamp duty did he pay?—£. 1.

17999. Refer to the same date to John Dunn, Sackville-street, and tell me by what right he was admitted?—"First of January 1822, John Dunn admitted by grace especial, and he had a certificate from the lord mayor, that is on a 3 l. stamp."

18000. Mr. O'Connell.] You say you know William Sinton had passed the corporation at large?—I do; and actually has been elected warden, and served the office of warden in the guild of weavers.

18001. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you refer to an entry in the book in which he was elected warden?—No; but I can prove he served; I know that he served.

18002. And he could not have served as warden without having passed the corporation at large?—Certainly not.

18003. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Do you know whether he ever voted for Members of Parliament for the city of Dublin?—I believe he did.

18004. Mr. Hamilton.] Now refer to the case of George Bingham, of the Weaver-square, 1st April 1824, and tell me in what right he was admitted?—"George Bingham, of the Weaver-square, clothier, be admitted free of this corporation by marriage, he being married to Mary Ann, the free-born daughter of Isaac Harrison, late a free brother;" that is on a 1 l. stamp.

18005. Can you state whether Bingham was admitted into the corporation at large?—He was, and is a member at present; he lives at the Coombe.

18006. Now refer to the case of John Clegg of Cork-street, 1st January 1825, I think, and state in what right he was admitted?—"That John Clegg, of Cork-street, weaver, be admitted free of this corporation by marriage, he being married to the daughter of John Singleton, a free brother," and so forth.

18007. What is the stamp?—£. 1.

18008. Now, the same date, refer to the case of Francis Bickerstaff?—Same day: "Resolved, that Francis Bickerstaff, of Warburgh-street, weaver, be admitted free by marriage, he being married to the free-born granddaughter of Edward, and daughter of William Atkinson, free brothers of this corporation." The reason why the two are mentioned in that admission, both the father and the grandfather, is, the father was not long enough free for his daughter to come in by that right, and then it was referred back to the grandfather.

18009. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you say Bickerstaff passed the city at large?—I do; and is at present a voting member of it.

18010. Did he pass before the Reform Bill, do you think?—A great many years before; he passed in 1825, along with his brother, Edward Garty; "Edward Garty, of Werburgh-street, weaver, be admitted free of this corporation by marriage, he being married to the free-born granddaughter of Edward, and the daughter of William Atkinson, free brothers of this corporation, and that a certificate be granted," and so forth.

18011. Chairman.] The same explanation applies to that as to the former case?—Exactly.

18012. Mr. O'Connell.] When was he admitted?—The 1st of June 1825.

18013. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you state whether Garty and Clegg have been admitted into the corporation at large?—Yes, both.

18014. Chairman.] Previous to the passing of the Reform Bill?—Yes, in the year 1825, and that was long previous to it.

18015. What stamps did those two gentlemen pay?—£. 1.

18016. Mr. O'Connell.] Are you quite sure Bickerstaff passed the corporation at large?—Yes, and voted for Members of Parliament on more occasions than one.

18017. Mr. Hamilton.] Now then, you have John Marshall, who was admitted the 1st October 1825?—"First of October 1825; John Marshall, of New-row, weaver, be admitted free by marriage, he being married to the free-born daughter of Robert Thompson, late a free brother; and that a certificate be granted him," and so forth.

Mr. G. Irwin.

19 June 1837.

18018. State the stamp?—£. 1.

18019. Is he free of the corporation at large?—He is free of the corporation at large.

18020. There are several entries here of freemen by birth, as being the grandsons of free brothers?—Yes.

18021. Mr. O'Connell.] You do not swear in anybody until after they have passed the city at large?—No.

18022. Then you did not swear in John Marshall until after he had passed the city at large, of course?—Of course not.

18023. John Marshall appears by Mr. Archer's book to have passed the city at large as a weaver, by grace especial, at Michaelmas 1825?—That is a mistake.

18024. Chairman.] Does it ever happen that a person is admitted into the corporation at large, and then comes to your guild, or to any other guild, to be admitted there?—I think such a thing has happened before now, in the case of the son of Sir Morgan Crofton; after being in the city at large, he came then to the Weavers' guild, because if they are admitted in the city at large, they may make choice of attaching themselves to any guild that they like.

18025. Mr. Hamilton.] He was admitted as a honorary freeman, I presume?—I dare say it was the case.

18026. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you any entry of it?—No, I have not.

18027. Mr. Hamilton.] Now refer to the entry of the 2d October 1820, of Morgan Maguire, of North King-street?—Morgan Maguire became free by birth, as the grandson of Morgan Maguire, proposed and seconded and admitted.

18028. Mr. O'Connell.] Can you say whether he passed the city at lage?—Excepting from belief, I can only say.

18029. Have you no entry of his ever having been sworn in in the corporation at large?—I may have, but I cannot recollect.

18030. Have you the oath?—No, the oath is not here.

18031. His name is Morgan Maguire?—Yes, grandson of Morgan Maguire, and brother to the present Mr. Maguire, the attorney.

18032. Mr. Hamilton.] Tell me in what right Joseph Harris, of Meath-street, was admitted on the 1st of October 1824?—"Joseph Harris, of Meath-street, proposed to become free by birth, by William Harris, seconded by Patrick Kirwan; the said Joseph being the free-born grandson of Joseph Harris."

18033. Have you his stamp?—I have.

18034. State the amount?—£. 1.

18035. Was he admitted into the corporation at large?—He was, and served the office of warden.

18036. You have already stated that several have been admitted as grandsons of freemen?—Yes, a great many.

18037. Mr. O'Connell.] All those whom you have mentioned as admitted by marriage paid but a 1 l. stamp?—I believe one paid 3 l.

18038. Which is that? I will mention the names to you: Hovington, what did he pay?—Hovington was 1 l., certainly.

18039. Then all those persons that you have given down as free by marriage paid but a 1 l. stamp?—I think so, as far as I can ascertain it.

18040. Ascertain it, if you please?—I find one man paid a 3 l. stamp.

18041. Which is that; read that entry?—"William Bernard, of Arran-quay, esq., be admitted free by grace especial, he being married to the daughter of John Milliken, esq., late a free brother." That was in the year 1822.

18042. Mr. Hamilton.] What time of the year?—First July 1822.

18043. Mr. O'Connell.] Was Singleton's a 1 l. stamp?—Yes.

18044. Was Mayne's a 1 l. stamp?—That is not in this stamp book.

18045. Will the other book be here?—It will.

18046. Now, where is the entry of Lacy?—In a very old book which I have not here. That is, I think, about the year 1790 or 1791, as well as I can recollect; Lacy's is very old.

18047. Then you cannot find Lacy?—No, not in that book, because he was before my time.

18048. You do not admit any Roman-catholics in the weavers?—No.

18049. Nor in the tanners?—No. We had no application in the weavers for a great

Mr. G. Irwin.

19 June 1837.

a great many years; in the year 1793 we had, but none since, and latterly we had some in the tanners.

18050. But which were not admitted?—They were not admitted; they would not come to the test; they proposed themselves, and withdrew themselves the morning of the ballot.

18051. I suppose they did not expect you would admit them?—I believe they would have been admitted if they had not withdrawn.

18052. You could not have sworn them in unless they passed the corporation at large?—No, we could not.

18053. Mr. Hamilton.] I see an entry in January 1836, David Charles Latouche, being the free-born grandson of the late Right Honourable David Latouche; he is, I believe, a liberal Protestant?—Yes.

18054. Was he admitted into the corporation at large?—I believe he was; yes, he passed the corporation.

18055. Were you clerk of the guild at the time of the admission of William Bernard of Arran-quay?—Yes, I was; he was an attorney, living on Arran-quay.

18056. That entry is proposed to become free by grace especial, being married to the "son," it was then; that is scratched out and "daughter" put in; being married to the daughter of John Milliken; do you recollect the circumstances of his admission?—I do.

18057. The usual entry in case of admission by marriage is free from the insertion of the words "grace especial"; can you state any reason why those words were introduced in this case?—Indeed, I cannot. There seems to have been an unfavourable idea upon the subject in the city at the time; I believe it was merely to please them that it was done; the city for a long time resisted the applications, or felt an inclination to do so.

18058. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you not told me the only entry in the tanners by marriage was John Mathers Atkinson?—In my time, yes.

18059. Do you know of any before?—No, I do not recollect any; I will not say there were not; there might.

18060. Look at that entry again, and see whether it is not all in your handwriting?—Atkinson's is.

18061. Do you perceive "grace e" is written on an erasure; you had written some other word by mistake?—It must have been something of that kind.

18062. It was merely a correction of the mistake?—I should suppose so; the original beseech is in Mr. Archer's possession.

18063. But you are quite sure there is nothing unfair in that entry?—I am certain of it.

18064. You did not intend to do anybody any wrong by correcting the error?—I did not.

18065. As it stands, is it not a fair bonâ fide entry?—That is my impression.

18066. You have no doubt of that?—No.

18067. If anybody committed a fraud, it must be you?—Yes.

18068. And you certainly had no intention to commit one?—I certainly had not.

Mr. John Wiber, called in; and Examined.

Mr. John Wiber.

18069. Chairman.] WHAT are you?—I am an attorney and solicitor.

18070. Are you clerk to any guild in Dublin?—I am.

18071. To which guild?—The cooks' and vintners'.

18072. Mr. O'Connell.] It is one guild?—It is.

18073. Chairman.] How long have you been clerk to that guild?—Certainly above 20 years, perhaps 25.

18074. How long have you been a freeman of that guild?—I can show by the book; I believe it was in 1810; I was appointed clerk of the guild on the 2d of October 1812.

18075. When were you made free?—Shortly before that; I think, from recollection, it was in 1811.

18076. Was it four or five years before?—No, about a year; it might be two years, perhaps.

18077. Are you free of the corporation at large?—I passed the city; I am not what is considered free of the city at large, but I passed the city as a freeman of the

Mr. John Wiber.

19 June 1837.

the cooks; it is usual that those who pass a minor guild should pass the city, and I passed the city in that way.

18078. And were you sworn in as a freeman?—I was.

18079. And also were you sworn in to the guild?—I was.

18080. Which oath did you take the first of the two?—The city.

18081. Is that the custom in the guild of cooks and vintners?—It is.

18083. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you swear anybody in to the minor guild who has not passed the city at large?—We do not; I was going to tell you why; we see that they are sworn into the city at large; we got a letter from the lord mayor's secretary, requesting we would not swear any member who passed our guild until he had been first sworn in in the city at large.

18084. Where is that letter; is it entered in the transaction book?—It is.

18085. Now turn to it.

Chairman.] 1675 is the date of it.

18086. Have you got any entry of 1675; have you any book of so old a date as 1675?—I do not think we have; and yet, on recollection, I think we have, for I remember an entry 1691 and 1692.

18087. Where is that book?—In the chest of the corporation; I did not think any such old books would be required; this book commences in 1807.

18088. The purport of that letter was to desire you not to swear into your guild persons free of the guild before they had been made free of the city of Dublin and sworn in to the city?—That was the purport of it; it was not directing, but requesting.

18089. Mr. O'Connell.] And you have acted upon it?—We did; and we were in the habit of doing so before.

18090. Chairman.] Have you acted upon it ever since?—Yes; and we acted in that manner before we got the letter.

18091. Mr. Hamilton.] It is the practice of the lord mayor to send a letter at certain intervals?—Yes; this letter that we got is not many years ago; it is about 15 years ago, perhaps.

18092. Chairman.] But, however, such is the custom?—It is.

18093. Mr. O'Connell.] Will you be able to find the letter of 15 years ago?—I will be able to find an entry of it.

18094. Have you any book for enrolling apprentices?—Yes, this is the book.

18095. Did you ever enrol an apprentice?—I did not.

18096. Have you the oath which your freemen take, in this book?—No, that is on a parchment roll.

18097. Have you that here?—I have it, but I do not know whether the corporation would be satisfied with my producing the oath out of the guild, but I brought it in case it should be required.

18098. Well, now produce it?—I have no objection to produce every paper I have, but it is not usual to produce the original.

18099. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Were you ever called upon to enrol any indenture of apprenticeship?—No.

18100. From the time you first became clerk of the guild?—No; some of the members would say, "I believe I must enrol my apprentice with you; what is your charge for enrolling him?" I said 2*s.* 6*d.* would be little enough to charge for making the entry, but they never did.

18101. But, in point of fact, you never were called upon to make an entry of enrolment?—No.

18102. And never got any fee for that service?—And never got any fee for it.

18103. You say that if any such case had occurred, you would have made an entry in that book, and you would consider that enrolling it?—I would.

18104. Is that the transaction book?—It is the book I use every day at the hall.

18105. Have you examined that book?—I have read it from beginning to end; I have written most of it myself.

18106. What date does it commence at?—One thousand eight hundred and seven, and I commenced in 1812.

Mr. John Wiber,

19 June 1837.

18107. Do you find any entry at all in it of the enrolment of any indenture of apprenticeship?—No, not one.

18108. Have you looked at any book of the guild prior to that?—I did.

18109. A book of the same class?—The same description of book.

18110. Did you find any entries of enrolment in them?—I recollect I did.

18111. How many?—Not many, indeed.

18112. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you those prior books here?—No, I really did not expect they would be wanted; I was told the books would not be required.

18113. And therefore you did not bring them?—No; I thought such old books as those would not be wanted.

18114. Have you any books prior to 1807 here?—Yes, from 1690, and a few years before that time.

18115. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] From King William's time?—Yes; that is the reason I remember it; I was looking at an entry in King William's and King James's.

18116. Mr. O'Connell.] You did not bring King James's?—No.

18117. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You were not required by the order served upon you to bring over the books?—No, I was not.

18118. Are you able to say about how long ago it may have been, in point of date, that you saw any entry respecting the enrolment of an indenture?—It was in the time of the clerk who immediately preceded me; that was John Gower; he was an attorney, and he was the immediate clerk before me; during his time I saw one.

18119. Did he live in Peter-street?—No; he lived in Kennedy's-lane.

18120. How long back was it that that entry of enrolment took place?—

18121. Mr. O'Connell.] You have it here, have you?—No, I read it in the book, because I looked through the old books.

18122. Now, how long ago was that entry?—A few years before that book commences; before 1807.

18123. You saw entries, but few in number?—Very few.

18124. And did you examine the books from the commencement, from King William's time?—I looked through a great many pages, but did not read the entire books.

18125. You looked at the pages, but did not read them?—I looked at several pages of the books, but did not go through every page of the books.

18126. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Were there to be found entries in those old books in the earlier period?—I do not recollect seeing them.

18127. Mr. O'Connell.] Now is this the oath that you have administered to freemen?—Yes.

18128. Precisely as it is there?—Why there would be the difference of the reign of the King. When George the 3d died we put George the 4th, and then William the 4th.

18129. Now, when did you put William the 4th?—It is not put there; but I have always read William the 4th in William the 4th's time.

18130. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] That is the roll, in fact, which has been subscribed by freemen, and from which the oath has been administered to freemen in several successive reigns?—It is.

18131. And you have substituted the name of the reigning sovereign for the time being as you administered the oath?—Yes; George the 4th for George the 3d; as to King William the 4th, I read it King William the 4th, although I did not write the name, because I thought it would be more regular to hand a new roll in each reign.

18132. But in all other respects, merely making the necessary change of the reigning monarch, you administered the same oath in substance to all the freemen? —Exactly the same.

18133. Mr. O'Connell.] Are there many free of the corporation of cooks?—About 50 or 60 I should suppose is the number.

18134. Have you made any alteration in your entries or modes of admission since the Reform Bill?—No.

18135. Can you show me any entries upon the claim of marriage before the Reform Bill?—I can by the book.

18136. Show me the first in this.

18137. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Have the goodness to take this oath in your hand, and be good enough to state to the Committee what the tenor of the oath is you you administer; I do not mean the oath of allegiance, nor the next, but the long oath that is there; are those the only oaths you administer?—We have a corporation oath.

18138. Is that the guild oath?—It is.

18139. Read that to the Committee?—"You shall swear in the name and fear of God, the searcher of all hearts, that you will well and truly serve our Sovereign Lord King William the Fourth that now is, his heirs and lawful successors; and in all matters and things reasonable you shall be obedient to the master, wardens, assistants and governors of this fraternity or guild of St. James the Apostle, in Dublin, or their successors, and shall be ready and willing to come upon all their summonses, except you shall have lawful cause to be absent, or else you shall pay all such penalties and fines as you shall forfeit, according to the ordinances of this company, being the corporation of cooks, for the breaking of the same: all the ordinances, acts and orders made or to be made for the good rule and government of this company, you shall to the best of your power observe and keep, or else pay such fines and penalties as you shall forfeit by reason of your disobedience or breaking the same. You shall not refuse any office that the major part of this corporation shall judge and vote you capable to undergo. You shall not compact or combine with any person that is not of this corporation to the defrauding of their just rights. All the lawful secrets of the trade, art and mystery of cookery you shall conceal and keep from all foreigners, and all lawful counsel and consultations, words, matters and things, which you shall at any time hear or know spoken or done at any assembly of the company at the hall, or other place, that doth concern the government of the said corporation, reformation of abuses, or regulation of refractory persons, you shall not divulge or make known to any persons whatsoever, whereby the good government, redress of abuses or regulation of disorderly persons, may be hindered, prejudiced or prevented. All this you shall faithfully and truly do and perform to the utmost of your power. So help you God."

18140. It appears by that oath that your corporation do not require any of the brethren to take their apprentices for seven years, nor to take them by indenture, nor to enrol them?—I do not know of any rule to that effect.

18141. There is nothing of that in the oath?—No, there is not.

18142. Then, besides that oath, I understand you to say you do not administer any other oaths except the oaths of allegiance, supremacy and abjuration?—Exactly so; no other.

18143. Now, with respect to apprentices, do you admit any person to the freedom of your guild in right of service as apprentices?—Certainly, we do.

18144. Do you require to see any indenture of an apprentice before you admit him?—In general, we do; but, if a member of the corporation that we can rely on will vouch for it that he has served his time, I have known them to pass him.

18145. If a member who has been confided in states to the board that the individual applicant has served an apprenticeship of seven years, you will admit him, although there should be no indenture?—Yes; but we must be assured also that the indentures are lost, or that some accident has occurred to prevent their being produced. In general, we make them produce the indenture.

18146. Do you ascertain that fact in the guild?—We do.

18147. Before you admit them to the freedom of your guild?—Yes.

18148. In every case?—In every case.

18149. Mr. O'Connell.] You insist either on the indentures being produced, or evidence given of their former existence and loss?—Exactly so; we do.

18150. Mr. Hamilton.] You look on the indentures as the best evidence of the servitude?—Certainly.

18151. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are you sure that in every case that has occurred of the admission of a person by reason of servitude into your guild, since you became the clerk, that that fact has been in your guild inquired into?—I am positive of that.

18152. How many persons do you know to have been admitted in right of service in your time?—Indeed, I do not think above a dozen, as well as I can say; our corporation is very small.

18153. How many members does it consist of?—About 50 or 60.

18154. And how many representatives do you send to the common council?—Two; in ancient times the corporation sent more, but they lost them by not returning them in time, as I am informed by members of the guild; I do not know that myself.

18155. Chairman.]

Mr. John Wiber.

19 June 1837.

18155. Chairman.] What property have you as a guild?—No property as a guild; we are supported by subscriptions from the members.

18156. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] In what way does your emolument as clerk arise; is it salary?—Salary and fees on the admission of each person.

18157. What salary do they allow you?—£.8. a year.

18158. And your fees; what do they result from?—I get fees on the swearing in of each member; I get fees on the swearing in every year of each warden and master; and on the return of the commoners every three years, the two commoners pay me 2*l.* each.

18159. That is the whole of your emoluments?—That is the whole of my emoluments; I get about 1 l., the fees on the admission of a member.

18160. Mr. O'Connell.] I want from you a return to be made of the persons admitted since you came into office, and the claim or alleged right under which they were admitted, and the page of the book in which it appears; you will be able to make out that return?—Yes, I will; by what time?

18161. By Thursday?—Certainly.

18162. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] What rights do you acknowledge in your guild besides service?—Grace especial, service (that is apprentices), marriage, a man married to the daughter of a freeman, a free-born daughter.

18163. My question was, what rights you acknowledge besides servitude?—Grace especial, service, marriage.

18164. And is not there one other, birth?—And birth.

18165. Then your guild acknowledges the rights of birth, service, marriage, and likewise grace especial?—They do four, those four rights.

18166. Are you the person responsible to the Stamp-office for the stamps on admissions?—No, but I am the person who is called upon to show that the stamps are paid; the inspector from the Stamp-office comes to me.

18167. And he inspects your books?—Yes.

18168. And checks the stamp admission book with the transaction book, I suppose?—He does.

18169. How often does he do that?—Not very often, indeed.

18170. How often may it be?— Some years between each; I suppose it may be five or six years.

18171. Have you brought your stamp admission book with you?—I have; the book I produced has the stamps on the early part of it.

18172. You have pinned into your transaction book the stamped admission of each freeman?—Yes.

18173. You do not then keep a distinct book, the same as the clerks of other guilds do?—I have the stamps in the early part of that book, but then I have a separate book; the Stamp-office officer told me it would be pleasanter to have a separate book, and then I got a new book.

18174. What stamps do you put on birth, service and marriage people?—£. 1. on each.

18175. And what do you put on grace especial?—£. 3. on each.

18177. Do you mean to say, at any period, a freeman admitted in your guild was obliged to pay stamp duty twice over?—Yes.

18178. Those people who were admitted in right of birth, service and marriage, were obliged to pay 2*l.*?—Yes, 1 l. into the corporation that they were admitted in, and 1 l. to the town clerk's office.

18179. And the people who were admitted by grace especial were obliged to pay 6 l.?—Yes.

18180. £. 3. to you and 3 l. to the corporation?—Yes.

18181. When was that?—It is a good many years back.

18182. But except that, since you have been in office, it has been always the same rate of charge?—The same.

18183. Chairman.] Is there not a person of the name of Hugh Gamble, stated to be admitted in consequence of some right?—Yes.

18184. What is the right there stated?—By marriage.

18185. What is the date of that?—Twelfth of April 1822; there is an entry of admission admission of Hugh Gamble to the liberties and franchises of this corporation, pursuant to his admission by marriage to the free-born daughter of Hugh Galbraith.

Mr. John Wiber.

19 June 1837.

18186. What is the stamp duty paid upon that admission?—£. 1.

18187. Was that gentleman sworn in to the guild of cooks?—He was.

18188. Did he pass the corporation at large?—He did.

18189. Did he ever serve any office, either in the guild or the corporation at large?—I recollect he served the office of warden.

18190. Warden of the guild?—Warden of the guild.

18191. Mr. O'Connell.] Could he serve that without passing the corporation at large?—He could; I have stated that regulation, that they are qualified to vote in the minor corporation and to hold office, whether they are admitted of the city or not, but not entitled to vote for Members of Parliament. That is the only loss they have by not being sworn in the city.

18192. In what manner does a person apply to be made free of your guild?—They either apply to a member of the corporation, with whom they are acquainted, or to me as clerk of the guild, stating their claims.

18193. Then it is not necessary to send in any written petition or beseech?—No; I prepare that.

18194. When you are spoken to you prepare a written petition?—I do.

18195. Have you any of those written petitions here?—No, I have not.

18196. Did you prepare them before the Reform Bill?—Yes.

18197. Can you procure us some that were prepared before the Reform Bill, in each class of claims?—I can.

18198. You have then beseeches before the Reform Bill, or petitions?—I have some of them, I think.

18199. Have you any printed rolls of your bye-laws?—No.

18200. Have you bye-laws entered in any book separately by themselves?—I never saw them; nor can I find in the books a list of the bye-laws; but there are several resolutions entered in the books that state the practice in many respects—state how the corporation are to act in many respects.

18201. And have you these resolutions?—Yes, there are in this book many resolutions.

18202. Can you point out such resolutions as regard the mode of admission into your guild?—No, I do not recollect meeting with any of those; they must be very old.

18203. Have you never seen any written resolutions or directions touching the mode of admission into your guild?—No, I do not recollect ever seeing any.

18204. Well, when a person has applied to you and stated his claim, and you have put it in writing, what becomes of that claim?—There is a question put by the master to the corporation, whether that shall pass; first, as to grace especial, perhaps I had better give them, because there is so much difference in each admission; by grace especial, it is referred to the council of the house; there are a certain number of the corporation called the council of the house, elected for the purpose of investigating claims and accounts.

18205. As to grace especial, it is referred to them?—Yes, to ascertain whether the persons are qualified to be admitted.

18206. And they decide one way or the other?—They do, the next quarter-day.

18207. If they decide against it, what becomes of it; does it come before the body at large?—It is thrown out.

18208. Without more?—Without more.

18209. If they decide in favour of it, what becomes of it?—They are admitted.

18210. Without more?—Without more. The question is put from the chair.

18211. That is something more. Well, the admission is by the body at large?—Whoever are present; the majority of the meeting present.

18212. If they differ in opinion upon the subject, is there a ballot; can they call for a ballot?—No.

18213. You have no ballot at all in your guild?—We have for officers.

18214. But not for the admission of persons?—No.

18215. Do you recognise the claim of birth?—Certainly.

18216. If the claim be by birth, what do you do?—We ascertain that the party is entitled by birth.

18217. Who ascertains that?—The person making the claim must refer us to some person in the corporation who will vouch for him; or at times, we get a certificate of the birth.

Mr. John Wiber.

19 June 1837.

18218. From whom?—From the parties applying, to show that they were born within the time that their father has been admitted, if they are strangers to us; but if a member of the corporation can vouch for it, we take that.

18219. That is, if they are born after the father has been free?—Yes.

18220. How many years must he be free before you admit anybody by birth, or do you admit by birth immediately?—The father must be free at the time the person is born; he must be what we call free born.

18221. Then after you have ascertained that the person is free born, is a question put upon him; do you understand me?—I do; I am recollecting. No, he is entered.

18222. Do you ever remember anybody being admitted by birth?—Yes.

18223. Tell me one. Could you tell me any one, without looking at your book?—I could; some of my own family; James Wiber.

18224. A son of yours?—No, not a son, a nephew of mine, a son of my brother; and I know he was born free.

18225. Your brother was free?—Yes.

18226. Do you admit minors into your guild, or must they be of full age before they are admitted?—We generally require they should be of full age; but sometimes we have admitted them under age, with this notice to the parties, that it would be no use to them till they came of age, that they cannot vote for Members of Parliament; but if they wish to pass, they have a right to be admitted into the guild, and let them wait until they come of age.

18227. Then there is no question put if the birth be ascertained?—No.

18228. You put no question at all; but you yourself, as clerk of the guild, enter them, and they are admitted; is that so?—At times it is, and at times it is not. If I am satisfied, the corporation generally is satisfied; sometimes there is a question put.

18229. But if you are satisfied, the corporation generally is satisfied?—Yes.

18230. So that the moment you are satisfied, you put them down as free?—Yes; enter them in the book.

18231. And then no question is put in that case?—Just so.

18232. And that is the same by service?—By service; yes.

18233. You ascertain whether or not there be an indenture, do you not?—I do.

18234. Or if the indenture be not produced, whether it had been in existence, and was lost or destroyed by accident?—Yes. That is done openly at the hall; it is by the corporation; it is not left to me individually, the power to admit a person; it is done at the hall, and they must be looking on. If I admitted a person not right, I would be stopped.

18235. And then, if they are satisfied the fact is proved that there has been an indenture, although not produced, they pass him for service?—They do.

18236. And so of marriage, I suppose; the same with marriage?—Yes.

18237. But the habit of your guild is, not to put a question in case the facts appear distinctly?—Indeed, although it is not absolutely necessary, it is put very often.

18238. You do not know whether it is right to put it in every case?—No; if the members present are satisfied, I get directions to enter it.

18240. Then, when the question is put at the meeting, I presume it is whether or not the right has been established?—It is.

18241. When the claim is of right?—Yes; the question is put whether the corporation are satisfied that this person shall pass, and then, if the majority are ayes, they admit him.

Jovis, 22° die Junii, 1837.

MEMBERS PRESENT.

Mr. O'Connell.	Mr. Hogg.
Mr. M. J. O'Connell.	Mr. Lefroy.
Sir Robert Ferguson.	Lord Granville Somerset.
Mr. Hamilton.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Alexander Seton, Esq., called in; and Examined.

A. Seton, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18242. Chairman.] WHERE do you reside?—In the City of Dublin.

18243. You are a professional person?—A barrister.

18244. Have you attended the registry court in Dublin?—I attended the registry courts of the city of Dublin, from February 1835 till the conclusion of the last February sessions; I did not attend the last May sessions.

18245. Did you attend professionally?—I did.

18246. For any political party?—I was solicited to attend them on behalf of the Volunteers, as it was called at that time; it has changed its name since.

18247. What political party is that?—The liberal party.

18248. Mr. O'Connell.] You attended as counsel from the Central Club?—Latterly from the central club.

18249. You attended before Mr. Dobbs?—I did.

18250. The registry takes place before Mr. Conway Dobbs?—Mr. Conway Dobbs is the registering barrister for the city of Dublin under the Reform Act; he is appointed by Mr. Maxwell Blacker, who is the chairman for the county of Dublin.

18251. You are aware of the manner in which the freemen are registered?—I am.

18252. Mr. Dobbs rejected a freeman in order to have the opinion of a superior court upon the mode of registering freemen?—He did; he rejected two, I think.

18253. Do you recollect their names?—I think Mr. Edward Carolin and Mr. Francis Hyde; one, I think, by service, and the other by marriage.

18254. Those persons were admitted by the chief baron upon the appeal?—They were.

18255. And registered accordingly?—And registered accordingly.

18256. Since that time, does not Mr. Dobbs declare that he considers himself bound by that decision?—Yes.

18257. Does not he, in consequence, receive the certificate of the town-clerks as conclusive evidence of the right of the freemen?—He does; the only thing we can question is, the age of the individual and his description, if it is a notice irregularly served; but as to the right of the freeman himself, we cannot question that.

18258. The court rules that that is concluded by the certificate?—Yes.

18259. If the certificate be by birth, Mr. Dobbs does not allow you, in consequence of the decision, to inquire into the fact of persons being entitled by birth?—He does not let us inquire who the father was if they refuse to answer that question; I have all the questions printed in a book for examination, and those are invariably refused; suppose the title to be by birth, the only question he is allowed to answer is, when and where he was born.

18260. What other questions do you propose to ask in those cases?—I propose to ask, first, what I call two general questions, first, "Did you ever pay any, and what money, other than the sum of 1 s. to the town-clerk, upon the certificate now produced [showing him his certificate] for or in respect of your freedom or admission to the corporation of Dublin, or any guild of the corporation, or to any officer of either, or for stamp duty or otherwise?" That sum of 1 s. is paid to the town-clerk for the parchment certificate which he produces.

18261. Chairman.]

A. Seton, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18261. Chairman.] Do you wish to ask the freeman whether he pays 1 s. only for all the expenses, including his stamp certificate?—We wish to ask whether he has paid more than that; we wish to know whether he has paid the stamp duty.

18262. Mr. O'Connell.] Mr. Dobbs does not think it right that you should ask the question?—We always ask it, but he does not think it right that it should be answered.

18263. He rules, that the freeman coming to be registered is not bound to answer that question?—Just so.

18264. Have any freemen answered it?—I do not recollect, there might have been an instance.

18265. In general they do not answer it?—In general they do not, almost universally.

18266. Do you ask any other question?—The second question we ask is, "Were you ever elected, admitted, or sworn a member of any, and what guild of the corporation of Dublin, and if so, state when, and before whom, you were so admitted and sworn?"

18267. Are you allowed to get an answer to that question?—We are not.

18268. What is the next question you ask?—When the claim is by birth, the next question is, "Who was or is your father or reputed father?"

18269. Does the claimant answer that question?—No; the claimant may in a hurry sometimes answer it, but not generally; I do not think there are more than one or two instances in which they have answered it.

18270. If the claimant objects to answer that question, what is the decision of the court?—That he need not answer it.

18271. Do you ask any other question to a claimant by birth?—Yes: "Was your father a member of the corporation of Dublin, or of any and what guild thereof?"

18272. Is that objected to?—Always.

18273. Is it ruled that he is not bound to answer it?—It is.

18274. And therefore it is not answered?—It is not answered.

18275. To a claimant by birth, do you ask any other question?—"When was he," meaning the father, "admitted and sworn?"

18276. And that meets with the same fate?—Yes.

18277. What is the next question?—"When and where were you" (the applicant) "born?"

18278. That he is allowed to answer?—Yes; sometimes a man objects a considerable time to that, but eventually the court holds that we are entitled to an answer to that question.

18279. Is there any other question put to a claimant by birth?—Yes: "Are you the eldest son?"

18280. Does he answer that?—He does not; and the court rules that he is not bound to answer it.

18281. Is there any other question put to a claimant by birth?—No.

18282. Mr. Lefroy.] Can you state the reason why the question "When and where were you born" is permitted to be answered?—One reason I should suppose would be to see whether the man is of age or not. For my own part I think that is the material part of the question; as to the "where," does not occur to me to be directly of any great consequence; but those questions were settled on great consideration by counsel, and of course, as acting for the body, I feel myself bound to put them as I have got them.

18283. Inasmuch as though he be truly and substantially a member of the corporation, he cannot be registered without he be of age, that inquiry is suffered to be gone into?—Yes; I am not aware that that question was ever refused by Mr. Dobbs.

18284. Mr. O'Connell.] There being another subject, quite independent of the particular document out of which he comes to register, upon which information may be obtained by answering that question, the court rules that you are entitled to an answer?—Yes.

18285. And you draw a distinction which appears in the judgment of the court between the facts which appear upon the certificate and an extrinsic fact which may make the man unfit to be registered at the time?—It appears to me so, as the year of the birth does not appear upon the face of the certificate.

18286. Suppose the claim be by service, what question do you put to him?—

A. Seton, Esq.

22 June 1837

After the two general questions, we go on to inquire "Who was or is the person to whom you allege you served your time?"

18287. Are you allowed to get an answer to that question?—It is held that we cannot enforce an answer to it.

18288. Do you ask any other question as to service?—"Was he," that is the master, "a member of the corporation of Dublin, or of any and what guild thereof?"

18289. That is also overruled?—It is.

18290. Is any other question put?—"When was he," the master, "admitted and sworn?"

18291. That is also overruled?—It is.

18292. Any other?—"Were you bound to him by any indentures, and of what date?"

18293. That is also overruled?—Yes.

18294. Any other?—"Were they," that is, the indentures, "ever, and when enrolled with the clerk of any and what guild or corporation?"

18295. Any other?—"Where, and in what trade, and how long, from time to time, did you serve, under the said indentures?"

18296. That is also overruled?—It is.

18297. Any other?—"Where are now the said indentures?"

18298. That is also over-ruled?—That is also overruled.

18299. Any other?—None with respect to service.

18300. Mr. Hogg.] What do you mean by being "overruled;" do you mean that the court interposes, and says to the witness, "Do not answer that question," or do you mean that the witness declines to answer the question, and the court then says that he is not bound to do so?—The court says that he is not bound to do so, and the counsel always interpose, and tell him not to answer it. The court holds that we are not entitled to information upon those subjects.

18301. Mr. O'Connell.] Of course Mr. Dobbs does not interpose himself in any of those cases unless he is called upon to do so?—There is always some one upon the other side to interpose in those cases.

18302. Then if the claim be by marriage, what questions do you ask?—After the two general questions, the next question that we put is, "What was the name of the person whom you allege to be your wife, and in whose right you claim?"

18303. What becomes of that question?—It is overruled and not answered. The next question is, "When were you married?" That is overruled. The next question is, "Who was or is her father or reputed father?" That is overruled. The next question is, "Was he a member of the corporation of Dublin, or of any and what guild thereof?" That is overruled. The next is, "When was he admitted and sworn?" That is overruled. The next is, "When was your said wife born?" That is overruled. Those are all the questions upon that head.

18304. Then are the Committee to understand that Mr. Dobbs, as the revising barrister, considers that all those facts are testified to him by the certificate of the town-clerk?—I conceive that he does not allow us to get an answer to them. I suppose that he holds that the certificate under the chief baron's decision is satisfactory upon this point.

18305. He considers it so satisfactory that he does not allow the facts themselves to be examined?—Just so.

18306. Is that the opinion of the chief baron?—I suppose so; I was not present when he gave his decision.

18307. Mr. Lefroy.] Mr. Dobbs authorises the claimant to refuse answering those questions when he has produced a certificate ascertaining his right?—Yes, after we inquire from the man whether his title corresponds with that upon the face of the certificate as to the time of the admission, and so on, we put those questions, and Mr. Dobbs holds the certificate as conclusive.

18308. Has Mr. Dobbs stated the grounds upon which he so adjudicates?—He has stated that he looks upon the certificate under the chief baron's decision to be conclusive evidence of the right to register.

18309. And in deference to that decision he rules the points as you have stated?—Yes.

18310. Mr. O'Connell.] No gentleman displays better temper?—A great deal of patience and a great deal of good temper, and it is very often tried.

18311. Mr. Hamilton.] When were those questions settled by counsel?—They were settled by counsel, I believe, some time in the spring, 1836. We did not go so minutely into the freemen before, because we did not find that they were poured upon us in such numbers.

A. Seton, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18312. Were those questions settled subsequently or previously to the decision of the chief baron?—Subsequently.

18313. Had the barrister, previously to the decision of the chief baron, expressed any opinion as to questions of that nature?—I think not; I am not aware that they were put. We put some questions, but they were not so numerous as these, nor so well prepared.

18314. Were there any questions put previously of a similar import to any of these?—I have no other book here from which I can answer that question. We investigated the title; we called for the roll, and called for the beseeches. That was in the spring of 1835, in Carolin's case, which was decided long before those arrangements.

18315. Mr. O'Connell.] When you called for those other documents, before the chief baron's decision, were they produced?—They were.

18316. Was it uniformly the practice to produce those documents previously?—They were produced in certain cases; a rejection took place in the case of Mr. Carolin and Mr. Hyde; then the chief baron's decision was made on Saturday, the 30th of May 1835.

18317. Mr. Hamilton.] Then do you mean, that previous to that decision, those documents were produced?—They were produced.

18318. In consequence of Mr. Dobbs' decision?—He held, that they should be produced, and they were produced; and the question was argued, and there was an appeal.

18319. Was that the case in that instance only, or generally?—I think there were two appeals only; I do not think we went into any examination of that kind in Hyde's case, but that he was rejected merely to try the right by marriage, without going into that question.

18320. Was the decision of Mr. Dobbs, generally, previous to the appeal, that such documents should be produced?—They were produced in such cases, but whether in every case or not I do not recollect.

18321. What were the documents which used to be produced before the decision?—The roll, the beseech, and a book called the little book?—I have a copy of the examination of Mr. Jackson, who was the officer of the commons at the time.

18322. Mr. Lefroy.] Did they also produce the certificate?—I conceive they did; but I would not take upon myself, on recollection, to say that they did; we went into investigation as to the title, to see whether the roll was signed, and as to the stamp duty being paid, and the little book and the beseeches.

18323. Mr. O'Connell.] In general cases, before the decision of the chief baron, did the counsel for the freemen object to the production of any document beyond the certificate?—Those cases I have mentioned were some of the earliest cases, and I cannot take upon myself to recollect whether they did or not.

18324. There were very few, comparatively, produced before the chief baron's decision?—Very few.

18325. The numbers have been very great since?—Some 500 or 600.

18326. How many before the chief baron's decision?—I cannot say; probably about a dozen.

18327. Mr. Hamilton.] Have you the memorandum books which you made previous to that decision?—I have in town, but not here.

18328. Can you state, from your recollection, whether any questions similar in import to any of those, were put and objected to by counsel, and the objection over-ruled, and the decision of the barrister given, that the question should be answered, previous to that decision of the chief baron?—I would not undertake to state that upon my recollection; if it was so, there is a note of it appearing upon the face of the book.

18330. It does import to state the right?—I do not know; but my recollection is that it does not.

18331. Mr.

319

A. Seton, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18331. Mr. Hogg.] Do you believe that, before the decision of the chief baron, Mr. Dobbs ever held that the witness was compelled to answer any question, or to produce any document, where the same fact or the same document was vouched for by a certificate ?—I do not think there was any decision one way or the other upon the subject.

18332. Mr. O'Connell.] You acted also in the registry of the 10 l. householders ?—I did.

18333. There is a long examination upon oath, as to the householders ?—A very strict one.

18334. And a long examination ?—Very often.

18335. The claimant is sworn always to make true answers to all such questions as shall be put to him touching his franchise ?—He is sworn in the usual way; I believe the form of oath is, that he shall make true answer to all such questions as shall be put to him touching his application to register.

18336. Mr. Lefroy.] Then Mr. Dobbs never refused permission to ask any questions upon matters arising upon the face of the certificate, or matters subsequent to the certificate affecting the right ?—The only question that would arise upon the right, subsequent to the certificate, would be the question of residence.

18337. Mr. O'Connell.] And he never prevented you from asking about that ?—No, and the age of the party.

18338. And if it appeared that he was a minor he was rejected ?—Yes.

18339. Did any cases of that kind ever occur ?—There were some cases of minors that were refused, and the opposite party did not argue it; and there were some cases of freemen that were minors when they were admitted, but they had completed their freedom subsequently.

18340. Chairman.] In how many cases can you state that freemen claimed to register, but were not registered, on account of nonage ?—I think not more than three or four.

18341. They were always strictly examined upon that point ?—They were.

18342. But still you could never prove that they were under age in more than three or four cases ?—No, I cannot state the number exactly.

18343. Taking every sort of persons who claimed to register as freemen, how many were not registered on account either of nonage or of nonproof ?—I should think not more than half-a-dozen.

18344. When did your professional experience begin with respect to these registries ?—In February 1835.

18345. When was the lord chief baron's decision upon the cases of those two claimants ?—According to the printed book, it is the 30th of May.

18346. Have you any doubt that it was on the 30th of May ?—No.

18347. What was the course of proceeding by the revising barrister between the 2d of February, when the sessions began, and the 30th of May, as to those questions being answered ?—I think there was an understanding that freemen would not come up till this case was decided.

18348. Do you mean to state that no considerable number of freemen were registered in the year 1835, previous to the decision of the lord chief baron ?—That is my impression.

18349. Do you state that as many as 50 were not registered in that period ?—So I believe.

18350. Do you mean to state that there were not as many as 100 freemen registered ?—So far certain of it as I can be of a thing of which I have no memorandum, but I can ascertain the number.

18351. You are quite certain that there were not 150 registered ?—I believe there were not.

18352. Do you believe there were 20 registered ?—My impression is, that there was an understanding that the freemen would not be brought up till the point was settled by the chief baron; but I cannot speak to the numbers without referring to the documents; but the Committee have the numbers before them in the printed return. [A printed return was shown to the Witness.]

18353. Will you state what that purports to be ?—It is a return of the freemen registered since the year 1835 under the Reform Act. I was in the county of Kildare in the year 1832, at the time of the registry, and I knew nothing whatever of what was done in 1832.

18354. Do you see in that return the part relating to the year 1835 ?—

18355. Will you state how many freemen appear by that printed return to have been

A. Seton, Esq.

22 June 1837.

been registered in the year 1835, previous to the 30th of May?—I think, previous to the 30th of May, there were 158.

18356. Among those 158 persons so admitted, were there any that refused to answer the various queries which you have stated were put to them, and which were not answered subsequent to the decision of the chief baron, upon the 30th of May?—I will not take upon me to state how many questions were put to every individual during that time.

18357. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you any entries that will show you what occurred?—I have, but they are not here at present; they are in town.

18358. Chairman.] Were questions put by you or other persons belonging to your party, as to the validity of the claim of those individuals?—I would not undertake to state, upon recollection, one way or the other.

18359. You will not undertake to state that any of those 158 individuals answered questions of a similar nature to those which were subsequently overruled by Mr. Dobbs, in accordance with the decision of the chief baron?—The books are in town, and I can refer to them, but I cannot state without.

18360. Have you not already stated circumstances relative to the appeal which was afterwards made to the chief baron?—I have.

18361. Did you read from a memorandum book what you have stated upon that subject?—Not to-day, I did not.

18362. You have made a statement without your books, touching certain circumstances?—That was a particular case; and it impressed itself particularly upon my mind, because it was a matter of great importance, and therefore it made more impression upon my mind than a number of things that occurred.

18363. Do you mean to say that it was a matter of no importance whether 158 individuals were admitted without answering those questions or with answering those questions?—The probability is that a great many of them were old freemen, and of course we did not put the same questions to old freemen as to newly admitted freemen.

18364. Do you mean to state that you put those questions which you have read, subsequent to the 30th of May, to any individuals that were old freemen?—If their certificate showed that they were admitted previous to the Reform Bill, we did not, unless where the admission might have been previous to the Reform Bill, and the swearing subsequent; there were very few cases of that kind occurred.

18365. How many cases of those 158 do you state to have been cases of old freemen?—It is almost impossible that I could say.

18366. How many cases subsequent to the 30th of May were cases of old freemen?—I could not state on recollection.

18367. Could you state by any document in your possession?—I think I could; my recollection is, if an old freeman came up, I marked "old freeman" against his name.

18368. And you think there were more of those before the 30th of May than afterwards?—I should think there must have been more newly made freemen came up after the 30th of May than before.

18369. Will you state whether or no Mr. Dobbs did or did not permit those questions to be enforced, with regard to those 158 freemen admitted in the year 1835, previous to the decision of the chief baron?—He did not, for those questions were not digested at that time.

18370. Were questions of anything of that description or import?—Not near so close and so accurate.

18371. Were any questions asked touching the right of freedom, after the production of the certificate, permitted to be answered, previous to the decision of the chief baron?—I have no recollection; but I have them all marked.

18372. You cannot state what decision the revising barrister came to upon that point previous to the decision of the chief baron?—I would not undertake to do it at present.

18373. When it was agreed, with reference to the two parties you have mentioned, that the opinion of a judge should be taken, what was the way in which the arrangement was made?—An individual was examined, and he was rejected; and then an appeal was of course lodged.

18374. You were present in court at that time?—I was.

18375. You were present in court when it was arranged that these two parties should be rejected by the revising barrister for the purpose of taking the opinion of a judge?—I was present in court when they were rejected by the revising barrister.

18376. Were you present when the arrangement was made that those two parties should be rejected for the purpose of appeal?—I think I have it recorded upon my book that those stood for an appeal.

18377. What was the understanding between the parties, for and against the freemen, upon that occasion?—I presume it was that they would have the opinion of the superior court.

18378. Was there any conversation as to what tribunal the appeal should be made to?—Very likely there was.

18379. Was there or was there not?—I think there was.

18380. Was any person particularly mentioned as the judge to whom the appeal should be made?—My recollection is that it was mentioned to be made to the Court of Exchequer.

18381. As a body?—To the court generally; that is, to the judge at Nisi Prius.

18382. What do you mean by the Court of Exchequer?—To the judge presiding in the court at Nisi Prius.

18383. Was any individual judge mentioned?—The chief baron is the presiding judge. He usually presides at Nisi Prius; but it might be some of the other judges, if he was unwell; they can also preside at Nisi Prius.

18384. Did any conversation take place on the part of your friends, as to desiring that the appeal should be made to any other judge?—There was a great deal of conversation upon the subject, with respect to the feeling of the judges; but I did not take any part in it, nor did I wish to pay any attention to it.

18385. Mr. O'Connell.] By feeling, you mean political bias?—Yes; but I did not take a part in it.

18386. Chairman.] Can you state what passed upon that occasion?—I would not undertake to state what passed upon that occasion; there are many things pass that I am very willing to discharge my memory of altogether.

18387. Do you recollect what passed?—No, I do not recollect; I would not go into the particular detail of what passed.

18388. Was there anything so striking as to cause you to remark what passed?—There seemed to be a question as to what the choice of the court should be, between the gentlemen on opposite sides, and I certainly did not take any part in it.

18389. Can you state that anything so remarkable passed as to enable you now to state it to the Committee?—I would not take upon me to state particularly what passed upon the subject.

18390. Because your recollection does not serve you?—Because my recollection does not serve me.

18391. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you recollect that something was said respecting the political bias of the judge?—Certainly.

18392. Chairman.] Can you state by whom this was said?—There were some half-dozen people talking at the same time upon both sides, and which individual used the expression I could not say. There was a great deal of noise and altercation in the court, when four or five people were talking at the same time.

18393. Did anybody say on either side that they were sure of a decision in favour of the freemen from the chief baron?—There was something of the kind said.

18394. By whom?—There were three or four people on each side talking at the same time, and I could not say who the individual was that made use of the expression; my recollection is that I took no part in the altercation, and I did not wish to have anything to do with it.

18395. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you state who the individuals were who were present?—There was Mr. Hyndman present; Mr. Collison and Mr. Ryan I think were present; and Mr. Gale, I think.

18396. Who were present on your side?—Mr. Martin, Mr. Curran and Mr. Hudson, I think.

18397. Mr. O'Connell.] Were there any more of the Trades' Union?—I dare say there were a great many.

18398. Mr. Hamilton.] Your recollection does enable you to state that, among those parties, there was something said respecting the polititical bias of the chief ar on?—Yes.

18399. Chairman.] Was anything said as to your side being anxious that Mr. Crampton

Crampton might be the person to whom the appeal might be made?—I dare say there was.

18400. Upon what ground?—I dare say upon the ground that he was more liberal.

18401. Mr. O'Connell.] Are you aware who the law officers of the Crown were when the Reform Act passed?—I believe one of them was Mr. Crampton.

18402. Chairman.] Do you know how many freemen were admitted in the years previous to 1835?—I did not attend the registries in the years 1833 and 1834; after the election of 1835, we thought it necessary on both sides to look more to the registry, and immediately after the February sessions we began to attend.

18403. Mr. Hogg.] Is the appeal to which you have now adverted the only one that has taken place?—No; there had been appeals on the household franchise.

18404. To whom were those appeals made?—To the Court of King's Bench, and Mr. Crampton has generally presided.

18405. Mr. O'Connell.] And all the other appeals have been made to the King's Bench?—They have, on both sides.

18406. Mr. Hogg.] The right of appeal is given generally to any judge of any of the courts?—To any judge of any of the three superior courts.

18407. Chairman.] Are you aware that, during the year 1832, there were 1,900 freemen admitted upon the registry of voters for the city of Dublin?—I did not attend any part of the registry for the year 1832, for I was attending a registry in the county of Kildare.

18408. Are you aware that, in the year 1832, so many as 1,900 freemen were admitted on the registry?—If it is upon record, I have no doubt it is the fact.

18409. There was a very small number in 1833 and 1834?—I think altogether they were under 140.

18410. Mr. O'Connell.] Those in 1832 were not registered before Mr. Dobbs?—No; there were eight or ten barristers registering at the same time.

18411. Mr. Hamilton.] You stated that certain appeals on both sides had been made to the Court of King's Bench; can you state how many there have been generally?—Perhaps 25 or 30.

18412. Can you state how many on each side?—Not on recollection; I think there were eight or ten appeals upon the conservative side, but the individuals never came forward; we did go forward with our appeals, and succeeded in some and were defeated in others.

18413. Then those cases were not practically appealed to the Court of King's Bench?—The appeal was lodged, but the individual did not come forward; why, I cannot say.

18414. Were the appeals on the other side brought into court?—Yes.

18415. Were they all before Mr. Justice Crampton?—I believe he happened to be the judge presiding at Nisi Prius.

18416. Mr. O'Connell.] He has generally sat at Nisi Prius?—He has.

18417. Mr. Hamilton.] Is it not the rule that the chief justice of the Court of King's Bench or the chief baron sits at Nisi Prius?—No, it is not; because, suppose one of the chiefs is unwell, or suppose he is in delicate health, as Chief Justice Bush is, Mr. Crampton has sat for him.

18418. Mr. O'Connell.] It is the duty of the chief justice to sit at Nisi Prius, but if he has a reasonable excuse, and can get one of his brethren to sit, he does so?—Yes.

18419. Do not you believe that Mr. Justice Crampton has almost invariably tried at Nisi Prius in the King's Bench?—I think so.

18420. Mr. Hamilton.] Then it did not follow necessarily that the appeal to the Court of Exchequer would be tried by the chief baron?—No; Judge Pennefather might have tried it, or Judge Foster.

18421. You say there was an understanding that this appeal should be made between the parties, and that there was an objection by some parties on account of the political bias of the chief baron; can you state whether that objection was made known to the registering barrister?—I do not know whether he overheard the conversation or not; besides, with respect to appeal, the registering barrister had no right to interfere.

18422. If the appeal was upon an understanding between the parties, does it appear to you that it was natural that there should be a discussion as to the court to which it should be made, if there was an objection on the part of one of the parties?—

A. Seton, Esq.

22 June 1837.

parties?—I do not see that the registering barrister could interfere in the business. The appellant party has a right to choose his court.

18423. The barrister rejected by consent of both parties?—The individual was rejected that the appeal might be brought.

18424. With the consent of the party that were the appellants?—We would not have consented to it if we could have established our right to reject him without it.

18425. Mr. O'Connell.] You pressed for the rejection, and every man that is rejected has a right of appeal, which you could not take away?—Yes.

18426. Mr. Hogg.] In point of fact, the proceeding was managed by the consent of parties, for the purpose of obtaining a decision upon the point that was disputed?—We insisted that the man ought to be rejected.

18427. There are two ways of deciding a case upon which an appeal may arise; there is a way in which it is solemnly decided by the barrister, and another way in which it is decided by the barrister in a particular manner, in order to have an appeal; was it decided in the latter way?—It was decided in support of the arguments adduced by us, in order that the question might be settled by a superior court.

18428. Was it a proceeding understood to be with consent of parties, or was it not?—We were anxious to have the rejection.

18429. Then is it to be understood that this was or was not by consent of parties?—In the professional part of it, counsel being specially brought down, I did not interfere.

18430. Were you present?—I think I was.

18431. Are you or are you not able to state whether it was or was not with consent of parties?—I will not undertake to do so.

18432. Mr. O'Connell.] Upon your side no consent was necessary?—Upon our side no consent was necessary.

18433. The consent could be only upon the part of the person claiming?—Yes.

18434. Did the person claiming or his counsel consent that the barrister should give his opinion only formally against the claimant, in order that the claimant might have an opportunity to appeal?—I think it was so.

18435. If the claimant had pressed for a decision, is not it likely that the decision would have been in his favour?—I think it would; but Mr. Dobbs is much better able to answer what his decision would have been than I am.

18436. Does not it follow that, though it was not by consent of both parties, it was by consent of the party that made the appeal?—That is my conception of it.

18437. Mr. Lefroy.] If it could not have been without the consent of the appealing party, and he did consent, and as you have said that you assented to that consent, can you have any hesitation in saying that it was an appeal by consent of both parties?—I do not see that any consent of ours was necessary to it; he had a right to appeal.

18438. Chairman.] Was not it of advantage to your party to have a decision upon the appeal which might be in your favour, though it might be against you?—Yes; I always looked upon it as advantageous to have a decision, even if it was against us, to put an end to unnecessary arguments.

18439. Had not Mr. Dobbs always ruled against your right to put questions of the character you have described?—The only questions which were put were with respect to inquiry as to signing the roll, and paying the stamp duty and as to the book.

18440. Had he not ruled those questions against you?—On some occasions he admitted them.

18441. What was the point of the appeal?—The point of the appeal was, what evidence was necessary to establish the right of a freeman to register.

18442. Had he not ruled that point adversely to your opinions?—I think he must have done so.

18443. Were not Mr. Pigott and Mr. Hudson brought specially to argue the point on behalf of your party?—They were.

18444. Were they present when that understanding was come to?—They were; I take it for granted, that the arrangement was made when the argument on both sides was concluded.

A. Seton, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18445. Did they make any observation as to the judge before whom the appeal should be made?—I have no recollection.

18446. Are you quite sure that no conversation as to the political bias of the judge took place upon that occasion?—There was some conversation by the parties; whether they used the words "political bias," I cannot say.

18447. You are quite sure that there was some conversation of that kind at the time?—I am.

18448. You are not mistaking that time for any other?—No.

18449. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you be more precise as to the nature of the conversation?—No, I cannot.

18450. Chairman.] Was it possible for the revising barrister to have been aware of it?—We were at the table, and the revising barrister was there also.

18451. The revising barrister heard it?—He might or might not.

18452. Do you believe that he did hear it?—I can form no opinion upon the subject.

18453. Was it in such a tone of voice that he must necessarily have heard it?—It was neither in a very loud voice nor a low whisper; he might have heard it, but I cannot say.

18454. Mr. O'Connell.] Were there many talking at the same time?—A great many; perhaps eight or ten talking at the same time.

18455. Mr. Hamilton.] You have described even the tones of voice of the conversation; cannot you give the substance of it?—It was neither very high nor very low; I can give no more of the substance of it than what I have mentioned; if I could give it I would do it with the greatest possible pleasure.

18456. Mr. Lefroy.] Do you think there was any foundation for an imputation, such as was insinuated by that conversation?—I must beg not to be called upon to give an opinion upon the character of any judge.

18457. You decline giving an opinion whether the chief baron would be swayed by political motives in administering justice?—If I am pressed for an opinion I must give it; but I think it is a delicate question for a barrister to give an opinion upon.

18458. Mr. O'Connell.] You have an opinion upon it?—I have a decided one.

18459. And if you are pressed you will give it?—Yes, but I do not think it delicate for a barrister to give an opinion upon such a subject; I am warm in my politics, and my opinion might be erroneous, or, more correctly speaking, might be biassed.

18460. Mr. Lefroy.] Will you state the point of the appeal; was there more than one point in the appeal?—My idea is, that it was the evidence that was necessary to establish the right of a freeman to register, which was the substance of the appeal; I was not present when it was argued, and I have never read the argument.

18461. Were you present when the points were argued upon which the appeal was founded?—Yes, I was.

18462. Will you state what were the points?—I have them in writing, but I would not state them on recollection.

18463. Though a professional gentleman?—Though a professional gentleman, I would not.

18465. Do not you conceive that what a lawyer recollects most is the very point of his argument in a case?—If he has argued it, but I took no part in the argument.

18466. Were not you present at the argument?—I was, and I think I have a short note of it.

18467. But you cannot state what the point was on recollection?—I cannot upon recollection.

18468. Did you take any note in writing of the conversation to which you have alluded?—I did not; it is a much easier matter to have a general recollection that such a conversation occurred, than to have a perfect recollection of two or three points of law.

18469. Mr. Hogg.] Do you believe that there was any difference of opinion between the professional gentlemen concerned as to the judge to whom the appeal should should be made?—I do not know that there was; I am not aware that the professional gentlemen upon our side said anything upon the subject.

A. Seton, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18470. Then your recollection does not serve you to state that there was any difference of opinion expressed in your hearing between the professional gentlemen concerned on both sides as to the judge to whom the appeal should be made?—I am not aware that there was; I am only aware that the conversation generally took place.

18471. If there had been any distinct difference of opinion upon that subject, being a matter of importance, it would probably have impressed itself upon your memory?—It possibly might; it is possible that it might have taken place; but I will not charge my memory with stating more than that there was that general conversation.

Conway Edward Dobbs, Esq., called in; and Examined.

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

18472. Chairman.] ARE you a barrister residing in Dublin?—I am.

18473. And you are registering barrister for the city of Dublin?—I am.

18474. How long have you held that situation?—Since January 1833.

18475. Mr. O'Connell.] You are appointed by Mr. Maxwell Blaker, who was chairman for the county of Dublin?—Yes, with the approbation of the Lord Lieutenant for the time being.

18476. Chairman.] How many sessions do you hold in a year?—Four.

18477. Do they last any considerable time?—It depends upon the number of notices; some of them have lasted a very short time, and some a very long time. The first two years after I was appointed, viz. the years 1833 and 1834, I scarcely sat more than one day each time; there were very few claimants came forward.

18478. Were there very few claimants under other rights as well as under the rights of freemen?—Very few under all rights; perhaps not more than 12 to 20 of all classes put together at a sessions.

18479. Was there any opposition made to the class of freemen being admitted at the beginning of the year 1835?—None: there were no professional men attended the sessions, if I recollect right, during the years 1833 and 1834.

18480. Immediately after the general election of 1834 and 1835, opposition was organized on the one hand, and support was organized on the other?—Exactly so.

18481. What was the course of proceeding on the part of the opponents of persons claiming to be registered under the right of freemen, in the first instance; did they wish to examine into any particulars, and what were those particulars?—The first time the matter was particularly pressed before me was at the sessions of February 1835; and, to the best of my recollection, the points then urged were principally these: first, that subsequent to the Reform Bill all the freemen of the city of Dublin were honorary, and not entitled to be registered; that upon the registry I should go into the question, and ascertain the right and title of each freeman previous to his admission, the grounds upon which the corporation has admitted him, in fact, and also that the only proper evidence of a freeman's admission was upon a stamped entry.

18482. In what way did you decide those points?—I admitted the freemen; I overruled those objections.

18483. Did you overrule the necessity of the investigation?—I did; I refused to go into it. I thought I was bound to take the admission of the corporation, and not to go into the previous title of the claimant.

18484. That was your judicial decision?—It was.

18485. Mr. Lefroy.] Upon the production of what evidence did you feel yourself bound not to go into the previous inquiry?—The question as to the nature of the evidence almost grew incidentally to what it did latterly. At first they gave different evidence in different cases. In some cases they produced the roll of freemen, which is a roll signed by each freeman, and upon that roll it does not appear whether the freeman was admitted by grace especial, by birth, by marriage or by service; consequently, that was not sufficient, inasmuch as it was necessary, in my opinion, to show whether they were admitted by reason of birth, marriage or service. They supplied that evidence, in some cases, by producing a book, which was called afterwards the "small book," a book kept by the town-clerk, Mr. Archer, or persons in his office; in which book it appeared that such a person was admitted by birth or by service, or whatever the right was.

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18486. That book showed the nature of the right?—It did.

18487. Chairman.] You considered the book conclusive as to the individual being a freeman?—I considered that that was sufficient evidence; and at first, I do not think the certificate of the town-clerk was usually produced; that little book and the roll were ruled in some cases to be sufficient.

18488. Mr. Hamilton.] Did you consider the evidence sufficient to throw the onus of impeaching the title upon the person objecting to it?—Yes; one great object of the persons upon the other side was, to require the beseeches to be produced, and in one or two cases the freemen did produce the beseeches, and they afterwards refused to produce them.

18489. Chairman.] Then what you ruled was, that if they refused to go into evidence of their right to the freedom, you did not compel them to do so?—Certainly.

18490. Mr. Lefroy.] You did not require further evidence than what arose from the roll and that book?—No; I was of opinion that the claimant was not bound to show his title to be admitted into the corporation in the same way as he would do in a court of law upon a quo warranto.

18491. Chairman.] You did not enforce replies to the questions put tending to test the right to the freedom?—Certainly.

18492. But supposing evidence was brought by the opposing party to show that they had not that right to freedom, you would have permitted that to be tendered?—I would; but there was no evidence of the kind that I recollect tendered to me.

18493. You never did decide, therefore, that such evidence should not be admitted?—No.

18494. But you did decide that the parties need not be subject to an examination tending to disprove their franchise?—Those objections that have been given in evidence were not embodied till long subsequent to the time I am speaking of; it was in the year 1836 that those objections were brought forward in the form in which they now appear, and upon the occasion of Mr. Hudson coming to attend the court.

18495. Mr. Lefroy.] Did you, at the time you speak of, prior to 1835, prevent the parties being sifted, as to their right, by questions?—I conceived that I was not to go into the question of title.

18496. Was it the habit to put those questions at the time?—No, it was not.

18497. And you were not at the time called upon to consider how far the parties were or were not bound to answer those questions?—At the time, I have no recollection of that line of examination being pressed; I think it depended more upon the sort of questions I have stated with respect to the stamped entry, and that they were all honorary freemen.

18498. Chairman.] The questions resolve themselves into two classes, one as to the right itself, and the other as to the manner in which the right should be ascertained; and as to the latter, you say that you would admit the necessity of parties answering questions tending to invalidate their right upon several grounds; you say that you would not insist upon their answering questions as to their apprenticeship, as to their birth, or as to their marriage, but you would insist upon their showing the fact of their admission properly into the corporation by the corporation records?—Exactly so.

18499. And that you considered sufficient?—And that I considered sufficient.

18500. Those questions were argued before you in a more solemn manner upon a particular occasion?—They were argued at different times by different counsel.

18501. There was a particular occasion upon which Mr. Piggott and Mr. Hudson came and argued the case before you solemnly?—There was.

18502. What was the date of that?—I cannot exactly state the date, but Mr. Piggott and Mr. Hudson came before me at a later period than what I think has been alluded to; the counsel that came before me and argued the question at the time of those appeals of Carolin and Hyde, to the best of my recollection, were the present Solicitor-general of Ireland, Mr. Brady, and some other gentleman also of rather high rank in the profession.

18503. Can you state at what period the claims of Carolin and Hyde were brought before you?—It appears that Carolin came before me on the 5th of May, and the appeal to the chief baron was decided upon the 30th of the same month.

18504. Mr. O'Connell.] Was he rejected according to your judgment or by consent of the parties?—There was no formal consent of the parties; and upon the question

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

22 June 1837.

tion coming before me the second time, my attention was then called more particularly to the nature of the evidence that should be received of the admission to the freedom, not the general questions that had been disposed of before, but what was sufficient evidence of the admission; and upon that occasion, having some little difficulty about what was the proper evidence, I wished that the case should go before one of the judges of a superior court; I conceived that was the best course in a case of that kind, in which I had any serious doubt about what was the proper evidence; I said, therefore, that I would reject the claimant, they saying at once "We will appeal."

18505. Chairman.] Then it was to satisfy your doubts that this appeal took place?—Yes; to settle the point.

18506. You feeling that it would be more satisfactory to you to have the decision of an appellant judge?—Precisely so.

18507. Mr. Lefroy.] Had you anything to do as to the court to which the appeal was made?—Not at all.

18508. Did you suggest or know to what court the appeal was to be made?—No, I did not even know it.

18509. Chairman.] Did you hear any discussion upon that subject?—Not upon that occasion; there was nothing of the kind upon that occasion.

18510. Were you so close to the parties that might have been expressing opinions, as to be able to negative the assertion that has been made, that there was a good deal of excitement and a good deal of observation made, as to who the judge should be to whom the appeal should be made?—Certainly.

18511. Therefore, you can take upon yourself to negative any assertion of the sort?—I can; I think it arises from confusion of dates, because I can state what did take place afterwards, long subsequent to that.

18512. Will you state what occurred and what was the date of that occurrence?—Long subsequent to that, I should say about a year afterwards, a freeman came up upon Mr. Seton's side, and claimed. It was rather an unusual occurrence; he was asked the usual routine questions by his own side; on the other side they refused to cross-examine him, they said "We will not object to him."

18513. Did he reply to those questions?—He answered the usual questions, such as, where he resided, and all those forms, to show that the notice of registry was right, and produced his certificate.

18514. Did the liberal side put any questions to him to ascertain under what right he claimed to be a freeman?—I cannot say whether they went into the usual routine questions or not, but after the man had been examined, I was called upon by the gentlemen upon that side, to reject him. Mr. Hyndman, the counsel upon the opposite side, immediately said, "What good will that do you; are not you sure of the decision of the chief baron?" alluding to the decision which had been made nearly a year before.

18515. And which was publicly known and talked of?—Yes.

18516. He alluded to the judicial decision which the chief baron had given after solemn argument, some time previously?—He did.

18517. Did Mr. Hyndman, or any gentleman of that side, to your knowle de or belief, express any opinion of the sort previous to the decision of the chief baron?—Certainly not.

18518. Did the party on the opposite side express any opinion of the sort, previous to the decision of the chief baron?—Certainly not.

18519. Mr. Lefroy.] What standing have you at the bar?—Forty years.

18520. You have been a very regular attendant in the hall during that time?—I have.

18521. And you know the opinions of the profession generally?—I believe I do.

18522. Did you ever hear the slightest insinuation against the integrity of the chief baron, or as to the possibility of his judgment being influenced by political motives since he has been upon the bench?—I never did.

18523. Do you believe that it is an opinion entertained by the profession?—Unquestionably not, in my opinion.

18524. Do not you conceive the contrary?—I do.

18525. Who were the counsel that attended the argument of the case of Carolin and Hyde?—The present Solicitor-general, Mr. Brady, and I believe the present Master of the Rolls; he did not argue the question, but my recollection is, that he came there, and being called away by some other business there was no person person argued it but Mr. Brady; but I have no distinct recollection upon the subject.

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18526. Mr. O'Connell.] You have not a sufficiently distinct recollection to state with certainty who argued the case?—No.

18527. Do you recollect whether two argued it or only one?—I think only one.

18528. Mr. Lefroy.] Was Mr. Piggott one?—Mr. Piggott did not come before me upon any question, I think, till subsequent to that.

18529. Mr. O'Connell.] You may be mistaken in thinking there was only one?—I may.

18530. Mr. Hudson may have argued it before you?—He may; he did attend at a subsequent time; and it was in consequence of Mr. Hudson's argument that the particular questions now in point were made.

18531. You, of course, for the appeal, according to the statute, pronounced your reasons for the rejection?—I did.

18532. Those reasons were reduced into writing?—They were.

18533. Have you those?—I have not. I will mention how it was: the attorney upon the conservative side asked me for a particular certificate, and to sign my name to it, to carry it to the Court of Exchequer; when I saw him lately, I endeavoured to obtain it, and was not able to obtain it, in consequence of the death of the attorney in whose hands it had been. The entry I have myself is a very short one. When they asked me for it, to carry to the Court of Exchequer, I gave it them more at length.

18534. Mr. Lefroy.] Then you furnished them with a statement of your reasons?—I stated that I rejected them, inasmuch as they had not given legal evidence of their having been admitted by birth, or service, or marriage, whichever the case was.

18535. Can you state what the nature of the evidence was which they did give?—In the two cases, they gave different evidence: Mr. Hyde contented himself with producing simply his certificate; in Mr. Carolin's case they produced also the book called the "little book."

18536. But in both cases they produced a certificate?—They did. The entry I have with reference to another person, a freeman also, is that it appeared by the certificate of admission that he was admitted to his freedom at Christmas last, by reason of marriage; but it did not appear to me in a satisfactory manner that he was not admitted by grace especial.

18537. Did you reject that person?—His case stood over, to abide the fate of Carolin and Hyde. The party had a right to take the appeal in which case he pleased, and he preferred taking it in Carolin and Hyde.

18538. What is the name of that party?—It was Belton.

18539. Has he been subsequently admitted?—Yes, he was admitted in consequence of the decision in Carolin and Hyde.

18540. Were there any circumstances in the case of Belton which induced you to suppose that he was not properly admitted upon the freeman's roll?—No.

18541. And therefore you only rejected him till the technical point was determined?—The truth is, that he was the first of the three; but they had a right to take the appeal in which case they pleased, and they preferred taking it in the cases of Carolin and Hyde.

18542. Mr. O'Connell.] You consulted the "little book" in that case?—It was the practice at that time, and I presume it was done in that case.

18543. Are you aware that, till after the Reform Bill, persons that passed by marriage the minor guilds were all entered by grace especial in the corporation at large?—I do not know that; I have heard it.

18544. Of course, any person that came before you admitted by grace especial since the Reform Bill you would reject?—Yes.

18545. The admission that comes before you is merely that of the corporation at large?—Yes.

18546. It could not at any time be a question before you, how the man passed the minor guild?—No; I conceive I had no right to go into that.

18547. Before you would give him a right to vote?—No.

18548. Had you been apprised, before you came here, that up to the time of the Reform Bill, all persons that passed the minor guilds by marriage, passed the city at large by grace especial?—I knew nothing of that except from common hearsay; I heard so, but I do not know anything of the fact.

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18549. Are you free of the corporation yourself?—I am not; I am free of no corporation but Carrickfergus, where I have the honour of being recorder.

18550. You have spoken of the chief baron; now, I do not mean to say or to insinuate that your decisions are in the slightest degree affected by your political opinions, but your own political opinions, when you are off the bench, are of the class called conservative?—If I am to define them, they are so.

18551. And your associations at the bar are principally of that class?—They are, inasmuch as I think the majority of the bar are of those sentiments; but I am intimate with gentlemen of the bar of other sentiments.

18552. Have you never heard it said that those who differ from you and the chief baron, in political opinions, have sometimes talked of his bias?—I cannot say that I ever heard any one impute political bias to the chief baron when on the bench.

18553. Have you heard that other people have imputed a political bias to him, even on the bench?—If I am to judge from statements in the public press, I have seen allegations of that kind against him, and against every person that differed from the sentiments of the newspaper.

18554. What we call the liberal press, in Ireland, does impute matters of that kind?—I think I have seen that press impute things of that kind to him, and to many others.

18555. Of course you have nothing to do with the selection of the judge to whom the appeal goes?—Nothing whatever; a claimant rejected may carry his appeal to the judge sitting at Nisi Prius, in any of the three courts.

18556. Naturally, an appeal to the judge sitting at Nisi Prius, means the chief justice?—Yes, he generally sits at Nisi Prius.

18557. But it may be to any other judge who happens to sit when the appeal comes to be heard?—Yes.

18558. There is occasionally a good deal of controversy and confusion in your court?—There is some little sometimes; two or three gentlemen speaking at the same time.

18559. And necessarily they are more apt to be animated in your court, being a political court?—Yes; but making due allowance for the kind of court it is, I have no reason to complain of the conduct of the persons before me upon either side.

18560. Mr. Hamilton.] Who were present at the time when that rejection took place; and when it is alleged that the conversation with regard to the political bias of the chief baron took place?—The gentlemen who usually attend the court.

18561. Mr. Counsellor Dolling, was he there?—He was a young gentleman that occasionally came in; I do not know whether he was there, but Mr. Hndman was the regular counsel upon that side, and Mr. Curran and Mr. Seton upon the other side.

18562. Chairman.] Was Mr. Stokes there?—I cannot say.

18563. Was Mr. Daly there?—I cannot say; they were only there occasionally.

18564. Was Mr. Collison there?—I presume he was; he attends the court pretty regularly.

18565. Mr. Ryan you have already stated?—He is one of the clerks that attend, and I presume he was there.

18566. Mr. O'Connell.] Has it not been admitted or proved before you that the corporation of Dublin exercise an ultimate right to reject persons claiming the freedom if they please?—That has been argued before me.

18567. And the fact has not been controverted?—I believe not.

18568. Mr. Lefroy.] Your intercourse with the bar is not confined to those merely of conservative opinions?—Certainly not.

18569. You have an equal opportunity of ascertaining the opinions of those of liberal principles?—I am intimate with some gentlemen that I believe are not considered of conservative principles.

18570. Have you ever heard amongst them the slightest insinuation that the chief baron would be influenced by political bias in his judicial determinations?—Certainly not.

18571. Mr. Hamilton.] Notwithstanding its being argued before you that the corporation of Dublin have the ultimate power of rejecting a claimant for the freedom freedom, you felt yourself authorised to admit him upon the certificate of the town-clerk?—I did; Adcock's case was urged before me.

18572. And your judgment went that way previous to the decision of the chief baron?—Yes.

18573. You stated that an objection was made, arising out of the circumstance of the freemen being honorary freemen, and in your judgment you did not think that a valid objection?—No, I do not.

18574. Mr. O'Connell.] Would it not be desirable to have an appeal both ways?—It would, in my opinion, be much more satisfactory.

18575. And then to have the registry made conclusive?—That is rather for the Legislature, not for me.

18576. You are bound, upon every person that comes before you, to pronounce a judicial determination for his admission or rejection?—I conceive I am.

18577. You act judicially in deciding?—I conceive so.

18578. What is the oath put to each individual that claims to register?—The oath is according to the nature of his claim.

18579. You examine the individual upon oath?—Yes.

18580. Is he sworn to give evidence generally, or to answer questions?—He is sworn to make true answers to all such questions as shall be asked of him touching his claim to register.

18581. And the examination goes in some cases to a very considerable length?—It does.

18582. In all cases the oath is put?—Yes; the course is, that he gets his affidavit prepared by one of the clerks, on either side, and that is handed up to me; the man then comes up to be sworn, and he is asked a few preliminary questions by the party bringing him forward, and then he is cross-examined by the opposite party to any reasonable length that they desire.

18583. And you decide judicially upon the propriety of the questions put to him?—I do.

18584. Chairman.] What other rights of voting are admitted in the city of Dublin besides the right arising from freedom of the city?—Freeholders, leaseholders, householders, and rent-chargers.

18585. Is there much investigation instituted with regard to the householders, as to the value?—Very great.

18586. What is the principle of ascertaining the value which you have laid down with regard to householders?—If they are of the value of 10 l.

18587. In what way do you consider the value should be ascertained?—With regard to householders, the payment of the rent I consider to be primâ facie evidence of the value.

18588. A rent of 10 l. clear, and upwards?—Yes; with regard to freeholders and leaseholders, the criterion I have gone by is what it would let for to a solvent tenant over and above the rent the man paid.

18589. With regard to householders, do you consider the proper criterion of value to be that which one party would give, and the other would take, supposing the premises were for letting?—Yes.

18590. You do not admit, as part of the value, any imaginative value which the party may attach to the particular premises?—No, I would investigate, and if I were not satisfied as to the value, I would ask him to produce some other evidence to satisfy me, and give the other party an opportunity of producing contrary evidence if they wished it.

18591. Supposing a party wished to register for a 10 l. house, and it was shown to you that the rent was 8 l., would you allow him to increase the value up to 10 l. by stating that it was worth to him individually 10 l. a year?—I would not consider that sufficient, but if he gave me satisfactory evidence that from a family connexion, or something of that sort, he got a house for 8 l. that was worth 12 l., I would, if I was satisfied of that, admit him.

18592. That you would not consider a fanciful value, but a bonâ fide value?—Certainly.

18593. But you would not admit a man to register upon his swearing that the house was worth to him more than either he gave for it or than another person would give for it in similar circumstances?—I would not.

18594. Were there many claimants under that franchise brought forward whom you thought it your duty to reject?—I have rejected some; not a great many.

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18595. Have any appeals been tried in those cases?—There have not upon the value.

18596. Then in no case in which you have rejected a person claiming under that franchise, has an appeal been entered against your decision?—None for undervalue.

18597. To that extent, therefore, your view of the law has been acquiesced in?—It has.

18598. Although there is great animation on the subject of registration before you?—Certainly there is.

18599. Gentlemen of high professional talent are employed on both sides of the question?—Gentlemen of high professional talent have occasionally come before me, and gentlemen of the profession regularly attend.

18600. Mr. O'Connell.] In general your decisions upon the value have given satisfaction to all?—I perhaps flatter myself they have.

18601. You take all the circumstances into your consideration in deciding upon the value?—I do.

18602. If there be a tailor in the house, and if it be a house fitted up for his trade, you consider that an ingredient in the value?—If I had any evidence that it would let to another tailor for 10 l. a year, and there was no objection to the evidence, I would admit him.

18603. Is the situation of the house one ingredient in the value?—I think it must be.

18604. In deciding the question, you are ready to hear evidence both ways upon it?—I am.

18605. Facilities for trade is another topic that is urged before you?—It is.

18606. For example, a man having a smith's forge as a tenement by itself, if he is able to prove, so that you are satisfied with the proof, that that would let to another smith for 10 l., 11 l. or 12 l. you would admit him?—If he were a householder; but I have never admitted a smith's forge under shop franchise.

18607. If it constituted his dwelling?—Yes. If a person has a tenement that is so situated as that it would let to any person for 10 l., of course I admit him.

18608. Mr. Hamilton.] Then ultimately it resolves itself into the question of marketable value?—Yes.

18609. Chairman.] Supposing a party takes a house, which he lets out in lodgings, would you consider that he should add what he acquires for the lodgings to the rent which he gives for the house?—I would not consider that that should be the criterion; but if he swore that the house was worth 10 l., and that he paid 10 l. for it, I would be satisfied if there was no objection to the evidence.

18610. Supposing a man takes a house, for which he pays 5 l. a year rent, and lets it out in lodgings, by which he makes another 5 l. a year, would you consider that sufficient?—No, I would not, unless it were proved that the house was really worth 10 l. a year.

18611. You would not allow him to increase the value of the house by the sum of money that he might make by letting lodgings in it?—No.

18612. Mr. O'Connell.] But you would consider it a criterion of value if his lodgers paid him 8 l. a year, and he occupied himself a part of it, which was proved to you to be worth 40 s. a year?—I would not register him, unless he gave me evidence that the house would let for 10 l. a year.

18613. Whether in lodgings or otherwise?—In any way that it would let to a good solvent tenant.

18614. A man may make his house productive by letting rooms by the week, and if he, by letting it to weekly tenants, produced an income of 10 l. a year, and also occupied part of it himself, so that he would have 10 l. a year in rent out of part of it, would you allow him to be registered?—I would not, unless I was satisfied that the house was worth 10 l. a year.

18615. Would not the rent it produced be the strongest evidence of its being worth that?—Mere letting in lodgings is not a criterion of value.

18616. Suppose he showed you that he had let three rooms in it by the year at 10 l. a year, and had been regularly paid, and that his tenants were solvent, and occupied the remainder of it himself, would not you consider that a case in which the house was plainly shown to be a house fit to be registered?—If he would take upon him to swear that the house was worth 10 l. I would register him if he was not contradicted.

18617. His own oath, in addition to those facts, you would consider sufficient, unless unless there was some contradiction?—Unless there was something to discredit him; whenever questions nice as to value came before me, I generally asked them on both sides if they will on one side produce corroborating evidence, or if they will produce evidence on the opposite side to contradict it.

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18618. And you decide accordingly upon the balance of evidence?—I do.

18619. Some of those cases have taken a good deal of time?—They have.

18620. If, upon the whole, you form your own opinion judicially that the house is worth 10*l.* a year, you register the man?—I do.

18621. And if, upon the contrary, you are not satisfied that the house is worth 10*l.* a year, you reject him?—I do, and leave him to his appeal.

18622. Chairman.] Have you any document in your possession, or can you recollect the circumstances attending the admission of a freeman of the name of James Connor, upon the 17th of November last?—I have no particular entry; he was admitted; I do not enter any special circumstances when a man is admitted.

18623. You are acquainted with Mr. James Martin, who is agent for the liberal association?—I am.

18624. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you a recollection of this case, except finding it in that book?—Not now.

18626. Is Delgany more than seven miles?—I apprehend it is.

18627. Did it appear that he slept more frequently in Dublin than in Delgany?—I cannot recollect the circumstance, but I am sure I did not admit him unless I was satisfied that the man was a bonâ fide resident the last six months in the city of Dublin, although he might have been occasionally absent at Delgany with some of his family.

18628. Mr. Martin goes on to state that "We argued that he could not be of age at the time he put his notice upon the list; it was self-evident that he was not. Would not swear he was born before the 19th of November 1815; refused to answer.—Is there any record kept in the family of his age? Never saw any; his mother always told him that was his age. Mr. Seton made objections from book, and that he was a minor. Mr. Curran made objections from book—freemen's objections, Nos. 1, 2. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 9½, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17; and also that at the time of his admission and swearing in, and of his giving notice, of his being a minor, and also a minor at the commencement of the registering sessions. He was admitted. According to his own showing, he said he was born the 14th of November 1815. Now he was sworn upon the 4th of November; that was certainly, according to his own showing, 10 days before he was of age." Do you recollect any circumstances of that nature being stated before you?—I do not recollect the circumstances sufficiently to state what was the evidence given by the man, but if I was satisfied that he was of age when he came before me to register, I think I should admit him.

18629. It is further stated: "He was registered upon the 19th of November, and he swore that he was born upon the 14th of November 1815, so that he could not be 21 years of age on the 4th, which was the day he was sworn; it wanted 10 days;" do you think, under those circumstances, that would be a good vote; namely, that being born upon the 14th of November 1815, he was registered upon the 19th of November 1836, but that he gave his notice for claiming on the 4th?—I am not prepared to say that I should reject a man if he appeared to me to be of age when he came before me to register, although he might not have been of age when he gave his notice.

18630. Mr. Hamilton.] Or when he was admitted a freeman?—Or when he was admitted a freeman. I am not aware of any decision which says that a corporation may not admit a minor to the franchise.

18631. Chairman.] You consider it your duty to ascertain that he is of age when

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

22 June 1837.

when he is placed upon the register, but you do not consider it your duty to ascertain that he was of age when he was admitted a freeman?—The inclination of my mind is, that under those circumstances I would admit the man.

18632. Has this point been raised and argued before you, as to the nonage, at the period of the person's admission to the freedom, though of full age at the period when he claimed to be upon the register?—I have no recollection of a particular case, but it may have been urged before me in some case.

18633. But your opinion is, that, under those circumstances, you ought to admit him?—Yes.

18634. Mr. O'Connell.] Supposing the man to have been of age on the 15th of November 1836, you would register him as a freeman on the 17th of that month, he being then 21 and two days, although he admitted that his admission as a freeman was some six or eight months before?—I think I should.

18635. You only inquire into his being of age at the period at which he comes to register?—I think so.

18636. And leave the question as to minority at the time of his being made a freeman between him and the corporation?—Yes.

18637. You have seen Mr. James Martin attending the registry?—Yes.

18638. He has always had a book in which he makes entries?—Yes; I have seen him make entries.

18639. And probably occasionally stop the answer till he has time to take it down?—Yes, I have seen gentlemen saying to the other side, "Give me time till I take down the evidence."

18640. They have had books on both sides?—They have.

18641. And in latter times they always make the objections on both sides, so as to preserve evidence of them?—They have been a vast deal more particular in the last three or four sessions than they were before, in consequence of which I have had more trouble in the registry.

18642. Chairman.] How long would you say, upon the average, each vote takes?—I cannot exactly say that; but I made a memorandum of the numbers registered at all the sessions in the years 1835 and 1836, and the first two sessions of the present year. In February 1835 I registered 303; the average on each day was 34.

18643. Did that include 50 l. registries?—That included all. In the subsequent May the average was as high as 40 a day; the next sessions the average was about 25; the next registry, I think, the average is about 21; in February 1836, I think, they averaged about 26 each day.

18644. How many hours a day do you sit?—Regularly from half-past ten in the morning till four.

18645. That is five hours and a half a day?—In the last November sessions I did not go into any new case after half-past three, it being generally dark.

18646. That is about five hours a day?—Yes.

18647. Then you would not state that it was correct that each vote generally takes nearly 25 minutes?—That must be a mistake, for I find by this memorandum that I registered some days as many as 50 or 60 persons; latterly, I could not register so many, for the line of examination on both sides is much more protracted, and the objections are much more numerous.

18648. Mr. O'Connell.] The 50 l. voters do not take much time?—They take only a minute or two.

18649. And the 10 l. voters take very little time?—If it be a leaseholder there are sometimes objections made.

18650. But generally speaking, as a class, the 20 l. rentchargers are not likely to take time?—There are not many rentchargers before me.

18651. The 20 l. franchise, in general, is not likely to take time?—I do not know; parties inquire into that as much as any other.

18652. Have you any recollection of any one of that class taking time?—Not particularly; but there may be objections in the case of a 20 l. leaseholder that require examination as much as in any other case.

18653. Mr. Hamilton.] They produce their leases?—They do.

18654. There is an inquiry with respect to the amount of the stamp, as well as with regard to the value of the property?—Yes.

18655. Mr. O'Connell.] Will you state the number in each of those sessions?—In the first sessions in 1835 there were 303 cases disposed of, either admitted or rejected.

18656. Chairman.] It has been stated by Mr. Martin, in answer to this question,

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

22 June 1837.

tion, "If they take an average of 25 minutes, is not that an extended examination?—No, the writing it down takes a great deal of time." Do you suppose that it is fair to infer that each of the cases brought before you takes upon the average 25 minutes?—That must be a mistake, because I could not register half the number that I have registered, if they took 25 minutes.

18657. And therefore of course if it applies only to cases of persons actually registered, it must be still more inaccurate?—It is a protracted case that takes 25 minutes; there must be a very long examination to occupy such a time as that.

18658. This answer is also given by Mr. Martin to this question: "Do you mean to state that the discussion upon those two questions only, generally took 25 minutes in each case?—Yes, and sometimes a great deal longer; when we want to ask a question, sometimes there is an hour's argument whether it will be admitted." Is that a circumstance which often occurs?—No, I think decidedly not.

18659. You would consider an hour's argument a long time with regard to asking the questions?—Indeed I would; I very seldom have long arguments before me.

18660. How long did the case in which Mr. Carolin and Mr. Hyde were rejected take in argument?—I cannot recollect.

18661. An hour or two hours?—I think probably an hour or an hour and a half.

18662. It did not take the whole day?—Certainly not.

18663. You do not mean to say that it was half a day, but that it was an hour or two hours?—It occupied a good deal of time, because it was considered a very important question, and of course the counsel were at liberty to speak.

18664. But after the decision of the chief baron, did the counsel try to impugn that decision before you, and argue upon the propriety of putting such questions as that decision overruled?—Yes; that case in which Mr. Hudson came and argued and prepared those questions was long subsequent to the decision; for some time after the decision in Carolin and Hyde's case, the cases took very little time; the thing seemed to be acquiesced in by the gentlemen for some time; then the question was again urged upon me, and pressed upon me more than once.

18665. What was the date of that argument?—I do not exactly know the date of it.

18666. Was it last November?—I think it was at the November sessions.

18667. Taking the last February sessions and the last May sessions, did you find that the counsel argued at great length upon the propriety of putting those questions?—Not then; because they were in the habit of regularly putting those questions, and I as regularly of refusing them to be answered.

18668. Then do you suppose that 25 minutes was by any means the average of time consumed in the admission of freemen at the last sessions?—I think that is much beyond it.

18669. Was the admission of the freemen generally a matter of more celerity than any other class of voters?—Till those objections and this examination that Mr. Seton spoke of took place, the freemen took a very short time. Under the present system, it takes a good deal of time, as there are those questions all to be put, and they are objected to on the other side; and then they appeal to me, "Is the claimant bound to answer them?"

18670. Does it take a quarter of an hour for each case?—I think they take from 10 to 15 minutes.

18671. Sir Robert Ferguson.] What was the number of cases disposed of in the last November and the last February sessions?—In February 1837, they averaged about 19 in a day; in the preceding sessions, in November, it was about 23.

18672. What was the highest and the lowest number in each day upon those sessions?—In the November sessions, I have 39 in one day; and there is one day that I have as few as nine; but that must have been owing to some particular circumstance, such as the absence of the town-clerk, or something of that sort. In last February, I see the greatest number registered in a day was 33, and on the day I closed there were only four registered.

18673. Can you say how many hours you sat upon the day on which you registered 33?—I cannot particularly say; but I sat at all events from half past ten till half past three, perhaps four o'clock.

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

22 June 1837.

18674. Chairman.] That would be about ten minutes for each case, upon the average?—About that.

18675. Mr. O'Connell.] And would give, perhaps, about 20 minutes for battled votes?—Some would not take five.

18676. Mr. Hamilton.] Did you ever see Mr. Martin's book in which he entered the proceedings?—I never saw it, except seeing it before him in court.

18677. Did the circumstances of the court admit of the entries being regularly made?—I never took any notice of the entries on either side.

18678. From the state of the court, was it possible that the entries could be regularly and fairly made?—That I cannot pretend to say; a great deal depends upon the party's being a competent person to take notes.

18679. Mr. O'Connell.] A competent person in court could generally take down an abstract of the proceedings?—Certainly.

18680. Chairman.] Do you take down any evidence in writing yourself?—I do not; it would render the registry very tedious.

18681. Do you take any memoranda of the names?—I enter in this book a short memorandum of the rejections, but not of the admissions; I enter the rejections in case the parties think proper to appeal; if there is anything in the case which makes a chance of appealing, I am more particular in making the entry; if I have a doubt about it I often press them to take an appeal in a particular case, but I take no note of the evidence when an admission takes place.

18682. Mr. Hamilton.] You have stated that you thought you would admit a man to register, though he had been admitted to his freedom previous to his being of age, provided he was of age at the time he registered; now, supposing a notice, not in the case of a freeman, but in the case of a leaseholder or freeholder, or householder, given previous to the claimant being of age, should you admit him, provided he was of age at the time he came to register?—I would act upon the same principle in the one case as in the other.

18683. Supposing a lease devolving upon a person not of age, and that he gave notice to register before he was of age, would you admit him if he was of age at the time of the registration?—I think I would, if he had given notice of his intention to register.

18684. You consider the cases analogous?—The impression upon my mind is, that it is sufficient if the qualification is complete at the time the man comes for registry; I think, before me, there is often confusion, both in the answers of witnesses and in the questions put by the parties, confounding admission and swearing; but the moment it is explained it then appears that the claimant is alluding to the day of his being sworn, and he talks of it as his admission; and perhaps the question has been put in that way till it is explained; and then it comes out that the day of swearing is what is meant.

18685. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you register persons who had neither been admitted nor sworn at the time the notices were served?—I cannot say that; but I certainly admitted persons who were sworn after they had served notice.

18686. If a man be admitted in 1835 and serves his notice in 1836, and is not sworn in till the day before the registry, would you admit that man?—I would; I do not recollect the thing occurring in any individual case, but I dare say, it has.

18687. Supposing the notice served before the man was admitted, but that, pending his notice, he was admitted and sworn in?—I am not prepared to say that the man should be registered.

18688. Is it your impression that you would reject him?—It is.

18689. If your attention had been brought to that point, of the real admission being before he served his notice, you would reject him?—I am inclined to think I would.

18690. Your opinion is, that he would not be entitled to be registered?—That is my impression at this moment.

MEMBERS PRESENT.

Mr. O'Connell.	Mr. Serjeant Jackson.
Mr. Morgan John O'Connell.	Mr. Lefroy.
Sir Robert Ferguson.	Lord Granville Somerset.
Mr. Hamilton.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. William Jordan Lambert called in; and further Examined.

18691. Chairman.] THIS is a document called the impeachment of Mr. John Woods, late master of the corporation of smiths, of the city of Dublin; in what year was this document drawn up?—In 1825.

18692. Do you know in whose handwriting it is?—I think it is in a Mr. Edward Cook's handwriting, an attorney.

18693. Mr. O'Connell.] Is he living or dead?—Living.

18694. Where is his residence?—No. 1, Batchelor's-walk, is his residence.

18695. What makes you think it is his handwriting?—Being conversant with his handwriting.

18696. Knowing it?—Knowing it: he was one of the committee appointed upon that occasion.

18697. And, from your knowledge of the handwriting, you believe it to be his?—I believe it to be his.

18698. Chairman.] I only want to know if you can state, from that document, whether or no that master was not charged with improper conduct in not answering a mandamus which was issued for the admission of certain members into your guild?—

18699. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you read it?—No, I never read this document. If your Lordship would allow me, I would wish to refer to the transaction book that recites those charges.

18700. Chairman.] Look to September 1824 in your transaction book.

[The Witness did so.]

18701. Can you state, from the transaction book, whether or no two persons of the name of Adcocks, and a person of the name of Henderson, presented petitions for admission to your guild?—Yes, they did.

18702. What were the proceedings upon those petitions?—They applied to the Court of King's Bench.

18703. What were the proceedings in your guild upon those petitions?

18704. Mr. O'Connell.] Do any appear upon your book?—Yes, that upon laying the case before counsel——

18705. Refer to the book.

18706. Chairman.] I want to know what were the proceedings in the guild, as they appear in the transaction book?—In the month of September 1824, it appears that two persons of the name of Adcocks, and a person of the name of Henderson, presented their petitions to Mr. John Woods, the then master of this guild, claiming their freedom in the guild, the two former by birth and the latter by service; it is charged; it then goes on and recites the charges.

18707. What I want to know is what took place in the guild upon their admission?—I stated to your Lordship exactly what I know of it; they applied for a writ of mandamus.

18708. But they did not apply for a writ of mandamus in the first instance; they applied to the guild first?—In the first place, they applied to the guild.

18709. Were they admitted or rejected?—Their petitions were rejected.

18710. Then did they have recourse to any legal process?—They applied to the Court of King's Bench for a conditional order for a writ of mandamus.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

23 June 1837.

18711. Did they obtain that order?—They obtained a conditional order.

18712. Did Henderson, as well as the Adcocks, both?—The three.

18713. Were they, in consequence of that, admitted?—They were.

18714. And sworn in?—They were, as appears by the book.

18715. Now was it by right of service that Henderson claimed?—Yes.

18716. Was his indenture ever enrolled?—Never.

18717. Was it not an object, on the part of the guild, to resist the entry of Henderson into their guild?—Considered a paramount object.

18718. Was the objection on the subject, the non-enrolment of the indenture of Henderson, ever brought forward in opposition to his claim?—It does not appear that it ever was; I was not in the guild at that time.

18719. Mr. O'Connell.] Was he not admitted upon compromise, Mr. Ford, the plaintiff's attorney, giving up the costs?—Exactly so; that is what I stated in my last examination.

18720. Did you not state that they took some opinion on the subject?—Yes.

18721. Have you that opinion?—I have not.

18722. Had you any property to go to law with the individuals?—Yes, funds.

18723. What property have you?—We have none now, but at that period we had, and until lately we had.

18724. What property had you?—The sum of 20 l. is paid by each common-councilman upon his election, upon the trying of the election, that makes 80 l., and that was lodged in the treasurer's hands.

18725. Mr. Hamilton.] Would you take this return into your hand; this is the report of the Municipal Corporation Commissioners for the City of Dublin; and tell me what they state in the year 1835 to be the amount of property belonging to your guild?—This is a return I made myself, I see.

18726. What is the amount of property stated in that return as belonging to the guild?—£. 340; in the Bank of Ireland, about 127 l.; in the hands of Mr. James Scarlett, 90 l.; in the hands of Mr. Patterson, of Prussia-street, 20 l.; in Mr. Joseph Smith's hands, with interest, 103 l.

18727. Mr. O'Connell.] What became of that property?—Mr. Joseph Smith's; it was in his hands, but he became a bankrupt. Mr. Patterson, the present master, has 20 l.; Mr. James Scarlett has in his hands 90 l.

18728. By being in his hands you mean he owes?—Decidedly; he holds it for the guild since he was master.

18729. Is he able to pay?—I would say not.

18730. You mean he owes it, in short?—I do: he holds it to the credit of the corporation.

18731. Do you think they will ever get a penny of that?—I do not think they ever will.

18732. Mr. Hamilton.] Was he solvent at the time that mandamus was applied for?—Yes, considered so.

18733. Mr. O'Connell.] There were several charges brought against the master, John Woods, were there not?—Yes, there were.

18734. In whose handwriting is this part of the book, 1824?—William Roe, clerk, pro tempore.

18735. He was acting as clerk at the time?—He was acting as clerk at the time.

18736. The charge brought against him is that these persons, the Adcocks and Henderson, in claiming, the former by birth and the latter by service, that they obtained a conditional order for a mandamus; it is then charged that he was applied to to call a post-hall, for the purpose of taking that matter into consideration, and to employ a proper and qualified person to act as attorney; that he declined to do so, and that he appointed a person of the name of Brierly to act for the corporate guild, who employed a person of the name of Collett to resist the mandamus, and that he took no effectual or proper means to show cause against the conditional order. It is in these words: "And it is further charged that no effectual or proper measures had been adopted by Mr. Woods, the then master, acting with this guild at large, to show any cause against the conditional order which had been granted by the Court of King's Bench, by reason whereof the conditional order so granted for a mandamus was made absolute, without any cause having been shown or any attempt having been made to show cause against same. It is further charged that when said persons above named had succeeded in procuring a mandamus as aforesaid, and had presented themselves to this guild-hall hall to be sworn as freemen of this guild, that Mr. Woods, the then master, acting in his place and capacity of master of this guild, did, without any pretext, exception or objection, permit said persons to be admitted and sworn as freemen of this guild, knowing that they had not been sworn and previously admitted in the corporation of the City of Dublin and the liberties thereof, contrary to the charter of this guild, and the well-known usage and custom thereof."

18737. Have you made out a list of the persons admitted into your guild by marriage?—I have not.

18739. Mr. O'Connell.] Find that, if you please: that could not have been carried, because they remain on the book. There are various other charges, are there not, of misconduct against Mr. Woods, contained in the same book?—Various others. "That the charges purporting to be against Mr. John Woods, late master, be expunged, being moved by George Gunn, seconded by Michael Stevenson, carried by a majority."

18740. That is upon the 30th of March 1836?—Yes.

18741. "It was moved and seconded that the charge preferred against the clerk of the guild be buried in oblivion. William Binns." Does it not appear what they did with that?—That was Mr. Burne, the clerk.

18742. Not Brierly?—No, Brierley was a warden; he was what is called master's warden in Mr. Woods' time.

18743. Mr. Hamilton.] When those charges were made against the master, of course the guild was rather indignant at the mandamus being allowed to be obtained?—They were indignant at what was considered a job of his, to employ his warden, Mr. Brierly, to try and get another attorney; his conduct all through looked more for interest than for the concern of the guild, and they were anxious to impeach him by all means.

18744. They were anxious also to impeach, I presume, the franchise of Henderson and the Adcocks?—Yes, to resist it to the utmost.

18745. Now Henderson's indenture not being enrolled, as I understood you to state, if the non-enrolment had been considered by the corporation a good point, they would have been glad enough to have availed themselves of it, I presume?—Very glad indeed.

18746. Mr. O'Connell.] They did not do anything at all in the King's Bench?—No, they did not: it would appear, from the opinion of Mr. Justice Burne, that he induced them to take no proceedings to resist the mandamus.

18747. Have you got that opinion?—No, I have not; you will have it by the next day; I hope so; I do not think I have altogether had time to get it yet.

Conway Edward Dobbs, Esq., called in; and further Examined.

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

18748. Mr. Hamilton.] I AM anxious to know on what principle you decide the question of occupation; what you consider under the Reform Bill a good occupation?—What cases do you allude to; is it leasehold, freehold or household?

18749. Household; do you consider an occupation by workmen an occupation within the meaning of the Act?—No, I should not; but I have admitted cases where the person occupied by servants, without his having, perhaps, at the moment entered into the occupation himself.

18750. Mr. O'Connell.] Is it your meaning, that if a man resided in a house and left it in order to have it put into repair, and had workmen there repairing it, that that would be an interruption of his occupation?—No, I should not say that; I allude in my answer to an original occupation.

18751. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] You would consider that a different case from the case of a person who had not hitherto gone into the occupation of the house personally, but was merely employing workmen who had to repair it for him?—Yes.

18752. And if a man had been previously resident in the house, and employed workmen for the purpose of fitting it up, you would not consider that a suspension of his franchise?—I would not.

18753. Mr. O'Connell.] Now, suppose a man was in the occupation of a house by himself and his family, and it went out of repair, and suppose that he was a month

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

23 June 1837.

month out of the occupation of it while it was under repair; that he left the house, and employed workmen of his own, whom he paid, to put it in repair, and then came back into the actual possession of it again by his own family, you would consider that as warranting him to register in respect of that house?—The truth is, I do not recollect any case of the kind actually occurring before me; but at present my impression is, that I would not consider a temporary circumstance of that kind as suspending the occupation; but I do not recollect any case of the kind having occurred.

18754. Then suppose a man took a house, and sent his servant into it, and afterwards came to reside himself actually in it, would you consider his occupation of that house to have commenced from the time that he took possession of it by his servant?—Yes, I would; but that kind of case, I think, would very much depend on the circumstances of each individual case. If I were satisfied of the bonâ fide occupation in that way, I would consider it sufficient.

18755. The bonâ fide ownership and occupation?—Yes: nothing of the kind, as I recollect, occurred before me, except perhaps where the person did not actually go to sleep in the house, may be one or two days less than six months, but had taken the house, and had occupied it by servants for two or three days, so as to bring him within the six months.

18756. Now, if he occupied it for those two or three days, not by servants hired by the month or six months, but by carpenters and bricklayers repairing it for his actual occupation, do you think that that would make any difference in your decision?—I do think it would; I think my practice has been to consider it necessary that there should be some person in the capacity of a servant, either the man himself, or some person in the capacity of a servant occupying.

18757. Would you consider a person employed and paid by the owner, for example, a carpenter being in the house, and working in it for two or three days, would you consider there would be a difference between that and the servant?—I really think, if he were merely employed as a carpenter, and did not sleep in the house, that I would make the distinction. So far as any case of the kind has ever occurred before me, I think I have acted upon that principle; but it must be a person occupying it himself, some of his family, or a person in the situation of a servant.

18758. As contradistinguished from a mere workman?—From a person merely going in the day-time to work; but I really had very few cases of the kind ever occur, and I am not sure that there was any one in which I was called upon for my decision.

18759. You have no recollection of deciding such a point at all?—I cannot say I have; but I will not at all say that I did not, because it strikes my mind at this moment, that is the impression I have now.

18760. Mr. Lefroy.] You distinguish the case of the workman from the servant, because the workman does not occupy, nor is he employed to occupy, nor does he represent his employer in respect of the occupation at all?—That is the distinction; that is the ground certainly of the distinction upon which I would decide, be it right or wrong.

18761. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Is it your opinion that there are many persons who are really not qualified to vote, remain on the registry for want of an annual purification of the registry?—Why really that is a question I cannot well answer; I should suppose that the greater number that would be in that situation, would be persons who had changed their residence; of that I can have no knowledge in the world.

18762. Do you think that the want of an annual revision of the registry, must not naturally leave upon the registry for a considerable time persons who ought to be removed from it?—Certainly, I say that I should suppose so; but I have no means in my situation of knowing the fact.

18763. No; but your conclusion as a man conversant with the subject, must be, I should think, that that would be the consequence?—Yes.

18764. Do you consider that the constant occurrence, every quarter, of registration tends to keep up an excitement amongst the constituency or the inhabitants of towns?—I think it must, naturally.

18765. Would you consider it a beneficial change to have an annual registry and an annual revision of the registry, instead of having the thing done quarterly, as it is now?—I think it would.

18766. That is your opinion?—It is.

18767. How

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

23 June 1837.

18767. How long have you been acting as registering barrister?—From the time of the passing of the Reform Act, from January 1833.

18768. Mr. O'Connell.] That is, from immediately after the first registry?—Yes; no other person was appointed to register alone for the city of Dublin previously to myself.

18769. Chairman.] But the very first registry was conducted by many barristers?—Yes; about eight, I think.

18770. Mr. O'Connell.] Were you one of the registering barristers in the first instance?—Not in Dublin; I went down for three weeks as an assistant to Mr. Molineaux, in the county of Mayo, he not being able to complete the registry. There were several barristers sent down to different counties, and I was sent down to Mayo for three weeks.

18771. You are recorder of Carrickfergus?—I am.

18772. You have nothing to do with the registry of that county?—Nothing.

18773. Are the rights admitted in Carrickfergus by birth, service and marriage?—They are.

18774. And have been always?—Have been for a good number of years.

18775. At least they were before the Reform Bill?—Yes.

18776. Mr. Serjeant Jackson.] Are you of opinion that it impedes the full ascertainment of the right of persons who are candidates to register, that you have not any power to compel the attendance of witnesses on the registry court?—I cannot say that it strikes me so.

18777. What is your opinion on the subject; would you think it advantageous that the registry court should be armed with power to compel the attendance of witnesses upon that court?—It would protract the business greatly; I cannot say I have found much inconvenience from not having the power.

18778. Have you found any inconvenience; you say you have not found much; have you found any?—I cannot say that I have found any.

18779. Have you formed any opinion, one way or the other, whether it would be advantageous or otherwise to have the law in that respect changed?—With regard to value, the manner in which the registry has been carried on by me, perhaps, is somewhat different from what it is in counties: in this respect, that when a nice case of value has occurred to me, I have, with the consent of both parties, allowed it to stand over till the next day, allowing both parties to bring forward witnesses, if they think proper, one in support and the other in opposition to it.

18780. Then the parties can only bring forward such witnesses as will come forward?—None other.

18781. Suppose the witnesses that are competent to give evidence will not come forward, have you any power of compelling them to come forward?—No.

18782. Is not that a disadvantage?—Yes, I think it is a disadvantage.

18783. Must it not always, in the administration of any branch of public justice, be a disadvantage?—I only mean to say, the parties have not complained to me of their want of power to bring forward witnesses.

18784. But do not you think it must necessarily be disadvantageous to any jurisdiction that is not armed with that authority?—I think, to every court, unquestionably it would be an advantage to have power to bring forward witnesses, as a general principle, undoubtedly.

18785. Are you able to say whether or not any intimidation is used for the purpose of bringing forward persons to register?—No, I have seen nothing of the kind before me.

18786. On any side of the question?—On any side.

18787. Chairman.] I suppose the eagerness of party spirit in Dublin is such, that on either side there is a great readiness to come forward to register, and a great readiness to come forward to support or to oppose the registering of individuals?—I think there is a great readiness in getting people to give evidence generally.

18788. Mr. O'Connell.] There is a considerable organization, it must appear even to you, on both sides?—Certainly.

18789. Great warmth on both sides?—Certainly.

18790. I believe they conduct themselves rather civilly to each other, after all, when they come before you?—Considering the nature of the business done in my court, I cannot complain of the conduct of anybody there: of course there is sometimes a little warmth for a few minutes, and may be, a little violence for a short time: but, considering the nature of the court, I cannot complain of them.

18791. Making

C. E. Dobbs, Esq.

23 June 1837.

18791. Making due allowance for that, there is nothing to be seriously complained of; though occasionally, of course, there is a little warmth?—Occasionally there is a little warmth and a little violence.

18792. Mr. Hamilton.] Is it a correct description of your court, that it is very frequently a bear-garden?—No, I would not say so.

18793. Do you happen to know whether the corporation of Carrickfergus exercises the power of rejecting claimants under the several rights you state?—Their mode of proceeding is totally different there, and I think is not very well defined in practice.

18794. Do they, in point of fact, reject a claimant under the right of marriage, or birth, or servitude?—Generally speaking, they admit them; I will not say they have not rejected them, but generally speaking they admit; but the admissions do take place there in a very loose way; they take place before the mayor, with the assembly of the whole constituency of freemen; the whole body of freemen are in the practice of attending upon the court when freemen are admitted.

18795. Is the question put with respect to the admission of a claimant, whether he should be admitted or not?—Yes, I have seen mayors do it repeatedly.

18796. Then in point of fact, it is put to the meeting to admit or not?—In point of fact, it is generally put to the meeting whether they will admit or not.

18797. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you ever known a case in which the right was admitted, and the person rejected, notwithstanding?—I think I have, but very rarely.

18798. You cannot state any particular case?—No, I cannot; my knowledge relates to many years back: latterly, I have been resident in Dublin exclusively.

Mr. Hamilton.	Mr. O'Connell.
Lord Granville Somerset.	Mr. Morgan John O'Connell.
Mr. Lefroy.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. William Seton, called in; and Examined.

Mr. William Seton.

30 June 1837.

18799. Chairman.] WHAT are you; are you a professional person?—No, I am not.

18800. Have you any professional occupation?—No, I have not.

18801. Mr. O'Connell.] Were you employed by any body of persons to attend the registry in Dublin?—I was.

18802. By what body?—The Central Independent Club.

18803. How long did you attend?—I attended for it five sessions, and I had attended three sessions before that.

18804. As assisting your father?—Yes.

18805. On five sessions you attended, as engaged by the Central Club?—Yes.

18806. Did you make notes?—I did for those five sessions.

18807. Have you preserved those notes?—I have; they are now in the possession of Mr. Finn, who is the treasurer.

18808. You took down objections to voters?—Yes.

18809. You examined voters?—I did not examine them.

18810. But you were present at the examination?—I took down the examination.

18811. Made abstracts of the evidence?—Made abstracts.

18812. Then you, from those notes, will be able to state, in case you are called upon, the various objections taken to the voters?—Certainly, on both sides.

18813. You particularly attended to the registry of the freemen?—My father more particularly attended to that.

Mr. William Seton.

30 June 1837.

18814. You are able to tell the Committee that, since the Chief Baron's decision, they were not allowed to examine into anything that was stated in the certificate given by the town-clerks?—No; Mr. Dobbs thought himself bound by the decision of the Chief Baron.

18815. As making that certificate conclusive of all the facts stated in it?—Precisely.

18816. Chairman.] Did Mr. Dobbs decide differently, as to the questions which freemen applying to be registered should answer, previous to the Chief Baron's decision, to what he did afterwards?—I think they more particularly examined before that; and he rejected two men on purpose to let it go to an appeal, Mr. Hyde and Mr. Carolin, that it might go to an appeal; and after that he considered that the production of the certificate was quite sufficient.

18817. Previous to the rejection of those two individuals for the purpose of appeal, did he, or did he not, permit the freemen who were applying to be admitted upon the register of voters to answer any questions which he afterwards decided they should not answer?—I declare I do not think I can fairly answer that question. At that time, the 1st of February, the registry in 1835, I was brought there by my father, and I was merely acting in filling affidavits and certificates and things of that sort; I did not attend to the examination very particularly; and in May 1835, I was engaged by a party in Dublin, by one parish, to attend to them, but I had nothing to do with that. I do not think I could answer that question.

18818. Who were the counsel that came down to argue the cases when those two persons were rejected?—I think Mr. Serjeant Jackson was one, and Mr. Hatchett the other.

18819. Who came down to argue the case on your side?—At that time I believe Mr. O'Connell was one of the gentlemen.

18820. When did Mr. Piggott and Mr. Hudson come down to argue any case on the part of the liberal party?—Mr. Piggott came down last August to argue a case.

18821. Was that the first time that they appeared?—That was the first time Mr. Piggott ever appeared in court; I think it was in August.

18822. Then if this statement has been made, it is not correct according to your recollection: the question asked is, "By whom was the appeal made?—By the conservative party; he rejected (meaning the barrister rejected) them for the purpose of appealing; he had admitted twenty upon that sessions, before Mr. Piggott and Mr. Hudson came down to argue it, and then it was agreed that two should be rejected, on the understanding that the opposite party would appeal and try the question." Does that agree with your recollection of those facts?—I really do not recollect Mr. Piggott there at that time.

18823. That does not agree with your recollection of the facts of the appeal cases?—It may have been so; I do not recollect it.

18824. Does it agree with your recollection?—There was an argument, I know.

18825. Was that argument conducted by Mr. Piggott and Mr. Hudson?—I really cannot answer that.

18826. What took place in court at the time that that appeal was decided upon; was there any conversation as to what court or to what persons the appeal should be made?—Upon my word I cannot answer that.

18827. Were you in court upon the occasion?—Not to take down any evidence, or anything of that kind, I was not.

18828. Were you present upon that occasion?—I was present part, and part not.

18829. But you were not constantly in court?—During that session I was not constantly in court; that was in May 1835.

18830. Then you have no recollection of what took place?—I could not say, indeed.

18831. You can give no evidence on the subject, one way or the other?—Certainly not.

18832. Can you give any evidence on anything that took place subsequently to that?—In February 1836 I was employed, and I had to keep a regular book of every one that came.

18833. You have not got that here?—I have not.

Mr.

George Archer, Esq

30 June 1837.

George Archer, Esq., called in; and further Examined.

18834. Mr. O'Connell.] YOU have the books of the corporation here?—Yes.

18835. You are apprised that this is a return made by Mr. Lambert, of persons admitted in right of marriage to the guild of smiths, previous to the passing of the Reform Bill?—Yes.

18836. Now be so good as to look at this person; the entry is this: "25th June 1777, Thomas Bookey, smith, married to the daughter of Thomas Truelock;" does that Thomas Bookey, smith, appear to have passed the city?—Yes; by grace especial.

18837. Now look to June the 6th 1791, the entry in the smiths' is Walter Nangle, as married to the daughter of George Sall; have you got that?—No, I have not.

18838. He could not have passed the city before 1791?—No.

18839. How far does that book go down to?—This goes down to 1820.

18840. Do you find him?—No; he does not appear to have passed.

18841. That Walter Nangle does not appear to have passed the city at large at all?—No.

18842. Now look to John Harris, January 1802; the entry is, married to the daughter of John Gill?—I do not find John Harris.

18843. John Harris, then, has not passed the city?—No.

18844. Well, the same date, the guild of smiths, 14th January 1802, Richardson Turkington?—Richardson Turkington, Christmas 1831.

18845. Grace especial?—Grace especial.

18846. Now, Joseph Bromlow, January 1802, in the smiths', married to the daughter of Jonathan Binns?—I think he was a freeman; but I do not find that name.

18847. He does not appear to have passed?—No.

18848. Now look to those that passed the smiths', 22d April 1802; James Buchanan, as married to the daughter of James Clarke?—Yes, I find him.

18849. When did he pass the city?—Easter 1802.

18850. What is the entry?—Grace especial.

18851. The next is 10th April 1817; George Ponder, married to the daughter of Randal Booth?—Yes; Midsummer 1817, George Ponder, smith, by grace especial.

18852. 8th January 1818, in the smiths', Louis Grabham, married to the daughter of George Collis?—Yes.

18853. Read the entry?—Easter, 1818, George Louis Grabham, smith, birth.

18854. That cannot be the same; it is Louis Grabham?—This is George Louis Grabham.

18855. That cannot be the same; have you any Louis Grabham?—No, I have not.

18856. There is no such man?—No.

18857. Louis Grabham does not appear?—No.

18858. Then, have the goodness to look for Thomas Barnes, who, under date 14th January 1819, passed the smiths', as married to the daughter of Richard Smith?—There is Thomas Barnes, Easter 1819; Thomas Barnes, smith, birth.

18859. Then that could not be as married to the daughter of Richard Smith?—Certainly not, according to the practice.

18861. Look to John Moorehead, who was admitted by marriage in the smiths', 6th October 1825?—I find, Christmas 1827, John Moorehead, smith, by grace especial.

18862. Look to an entry in the smiths', 9th October 1828, Thomas Dockrell, married to the daughter of Josias Phillips?—That person did not pass the city of Dublin.

18863. Hugh M'Intyre, entered in the smiths' 23d April 1829, as married to the daughter of William F. Bentley?—I find him.

18864. When did he pass?—Christmas 1830, smith, by grace especial.

18865. The next entry is July 20, 1830, Thomas Payne, as married to the daughter of George Payne; when did he pass the city?—Midsummer 1830, Thomas Payne, smith, grace especial.

18866. Be so good as to look at William Leeper, who, upon the same date, passed

George Archer, Esq.

30 June 1837.

passed the smiths', as married to the daughter of Richard Whiteker?—No, I have not him.

18867. Has he passed?—No.

18868. Have you ascertained, since you were here last, the precise date of the introduction into the books of the corporation at large of the claim by marriage?—No, I have not; I did not understand I was obliged to do that.

18869. Do you remember that you said, in answer to a question of mine, it was about two years after the Reform Bill?—By looking at the beseeches, I think I could find that, if you wish it.

18870. Have you those beseeches here?—I have.

18871. Will you take the trouble to ascertain when first the corporation at large entered the claim of admission by right of marriage?—In Michaelmas assembly, 1832.

18872. That was the first time when the corporation at large entered in its books admissions by right of marriage?—Yes.

18873. And that, you told us, was in consequence of the Reform Bill?—That, coupled with the prior claim of right growing out of marriage, by grace especial.

18874. Before that, all those who passed minor guilds by claim of marriage passed the corporation at large by grace especial?—As far as I know.

18875. You do not know of any entry otherwise?—I do not know before my own period of office, and that was in 1830 when I commenced.

18876. But from examining the books that appears to be so, does not it?—The examination I have made to-day would rather lead to some confusion upon that subject, because I see "birth."

18877. Might not that be by marriage?—No, not by marriage; but finding that the beseeches from the minor corporations come to the great corporation upon claim by marriage, and seeing it here by birth rather confuses me.

18878. As far as you have examined the books of the corporation at large, do you find any entry by right of marriage till after the Reform Bill, in the corporation at large?—No.

18879. Mr. Lefroy.] Did it not appear to you that the beseeches very often were in the alternative when they were founded upon a claim of marriage, either to be admitted by marriage or by grace especial?—I never looked to the beseeches with that view.

18880. I mean in the case of the minor guilds?—I am not aware of how that fact is.

18881. Mr. O'Connell.] You are not aware of the practice of the minor guilds?—No.

18882. Mr. Lefroy.] In cases where the claim to be admitted in right of marriage required that a freeman should have been such at the time of the birth of the daughter, might it not, in such cases, where the marriage was to a daughter born before he was a freeman; might not that have been a ground of admission by grace especial, and yet the circumstance of being married to the daughter of a freeman have been inserted?—I think it might.

18883. If that were so, that would go to account for many cases where an admission was by grace especial, though the beseech might have been founded upon a title by marriage?—It would.

18884. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you state whether the petition upon which the beseech is grounded recited in any case the claim of marriage?—Yes; I have beseeches, both coming from the minor guilds, and our beseeches, containing the words "the rather being married to the daughter of such a person, a free brother."

18885. Mr. O'Connell.] Can you produce any of those?—No, I cannot.

18886. Mr. Hamilton.] So that at least, if not the alternative, the addition of marriage is stated in the beseech?—Yes.

18887. Mr. O'Connell.] Not in all?—No, not in all; not in all grace especial; but those coming under that class, as far as I understand, were.

18888. Chairman.] Are you aware, when the freemen come forward to ask for a certificate, upon which they are to apply to be registered, what their politics are?—Not at all, never.

18889. Mr. O'Connell.] That is, you yourself are not?—No.

18890. Chairman.] You are the person who grants the certificates, are you not?—Yes.

18891. And you cannot state whether freemen come to be admitted on both sides of the question?—Yes, I can; I am quite satisfied they have, from the votes that I have seen given by freemen after their admission.

18892. They have been admitted on both sides subsequent to the Reform Bill?—I am told they have.

18893. As far as your general knowledge goes?—Yes.

18894. But at the moment of granting the certificate you are not aware of their politics, except by private acquaintance or some circumstances?—That is all.

18895. Are you aware of the existence of associations, both on the one side and the other, of politics for the purpose of registry?—Yes, I know such associations do exist.

18896. Are applications made by such associations to you, as the town-clerk, for certificates?—No.

18897. Then from that source of information you do not ascertain at all the politics of the parties applying for the certificates?—I do not. In some instances, Mr. Collison, who I know to have been of one side, has got certificates from me, and in that way I take for granted that the persons who entrusted him to get their certificates may have a party feeling.

18898. That is the only information you have?—That is all; mere observation.

18899. Mr. O'Connell.] You do not mean to say that any Catholic has been admitted?—No, I do not.

18900. There have been some of what are called liberal Protestants?—Yes.

18901. I believe a near relation of Lord Plunket was the principal person?—Yes.

18902. Have you a recollection of any other in that line of politics?—No; because that gentleman's station makes me recollect him; I am quite satisfied there were others.

18903. But the general rule is otherwise, I believe?—Yes, it is.

18904. And at all events you are free to reject if you choose?—Yes.

18905. As to your signing the articles, that is merely ministerial?—That is all.

18906. You are bound to sign the articles, if you are paid the ordinary fees, if the man has passed the corporation at large?—Yes.

18907. Now be so good as to take the book and look for Wills Hill Macready; he passed the guild of merchants on the 15th April 1822. I believe you know he is a respectable solicitor?—I do.

18908. He passed the guild of merchants by marriage, having married the daughter of Richard M. Sanges?—I have it, Easter 1822, Wills Hill Macready, merchant, grace especial.

18909. Look for James Peel, who passed the guild of merchants the same day, whether he passed the city, and how?—At Easter 1822, James Peel, merchant, grace especial.

18910. Look, if you please, to the same 15th July 1822, to John Anderson, who passed the guild of merchants the same 15th July 1822 by marriage, as married to the daughter of Alderman Etshaw?—I have John Anderson, Midsummer 1822, merchant, grace especial.

18911. The next is 14th October 1822, James Freke passed the guild of merchants, as married to the daughter of the Rev. M. Sandys?—I have, at Michaelmas 1822, James Freke, merchant, grace especial.

18912. Henry Jellico passed the guild of merchants 7th April 1823, as married to the daughter of Sir Abraham Bradley King?—I find, Midsummer 1823, Henry Jellico, as having been admitted by grace especial, merchant.

18913. Godhead Blantyre Hassett, married to the daughter of Sir Abraham Bradley King, 18th October 1823, passed the guild of merchants?—Yes; merchant, by grace especial; he passed in Midsummer 1830.

18914. William Jones, 12th January 1824, passed the merchants by right of marriage, as married to the daughter of John Maiben?—Christmas 1824, William Jones, merchant, grace especial.

18915. Same date, Joshua Porter, as married to the daughter of James Jesson?—I do not find him.

18916. He does not appear to have passed the city at large?—No: as to that very Joshua Porter, that in all probability, I think, was a complimentary freedom by the guild of merchants.

18917. No,

George Archer, Esq.

30 June 1837.

18917. No, it is returned by marriage?—But still it may pass that way; but I think Porter is a freeman in another right; I have Porter in another right; I should think that very Porter. I do not find him at that time; he might have been free long before.

18918. James Walshe, married to the daughter of John C. Twyford; he passed the guild of merchants 12th January 1824?—I have James Walshe, Midsummer 1830, grace especial, merchant.

18919. Same date, Robert Jameson, married to the daughter of Francis Fox? I have it, in 1822, Robert Jameson, merchant, grace especial.

18920. You have no other Robert Jameson?—No, I have not.

18921. Look for, if you please, Thomas F. Uniacke, who passed the guild of merchants 17th January 1825, by marriage, as married to the daughter of G. H. Rochfort?—I have him, Michaelmas 1828, merchant, grace especial.

18922. William North, upon the same day, by marriage to the daughter of Richard Homan?—I have William North, a cutler.

18923. No, a merchant?—No, I do not find him.

18924. 11th April 1825, guild of merchants, John Waters, as married to the daughter of John Jones?—John Waters, merchant, grace especial, Midsummer 1825.

18925. 16th January 1826, guild of merchants, Henry R. Paine, as married to the daughter of William Taylor?—Henry R. Paine, Christmas 1826, merchant, grace especial.

18926. Same date, John Talbot, married to the daughter of alderman Sweettenham?—John Talbot, Michaelmas 1825, merchant, grace especial.

18927. Robert Smith, same date, guild of merchants, married to the daughter of John ——— ?—Christmas 1826, merchant, grace especial.

18928. 16th October 1826, George Hatchell, by marriage to the daughter of David Melvill?—George Hatchell, Midsummer 1826, merchant, grace especial.

18929. October 1827, John Finemore, married to the daughter of Samuel Ashworth?—John Finemore, Midsummer 1830, merchant, grace especial.

18930. 14th January 1828, Edward J. Smith, by marriage to the daughter of alderman Montgomery?—Edward J. Smith, merchant, under date Midsummer 1828, by grace especial.

18931. James Bailie, April 1828, married to the daughter of Peter Kirwater?—James Bailie, under date Michaelmas 1828, grace especial.

18932. 13th October 1828, John Allen, married to the daughter of Michael Coates?—John Allen, Midsummer 1830, grace especial.

18933. William Swan, same date, married to the daughter of alderman Reed?—Michaelmas 1828, William Swan, merchant, grace especial.

18934. January 1829, Alfred Taylor, by marriage to the daughter of William Tenant?—Christmas 1829, Alfred Taylor, merchant, grace especial.

18935. 13th July 1829, Thomas Wright, by marriage to the daughter of Robert Ball?—Thomas Wright, Easter 1831, merchant, grace especial.

18936. Mr. Hamilton.] The claimant of freedom is a party to the petition to the minor guild; he signs it, I believe?—Yes, I believe, it is always the custom.

18937. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you know the practice?—No, I am not aware of how the practice is.

18938. Mr. Hamilton.] Does he sign the petition which comes on to your office, and on which the beseech is grounded?—No, he does not.

18939. Now, if a petition, for example, alleging the claim of marriage, goes up to your office, and it is converted there into the beseech, setting forth the claim as of special grace, is the claimant aware of that change being made; is he a party to the change?—We do not change it to special grace; it goes forward as of marriage upon the certificate. The admission is by marriage, and we then see that it is accordingly stated.

18940. A petition, stating the claim of marriage coming up to your office, and a beseech, founded upon that, is it not your practice to alter the claim into that of grace especial?—No.

18941. Then, in your beseech, do you recite the claim as of marriage?—As of marriage, yes.

18942. Mr. O'Connell.] I find, in the corporation of tailors, that, on the 11th June 1825, Nathaniel Prestidge was admitted by marriage, as married to the daughter of John Shore?—Yes, I find Nathaniel Prestidge, Michaelmas 1824, tailor, grace especial.

18943. I find,

George Archer, Esq.

30 June 1837.

18943. I find, in April 1825, William Carey, as married to the daughter of John M'Laine?—I do not find that.

18944. He does not appear to have passed the city at large?—No.

18945. Same date, I find William Wright, by marriage to the daughter of James Millington?—William Wright, Michaelmas 1828, tailor, grace especial.

18946. Same date, Robert Majoribanks, marriage to another daughter of the same James Millington?—Michaelmas 1828, Robert Majoribanks, tailor, grace especial.

18947. July 1825, Charles Warren, by marriage to the daughter of Andrew Lee?—Michaelmas 1825, Charles Warren, tailor, grace especial.

18948. October 1825, Allan Ellison, by marriage to the daughter of Humphrey Jones?—Christmas 1826, Allan Ellison, tailor, grace especial.

18949. January 1828, William Rogerson, marriage to the daughter of Thomas M'Gill?—I do not find William Rogerson.

18950. William Richardson, same date, April 1828, by marriage to the daughter of William ———?—Christmas 1828, William Richardson, tailor, grace especial.

18951. Curtis M'Farland, October 1828, marriage to the daughter of Henry Meares?—Yes, I find him under head Michaelmas 1830, tailor, grace especial.

18952. 11th January 1830, Charles Brien, marriage to the daughter of John White?—Charles Brien, tailor, grace especial, under head Midsummer 1830.

18953. Same date, Benjamin Mason, to the daughter of Samuel M'Comas?—Benjamin Mason, under head Midsummer 1830, by grace especial, tailor.

18954. Thomas Lefroy, honorary tailor, serjeant?—That would not be here.

18955. John Chiswell, April 1830, marriage to the daughter of Peter Robinson?—John Chiswell, Midsummer 1830, tailor, grace especial.

18956. July 1830, Richard Higginson, marriage to the daughter of James Walker?—I have got that; Midsummer 1830, tailor, grace especial.

18957. Thomas Egerton, October 1824, corporation of barbers and surgeons, marriage to the daughter of James Mills?—That person did not pass the corporation of Dublin.

18958. Chairman.] Can you state why he did not pass?—I can give no reason; for as it very often happens that they may belong to other corporations, it is matter of favour, just as the Committee has heard in the case of Mr. Lefroy. The parties do not think it worth while to proceed.

18959. It is not worth while for persons to proceed to the corporation at large when from a particular guild they may have already passed the corporation at large from another guild?—No.

18960. There are some expenses attached to it, are there not?—Yes.

18961. What are the expenses?—Eighteen shillings.

18962. Must they have another stamp?—No.

18963. Mr. Lefroy.] In all those instances in which persons were admitted, apparently as of grace especial, who came from the minor guilds, as upon a claim of marriage, were they charged the same fees as persons who in strictness were admitted by grace especial?—They were.

18964. Did they pay the same stamp duties?—They did.

18965. You are sure of that?—I am.

18966. Mr. O'Connell.] You have nothing to do with the receipt stamps at all?—No, I have nothing to do with the receipt stamp duty: I considered you meant our fees; it is the stamp alone you alluded to at that time, in your question to me; I understood it was the fees generally.

18967. Mr. Lefroy.] Your corporation fees?—Yes.

18968. Mr. O'Connell.] They are the same in every case, are they not?—Yes.

18969. Mr. Lefroy.] In your corporation do you make any distinction between fees as claims of right and grace especial?—No; we do not make any difference, no distinction.

18970. Nor is there any distinction as to the stamp duty in your corporation?—No, not in ours. They do not pay the stamp duty in ours.

18971. But in the minor guilds the distinction is made that I have adverted to?—Yes, I understand so.

18972. Mr. O'Connell.] October 1827, corporation of carpenters, Thomas Browne, by marriage?—Easter 1829, Thomas Browne, carpenter, grace especial.

George Archer, Esq.

30 June 1837.

18973. Mr. Hamilton.] These several claimants preferring their claims as of marriage, those claims are converted in the town-clerk's office into a claim as of grace especial, and they are passed as of grace especial; is not that the case?—Prior to the Reform Bill it was the case.

18974. And that without their concurrence or knowledge?—Of course they had no knowledge.

18975. You have stated in several instances that the individuals named have not passed the corporation at large; are you able to state positively, from the means you have of knowing now, that they may not have passed either in some other right, or might appear in some other book?—They may have passed before; but I have only examined from the period when Mr. O'Connell calls my attention to the time they passed the minor guilds, and I instance the case of Mr. Porter.

18976. Chairman.] State the case of Mr. Porter's admission to freedom?—I have, in Easter, 1813, Joshua Porter, stationer, by birth.

18977. He was admitted to the freedom of the corporation at large, by birth, in 1813?—Yes.

18978. Well, now, has he been admitted since?—Not in our corporation.

18979. He has not been admitted in the corporation at large since?—No.

18980. But he has been admitted in another guild?—So it appears, by marriage.

18981. Mr. O'Connell.] Having been once admitted in the corporation at large, he has no occasion to be entered in the corporation at large again?—No; and the object of that admission in the merchants', by marriage, was to qualify Mr. Porter to become a representative for that corporation, to the corporation of Dublin, and he has been returned as one of the representatives of that body.

18982. Chairman.] You are a member of the guild of merchants?—I am.

18983. And therefore you can state to the Committee whether or no that guild is in the habit of taking proper means to prevent the introduction into it of improper persons, or persons who have no right?—They certainly are not in the habit of admitting improper persons.

18984. They take pains to exclude improper persons, do they?—They do.

18986. Do you think there are several persons in that same condition?—I think, a great many.

18987. Mr. Lefroy.] Notwithstanding the practice of admitting persons having a claim from the minor guilds on the ground of birth, admitting them into your corporation as by grace especial, did you consider those as honorary freemen, or were they considered as merely honorary freemen in your guild?—They came under the term "grace especial," and that was distinguishable from honorary freemen, because what we call honorary freemen are freemen of the city at large, not coming from any of the minor guilds.

18988. Then you distinguish those persons from honorary freemen?—Yes.

18989. You did not consider them merely honorary freemen?—I did not.

18990. Nor were they so considered in your corporation, by the members of it?—No, I think not.

18991. Mr. O'Connell.] But the persons admitted by grace especial, you deem them honorary freemen now; any man who is admitted by grace especial, under the Reform Act?—We do.

18992. Mr. Lefroy.] Because now you do not include under the term "grace especial" those who before you did include under that term, though being a right founded upon marriage, as recognised by the minor guilds?—Yes.

18993. Mr. O'Connell.] So that there is one class, since the Reform Bill, that you insert by marriage, that you, before the Reform Bill, always inserted by grace especial?—They form part of the grace especial.

18994. Mr. Lefroy.] But before the Reform Bill that class was not considered as honorary freemen?—No.

18995. You distinguished between honorary freemen and that class before the Reform Bill?—We did not.

18996. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you not distinguish, before the Reform Bill, between

George Archer, Esq

30 June 1837.

between honorary freemen and freemen admitted by grace especial?—What we considered honorary freemen prior to the Reform Bill, were persons admitted to the city at large only, not coming forward with a claim from any of the minor corporations.

18997. So that no man who was admitted in a minor corporation by grace especial purely, and then came to be admitted to the corporation at large, was in the class of what you called honorary freemen before the Reform Bill?—I think not.

18998. Mr. Hamilton.] In the case of the mandamus that was applied for by Messrs. Adcocks, their return to that, I believe, was that the corporation had the power of rejection, and that return was held good; can you state whether the Adcocks might have contravened that return, and brought the matter up to legal trial, by denying that that capricious power of rejecting existed?—Of course, I take for granted they might have proceeded.

18999. And their proceeding in that way, denying the validity of the return, would have brought the matter up to a judicial adjudication?—It would.

19000. Mr. O'Connell.] But it would not have been wise to traverse a fact which would be found against the party?—I should say not.

19001. Mr. Hamilton.] Can you say it would have been found against the party?—I cannot.

19002. Can you state whether, if a minor guild applied for a mandamus in the instance of the admission of a claimant to your guild, it would have been held good?—I cannot say that; that is a matter of law.

19003. Has such a case ever arisen?—I think I heard some case of that kind here.

19004. But a mandamus has not been applied for by a minor guild, to force the admission of one of its members into the corporation at large?—I am not aware of any.

Mr. William Jordan Lambert, again called in; and Examined.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

19005. Mr. O'Connell.] THE first of those entries, Mr. Lambert, in your book of 1777, appears thus: "that Mr. Thomas Bookey be admitted to his freedom of this corporation by birth, he being married to Jane Truelock, daughter of Thomas Truelock, esq., who is now, and was free of the guild before the birth of his said daughter; he, the said Bookey, paying the usual fine and fees as persons who are admitted by birth"?—Yes.

19006. And that person appears, by the book produced by Mr. Archer, to have been admitted as of Midsummer 1777, to the corporation at large; Thomas Bookey, smith, by grace especial?—Yes.

19007. Mr. Hamilton.] Would you turn to the entry of Jane Southwell, in 1662, and state in what right she was admitted?—

19008. Mr. O'Connell.] A woman admitted?—The charter gives us the power of admitting sɹǝʇsıs also.

19009. Have they ever in your recollection admitted a sister?—Not in the smiths', but in the merchants' they have. They admitted Miss Nugent, Sir Edward Nugent's daughter, to my recollection, but not in the smiths'.

19010. Mr. Hamilton.] Read the entry of Jane Southwell's admission in 1662?—"James Southwell, son of John Southwell, a brother of this corporation, and Mary Southwell, his daughter, the 1st of October, A.D. 1662, were enrolled."

19011. Is that the book in which the entries of admissions have been made?—Yes.

19012. That, then, is the entry of the admission of those persons?—It is.

19013. Now look further down, and you will find an entry with regard to Elizabeth Ergert?—His daughter, the same day, was also enrolled.

19014. Now look further down, to Mary Garton; read the entry respecting Mary Garton?—"Mary Garton, daughter of Joseph Garton, enrolled the 5th day of October, A.D. 1662."

19015. Read the entry with respect to Jonathan and Martha Lee?—"Jonathan and Martha Lee, son and daughter of William Lee, brother of this corporation, the 23d day of January, A.D. 1662, were enrolled."

19016. Now, then, turn on to the case of Hester Seawell?—Yes, that appears, Hester Seawell, daughter of Mr. John Seawell, of Dublin, brazier, an ancient brother of this guild, enrolled January, A.D. 1669.

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

30 June 1837.

19017. Now, in 1670, turn to the entry of Ann Friends?—Ann Friends, daughter of Richard Friends, enrolled 14th day of April 1670.

19018. So that it appears that at a very ancient period the right of females to be admitted was recognised in your corporation?—It appears by the charter that they may be admitted, that is, brothers and sisters.

19019. Mr. O'Connell.] Do those women appear to have been sworn in by any entry?—No, they do not.

19020. Can you point out the clause in your charter authorising you to have sisters?—It says brothers and sisters.

19021. Show me that clause in the charter.—[The witness did so.]

19022. Mr. Hamilton.] Read that part of the charter.

19023. Mr. O'Connell.] This is the translation; these are the words in the charter of Edward I.: "To find, perform, accomplish and make a certain fraternity or guild of themselves and other persons, as well of men as of women, in the art of smiths, of the City of Dublin, the same for ever to be called the fraternity or guild of St. Lay." This passage appears in the charter, does it not?—It does.

19024. "And further, whenever any of the same art will take them an apprentice, they shall first cause him who shall be made an apprentice to come before the master and wardens and clerk of that fraternity or guild that for the time shall be, who shall discreetly weigh and consider whether he that is so bound an apprentice be free, of English nation, and honest conversation; who, if they do so find, shall be taken as an apprentice to serve for the term of seven years, and that his indentures thereof made shall be brought before the master and wardens within one year then next ensuing, and then by the clerk enrolled; and whenever any of that art do or shall take an apprentice, otherwise than as aforesaid, that taking shall be adjudged as void and utterly frustrate, and he that taketh such an apprentice shall pay half a mark to the use of the fraternity or guild aforesaid." I think you have told us that that part of the charter is almost entirely neglected?—Almost entirely; but in some instances there are some persons who attend to it yet.

19025. Mr. Hamilton.] Have you read the printed report of what was stated by Chief Baron Joy in the cases of Carolin and Hyde?—Yes, I have.

19026. Is that substantially correct?—It is.

[The same was handed in and read, a copy of which is as follows:]

"Upon the first point, the Chief Baron, during the argument, observed, 'I am decidedly of opinion that these freemen are not honorary, in the sense of the Act of Parliament. The ninth section of the Reform Act distinguishes those who have been admitted by birth, marriage or servitude from those who have been admitted as honorary freemen. Can I say that they are all in the same situation? I consider that the construction contended for would work the greatest injustice. I am called upon to give it that construction, without any reason to satisfy my mind that such was the intention of the Legislature, and contrary, as it appears to me, to the very words of the Act. I admit that the words of the Act are imperative upon me, that I must put the necessary construction upon them; but the construction contended for is founded upon a special pleading, in taking the words of the Act in a sense different from their ordinary meaning.' " Joy, C. B.—" It is difficult, upon looking at the 113th section of the 56 Geo. 3, c. 56, to come to any other than the one opinion. The Act requires the corporation, previous to the admission of any person into the corporation, to demand and receive for the use of his Majesty, from the person so to be admitted, the stamp duty payable upon the entry of admission of such person into the corporation. That having been done, what is to be done afterwards? Nothing by the person applying to be admitted: he is only bound to pay the duty to the officer of the corporation, and the officer is bound to demand and receive it before he suffers him to be admitted. The applicant is not even directed to procure the stamp; he is only to pay the duty to the officer, and having done that, which may not appear upon any document which he gets as the muniment of his title, he has done all that he is required to do by the Stamp Act. The rest is to be performed by the officer, who is required, within one month after the admission, to make an entry of such admission upon the proper stamp, on some book, roll or record of the corporation; that is, the officer is to procure the stamp, and to make the entry upon it; and this part of the statute is directory rectory upon the officer. But the free man does not incur any forfeiture of his franchise, if the officer of the corporation does not make the entry upon the stamp. It would be contrary to every legal principle to hold such a doctrine. The party deriving under the act of the corporation does not forfeit his rights, if the public officer of the corporation does not do his duty; but that officer incurs a penalty of 10 l. if he neglects to make such an entry upon the proper stamp within the month, and the corporation is liable for the stamp duty, whether they have received it or not. It is impossible to give any other construction to the Act than that I now give it. If the party applying to be registered cannot himself procure the stamp, which he cannot, if he can only pay the stamp duty to the officer (and having done that, he has nothing more to do), I see no objection in his coming forward with the muniments of his title without a stamp upon them. It is said that this construction will have the effect of destroying this branch of the revenue. In my mind it is protected in a much more effectual manner; for the corporation are required to demand and receive the stamp duty previous to admitting the claimant; and although they may not have actually received the duty, yet, if their officer does not make an entry of the admission upon a proper stamp within one month after the admission, he forfeits the sum of 10 l. I ground my opinion upon the clause of the Stamp Act relating to the case of admission into corporations; for although there are other clauses in the Act relating to the effect which the want of a stamp has upon an instrument required to be stamped, yet, as the Legislature has provided a peculiar sanction applicable to these cases, I must look to what they have done with regard to this portion of the stamp duty; and it appears to me that they have taken these cases out of the body of the Stamp Act. They have taken care that the stamp duty shall be paid, not by requiring the freeman to produce a stamped admission whenever he may want to prove his right, which may never happen, but by making the corporation responsible for the amount of the duty, if the party is admitted; and they impose a penalty upon the officer of the corporation if the duty is not forthcoming. For these reasons, I am of opinion that the appellants are not bound to produce any stamped instrument as the evidence of their title; and therefore, upon this part of the case, I conceive that the Chairman was right in his decision. This was the only part of the case which I thought questionable; for in Carolin's case I think there is sufficient and abundant evidence of his right. He has proved the title book, which is the only book showing the title of the party, and in what right he has been admitted. The beseech is not evidence of that; it is only evidence of what the party claimed, not of what was allowed. In the book is entered the ground upon which the party has been admitted; but by the beseech he may claim to be admitted upon three grounds, and only one of them may be allowed. The beseech would not, in that case, show the right in which the party had been admitted; but the book does state it particularly; it by itself shows the ground of the admission of the party, and it is the only book kept for that purpose. There may be other books in which entries of admissions are made upon stamps, but this book is satisfactory to my mind that he has been admitted a freeman. The entry of his name upon the roll, which is kept as the record of the corporation, and his taking the oath affixed thereto, proves the same thing. The books and records of the corporation, though not good evidence as to the rights of the corporation against third persons, have, nevertheless, been always held good evidence to show what are the rights of the parties to the corporation inter se. Therefore, I am of opinion that the roll is good evidence to prove, as against the corporation, that the appellant has been admitted a member of the corporation, and that the title book is sufficient to prove in what right the corporation has admitted him; and, therefore, that Carolin has established his right to register by sufficient evidence: for the Reform Act gives that right to every person who, by reason of birth, marriage, or servitude, shall at any time after the passing of that Act be admitted to his freedom; and, therefore, all that is necessary to establish is, that, as against the corporation, the applicant has been admitted to his freedom in one of those rights. And as to Hyde's case, I think that the certificate given by the public officer of the corporation, who is employed for the purpose of giving authenticity to their acts, is good evidence against the corporation, to show that, as against them, he has been admitted to his freedom in the right stated in his certificate. As against third persons, it may may not be evidence, but as to the individual rights of the corporation, and the freemen, inter se, I think that it is evidence. Therefore, I am of opinion that the Chairman was mistaken when he rejected the claims of the appellants to be registered, and that they must be both admitted."

Mr. W. J. Lambert.

Mr. Wm. Patrickson Pike.

Mr. William Patrickson Pike, called in; and Examined.

19027. Chairman.] ARE you an attorney?—I am an attorney about 14 years.

19028. Have you been acting as clerk of the guild of carpenters?—For about two years past I have taken down the proceedings, the clerk being absent.

19029. When did you receive a summons to attend this Committee?—I received a summons last Friday, I think.

19030. Were you aware that your attendance was desired previous to that time?—No; there was a summons came directed to "Robert Pike, junior," which is exactly my brother's name. A letter came directed to him, and my brother was in county Meath, and he was expecting a letter from my Lord Clare; he had been in India; and I did not open the letter, but I put it under a tea tray, on the side-board, and it remained there until Sunday the 17th, and then Mr. Carolin called upon me with another letter, which was directed to Robert Pike, solicitor; and when I saw Robert Pike, solicitor, it struck me that the other letter might be intended for me, for my brother was not a solicitor. I then, on Sunday the 17th, about 11 o'clock in the morning, opened your Lordship's letter, and it contained a summons for Robert Pike; and I immediately wrote off to your Lordship.

19031. And therefore the first regular intimation you had of your presence being necessary here was, when?—The first regular intimation I got was on Sunday morning last.

19032. What did you do with that letter and the enclosures that were directed to your brother?—I have brought both of them over with me.

19033. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you hold any office under the corporation?—Not at present, except as council of the house.

19034. Are you a member of the corporation at large?—No, I am a member of the corporation of carpenters, and a member of the corporation of shoemakers.

19035. But not the city at large?—But not the city at large.

19036. Mr. Hamilton.] Do you find in the minute-book of your corporation any entries of admissions by marriage?—Yes.

19037. Mr. O'Connell.] Have you made any return?—I have brought the books with me. I caused the clerk of the guild to make a return to the Lord Mayor.

19038. Mr. Hamilton.] Were you present at the trial of the appeal in the cases of Carolin and Hyde?—I was.

19039. In the Court of Exchequer?—I was. Mr. Hyde is my brother-in-law.

19040. Have you read the printed report of those cases?—No, I have not.

19041. Chairman.] Did you make any report of it yourself, or take any notes of it?—I did.

19042. Have those ever been printed?—No.

James Mackie Hyndman, Esq.

James Mackie Hyndman, Esq., called in; and Examined.

19043. Chairman.] ARE you a barrister-at-law?—I am.

19044. How long have you been here?—I was summoned for the 30th May, and I arrived here on that day.

19045. And have been here ever since?—Ever since.

Mr. Daniel Marcus Collison.

Mr. Daniel Marcus Collison, called in; and Examined

19046. ARE you a professional person?—No, a retired public officer.

19047. Are you in the receipt of any salary for any particular business?—No, I am not.

19048. Mr. Hamilton.] You are very active in promoting the registration of the conservatives in the city of Dublin?—I have been, to the utmost of my power.

19049. You act in connexion with the conservative committee?—Yes.

19050. Your exertions are entirely gratuitous?—Entirely.

19051. Mr. O'Connell.] What do they call that committee?—The Central Protestant Registration Committee.

Mr.
Thomas Francis
Gale.

Mr. Thomas Francis Gale, called in; and Examined.

19052. Mr. O'Connell.] WHAT are you?—I am a medical student.

19053. Who summoned you here?—You did.

19054. Are you free of any guild?—I am not.

19055. Nor of the corporation at large?—No.

19056. Did you take notes, on the conservative side, of the proceedings before the registering barrister?—I did.

19057. Did you volunteer, or were you paid by any body?—I was always paid.

19058. Who paid you?—Mr. Collison, usually.

19059. Out of the funds of the Protestant Registration Society, I suppose?—I suppose so.

19060. Chairman.] Did you write short-hand?—No, I did not.

19061. Mr. O'Connell.] When did your employment cease with that society?—It has not ceased yet.

19062. Have you a regular salary from them?—I have.

19063. Is that continued to you while you are here?—No.

19064. How much a-week do you get?—I have got at the rate of 78 l. a year; about 30 s. a-week.

19065. How many weeks has that been stopped from you?—Why, since the 3d of June, the day I received the summons; I started on the following day.

Lunæ, 3° die Julii, 1837.

MEMBERS PRESENT.

Sir Robert Ferguson.	Mr. Lefroy.
Mr. Hamilton.	Mr. O'Connell.
Mr. Hogg.	Lord Granville Somerset.

LORD GRANVILLE SOMERSET, IN THE CHAIR.

Mr. William Seton.

3 July 1837

Mr. William Seton, called in; and further Examined.

19066. Mr. O'Connell.] YOU were asked upon your former examination as to the number of freemen registered within a given space?—I was.

19067. Between when?—Between February and May 1835.

19068. You were asked that?—I was.

19069. You were not apprised at that time of the exact number?—No, I had not seen the printed list.

19070. You rated it in your answer at a lower number, from general recollection, than it really turns out to be?—I did.

19071. Have you any explanation to give the Committee upon that subject?—I have; I rated it from the commencement of the February sessions until Mr. Carolin appealed (the first appeal case); he appealed on the 5th of May, which was the second day of the May sessions. The number of appearances in the February sessions was 72. The way I rated it then, on general recollection, was this: that there were not more then 20 new-made freemen registered in the time; I meant, of course, to apply myself to new-made freemen, because, as to old freemen coming in, they could not be injurious to us, for we never disputed their right to come in. It was only those new-made freemen that I meant to apply my observation to.

19072. That is, those that you considered honorary?—Yes, those that I considered honorary; on looking over the list, I found there were 158, up to the end of May.

19073. During that space?—During that space; but my observation applied to the coming up of Mr. Carolin; and for this reason, that although a great many freemen came up the day his case was argued, which was on the 30th of May, yet any new-made freemen were not actually registered until after the d[illegible] of that case. He was sworn to his affidavit; the certificates were retained, [illegible] not issued until after Mr. Carolin's case was decided.

Mr. William Seton.

19074. How many would that cut off?—According to my recollection, in the February sessions of 1835, there were 72 registered; of those 72 registered, 16 were new and 56 old freemen; of the 16 new, on examining the books, I found objections taken to 11, that is, that they were honorary, or I considered them as honorary merely. Then there came up in the May sessions 223 of them; 100 were new freemen, and 123 were old; to the 123 I took no objection, but I took the general objection of newly-admitted freemen to the 100; but of those 100, up to the 5th of May, the second day of the sessions, I do not suppose there were more than eight or nine: a great many came up afterwards; I took objections to them, but they were registered the days they came, although the certificates actually were not issued until after the 30th of May.

19075. Then that is the explanation you wish to give?—Yes, that is the explanation I wish to give in that respect.

19076. Then your object to-day is merely to show that when you spoke of that number, from 20 to 30, you did not include all the freemen who might have come up during that time, but that your attention was directed to those against whom you made objections at the period?—Precisely so.

19077. And you do not mean this day to give any opinion, any way, as to the merits of any one of those votes?—No; I have only to say, that objections were taken, and the proportions were those I have mentioned.

19078. Chairman.] What are the names of those individuals, being old freemen, to whom you referred?—I certainly have not detailed the names; but, if you wish it, I will apply myself to the papers to-day, and give the detail to-morrow.

19079. How could you state to the Committee these freemen were old freemen, as you call them, unless you had gone through their names seriatim?—Because I have marked them on my book, those that I took objections to: those that were new-made freemen I marked "newly admitted;" those that I did not take objections to, I of course took them to be old; and if your Lordship will allow me, I will explain it a little further to you. The number was 72 in the February sessions: now, on examining the clerk of the peace's list, it appears that six of those 72 were not registered in February, nor until after the 5th of May; that of course reduces the number to 66. To those 72 I put in 15 or 16; that makes up, on or previous to the 5th of May, the day Mr. Carolin's case was decided, 88. Now those are inserted in the February list as registered, whereas, in fact, they were not registered till after the 5th of May: by some mistake, perhaps of the printer, they did not put the proper date opposite them; that reduces it to 82; out of that 82 I objected to 16, as being made subsequent to the limitation in the Reform Bill. Then I examined the return made by the clerk of the peace, of freemen that passed the corporation of the city of Dublin since the 20th July 1831, and I find that of these 66 names, there are 62 which are not included in the said list, as not being objected to by me, and which I conclude must have been old freemen.

19081. When was that return made to which you allude?—That return is signed "Archer and Long," 29th May 1837.

19082. Mr. Lefroy.] But you could not have had the benefit of that return at the time of the registry?—Certainly not; undoubtedly not; but it appeared on the certificate, when a man was admitted, at the time of the registry, admitted of such a corporation.

19083. Mr. O'Connell.] The date of admission appeared on his certificate, produced from the corporation?—Yes.

19084. Chairman.] Now can you state to me whether T. M. Archer was an old freeman or not?—I could not answer to particular names; out of 500 or 600 names it is impossible to answer without looking to the papers.

19085. Was John Arthur a new or an old freeman?—I would not take upon me to speak to particular names: there were 795 freemen, and 535 of those new; I would not take on myself to say who are new and who are old, unless by looking at the documents.

Mr. William Seton.

3 July 1837.

19086. Then how can you state to the Committee these were old ones, unless you have gone through every name and observed upon them?—I have gone through every name, and compared the manuscript list with the printed list of each sessions; I have gone through them and compared them.

19087. And have you done that subsequent to your former examination?—Certainly I have.

19088. What was the day on which Carolin was rejected?—He was rejected on the second day of the sessions, which was the fifth of May.

19089. How many freemen were admitted on the 4th of May?—May be, eight or ten. I cannot say; I would not be accurate to a man.

19090. You know nothing about that?—I will ascertain it for you, if you please.

19091. Mr. O'Connell.] You have documents to show it?—I have documents to show it, to a man.

19092. Chairman.] Was not this the question put to you: "18348. Do you mean to state that no considerable number of freemen were registered in the year 1835, previous to the decision of the Lord Chief Baron?" and your answer was, "That is my impression"?—It was.

19093. The next question is, "Do you state as many as 50 were not registered in that period?" Your answer is, "So I believe." Was there any qualification in your answers to those two questions?—At the time there was not; but my impression was that your Lordship calculated up to the 30th of May in that year. It appears opposite the names on the printed list what days they were registered on: from the 2d to the 30th there came up a great number, which were admitted at the time; that is, their affidavits were taken, and their certificates were withheld until the decision in Carolin's case.

19094. At that time you did not qualify your answers by the qualification you now wish to give them?—I did not at the time, certainly; I admit that.

19095. Mr. O'Connell.] But you did not make a positive assertion?—What I said was this: that, with all those circumstances I mentioned, I felt in my own mind that qualification, and to prove which requires time; but I did say, in consequence of the decision of Carolin's case, a great number of new or honorary freemen were admitted, in proportion to old freemen, whose title I did not question. I have no object in this but to state the truth exactly, for I would not allow my feelings to carry me to any other consideration; I prefer it to anything else.

19096. Is there anything else that you would wish to mention?—Yes; I stated that Mr. Piggott argued the question in May 1835; it seems, on inquiry, it was not him; on an examination of my notes, I find it was Mr. Mazara Brady that argued the question in 1835, on one side, and Mr. Jackson and Mr. Hatchell on the other. Mr. O'Connell argued in February, but this was in May.

19097. Mr. Lefroy.] That is Mr. Brady who was since confidential adviser at the Castle?—Yes.

19098. And who was at the time confidential adviser at the Castle, was he not?—He was confidential adviser at the Castle, but at what time I do not recollect.

19099. Immediately previous to Mr. Piggott?—Yes; but when that confidential communication commenced I do not recollect.

19100. But he was confidential adviser at the Castle immediately previous to Mr. Piggott, was he not?—I understood so.

19101. Sir Robert Ferguson.] Was he at the time it was argued?—In 1835? I cannot say.

19102. Mr. Lefroy.] Was he not also confidential adviser at the Castle from the time Serjeant Greene was removed?—I believe so.

19103. Do not you believe that that is above three years?—I have no recollection of when he was removed.

19104. Can you say it is two years?—I really do not know; I should think more than two years.

19105. But was not Mr. Mazara Brady the confidential adviser at the Castle, to the best of your belief, at the time he argued those questions?—I would not take upon me to say.

19106. What is the inclination of your opinion; can you form no opinion whatever upon it?—If he did succeed Mr. Serjeant Greene, and if Mr. Serjeant Greene

Mr. William Seton.

3 July 1837.

Greene left it in the year 1835, of course Mr. Brady, his successor, must have been confidential adviser at the time; but that is a matter that I never applied my attention to.

19107. Now I request you will apply your attention to it, and give an answer to the question, whether you do not believe that Mr. Mazara Brady was confidential adviser at the Castle at the time he argued those questions before the registering barrister?—I really, not having dates before me, can hardly form a belief upon it; but, however, be it so; perhaps it was so.

19108. I request you will form an opinion; either say, if you please, that you cannot form any opinion, or else give me the benefit of your opinion, whatever it is?—It is a matter altogether depending on dates; and I would rather say that I believe he was, lest it should be supposed I am governed by party feeling on the subject.

19109. Chairman.] Can you explain this answer, given by Mr. Martin, to this effect; the question is 14411: "Mr. Piggott and Mr. Hudson came down to argue it (that was the appeal), and then it was agreed two should be rejected," and so forth. What could be the meaning of Mr. Martin's stating that Mr. Piggott and Mr. Hudson came down to argue that appeal?—I really cannot say.

19110. Can you throw any light upon it?—I really cannot say what Mr. Martin's meaning was.

19111. Mr. O'Connell.] Do you remember Mr. Hudson came and argued one time?—Yes.

19112. Do you remember Mr. Piggott came and argued?—Yes; I have Mr. Brady's argument here; August 1836.

19113. Chairman.] But did they argue together on the occasion when the appeal was agreed upon?—I do not think either were there. Certainly Mr. Piggott was not. I have a note of Mr. Brady's argument here; and as the question has been put respecting Mr. Piggott, perhaps I might be allowed to say that, after Mr. Piggott became confidential adviser at the Castle, he declined interfering in any political argument at all. I wanted him to argue a case last February, and he then declined it.

19114. Mr. O'Connell.] Did you offer him a fee?—Yes.

Mr. Walter Bell, called in; and Examined.

Mr. Walter Bell.

19115. Chairman.] WHAT are you?—A carpet manufacturer.

19116. In the city of Dublin?—Yes.

19117. Have you any weekly salary for any particular business?—I have.

19118. What is that?—As a valuator for the central committee of the Protestant Registration Society.

19119. What is your weekly salary?—Thirty shillings.

19120. How long have you been here?—Seven weeks to-morrow.

19121. Shall you not be paid that salary?—No.

19122. Will anybody else receive it instead of you?—There is another person receiving it.

19123. Who has been acting for you?—Yes.

19124. And receiving that salary?—Yes, until I return.

19125. And you would have received that 30*s.* a week the last seven weeks, if you had been in the city of Dublin, instead of attending to the orders of the Committee here?—I would.

19126. Mr. O'Connell.] Are you a working manufacturer?—No, a master.

19127. Do you belong to any of the corporations?—I do; the smiths'.

19128. Are you free of the city at large?—Yes.

Clerk of the Guild of Carpenters, &c.

Appendix, No. 3.

Persons admitted to Freedom of Guilds.

Cooks and Vintners.

Corporation of Cooks and Vintners.

I find that though several persons have been admitted to the freedom of this Guild since 20 July 1831, only two of them have as yet come forward to be sworn in so as to make it incumbent on them to pay the Stamp duty for their freedom, and they have not as yet paid any; and as there is not any book or entry kept in this Corporation of the members registered as voters under the statute, I have not any means of making a return as to the members so registered, and who it may appear were created prior to 20 July 1831 and paid the proper amount of Stamp duty.

John Wiber, Clerk of the Guild.

P. J. Keily, Clerk.

To the Commissioners for Watching, Lighting, &c. the Town of Clonmel.

A RETURN of the Names and Residences of the several Persons who have been discharged from Payment of Lamp and Watch Tax, by reason of their Tenements being of less Annual Value than £. 10, or for any other and which reasons, in the Town of Clonmel.

No.	—	—	Annual Value.	—
			£. s. d.
1.	Richard Jones - -	stable - - - -	8 – –	- - cancelled, being of less annual value than 10 l.
2.	Bridget Slattery - -	house in Slattery's-lane -	5 – –	- - cancelled or discharged, being of less annual value than 5 l.
3.	William Farrell - -	- - house in Upper Johnson-street.	- -	- - cancelled or discharged, for like reason.
4.	Mrs. Mara - - -	a house in Shambles-lane -	8 – –	- - cancelled or discharged, for like reason.
5.	Catholic Poor School -	house, Irishtown - -	30 – –	- - cancelled or discharged from payment of lamp and watch tax, same being a charitable institution.
6.	Protestant Orphan School	house, William-street -	18 – –	- - discharged from payment of lamp and watch tax, same being a charitable institution.
7.	John Moore - - -	house in Gordon-street -	5 – –	- - cancelled or discharged from payment of lamp and watch tax, being of less annual value than 5 l.

The town is not regularly numbered, and hence it is impossible to obey with correctness the part of the order of "The Select Committee on Fictitious Votes" which requires the number of each house.

P. J. Keily, Clerk
to the Commissioners for Watching, Lighting, &c. the Town of Clonmel.

Appendix, No. 10.

Appendix, No. 10.
Persons discharged from payment of Rates in Drogheda.

A RETURN of the NAMES and RESIDENCES of the several Persons in the Town of Drogheda, who have been Discharged from Payment of Local Rates or Taxes by reason of their Tenements being of less Annual Value than 10 l., or for any other and which reasons.

— None. —

See the Observations made by the Clerk of the Peace upon the Return specifying the Annual Value of the several Houses in the Town of Drogheda, as returned by the Valuators appointed, under 5 Geo. 3, c. 22, to make the Applotment of Watch Cess, which, with the Lighting Act, are the only Local Acts in force for Assessments which are limited to the Town, and under which Assessment and Applotment there is not any Tenement, whether of the value of 10 l. or under, discharged from the Payment of Watch Cess.

The Clerk of the Peace has not any Documents within his Office to enable him to make the Return required, and he has procured the necessary information for the purpose from the Applotters and Collector of Watch Cess.

Certified by Drogheda, 1 May 1837. Jos. Holmes, Clerk of the Peace.

The Clerk of the Peace is not supplied with any official documents from which he could make the Return required; he has therefore applied to the parish officers and cess collectors for such information as they are respectively enabled to afford, to enable him, as far as he can, to comply with the requisites of the order.

The town of Drogheda, having a fund from the collection of tolls and customs for the paving of the streets, does not come under the provisions of the 9th Geo. 4; and the constituency for Drogheda being that of a county and town, there are several registered voters in the suburbs, which are without the walls, who are not assessed for any municipal tax. There are only two local Acts, namely, the Assessment for defraying the Expense of a Nightly Watch, under 5 Geo. 3, chap. 22, which is confined to the town within the ancient walls; and the Assessment for Lighting, under 30 Geo. 3, chap. 39, sec. 27, which is to be agreed to at vestry in the month of August, and leviable, if it should be thought fit, on the inhabitants of the parishes who reside in the town or any part of the suburbs; but the usage has hitherto confined the assessment within the walls; and the accompanying Return is made from the assessment and applotment for defraying the expense of a nightly watch.

The parish assessment for the other usual purposes is made at vestry, and extends to both town and country; and the order requiring the Return being confined to towns, this valuation could not be referred to; nor is this assessment made under any local Act.

The county cess is levied under grand jury presentment, which is subsequently applotted at an assembly held before the magistrates at sessions, under 33 Geo. 2, ch. 7, sec. 1, and is levied upon the land only, excluding the houses within the town. The hospital cess is also levied under grand jury presentment, and applotted under the before-mentioned Act, sec. 3; and its levy is confined to the houses in the town so far as the parish of St. Peter extends, excluding the land within said parish; but the proportion of the levy for St. Mary's parish is assessed upon the land only, excluding the houses within this parish.

Drogheda, 1 May 1837.

Certified by Joseph Holmes, Clerk of the Peace.

Boy's Indenture.

Appendix, No. 15.

(Boy's Indenture.)

This Indenture Witnesseth That Henry Hall, of 60, Strand-street, city of Dublin, of his own free Will and Accord, and with the Consent of his Mother, doth put himself Apprentice to Edward Carolin, junior, of 13, Talbot-street, Dublin, Carpenter and Builder, to learn his Art, and with him (after the manner of an Apprentice,) to ~~dwell and~~ serve from the Fourth day of August 1828 until the full End and Term of Seven Years from thence next following, to be fully completed and ended. During which Term the said Apprentice his said Master faithfully shall serve, his secrets keep, his lawful commands everywhere gladly do. He shall do no damage to his said Master, nor see it to be done of others, but that he to his Power shall let or forthwith give warning to his said Master of the same. He shall not waste the Goods of his said Master, nor give or lend them unlawfully to any. He shall not commit Fornication, or contract Matrimony within the said Term. Hurt to his said Master he shall not do, or cause or procure to be done by others. He shall not play at Cards, Dice, Tables, or any other unlawful games, whereby his said Master may have loss with his own or others Goods during his said Term. Without Licence of his said Master, he shall neither buy nor sell. He shall not haunt or use Taverns, Alehouses, or Playhouses, nor absent himself from his said Master's Service Day or Night unlawfully, but in all Things as an honest and faithful Apprentice, he shall behave himself towards his said Master, and all his during the said Term. And the said Master his said Apprentice in the same Art which he useth, by the best way and means that he can, shall teach and instruct, or cause to be taught and instructed, with due correction, finding unto his said Apprentice four shillings every week the first year, and an increase of two shillings every week for each succeeding year, all time said Henry Hall wilfully loses not to be allowed him, ~~befitting such an Apprentice during the said Term,~~ according to the Custom of the trade of Carpenter and Builder. And for the due Performance of all and every the said Covenants and Agreements either of the said Parties bindeth himself to the other by these Presents. IN WITNESS whereof, the Parties above named to these INDENTURES, have interchangeably put their Hands and Seals, the second day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight.

☞ Indentures where no Fee is given, or where the Fee does not exceed the Sum of £.9. 4 s. 7½ d., are free from Stamp Duty.

Signed, Sealed and Delivered, in the Presence of Philip Morris.

Mary Anne Hall.

Edw. Carolin.
Henry Hall.

[Indorsement.]

I certify that the within-named Henry Hall served me for the space of seven years faithfully, industriously and honestly, with the greatest care and attention.

Edw. Carolin, 13, Talbot-street.

Enrolled in the Corporation of Carpenters, Millers, Masons, Healers, Tinners and Plumbers of the City of Dublin.

By order,

Wm P. Pike, Master.

APPEALS:

I. Generally.

II. Against the Decision of Registering Barristers:

1. In Belfast.
2. In Dublin.

III. Against the Valuation of the Commissioners under 9th Geo. 4.

I. Generally:

The absence of an appeal, in cases of improper admissions to the register, is favourable to the creation of fictitious votes, O'Dwyer 202–205, 212–215——It would be desirable to allow appeals against the admission of votes to the register; had this been lawful, many would have been admitted whom the assistant barrister was obliged to reject, in order to have the question tried on appeal, Mayne 954–957——The appeal from the assistant barrister in registry cases is to the judges of assize, but they being desirous of securing uniformity in their decisions, generally reserve all cases which involve doubt for the consideration of the twelve judges in their chamber at Dublin, Bates 1467–1472——Are not expensive to the individual claimants, as the expense is borne by their party, Bates 2207–2218, Whiteside 2495, 2496——The power of appeal against admissions to the register would give great satisfaction, and would operate as a check on the registering barrister; the appeal should be to the judges of assize, Bates 2346–2375——An appeal is preferable to a rehearing before the barrister at another registry, Whiteside 2485–2494——The expense is borne by the parties, but the applicant loses his time, Whiteside 2495, 2496——He has no power to compel the attendance of witnesses either at the sessions or assizes, but in one case the witnesses are on the spot, and in the other at a distance, Whiteside 2497–2499——If persons are allowed to apply at successive sessions and have their cases reheard, the power of appeal is useless, Whiteside 2500.

II. Against the Decision of Registering Barristers:

1. In Belfast:

There were no appeals from the two first registrations in Belfast; on the third there were five upon the lodger point, in each of which the decree of the barrister was reversed by Mr. Justice Johnson, Darcus 694–710——On appeal from a decision of Mr. Fogarty, Mr. Justice Bush reversed the decision as to the case of John M'Connell, Darcus 710–724——Number of appeals against the decision of the registering barrister, App. p. 128.

2. In Dublin:

Those against the decision of the registering barrister in Dublin were argued before the Chief Baron; refusal of the conservatives to go before the judges of the King's Bench, Martin 14408–14465——Number of appeals lodged by the liberal and conservative parties against the registration of persons in Dublin, Seton 18403–18406. 18411–18420——They may be carried to the judge sitting at Nisi Prius in any of the three courts, Dobbs 18555, 18556——There were no appeals from the decisions of the revising barristers for the following places: In Fermanagh, App. i. p. 21. 136, 137—In Sligo, App. 1. p. 151—In Waterford, App. i. p. 155.

III. Against the Valuation of the Commissioners under 9th Geo. 4:

When persons resident in Clonmel complained that their houses were valued too high, they were induced not to appeal by the persuasion that their contribution would not be increased so long as the valuation was relative, Legge 4348, 4349——There were 20 or 30 appeals against the valuation of 1828, in all of which the valuation was reduced, Smith 3182–3185——There were 30 or 40 appeals against the valuation of 1828, in 15 or 20 of which the valuation was reduced, Legge 4010——Greater reduction would have been made had the Act permitted, Legge 4010–4032——But few appeals against the valuation of 1828, Butler 12153–12158. 12161–12165——Appeals were lodged against the valuations of 1828, 1831 and 1834; in some instances valuation reduced, in others they were increased, Keily 9946–9956——Several cases of appeals from the valuation of 1831 and 1834 on the ground of excessive valuation, Keily 10293.

Applotments. They are entered in the rate-books, which are not in witness's possession, Legge 4657–4672——In applotments cellars are included in estimating the value of the houses, Graham 4876–4880.——See also County Rates. Parish Cess.

Applotters. Applotters of the county charges and parish cess in Clonmel are never sworn, Butler 12133–12136——They are appointed by the vestry; they generally follow the former applotments, making such alterations only as appear necessary from altered value; some houses which have not been changed in value are applotted at the same rate as they were 15 or 20 years ago, Legge 4673–4679.

Apprentices. It is a common practice in Dublin, where no fee given with an apprentice, to antedate his indentures, Hall 15777–15779——The practice in Dublin to take apprentices some time previous to the execution of the indentures, and allow the time when they are signed, Lambert 16708–16711——Are seldom taken by tanners, Irwin 17922. 17929, 17930.——See also Admission of Freemen. Indentures of Apprenticeship. Servitude.

Archer, Charles Palmer. Two sons of his admitted to the freedom of the guild of merchants by grace special, Allen, 16269.

Archer, George. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Town-clerk of Dublin since January 1830; other offices held by witness, 14768–14788——Number of guilds belonging to the corporation, 14791, 14792——Corporation at large can reject any person belonging to a guild who makes a claim of freedom; every freeman has to pass two ordeals before admission, 14793–14819——Form of a beseech for admission to the corporation of Dublin, 14822–14832——No Catholic admitted to the corporation; there is no law to prevent their being admitted; whether the board of aldermen would reject a person on account of religion; the common council would, 14834–14854——Further examination respecting beseeches for admission, 14857–14868——Length of time the different forms have been in use, 14869–14876——No person admitted to the corporation in right of marriage till after the Reform Bill, 14883–14888.

Greater number of freemen admitted previous to the Reform Bill were admitted by grace special, 14889–14892——Very many persons applying for admission have been rejected; grounds of rejection and examination thereon, 14903–14946——The claim to freedom by marriage was known, though not much exercised, previous to the Reform Bill, 14953–14955. 14963–14967——Date of the charter, 14973–14976——Freeman's oath; no traces of its origin in the books of the corporation, 14977–14986——Great exertions used since the Reform Bill in procuring freemen to register; by whom made, 14987–14991——Certificates of admission have been sometimes signed in blank, 14992–15000——Meetings of the assemblies held quarterly; greater number of adjournments since than previous to the Reform Bill; adjournments since the Reform Bill are principally for the purpose of admitting freemen, 15002–15025——Persons may be sworn at any time; officers that must be present at the time, 15029–15031——Very few freemen made in 1833 or 1834, 15033–15036.

The son, to entitle him to the freedom of the corporation at large, must have been born subsequent to father's freedom, 15037–15043——Whether any objections have been raised to the admission of persons in right of marriage since the passing of the Reform Bill, 15044–15051——Corporation very anxious to increase the number of freemen in their own interest, 15052–15057——Further evidence respecting the right of

of admission by marriage, 15059–15076——Freemen being passed by grace especial in one of the junior corporations, it founded a claim of right to admission in the corporation above, 15078–15082——By whom beseeches are prepared, and documents on which founded, 15088–15097——Juries of freemen are empanelled to inquire into the fact of servitude, 15102–15120——No occasion for indentures of apprentices being enrolled, 15114——Manner in which the correctness of a claim to admission in right of birth is ascertained, 15121–15128——Further evidence as to the facts inquired into by the jury in cases of servitude, 15140–15147——The beseeches are not passed till it is ascertained that the facts stated are true, 15148–15162.

Admission is not complete till the oaths are taken; prior to the Reform Bill it was held to be the date of the admission, 15162, 15163——On production of the certificate no objection can be made to the registration of a freeman, 15168–15170——Case of Macray, 15171–15173——Corporation consider the son of an honorary freeman, since the Reform Bill, claiming in right of birth, entitled to his freedom, 15174–15176——Not many instances in which persons are admitted to the corporation who are under age, 15177–15181——Marksmen are admitted, 15182——Instances in which persons have not come forward to be sworn for some years after their admission, 15184–15189——Case of Mr. Cane, 15186. 15200–15212——Cases of Thomas and Henry Lapham, admitted on the same day, 15191, 15192. 15199——The right of grandsons to the freedom is admitted by the corporations, 15193–15198. 15226–15230.

No stamp duty paid on admission to the corporation at large; fees paid to witness, 15232–15241——Ground upon which the right of admission by marriage is founded; the corporation have always exercised the right of admitting or rejecting whom they pleased without assigning any reason, 15245–15262——Charter of James II. has never been acted on, 15268–15271——The different rights of admission are supported by immemorial usage, 15272–15277——Freemen of the corporation at large have no peculiar advantages, except as regards voting for Members of Parliament, 15279–15282. 15293–15295——The guilds are composed of persons not of the trade of the guild to which they belong, 15283–15292——Mode of electing the lord mayor, 15299, 15300——Annual elections to corporate offices in the respective guilds, 15300*.

[Second Examination.]—Delivers in list of the number of freemen admitted into the corporation of Dublin from 1825 to 1830, showing the classes and the number admitted in each year; also of the numbers admitted from 1821 to 1825, and examination thereon, 15301–15323——Privileges from which persons, not members of the corporation at large, were excluded previous to the Reform Bill, 15326–15334. 15336–15339——Explanation of the term sheriff's peers, 15340–15344——Honorary freedom, or freedom of the corporation at large, only conferred by way of compliment, 15345–15348——Further evidence respecting the right of rejection or admission, 15351–15363——Examination on certain statements contained in the Report of the Commissioners of Inquiry into Municipal Corporations in Ireland, as to the right of admission to the different corporations, 15364–15400.

The Court of King's Bench refused a mandamus to admit a resident merchant to the freedom of the borough of Sligo, on the mere ground of inhabitancy, 15370–15376——Extracts from the charter granted by Henry II. to the men of Bristol, of his city of Dublin, 15388–15400——Persons free of a minor guild have no right to vote for a member of the common council or Member of Parliament, unless they have passed the city at large, 15405–15416——Instances of attornies representing the guilds to which they belong, notwithstanding the provision in Lucas's Act to the contrary, 15418–15423——No printed list of freemen previous to 1774; manuscript list only; printed lists used in elections of Members of Parliament, the manuscript remaining with the assessor in case of objection being made to any person, 15432–15463——Case of Mr. Henry Hall, and examination thereon, 15465–15480.

[Third Examination.]—Examination respecting the investigation made by the jury on the claim to be admitted in right of servitude, 15890–15933——Enrolment of the indentures has been given up by nearly all the corporations, 15899——Proof of the fact of service is sufficient, without production of the indenture, 15905–15914——Repeated instances of persons being rejected from not being able to prove a service of seven years, 15916. 15920–15924.

[Fourth Examination.]—No person should be admitted a freeman who is not of age; persons have been admitted under age; impropriety of the practice, 16012–16016.

Assistant Barristers:

1. Generally.
2. In Belfast and Dublin.
3. In Clonmel.

1. Generally:

Ought not to be connected with the registration of votes in Ireland, as they are subjected to suspicions of political partiality, Mayne 959–971——It would be desirable to separate the functions of registering barrister from those of the assistant barrister, as suspicion of political bias diminishes the respect paid to the administration of justice at quarter sessions, O'Dwyer 219–221——The present system of registration compels the assistant barrister to interfere in political matters, greatly to the prejudice of his usefulness in other respects, Bates 2336——Are becoming acquainted with the decisions of their brethren, and no change is necessary with respect to their jurisdiction except the establishment of appeals in cases of improper admissions, Whiteside 2652——They should be frequently transferred from one county to another, Whiteside 2658, 2659——Should move in rotation round the country, instead of being stationed in a particular district; evidence as to the time assistant barristers have remained in the county of Antrim, Bates 2399–2443.

2. In Belfast and Dublin:

Counsel and agents generally appear for each party at the registry: In Belfast, Bates 1052–1060; in Dublin, Martin 14307——There was no partiality shown by them in registering votes, Gilmore 470–473——All cases were heard with patience and deliberation: In Belfast, Gilmore 493–499; in Dublin, Seton 18310.

3. In Clonmel:

Each of the three assistant-barristers who have successively registered in Clonmel have admitted persons to register whose houses were not worth 10*l.*, Higgins 2965–2979, Legge 4381–4383——The counsel for Mr. Bagwell did not produce so many witnesses before them as witness desired; did not expect that further evidence would have changed the decisions of the barrister; thought it necessary it should be produced in case of petition, Smith 3770–3801——It was useless to give evidence, as the barrister adopted the oath of the claimant as a criterion of value, Smith 3802–3812——After the first day of the registry witnesses were not produced by Mr. Bagwell's party, because the registering barrister did not attach sufficient weight to their testimony, Labarte 5483–5498.

Received the evidence that was offered, but considered that claimants who stated their houses to be worth 10*l.* to them, were better judges of the value than strangers, Labarte 5499–5533——Return of the deputy-assistant barristers appointed under the authority of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 88, s. 66; the names and dates of the appointment of all assistant-barristers appointed since the 1st January 1833, and the causes of the vacancies which may have been thus supplied; the names and dates of the removals of all the assistant-barristers who may have been removed from one county to another since the 1st January 1833; also specifying the places to which they may have been removed, App. i. p. 126.

See Appeals, 1. Dobbs, Mr. Fogarty, Mr.

Athlone Borough. Return of the several persons registered in, who have subscribed their affidavits for registry as marksmen, App. i. p. 46——Name, residence and description of each person admitted as a freeman of the corporation of Athlone since March 1831, App. i. p. 57–59——Total number of voters registered for this borough since the passing of the Irish Reform Bill, App. iii. p. 234——Return of the names and residences, specifying the streets and numbers of the houses of all individuals in this town who have made application or received excise licenses for the sale of spirits in premises under the annual value of 10*l.*, since the 1st October 1832, App. iii. p. 280, 281.

Atkinson, John Mathers. Was admitted a freeman of the Tanner's Guild in right of marriage; cause of his admission being entered as by grace especial instead of marriage, Irwin 17924–17926. 17935–17937. 18058. 18060–18068.

Atkyns, Thomas, of Ducket-street, Clonmel. He had a house worth 10*l.* a year, but was rejected for nonpayment of rent, Smith 3567–3572, Graham 4947–4966——He voted at the last election as if he occupied the whole house; he is only a lodger, Smith 3571, 3572.

Bardin, Jacob. Hopkins-lane, Clonmel; he registered out of one room; he paid only 10*d.* a week, and admitted that he was only a lodger, Smith 3892–3896——The accuracy of Mr. Smith's evidence disputed relative to the apartment out of which he registered, Glissan 7662–7674——It is not worth 10*l.*, Butler 11305.

Barlow, John Wilson. Claimed to be registered as a freeman by birth; period of obtaining his certificate of admission; objections made to his registration, Martin 14466–14471.

Barrett, Timothy. New-street, Clonmel; house occupied by him is let at 9*l.*; witness could have obtained 10*l.* for it, Butler, 12241–12247——It is not included in the valuation made by the Commissioners in 1834, Butler, 12257–12263. 12305, 12306, Keily 12315–12321.

Barristers. See Assistant Barristers. Council. Registering Barristers.

Barry, John. Admitted to the freedom of the guild of merchants for his polite attention in auditor-general's office, Allen 16386.

Barry, Patrick. Claimed to register; was rejected on the ground of insufficiency of value, after investigation by the registering barrister, Glissan 7144–7147.

Baseggio, John. Was admitted to the corporation of barbers and surgeons in 1836; he professed the Protestant religion; he is either an Italian or Swiss, Clinton 17440–17443.

Bates, Mr. John. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—A solicitor at Belfast, and agent for the conservative party; has attended every registry except that of April 1835, 979–987——number of claimants 1832–1835 registered and rejected, and on what grounds, 988–1007——Mr. O'Dwyer's decision against one vote, on the house and shop question, when assessor, would have affected many others, principally the liberal party, 1008–1018——The majority would have been in favour of Dunbar, whether these votes had been admitted or not; the resignation of Mr. R. J. Tennent was not really occasioned by Mr. O'Dwyer's decision, which was only the pretext for abandoning the contest, 1019–1051——Counsel and agents generally appear for each party at every registry, 1052–1060——Number of claimants registered and rejected 1836–1837, 1061–1062——Nature of decisions of Mr. O'Dwyer and Mr. Mayne on the length of occupation required by the Act, 1063–1066.

(Second Examination.)—Legal possession for six months was considered as occupation by Mr. Fogarty, provided the party had occupied any portion of that time previous to the registry; illustrated by report of cases from the Belfast Commercial Chronicle, 1071–1105——Mr. Fogarty refused to reject a claim of this nature for the purpose of appeal; Mr. Hannay, a Conservative, consented to have his claim rejected in order to have the question tried by the Judges, 1107–1120——A similar point has been reserved in Louth, for the opinion of the Lord Chief Justice, 1121–1136——Witness conceives that Mr. Fogarty should have entered the grounds of rejection in obedience to Sect. 21 and 25 of the Reform Act, 1137–1146——Examination as to the case of John Campbell, 1147–1149.

The admission of persons to the register who have not had actual occupation for six months, is favourable to the creation of fictitious votes, 1150–1160——Difference between tenancy and legal possession explained, 1161–1178——The occupation of a dwelling-house by the servants eating and sleeping in it for six months, is an occupation by their master, as witness conceives, even if he never entered his house during that time, 1179–1197——But he would not admit a person to register, who, although he had possession for six months, had not occupied the whole time by himself or his domestic servants, 1198–1212——A case of occupation is now submitted to the 12 judges from Dundalk; dalk; but witness does not know how much of the general question is embraced by it, 1213–1223——Examination as to the newspaper report of the cases of Robert Magee and Mr. Davison, 1224–1248.

Cases of Mr. Davison and Mr. Munce, whom Mr. Fogarty was willing to register, but who refused to take the oath required, the former as to length of actual occupation, the latter with respect to the value of his house, 1249–1328. 1886–1896——It is easier to establish legal possession by a false oath than actual occupation, 1329–1371——The affidavit is tendered to claimants to register by their own party to complete the proceedings, when the barrister has been satisfied as to their claims in other respects, 1372–1415——Mr. M'Kean's claim was rejected by Mr. O'Dwyer in 1832, and admitted by Mr. Fogarty in 1836, as permissive occupant of a house; a similar case has been decided on appeal from Dundalk, by the 12 judges, since which Mr. Fogarty has refused to register such claimants, 1416–1466——Baron Pennefather on appeal admitted non-resident freemen to register at Cork in 1832; his decision was overruled by the twelve judges, 1467–1518——Witness's construction of the oath in Schedule (C.) No. 9, of the Reform Act, 1519–1533——The franchise should be better defined, but not extended, 1534–1556.

[Third Examination.]—The claim of William Phillips, who let lodgings, was admitted on appeal; Mr. Fogarty considered the decision did not make it necessary to reject claimants, the reserved portions of whose houses were of less value than 10*l.* a year, 1557–1562——This question is still undecided, and a difference of opinion exists amongst the judges, 1563–1603——Evidence respecting the cases of Campbell and Phillips, and opinions concerning the lodger point, 1604–1700——Effects of lowering the franchise upon the conservative interest of Belfast, which Mr. Fogarty's decisions have tended to produce, 1701–1714——Discussion of cases decided by Mr. Fogarty with reference to the effect of alterations in destroying the identity of houses within the period of six months, 1715–1825, 1897–1907——Numbers registered in Belfast, conservatives and liberals, 1826–1844——Witness is secretary and agent to the Belfast Society, but declines giving their names, 1845–1879.

[Fourth Examination.]—The decision of the Lord Chief Baron in Mr. Hannay's case, requiring actual occupation, is in opposition to Mr. Fogarty's construction of the Act, 1908–1942——The means taken by Mr. O'Dwyer, Mr. Carry and Mr. Mayne for ascertaining value differed from the practice of Mr. Fogarty as evinced by the cases, Arthur Lavery, William Bloomfield, Michael Lennard and Joseph Hurtley, 1943–2031——Mr. Fogarty added the police tax to the rent in the case of Arthur Hamill; evidence and opinions concerning the propriety of such a practice, 2032–2160——Latterly he has required evidence of value, where the rent and taxes are very low; cases of Francis Cambell and Owen M'Cann, 2168–2184. 2191–2206.

In the case of Michael Kavanagh he admitted the applicant without corroborating evidence of value, 2185–2190——Also in the case of Patrick M'Guire, 2222–2230——Cases in which applicants were rejected by former barristers, and admitted by Mr. Fogarty; all which decisions tend to lower the franchise in Belfast, 2236–2270, 2298–2301.

Witness believes Mr. Fogarty to have applied his principles impartially to both parties, but was accused of a leaning towards the liberals; the cases of Lavery and Hutton; Stevenson and M'Cann, 2271–2297——Evidence respecting appeals from Mr. Fogarty's decisions, 2302–2315——concerning Belfast elections, 1832 and 1835, 2326–2335——The registration should be annual, 2336–2338——Registering barristers should be appointed by the judges, and appeals be allowed in cases of improper admissions to the register, 2339–2396——The removals of assistant barristers from one county to another have been more frequent since the Reform Act, 2397–2453.

Bedford, Duke of. Policy pursued by him when Lord Lieutenant of Ireland was not inimical to the people at large, Hackett 13726.

Bedfordshire Case. A Committee of the House of Commons decided that a freeholder could not make his freehold amount to 40*s.* a year by the taxes paid, Whiteside 2597.

Beds. See Cellars.

Belfast Election. Mr. O'Dwyer's decision against one vote on the house and shop question, when assessor at the Belfast election, would have affected many others, principally of the liberal party; the majority, however, would have been in favour of Mr. Dunbar, whether those votes had been admitted or not; the resignation of Mr. R. J. Tennent was not really occasioned by Mr. O'Dwyer's decision, which was only a pretext for abandoning the contest, Bates 1008–1051——Number of electors polled at several elections since 1832 for each candidate; probable effects of Mr. Fogarty's decisions upon future elections, Bates 2326–2329——Several persons who voted for Mr. M'Cance had left the houses out of which they registered, but entered again a few minutes before they went to poll, and swore that they were still possessed of the same qualification, Bates 2330, 2331.

FREEMEN:

- I. Generally.
- II. Privileges enjoyed by Freemen of the Corporation of Dublin.
- III. Increase or decrease in the Number admitted since the Reform Bill.
  - 1. In Clonmel.
  - 2. In Dublin.
- IV. Papers laid before the Committee.

I. Generally:

Many freemen in Dublin and elsewhere are room-keepers, Archer 15387——Very few freemen sworn in court, Lambert 16649——There is no printed list of the freemen of the corporation previous to that of 1774; a manuscript list only, which remains with the assessor at elections in case of objections being made, Archer 15432–15436——Instance of a person being disfranchised by a minor guild, Archer 16127–16130——They have been occasionally disfranchised by the corporation at large, Archer 16126——There are no means by which the validity of the claim of a freeman can be investigated but by a Committee of the House of Commons, Labarte 7132–7134——It was generally understood in Clonmel that every Protestant settler had a right to claim his freedom under an Act of Charles II., Hackett 13482.

II. Privileges enjoyed by Freemen of the Corporation of Dublin:

Those belonging to the corporation at large have no particular advantages, Archer 15279–15282. 15293–15295——Further evidence in explanation of the above, Archer 16017, 16018——Privileges from which persons not members of the corporation at large were excluded previous to the Reform Act, Archer 15326–15334. 15336–15339——Persons free of a minor guild have no right to vote for members of the common council or Members of Parliament, unless they have passed the corporation at large, Archer 15405–15416, Allen 16241–16244, Clinton 17405, 17406, Wiber 18191——Difference in the privileges enjoyed by a grace-especial freeman and an honorary freeman, Clinton 17500–17502.

III. Increase or decrease in the Number admitted since the Reform Bill:

1. In Clonmel:

Before the Reform Act the corporation of Clonmel admitted as many freemen as they pleased without any qualification, Higgins 2734–2739, Labarte 7135–7137——About forty were admitted at the same time with witness in 1833, Smith 3582–3589——No freemen created for five years preceding the Reform Act; since that time eighty-three have been admitted by birth, servitude, marriage or grace special, Smith 3590–3601——Out of eighty-three admitted to the freedom of Clonmel, only one was a Roman-catholic, Smith 3602–3605——There were no freemen admitted previous to the last election who were not in the interest of Mr. Bagwell, Smith 3677–3690——Discrepancies in certain returns relative to the freemen in Clonmel, Smith 3716–3720——Names of certain persons admitted as freemen of Clonmel; right in which they claim to be admitted, Walshe 10558–10595——There are about 150 freemen in Clonmel, Labarte 5474–5478——Number of registered freemen, Walshe 9734——Names of non-resident freemen in Clonmel, Labarte 6135–6158——Number admitted since the Reform Bill, Hackett 13443–13451——Only two Roman-catholics, Hackett 13447, 13448.

2. In Dublin:

The number of freemen have increased very much latterly in Dublin, Martin 14296——Increased number of admissions since the Reform Bill in the guild of merchants, Allen 16897–16900——The corporation of Dublin have been very anxious to increase the number of the freemen in their own interest since the Reform Bill, Archer 15052–15057——Very great exertions have been used both by the conservative and liberal parties to procure the registration of freemen since the passing the Reform Bill, Martin 14296–14299, Allen 16170–16177, Lambert 16852–16854——Very few admitted to the corporation at large in 1833 or 1834, Archer 15033–15036, Seton 18407–18409——Number of persons admitted to the freedom of the weavers' corporation since the Reform Bill; number admitted in right of service, Irwin 17891–17905——Number of freemen composing the following guilds or corporations: The bakers, Card 15942–15957—The barbers and surgeons, Clinton 17386—The cooks and vintners, Wiber 18133. 18153—The guild of merchants, Allen 16192–16208—The tanners, Irwin 17825, 17826.

FREEMEN—continued.

raised were for the general purposes of conservatism, 11738–11749——Registration Society established by the liberals in Tipperary, 11755–11772——Objects in view from the establishment of the "justice rent;" manner it is collected; class of persons subscribing, 11780–11801.

Pacificators have been sent to Tipperary; nature of their duties; manner in which they perform them, 11802–11827——Secret committees sitting in Dublin to which none but members have been admitted, from which committees private instructions are issued to the pacificators, 11828–11875——Further evidence respecting the duties of the pacificators; violent speeches attributed to them, 11876–11880. 11898–11933——Lower class of voters are very indisposed to register, 11881–11888——Register at Tipperary is incumbered by a great number of bad votes; number will be increased by the proceedings of the pacificators, 11889–11892——Evidence respecting the character of Archdeacon Laffan, 11930–11973. 11979–11993——Vast deal of difference between the priests and the coadjutor priests, 11974–11978——Present system of pacification has a tendency to increase the crime of perjury, 11981–11983——Tenantry of Tipperary are generally willing to oblige their landlords; those above 10*l.* a year would rather oblige their landlords than their priests if they dared do it, 11994–12040——Further evidence respecting the existence of secret committees, 12041–12056.

Glengall, Earl of. On one or two occasions he had employed counsel and solicitor to oppose the registry of the liberal party in Clonmel; he attends the registry, and sits on the bench, Walshe 9838–9856——Further examination thereon, Walshe 11047–11087——Evidence respecting his attendance at the registry courts for the county of Tipperary, Earl Glengall 11616–11618, Hackett 13535–13542. 13575–13589.

See also Analysis of his Evidence, supra.

Glissan, Mr. Michael. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Deputy clerk of the peace for the county of Tipperary; produces the book of registry for Clonmel up to 31 December 1836, 5406–5422——The list of voters published by the clerk of the peace in January is not correct, because many persons have died or changed their residence since the registry, 5423–5467.——(Witness was directed to mark the names of such persons.)

[Second Examination.]—The entire number of persons on the register of Clonmel is 866, of whom 299 have died or removed from their residences, leaving 567 now entitled to vote, of whom 16 are registered both as freemen and householders, 6159–6182.

[Third Examination.]—Many claimants were rejected by Mr. Guthrie for insufficiency of value; case of Patrick Barry, the occupant of a cellar, 7138–7147——Mr. Guthrie's principle of ascertaining value, 7148–7152. 7158–7163——Witness did not hear Mr. Guthrie state that the Reform Act was intended to create universal suffrage, 7153–7157——The tenement described out of which three persons, Prendergast, Burke and Sullivan, registered, 7164–7178. 7524–7527——The cases of Mr. Burrows Close, Rev. Sackville Burke, T. Shaughnessy, Messrs. Toole and Roche, and Joshua Moore, 7179–7217.

[Fourth Examination.]—Rent and valuation of houses occupied by Joshua Moore, Thomas Everard, 7229–7257——Evidence relative to the houses of William Hurley, John Darney, Joseph Cochrane and John Brown, 7258–7287——Of widow Riley, J. Maxey and —— Mokler, 7288–7311——Witness is in the spirit and grocery trade; in politics is a radical, 7316–7338——Witness never communicated the results of the registry to Mr. Hackett or Mr. Cahill, 7339–7355——Examination with reference to the alleged expressions of Mr. Guthrie on the object of the Irish Reform Act, 7356–7402.

[Fifth Examination.]—Valuation of the houses of John Carden and Michael Power, 7403–7410. 7419–7429——Witness's impression as to the power of the assistant barrister to revise the register, 7430–7434——Jeremy Crenin was rejected for want of value by Mr. Guthrie, on the evidence of Mr. Douglas, the agent of Mr. Bagwell, 7435–7461——The evidence of Mr. Higgins contradicted as to Mr. J. Hennesy, 7462–7465——As to the admission of lodgers to the register by Mr. Guthrie; the case of John Flanagan, 7466–7495——It is witness's general impression that it is customary for tenants of small houses in Clonmel to pay weekly a yearly rent, 7496–7523——The house of Lawrence Cashin is valued at 12*l.*, 7555–7561——Many conservatives attended the registry, 7562–7565——The Quakers were in the conservative interest; Mr. David Malcomson turned off a man in his employment because he voted for Mr. Ronayne; he has a great number of men in his employment, 7566–7579——About 40 Roman-catholics voted for Mr. Bagwell; some of them were bribed; the Quakers of Clonmel are a highly respectable class, 7580–7624——Mr. Higgins's evidence relative to Joshua Moore's house contradicted, 7625–7636——Cellars belonging to gentlemen's houses are not let; in Main-street there are about 80 let under shops, 7637–7649.

It is not the custom in Clonmel to let houses at a rack rent; witness's father prefers letting his houses at less than their value to insure solvent and respectable tenants, 7650–7661——The accuracy of Mr. W. Smith's evidence disputed, relative to the apartment out of which Jacob Bardin registered, 7662–7674——Respecting Thomas Mackie, stated to have kept a house of ill-fame, 7675–7697——Mr. Guthrie frequently expressed his readiness readiness to hear evidence in opposition to the oath of claimants to register; but he preferred the oath of the claimants to the unsworn statements of their opponents, 7698–7712.

Mr. Guthrie, in estimating value, took into account not only the rent paid, but the situation of the house and the business of the claimant; Mr. Bagwell's friends objected to this practice, 7713–7720——Many persons were examined in opposition to claims, but they afterwards refused to give evidence because Mr. Guthrie decided that the Act did not require the payment of 10 l. rent, 7722–7727——No witnesses have been examined at the two last registry sessions, for Mr. Howley cross-examines the claimants very strictly, 7728–7741——Mr. Legge's evidence as to the great value of houses in Johnson-street contradicted, 7742–7754——Walter and William Keating registered, the one out of a house, the other out of a store, 7755–7770——The Rev. Sackville Burke and Mr. James Burke both voted for Mr. Bagwell, 7771–7776——It is usual for shopkeepers to leave the hall door for the exclusive use of the lodgers, and to use their shop door at all times; case of Burke and Prendergast, 7777–7786——Richard Moore is registered as a freeman, and is not resident within the limits of the borough, 7787–7799——The Messrs. Malcomson registered as freemen; reside within the limits of the old corporation, but not in the new boundaries of the commissioners, 7800–7819.

Godfrey, Andrew. Of Charlemont-street, Belfast; claimed to register out of a house for which he paid 10 l. a year to his landlord, who paid the taxes, and was admitted, Bates 2086, 2087.

Going, Joseph. Was admitted to the freedom of Clonmel in right of birth; he was not the eldest son, Labarte 6128–6131, Hackett 13430–13432——He was not allowed to register as a freeman, though he produced his cocket of admission to the freedom, Labarte 6128–6134, Hackett 13462–13464.

Going, Messrs. On claiming to be admitted as freemen, produced no indentures of apprenticeship, Labarte 6474–6542.

Going, Stephen. Was refused the freedom of Clonmel, Smith 3655, 3656.

Gonne, George. Admitted to the freedom of the city of Dublin at large in 1798 in right of service, Martin 15935. 15938.

Goodwill, Value of, in Clonmel. The goodwill of the most flourishing business in Clonmel is not worth more than 5 l.; the custom will not attach to the establishment, as in large towns, but to persons, Graham 5343–5388——Opinion of Mr. Graham is very erroneous, Walshe 10395–10479——The goodwill of a business transacted in a cellar is of proportionately less value, and should not be taken into the valuation, Graham 5389–5405——Sum paid by witness for the goodwill of his present business; sum paid by his predecessor, Walshe 10395–10479——Evidence respecting the goodwill that would be obtained for businesses in other parts of the town, Walshe 10484–10490.

Gordon, John. Of Little Patrick-street, Belfast; valued at 6 l. in the police books, Gilmore 301.

Gordon, Mr. Was examined on the trial against Mr. Hackett for libel on Mr. Strangman; he admitted having subscribed money towards the prosecution, Walshe 10939–10943.

Gordon, Stephen. Registered as a freeman of Clonmel in right of servitude, Labarte 6678–6682.

Gorman, William. Bagwell-street, Clonmel; registered in 1832; valued at 5 l., Higgins 2833, 2834, Smith 3471, 3472, Graham 4985–5003, Walshe 9652——His premises were thatched, Higgins 3048——They were not thatched, Walshe 9663, 9664——Registered out of a house and forge; premises have since been purchased for the Bank of Ireland; rent paid by him, and condition of the property, Graham 5001–5003, 5010–5029, Walshe 9633–9660.

Grace-especial Freemen, Dublin. Freemen being passed by grace especial in one of the junior corporations, it founded a claim of right to admission in the corporation above, Archer 15078–15082——The corporation of the city of Dublin may appoint any person they please as freeman by grace especial, Archer 16033–16043. 16084–16118——Admission by grace especial was never considered as a right, but as a matter of favour: In the corporation of barbers and surgeons, Clinton 17495, 17496—In the smiths, Lambert 16641, 16642——No admission by grace especial since the Reform Bill: In the corporation of bakers, Card 15949–15951—In the barbers and surgeons, Clinton 17311. 17490–17494—In the tanners and weavers, Irwin 17873, 17874——Great many persons admitted to the guild of smiths by grace especial previous to the Reform Bill, Lambert 16566, 16567——Proposition made for the admission of a batch of freemen by grace especial was negatived by the aldermen of the city of Dublin, Archer 16132–16144, Allen 16176——Previous to the Reform Bill those persons who passed the minor guilds in right of marriage passed the corporation at large by grace especial, Archer 18874——Members admitted to the (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Architect and builder, 15481——Served an apprenticeship of seven years to Mr. Carolin; no indenture of apprenticeship; indenture produced was not executed till after witness had served his time; it was executed on the day or the day after the time expired, 15487-15557——Indenture was made up for the purpose of getting witness registered as a freeman, 15558-15571——Received wages during the whole time of his apprenticeship, 15572-15578——Proposal of Carolin to get witness admitted to the corporation; sum paid for admission, 15579-15604. 15634-15648——Further examination relative to the execution of the indenture, 15605-15613. 15649-15740——Usual to give out-door apprentices wages, 15618-15625——Frequently applied to Carolin to get his indenture executed, but without effect, 15629-15633——Combinations among workmen have led to very serious results; causes thereof, 15742-15748——Common practice in Dublin, where no fee is given with an apprentice, to antedate his indentures, 15777-15779——Rate of wages received by witness during apprenticeship, 15780-15790——Evidence respecting the number of apprentices to Carolin and his brothers during the period of witness's apprenticeship, 15811-15889.

Hall,

Report, 1837—continued.

Hall, Mr. Henry, (Dublin.) Admitted to the corporation at large at Christmas 1836; form of the beseech, and evidence thereon, Archer 15464–15480.—[See also Analysis of his Evidence, supra.

Hall, John. St. Stephen's-lane, Clonmel; value of his house about 5 l.; it is a thatched house, with about a quarter of an acre of land attached, Smith 3259–3261.

Hall Doors, Clonmel. It is usual for shopkeepers to leave the hall door for the exclusive use of their lodgers, and to use their shop door at all times, Glissan 7777–7786, Walshe 8980–8984.

Hamigan, Daniel. Cooper in Main-street, Clonmel; his cellar would not bring 10 l. a year, Butler 11420–11422.

Hamilton, James. Wine-street tavern, Belfast; valued in the police books at 6 l.; rejected October 1832, and admitted October 1836, Bates 2240.

Hannay, John. His case on appeal to the Lord Chief Baron; he sought to register out of a dwelling-house, of which he had had the key for six months, and in which workmen were employed; the Lord Chief Baron decided this was not "actual occupation," Bates 1910.

Hardwicke, Lord. Judgment of, in the case of Finder v. Lome, declaring that householders who let lodgings were qualified to vote by the provisions of the English Act, 11 Geo. 1, c. 18, as neither the house, nor any part of it, can properly be said to be in the occupation of the lodgers, Bates 1670–1673.

Harricks, Mr. Freeman of the guild of saddlers; was disfranchised by that guild; supposed grounds of disfranchisement, Archer 16127–16130.

Harris, William. Of Meath-street, Dublin; admitted to the guild of weavers in right of birth, Irwin 18032–18035.

Harrison, Alexander. No indenture produced on admission to the freedom of Clonmel in this case, Labarte 6571–6583.

Hartley, Joseph. Michael-street, Belfast; paid 10 l. a year rent; evidence was produced to prove that the house out of which he claimed to register was not worth nine guineas a year, but Mr. Fogarty admitted the claim, Bates 2006–2011.

Harvey, Hill. Of Ballybeg; resided without the limits of the borough when he became a freeman, Walshe 10561–10566, Labarte 6758–6764.

Harvey, William. Of Coleville; resided at Clonmel when he was admitted a freeman; he is resident without the limits at present, Labarte 6964–6970.

Henry the Sixth. Charter granted by him to the barbers' and surgeons' corporation of Dublin; protestancy was not in vogue at that time, Clinton 17509.

Hickey, Patrick. Duckett-street, Clonmel; house occupied by him would be worth 10 l. if the letting of lodgings were taken into account, Smith 3309-3345——It is of the value of 10 l., Walshe 8847, Butler 11273, 11274.

Higgins, Mr. Joseph. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—A seedsman and nurseryman residing in Clonmel, 2660-2662——Was appointed in 1828 one of three valuators at Clonmel, under the commissioners for lighting and watching corporate towns by 9 Geo. IV., 2663-2669——The valuation was taken on the full improved value of the premises, and has continued in force since 1828, except as to houses which have been changed, and new houses built, 2670-2681. 3097-3099——The present commissioners are in an inferior class with respect to property than the first commissioners under the Act, and profess different politics, but they have ordered no re-valuation, 2682-2688——At the first registration in 1832 Mr. Guthrie was the registering barrister, 2689-2704——Witness attended the registry court for two days, but withdrew afterwards, because Mr. Guthrie preferred the oaths of the claimants, with regard to the value of their houses, to the testimony of valuators, 2705-2719.

Mr. Welsh attended as counsel on the part of Mr. Bagwell, 2720-2724——Mr. Guthrie said he conceived it to be the intention of the legislature to extend the elective franchise almost, if not altogether, to universal suffrage, 2725——A petition to the House of Commons against the return of Mr. Ronayne was presented; but the Committee, who decided in favour of the sitting Member, did not enter into the question of value, 2726-2733——Witness is not a freeman; many were made before the Reform Act, 2734-2739——He gave evidence in the case of Patrick Burke, who paid 4 l. rent, but swore his house was worth 10 l. a year to him, 2740-2752——James Gleeson was registered, whose house was not worth more than 5 l. a year, 2753-2760.

Thomas Keiley inhabited a small thatched cabin, at a rent of 2 l. 15 s. 5 d., and was registered, 2761-2769——The case of Nicholas Lynch was similar, 2770-2773——Daniel Inglish and Richard Butler, 2774-2781——Timothy Carey, 2782-2787——Martin Calaghan and William Davis; rent 5 l. or 6 l., 2788-2795——Thomas Welsh registered out of a wretched thatched hovel, worth 3 l. a year, 2796-2800——Martin Moroney, Thomas Sheey and John Hennesey; rent 5 l. or 6 l., 2801-2808——John O'Flanagan, a lodger, paying 14 d. a week, was registered by Mr. Guthrie, 2809-2816——Three persons registered out of a house in Bagwell-street; the person who owned the shop, another who lodged in the house, and a third who lived in the cellar, 2817-2825——John O'Brien and Jacob Bardon registered out of one house, worth 5 l. a year, 2826-2831.

William Gorman registered, valued at 5 l., 2833, 2834——Timothy Dooley and Michael Russell registered out of houses worth 7 l. or 8 l., 2835-2842——Another, Patrick Burke, whose rent is 7 l., was registered, 2843-2853——The cases of Paul Winberry, John Coghlan, Thomas Hill, Laurence Cashin and William Brown; their rent from 6 l. to 8 l., 2854-2877——Similar cases of Walter Bowles and Jeremiah Meyers, 2878-2893. 2913-2918——Rent is high in Clonmel, and houses are generally let at their full value, 2894-2912——The cases of Michael Murphy, Edmund Day and John Bagg, 2920-2936——Rent and value may be considered as synomymous, except where improvements have been made, 2937-2943——James Gleeson's case, 2944, 2945——Many have been registered who were not included in the valuation, as being under 5 l.; when the valuation was made, the valuators inquired the rent, and examined the inside of the houses when necessary, 2946-2954.

Improvements may have been made since that time; but the general value of houses of the same description remains unchanged, 2955-2964——Each of the nine assistant barristers who have successively registered in Clonmel have admitted persons whose houses were not worth 10 l., but Mr. Guthrie especially, 2965-2979——The rates at which houses of different classes are assessed, 2980-2990——The persons who swore their houses were worth 10 l. a year let part to lodgers, whose weekly rent, together with the value of the part retained by the tenant, may have amounted to 10 l., 2991-2996——Names of certain voters abovementioned who voted for Mr. Bagwell, 2997-3011——Further evidence relative to Thomas Hill and Daniel English, 3012-3024——There were three separate entrances to the house in Dublin-street, out of which three claimants registered, 3025-3036——Clonmel is increasing in prospects, 3038, 3039——Names of some of the present commissioners, 3038-3046——Thatched houses enumerated in the list of those under 10 l., 3037. 3047-3051.

The facts on which claimants made out the value of their houses to be 10 l. to them were elicited on cross-examination, 3052-3059——One thousand notices were served for the registry in 1832; but not more than half that number of votes were registered, 3069-3076——Mr. Guthrie is a Protestant; Mr. Ryan Kay, a Catholic, was objected to, 3077-3086——There never was a contest in Clonmel before the Reform Act, 3089-3093——Examination on the cases of Thomas Everard, Joshua Moore, John White, David Thornton and Marks English, to whose admission witness did not object, 3100-3118——The valuation of 1828 afforded a general test of value in 1832, except where alterations had been made, 3119-3123——Shops are conducted in cellars at Clonmel, but few are worth 10 l.

10 l. a year, 3125–3131——Witness inspected a cellar occupied by John Sawyer, which was scarcely worth 10 l. a year, 3132–3150——Evidence respecting Thomas Holmes, 3154–3163.

Higginson, Richard. Admitted to the freedom of the guild of tailors in right of marriage; to the corporation at large by grace especial, Archer 18956.

Hill, Thomas. Upper Johnson-street, Clonmel; registered out of a small house, worth about 8 l. a year, Higgins 2861–2863. 3012–3024——It is worth 10 l. a year; he pays 8 l. rent, Walshe 8147–8158, Butler 11246, Lonergan 12510, 12511. 12518——Is rated at 8 l. in the commisioners' books, Keily 8221–8226——With respect to the house occupied by him, rent and value are synonymous; the house has not been improved, and it would let for no more, Higgins 3014.

Hobson, Mr. No complaints made with respect to his mode of registry, Legge 4382, Labarte 5561–5568——Claimants have been registered out of cellars not worth 10 l. a year by him, Graham 4747–4752, Walshe 9466–9477. 10517–10527.

Hodges, Mr. Opinion among the members of the corporation of smiths that he had violated his oath by taking a Roman-catholic apprentice, and examination thereon, Lambert 17771–17782.

Hogan, Thomas. Of Main-street, Clonmel; registered by Mr. Guthrie; premises not worth 10 l., Graham 4802–4806, Walshe 9552–9556——Cellar occupied by him is worth 10 l., Lonergan 12573–12575.

Hogg, John. Dunbar's-dock, Belfast; valued in the police-books at 5 l., Gilmore 302–304.

Holmes, Mr. He paid only 4 l. 4 s. rent; was registered by Mr. Hobson; his rent has since been raised to 8 l.; the premises are well worth 10 l., Walshe 10523, 10524.

Holmes, Thomas. No fair objection could be taken to his registration; premises occupied by him are worth about 5 l., Higgins 3154–3163——Was admitted by Mr. Hobson; his house not worth 10 l. a year, Legge 4382–4390.

HONORARY FREEMEN:

1. In Clonmel.
2. In Dublin.

1. In Clonmel:

Kirkwood, John Thomas. Was admitted to the freedom of the corporation at large in 1836, in right of marriage, Archer 15928–15933, Martin 15934–15936.

L.

Labarte, Mr. Edward. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—A solicitor in Clonmel; has been town-clerk since 1819, and assisted his father in that office before, 5468–5473——There are about 150 freemen in Clonmel, 5474–5478——Witness was concerned in the registry in 1832, and in the election petition in 1833, 5479–5482——After the first day of the registry, witnesses were not produced by Mr. Bagwell's party, because the registering barrister did not attach sufficient weight to their testimony, 5483–5498——He received the evidence that was offered, but considered that claimants who stated their houses to be worth 10*l.* to them, were better judges of value than strangers; they would rather pay more than the exact value than be subject to frequent removals, 5499–5533——The petition against the return of Mr. Ronayne was unsuccessful; it was abandoned after a consultation, 5534–5539.

Many persons have been admitted to the register who occupy houses of less annual value than 10*l.*; if there were an annual revision of the list, as in England, the difficulty experienced before the Committee would not have arisen, 5540–5546——The objections taken at the registry on the part of Mr. Bagwell related to under-value, and the voting of more than one person out of the same house, 5547–5560——Mr. Hobson and Mr. Howley gave satisfaction as registering barristers; the former registered the occupier of a cellar in Main-street, 5561–5568——The value of a cellar under Mr. Hackett's house, 5569, 5570.

The general value of cellars in Clonmel is less than 10*l.*, 5571–5574——Witness does not consider rent and value as synonymous; he considers a man entitled to vote who pays 7*l.* rent, 5572–5590——A landlord will lower the rent for a solvent tenant; a compromise is generally effected between them as to rent, the tenant retaining an interest beyond the rent, 5591–5618——Examination relative to a house of witness's, which he lets for 70*l.* a year to a grocer, and whether it is worth more than that sum in consequence of the business, 5619–5677.

[Second Examination.]—By the corporation books no entry appears of any freeman having been admitted in Clonmel by right of marriage previous to the Reform Act; the causes of admission are not specified, 5678–6030——The latest specification is in 1748, 6031–6050——Mr. Bagwell was admitted by right of birth in 1832; his residence is within two miles of the borough, 6051–6109——Samuel Ryall was admitted by right of servitude; Richard Moore as the eldest son of a freeman, 6110–6127——Joseph Going was not registered as being the second son of a freeman, 6128–6134——Names of non-resident freemen in Clonmel, 6135–6158.

[Third Examination.]—By the charter of James I. the corporation of Clonmel was to be composed of the inhabitants, 6183–6219——Examination respecting Mr. Chaytor's evidence before the Corporation Commissioners on the subject of administering oaths to freemen, 6220–6268——On the case of James Thomson, whose claim to the freedom was rejected on the ground of non-residence, 6268, 6269——On apprenticeship to freemen, 6269–6277——The charter does not recognise the right of the son of an honorary freeman; Mr. William Bridges was admitted by that right; it does not appear whether there were any honorary freemen before the Reform Act, 6278–6318——Names of persons refused their freedom, 6319–6332——John Farrell is the only Roman-catholic who has been admitted; since 1748 all who have been admitted freemen have been relatives or dependents of Mr. Bagwell, 6333–6354——Mr. David Malcomson was rejected when claiming by right of marriage, but admitted in 1801 by especial favour, 6355–6363.

While witness's father was town-clerk, the stamp duty was paid on the admission of freemen; from 1819 to 1832 none was paid, 6364–6452. 6779–6782——Freemen were sworn at the time of their admission, 6453–6473——Persons have been admitted by right of servitude who had never been indentured; cases of Messrs. Malcomson, Messrs. Going, Hughes and Jones, 6474–6550——Richard Labarte was indentured, 6551–6563——Cases of Messrs. E. Power, A. Harrison, S. Riall, R. Strangman, J. Shaw, R. Sparrow, J. Chaytor, W. Davis, W. Edmondson, Joshua Grabb, S. Gordon, F. G. Howell, C. Achison and J. Burke, 6564–6714. 6774–6778——Of Rev. R. Bell, R. Howell, W. Quinn and T. Jackson, 6715–6747——Witness believes that the son of an honorary freeman has a right to vote, 6748–6757——Cases of Hill Harvey and S. C. Moore, 6758–6773.

[Fourth Examination.]—Right in which the Messrs. Riall were admitted freemen, 6784–6815——Questions respecting the residence of certain freemen, viz., Abraham Grabb, Thomas Taylor and Rev. L. Carey, 6816–6849——Twenty-six freemen who were rejected at the registry were admitted on appeal by Mr. Baron Foster, because they had exercised the rights of freemen since 1812, 6850–6882——The residences of Messrs. Barclay, Clibborn, W. Quin, R. Carey, J. Smith, S. Moore, J. Farrell, J. Bagwell, W. Harvey and J. Chaytor, whether within the limits of the borough, 6883–6981——Of Messrs. Moore Labarte, W. Perry and T. Ryan, 6982–6995——Mr. R. Moore was admitted by special favour, 7019–7036——Evidence respecting the registration of freemen by Mr. Guthrie, Mr. Hobson and Mr. Howley, 6996–7090.

The certificate of admission to the corporation was considered sufficient evidence for the admission of freemen to the register, 7091–7101. 7128–7131——Examination relative to certain parts of the Report of the Corporation Commissioners, 7102–7127——There are no means by which the validity of the claims of a freeman can be investigated but by a Committee of the House of Commons, 7132–7134——Before the Reform Act the corporation admitted as many freemen as they pleased, without any qualification, 7135–7137.

Labarte, Moore. He has removed to Dublin; he had not removed before he registered as a freeman of Clonmel, Labarte 6984, 6985.

Labarte, Richard. Was admitted a freeman in right of servitude; he was indentured, Labarte 6552–6561.

Labarte, Mr. Action brought by him against the proprietors of the Tipperary Free Press for libel; amount of damages given; they have since been reduced, Walshe 10869–10876.

Lacy, Michael. Of New-street, Clonmel; a lodger claiming to be registered, and admitted; he voted for Mr. Ronayne, Smith 3934–3947——His premises are not worth 10 l. a year, Walshe 9493, 9494, Butler 11541–11544.

Laffan, Archdeacon. He is a very violent partisan; whether he would endeavour to register a person whom he knew had not a proper qualification, Earl Glengall 11930–11936——Appointed a pacificator for Tipperary by the National Association, Earl Glengall 11806——Is not a pacificator, Hackett 13612–13616——Appointing him a pacificator would be completely out of his sphere, Butler 12392–12395, Lonergan 13170——Violent speeches made by him at public meetings for the formation of the Tipperary Pacification Society, Earl Glengall 11806——Examination as to the violent speeches attributed to him, Laffan, Archdeacon—continued.

him, Hackett 13645–13668 —— He has attended several public meetings, and made speeches at all of them; he always recommended the people to preserve peace and good order in the country, Butler 12403–12408. 12431–12442, Hackett 13654–13668——He is in favour of a repeal of the Union, and has attended at public meetings held for that purpose, Hackett 13792, 13793.——See also Pacificators. Speeches.

Lambert, William Jordan. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Clerk to the guild of smiths, Dublin, 16507–16509——Produces transaction books and book of enrolment of the corporation, 16510–16521——Crafts belonging more especially to the guild, 16529, 16530——Mode of admitting persons to the freedom of the guild, 16535——Opinion that the guild would not admit a person in right of marriage to the daughter of a freeman coming in by grace especial, 16541–16563.

[Second Examination.]—Great number admitted by grace especial previous to the Reform Bill, 16566, 16567——Form of certificate of admission, 16586, 16587——Not necessary that the election should be unanimous, 16588——Ballot on the admission of freemen taken whenever it is required, 16589–16594. 16631–16637——Further evidence respecting the mode of admitting freemen, 16599–16606. 16611–16630——Admission by grace especial never considered as a right, but merely as a matter of favour, 16639–16642——Fees charged on admission, 16643–16647——Witness is accountable to the stamp-office for every freeman sworn; the guild of smiths do not swear a freeman till he has passed the city at large, 16648–16653——No freeman of the guild can exercise any of the rights belonging to it, before he belongs to the general corporation, 16654–16657——Examination respecting the oath taken by freemen as to enrolment of their apprentices, &c.; date of the institution of the guild of smiths; freeman's oath not of so old a date as the charter, 16663–16677. 16725.

No instance in which parties have been admitted to the freedom who have not been bound by indenture; it is usual to bring the indentures to the council of the house, 16678–16693——Persons have been admitted whose indentures have not been enrolled, 16699–16727. 16733–16739——Nature of the inquiry in the case of service made by the council of the house, 16702–16707——Practice in Dublin to take apprentices some time previous to the execution of the indentures, and allow the time, 16708–16711——Oath relative to enrolment of apprentices very indefinite, 16740–16778.

Further examination respecting the nature and meaning of the freeman's oath; manner in which it is observed, 16779–16823——Crafts belonging to the guild of smiths, 16829–16831——Examination respecting mandamus applied for in the cases of Messrs. Adcocks and Henderson, 16835–16845——Oath excluding Roman-catholics from apprenticeship continues to be administered; difference of opinion in the guild respecting its continuance, 16846–16851——Evidence respecting the existence of the Protestant Registration Committee, 16852–16867——Admission to the freedom by marriage was granted out of compliment previous to the Reform Bill, since then, as a right, 16868.

[Third Examination.]—Pecuniary loss sustained by witness in consequence of being summoned before the Committee, 17560–17563——Evidence respecting the decision of the Court of King's Bench, in the case of Adcocks, as to the right of a party to compel by mandamus a corporation to admit them by birth or service, 17564–17581.

[Fourth Examination.]—Several persons have been admitted freemen by maternal and paternal right, 17754–17770——Former clerk very irregular in his entries, 17756——Grounds on which the petition of Dowling was rejected, 17771–17774. 17776–17782——No persons admitted who profess the Roman-catholic religion; the oath only has reference to taking apprentices, 17783–17798——Rules and bye-laws of the corporation of smiths published in 1817, did not pass the hall in the form in which they are printed; proceedings of the corporation in respect thereof, 17799–17804.

[Fifth Examination.]—Examination respecting the proceedings taken by the corporation of smiths against their late master; circumstances which caused those proceedings, and manner they were disposed of, 18691–18747.

[Sixth Examination.]—Entries in the admission book of the guild of smiths relative to the enrolment of females as members of the corporation, and examination thereon, 19005–19018——No entry of females having been sworn in members, 19019——Extract from the charter of Edward I., authorizing the admission of females to the corporation, 19020–19025——Report of the judgment given by Chief Baron Joy on the point reserved in the appeals of Carolin and Hyde, 19026, p. 208–210.

Land. The ground about Clonmel sets at from twelve to sixteen guineas an acre, Walshe 9517, 9518——There are some farms in Clonmel let at 32 s. an Irish acre; amount of tithes per acre, Butler 12480–12484——Greater competition for land than for houses in Clonmel, Lonergan 12993–12995. 13068–13073——Examination as to the distinction to be drawn between land being let at "its full value," and land let at "its value," Lonergan 12998–13028. 13036–13043——Land in the neighbourhood of Clonmel is set at its full value, Lonergan 12992.

Landlords, Clonme. Instances of conservative landlords allowing their servants to vote as they please, Walshe 9308–9338——Those having property in towns much more benevolent than country landlords, Walshe 8420–8424——Names of the principal landlords in Clonmel, Walshe 8427–8429——They will lower the rent for a solvent tenant; a compromise is generally effected between them as to rent, the tenant retaining an interest beyond the rent, Labarte 5591–5618——They would prefer letting a house to a solvent and respectable tenant at a lower rent than to one of indifferent character at a higher rent, Legge 4411–4422, Glissan 7650–7661, Walshe 8367–8369. 8372–8375. 9333–9335, Butler 11360–11390, Lonergan 12965–12985, Hackett 13512–13522. 13530–13533. 14219–14228.

Leadgate, Isaac. Quay-lane, Belfast; valued at 7 l. in the police books, Gilmore 340.

Lee, Martha. Extract of the entry in the books of the corporation of smiths relating to the enrolment of Jonathan and Martha Lee, Lambert 19015.

Leeper, William. Explanation as to the manner in which he obtained his admission to the guild of smiths, Lambert 17770.

Leeson, John. Talbot-street, Belfast; valued at 6 l. in the police books, Gilmore 338——Paid 9 l. rent, and 6 s. police taxes; his house he stated to be worth 10 l.; evidence was produced for and against the value, and his claim was admitted, Bates 2219–2221——The arguments of counsel in this case are fairly reported in the Ulster Times, Whiteside 2463–2469.

Legal Possession. See Occupation. Smith, Thomas.

Legge, Mr. Richard. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Resides at Clonmel, and has been acting as vestry clerk for 20 years, 3993–3998——The applotments for the county rates and parish cess are made by persons appointed by the rate-payers at vestry, 3999–4003——He was clerk to the commissioners under the 9 Geo. IV., when the first valuation of the town was taken, 4004–4009——There were thirty or forty appeals, in fifteen or twenty of which the valuation was reduced; the commissioners conceived it to be generally above the full and improved yearly value of the houses, and would have reduced the whole a per-centage, had the Act permitted, 4010–4032——The commissioners were gentlemen of all parties, elected by the rate-payers, 4033–4056——Witness gave evidence at the registration in 1832, in the case of Michael Connors, 4057–4074.

Mr. Guthrie's registration is the only one of which he complains; Mr. Hobson and Mr. Howley gave satisfaction, 4075–4086——The offices which witness has held enumerated, 4087–4093——He was member of an Orange lodge for two months, 4094–4109——Particulars of Michael Connor's case; witness conceives the rent to be the criterion of value, 4110–4139——The rent is paid for the accommodation afforded, which is of value to the tenant equal to the money he pays, as in the purchase of clothes or food, 4140–4190——Price of lodgings for the poor in Clonmel, 4191–4201——Case of Patrick Quinan,

Quinan, who had left the house out of which he had registered, and returned to it before the election, and voted, 4231–4247. 4257, 4258.

The house of Patrick Callaghan was erased from the police books, on appeal, as being of less value than 5 l.; he voted for Mr. Ronayne, 4259–4269——Witness was examined before the Election Committee of 1833, 4270——The rent and value of Edward Mackin's and Richard O'Meagher's houses; when no fine is paid, rent and value may be considered as synonymous, 4271–4309——The landlord, Mr. Morgan Jones, is not likely to let houses at less than their value; he is now letting them in single rooms, and thus receives the retail value; but he has increased risk and greater expense in repairs, 4310–4322——Although the general valuation of the town is above the real value, yet several houses were valued at less than their actual value; examination as to Joshua Moore's house, 4323–4339——As to the houses of Thomas Everard and William Hurley, 4340–4347——When persons complained that their houses were too high, they were induced not to appeal by the persuasion that their contribution would not be increased, so long as the valuation was relative, 4348, 4349.

The value of houses for business has increased since 1828, 4350–4361——John Sawyer said he paid 10 l. a year for his house, which he thought was too much, in which opinion witness and Mr. Higgins concurred, 4362–4381——No complaints were made of Mr. Hobson's registry; Thomas Holmes and Walter Bowles were admitted by him, whose houses were not worth 10 l. a year, 4382–4399——Mr. Howley also gave satisfaction; he registered Richard Tobin, who occupies a cellar, for which he pays between 8 l. and 9 l. rent, 4400–4410——A landlord would prefer letting a house to a solvent and respectable tenant at a lower rent, than to one of indifferent character at a higher rent, 4411–4422——Witness conceives about 50 votes to have been registered on account of houses not of the yearly value of 10 l. a year; there may be a greater number, the rent of which did not amount to 10 l., because fines and leases may have disturbed the proportion between rent and value, 4423–4434.

Number and names of houses included in the 50 which are not worth 10 l. a year, into which witness has been for the special purpose of valuation, 4435–4524——Others witness did not enter, but estimated the value by knowing the particulars of adjoining houses, 4525–4528——Examination relative to the value of houses out of which Thomas Mackie, Gerard Russel, Michael Skeffington, Michael Tobin and John Kean, were registered, 4529–4559——Lodgers and weekly tenants have been registered; the case of William Meagher, 4560–4579——Patrick Welch and William Pollard registered out of one house worth 16 l. a year, 4580–4601——Dennis Slattery stated that he had a room only, for which he paid no rent; he was registered and voted, 4602–4606. 4622–4630——William Purcell and John Garven registered out of one house, 4607–4621. 4631–4635——Patrick Tunpey, a lodger, paying 9 s. a month, was registered, and voted for Mr. Ronayne, 4636–4647.

Edward and John Durney occupied one house, having only one entrance; they were both registered, 4648–4650——The case of John Hayes, 4651–4655——The applotments appear in the rate-books, which are not in the custody of witness, 4657–4672——The county cess is laid on in the town of Clonmel by applotters appointed by the vestry, who generally follow the former applotments, making such alterations only as appear necessary from altered value; some houses which have not been changed in value are applotted at the same rate as they were fifteen or twenty years ago, 4673–4689.

Leitrim County. Return of the number of voters registered in this county since October 1832, App. i. p. 34, 35——Rentcharges registered at each session since October 1832, App. i. p. 109——Applications to register, number admitted, rejected or withdrawn, App. i. p. 143.

Lennard, Michael. Of Michael-street, Belfast; paid 9 l. 9 s. rent, but swore his house was worth 10 l.; evidence was produced to prove the house to be of less value, but Mr. Fogarty said, that as the sum paid was within a few shillings of 10 l., he was bound to admit the claimant, Bates 1982–2006.

Lestrange, Mr. Admitted to the freedom of the barbers and surgeons' corporation in April or July 1836; received the money for admission from Mr. Collison, Clinton 17419–17422.

Libels. Those against Mr. Ronayne and Mr. Strangman were pronounced by the judge as the most atrocious that ever came before a jury, Walshe 10964–10966——Difference between the two, Walshe 10972–10981.

LODGERS:

1. In Belfast.
2. In Clonmel.

1. In Belfast:

Mr. Mayne rejected the claims of such persons as let off portions of their houses to lodgers, for the purpose of trying the general question on appeal, Bates 1557——Baron Pennefather declared the opinion of the judges to be, that the letting a portion of the house to lodgers, where the part retained in the actual occupation of the proprietor is of the annual value of 10*l.*, does not deprive the householder of his right to vote; this decision has left uncertain the claims of those, the reserved portion of whose houses are of less value than 10*l.*, Bates 1559——The admission of persons to the register who let lodgings, will enable several persons to club together to take a house worth 10*l.* a year, who may thus extend the franchise beyond the intentions of the legislature by leaving one to assume the character of landlord, Bates 1594, 1595——This was injurious to the conservative party in Belfast, Bates 1653. 1701-1714——Since this reported decision of the judges, Mr. Fogarty has admitted persons to register, the reserved portion of whose houses are of less annual value than 10*l.*, not considering any opinion to have been expressed by the judges unfavourable to his construction of the case, Bates 1560-1563——This reported judgment was afterwards stated by Mr. Justice Crampton to have been incorrect, and much difference of opinion still exists amongst the judges upon the lodger point, Bates 1563-1603.

LODGERS:—continued.

2. In Clonmel:

Maxcey, William. Lower Johnson-street, Clonmel; pays 10*l.* or 11*l.* for his premises; valued in the commissioners' books at 8*l.*, Walshe 9919–9921.

May, John. May's-lane, Belfast; not valued at all in the police-books, but registered, having sworn his house to be worth 10*l.* a year, Gilmore 325–329.

Mayne, Joseph Sinclair. Was admitted to the freedom of the guild of weavers in right of birth, Irwin 17980.

Mayne, William, Esq. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Was assistant barrister and chairman for the county of Antrim; in October 1835 he was removed to Mayo, and succeeded by Mr. Fogarty, 884–895——In registering the votes at Belfast he considered the rent, the police valuation, and other circumstances where necessary, 902-912——The valuation was an unsafe criterion, as it was under the real value, and frequently incorrect; the rent paid was not conclusive of value, as the tenant might be paying too much or too little, 913–921——There were some appeals from his decisions upon the right of householders to vote out of a house let in part to lodgers; he did not admit persons to register when there was no opposition to their claims, if their answers were unsatisfactory, 922–953.

It would be very desirable to have appeals against the admission of votes to the register; had this been allowable, he would have placed those on the register, whom he was obliged to reject in order to have the question settled on appeal, 954–957——It would be advisable to substitute some other tribunal for registering votes in Ireland, as the present means subject the assistant barristers to suspicions of partiality; there should be an annual registry, 959–971——Doubts exist as to the word "qualification" in the Irish Reform Act, which should be understood as the market value of property, 972–974.

OATHS:

- I. Freemen's Oath:
  - 1. In Clonmel.
  - 2. In Dublin.
- II. Registration Oath.

I. Freemen's Oath:

1. In Clonmel:

No record in the books of the corporation of Clonmel of the freeman's oath being administered, Labarte 6234–6241——Examination respecting Mr. Chaytor's evidence before the Corporation Commissioners, on the subject of administering oaths to freemen, Labarte 6269–6277, Hackett 13351–13366.

2. In Dublin:

No traces of the origin of the oath administered to freemen of Dublin in the books of the corporation, Archer 14977–14986——Examination relative to the oath taken by freemen of the city of Dublin, and manner it is kept, Archer 14977–14980, Lambert 16779–16823, De Zouche 17169–17186——Corporations have not the power of altering the oath; it it was prescribed by the Legislature, De Zouche 17253–17255——That part of the freeman's oath requiring an enrolment of the indentures of their apprentices has been very much neglected, Lambert 16725–16779, Allen 16924–16926. 17287–17294, De Zouche 17134–17168——Other parts of the oath which are not attended to, Lambert 16782–16823——The oath taken by freemen does not mean to limit the taking of apprentices to those only who are Protestants of the Established Church, Lambert 17784——Nature of those administered to freemen, Allen 16310–16315, Lambert 16663–16677——The construction of the oath as to enrolment of apprentices' indentures has always been favourable to the franchise, Lambert 16699–16701——Copies of the oath taken by the freemen of the different guilds: Of cooks and vintners, Wiber 18139–18152—Of the guild of merchants, Allen 17284—Of the tailors, De Zouche 17130–17133—Of the tanners, Irwin 17821.

II. Registration Oath:

Present practice of swearing to the value of premises at the time of registration creates a loose habit of swearing in Clonmel, Walshe 9704, 9705, Earl Glengall 11629–11642——Oath put to each individual claiming to register; examination in some cases extends to a considerable length, Dobbs 18578–18583——Return of the number of freemen admitted into the corporation of the city of Dublin, and who took the oaths, for ten years, commencing Christmas assembly 1820, and ending Michaelmas assembly 1830, showing in classes the number admitted in each year, App. iii. p. 191.

O'Brien, John. His house is worth 15*l.* or 16*l.* a year; sum expended in improvements, Walshe 10547–10550.

O'Brien, John, and Jacob Bardon. Registered out of one house, worth 5*l.* a year, Higgins 2826–2831, Smith 3892–3903.

O'Brien, Mr. His premises are not worth 10*l.*; rejected by Mr. Guthrie at the time of registration, Walshe 8918.

O'Brien, Thomas. Bagwell-street; pays about 12*l.* a year; valued at 8*l.*, Walshe 9915–9918.

O'Bryan, Thomas. House occupied by him is worth 50*l.* a year; he pays 42*l.* for it, Hackett 13517–13520.

O'Connell, Hugh. His petition for admission to the freedom of the guild of merchants of Dublin was disallowed, Allen 16254.

O'Connell, Thomas. Improvements made by him since 1828 has caused an increased valuation to be put on his premises, Keily 11101.

O'Connor, Peter. He pays 10*l.* rent; is valued at 9*l.* by the valuators appointed under 9 Geo. IV., Walshe 9925–9928. 10148, 10149.

O'Connor, Thomas. Of Main-street; description of the cellar occupied by him; he voted for Mr. Ronayne on both occasions; it is worth about 8*l.*, Graham 4840–4846, Walshe 9592–9594.

O'Donel, Patrick. Writs served upon him and his daughter for arrears of rent due to Mr. Bagwell, in consequence of the manner in which he voted, Walshe 9146–9151.

O'Dwyer, John, Esq. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Acted as deputy-assistant barrister in 1832 at Lisburn and Belfast, 1–5——Number of voters registered at Belfast, and number of claims rejected, 6–13——The objections raised were, mistakes in the names of claimants, incorrect description of residence, and mistakes as to residence altogether, 14–16——The qualification of claimants was established by the oath of the claimant, the rent paid, the police valuation, and the evidence of valuators employed by each party; sometimes witness examined the premises personally, 17–29——The rent was not evidence per se of the value in the case of weekly tenants, 30–38——Witness's construction of the Reform Act as to "actual occupation" of houses during the progress of the building, and warehouses not used for trade, 42–58.

Clerks or warehousemen living in houses rent-free, as part of their salaries, were rejected; their masters paid the rates and taxes, 59–62——It would not have been a reason for rejecting a vote that the rates of the house were paid by somebody else, 63–89——Schoolmasters, having a house and salary, were admitted, 89——A master would have been entitled to vote by the occupation of his servant, 90–92——Joint occupants were not admitted to register, 93——Witness was summoned while in England, and is not prepared with any papers, 113–117——Was assessor at two elections for Belfast; in one, in 1835, he rejected a voter, named Clare, having an informal certificate, given by himself, and a defective affidavit, sworn before him when he was acting as registering barrister; he had had determined to hear the case re-argued the following day, when in the meanwhile the contest was given up, 121–166.

Has since been removed from the situation of counsel of the Crown on the circuit, in consequence, he understands, of that decision, 167–182——The point had not been argued before him as registering barrister, he had signed the certificate ministerially; the matter was argued before him as assessor, and he had not finally given his decision when the contest was abandoned, 183–199——The absence of an appeal, in cases of improper admissions to the register, is favourable to the creation of fictitious votes, 202–205. 212–215——The qualification ought not to be diminished; but some fixed standard for ascertaining value should be invariably applied, 206–210. 216–218——It would be desirable to separate the functions of registering barrister from those of the assistant barrister; suspicion of political bias diminishes the respect paid to the administration of justice at quarter sessions, 219–221.

[Second Examination.]—Where the police valuation was low, the claimants were disqualified primâ facie, until subsequent evidence could be produced to establish real value, 366–377——Formerly there were four prosecuting counsel, who held briefs in all Crown causes; now two only have briefs on some occasions, 378–397——Witness was dismissed while Mr. O'Loughlen was attorney-general, having been eight years on the circuit as supernumerary and regular counsel; he knows of no other cause than that already assigned for his dismissal, 398–424.

[Third Examination.]—The number of briefs witness usually held on his circuit previous to his appointment as Crown prosecutor; his appointment has occasioned the loss of all his civil practice on the circuit, which has operated injuriously upon his business in Dublin, 725–748.

O'Dwyer, Mr. His conduct met with approbation from both the political parties at Belfast, and he was twice selected by the returning officer as assessor, with the consent of both parties, Bates 1967–1970.——See also Belfast Election. Occupation, III. 1.

O'Flanagan, John. White's-lane; a lodger paying 14*d.* a week; was registered by Mr. Guthrie, Higgins 2809–2816, Smith 3878–3891——Swore he would not leave his premises for 10*l.*, and was admitted, Walshe 8957–8960——Only a lodger; part occupied by him not worth 10*l.*, Butler 11300, Lonergan 12550.

O'Meagher, Richard. Rent of house occupied by him; voted for Mr. Bagwell, Legge 4271–4291——Premises occupied by him have been taken by the landlord; they are worth 10*l.* a year, Walshe 9478–9492.

O'Neil, Cornelius. Dublin-street, Clonmel; description of the cellar occupied by him; it is worth about 8*l.*, Graham 4847–4852. 5218–5285——His cellar does not appear in the commissioners' books, Walshe 8167–8169——Rent paid by his widow, Walshe 9435–9457——He voted at the first election, Graham 4852——No doubt, if the cellar occupied by Widow O'Neil was to let, that 10*l.* could be obtained for it, Butler 11466–11472.

O'Neil, Patrick. Commissioner under 9 Geo. IV.; he is a Catholic, and a dealer in spirits, Walshe 8549. 8614–8616. 8624, 8625.

OCCUPATION:

I. Generally.
II. By the Lord Chief Baron.
III. By the Revising Barristers.
  1. In Belfast.
  2. In Dublin.

I. Generally.

Construction of the clause in the Reform Act relative to occupation, O'Dwyer 42–90–92, Bates 1063–1066. 1071–1105. 1179–1197, Whiteside 2563, 2564——Should be defined by a declaratory law, Whiteside 2653–2657——The admission of persons to the register who have not had actual occupation for six months is favourable to the creation of fictitious votes, Bates 1150–1160——It is easier to establish legal possession by a false oath than actual occupation, Bates 1329–1371.

II. By the Lord Chief Baron:

In the case of John Hannay, the Lord Chief Baron decided that a house could only be actually occupied by the claimant using it as a dwelling-house; if any member of the claimant's household had resided in the house for the necessary time, it would be sufficient; but that the possession of the house, and the employment of workmen in it, was not such "possession and actual occupation" as the law requires, Bates 1910, Whiteside 2567–2572——Bearing of this decision upon Mr. Fogarty's principle, Bates 2302–2315——Number of voters admitted to the register in Belfast on grounds which, on a subsequent appeal to the Lord Chief Baron, were decided to be insufficient, Bates 1911–1942.

Occupation—continued.

III. By the Revising Barristers.

1. In Belfast:

Mr. O'Dwyer considered that the occupation of a new house was not established by the possession of builders and carpenters, but required that it should have been inhabited for six months, O'Dwyer 42——The occupation by servants would entitle the master to register, O'Dwyer 90–92, Bates 1179–1197.

Messrs. O'Dwyer, Curry and Mayne required actual occupation for six months, either by residing therein or carrying on business, Bates 1063–1066, Whiteside 2563.

Mr. Fogarty considered legal possession as occupation, provided the party had occupied any portion of that time previous to the registry, Bates 1071–1105, Whiteside 2564——He considered possession and occupation to be nearly the same; the distinction was not argued until his time, Whiteside 2573–2585.

2. In Dublin:

Principle on which witness decides the question of occupation, on the claims of householders of Dublin to register, Dobbs 18748–18760.

II. Of Freemen:
   1. In Clonmel.
   2. In Dublin.

III. Of Householders:
   1. In Clonmel.
   2. In Dublin.

IV. Necessity for an Annual Revision of the Register.

V. Papers laid before the Committee.

I. Generally:

The manual or direction for the registry as prepared by the Reform Association is used by both parties; it is a very useful publication, Martin 14316–14320. 14334–14343——Persons are frequently brought forward by the liberal party for registration; they are very closely examined, Martin 14393–14397——Great exertions used since the Reform Bill in procuring persons to register; by whom made, Archer 14987–14991. 17737, Clinton 17425–17429——Both parties have been more particular in their attention to the registration latterly, Dobbs 18637–18641——Very few claimants for registration in 1833 or 1834 in Dublin, Dobbs 18478–18480——Number of persons registered in 1835 and 1836, Dobbs 18642, 18643. 18655.

II. Of Freemen:

1. In Clonmel:

No objection when witness claimed to register as a freeman of Clonmel; one was rejected because he had served seven years without indentures, Smith 3691–3715——Great number of freemen refused to be registered as freemen by Mr. Guthrie who were admitted on appeal, Labarte 6850–6859——The certificate of admission to the corporation was considered sufficient evidence for the admission of freemen to the register, Labarte 7091–7101, Hackett 13462–13464——The production of the cocket of a freeman has always (with one exception) been deemed conclusive evidence of the right to register, Hackett 13959–13968. 13462–13464.

2. In Dublin:

Series of questions put to freemen previous to registration; objections made thereto; by whom they were prepared, Martin 14309–14315——Examinations respecting questions proposed to freemen previous to registration, Martin 14482. 14488, 14489. 14525, Seton 18262–18303. 18366–18372, Dobbs 18481–18500——The registering barrister refused to allow certain questions to be put to freemen; two persons rejected in order to obtain the decision of the Chief Baron on the point; they were both admitted subsequently; the barrister considers himself bound by that decision, and acts accordingly, Seton 18251–18312. 18814–18816——Evidence respecting the arrangement made as to taking the opinion of the court on the registration of freemen upon production of their certificates only, Seton 18373–18400. 18421–18471——The documents called for in cases of objections made by the liberal party to the registration of freemen were always produced previous to the decision of the Chief Baron; nature of those called for, Seton 18315–18331——Examination as to the number of freemen registered in 1835 previous to the decision of the Lord Chief Baron; the same questions were not put to old as to freemen admitted since the Reform Bill, Seton 18344–18372——No opposition made to the registration of freemen in Dublin till after the general election of 1834 and 1835, Dobbs 18478–18480.

Nature of the objection made to the registration of freemen, that subsequent to the Reform Bill all the freemen of Dublin were honorary, and as such not entitled to register; witness overruled this objection, and ground thereof, Dobbs 18481–18501——The right of old freemen to register was never disputed by the liberal party; only those who were admitted as honorary freemen, Seton 19071, 19072——Report of the judgment given by Chief Baron Joy on the point reserved in the appeal from the decision of registering barrister respecting the right of Messrs. Carolin and Hyde to be admitted to the freemen's register in Dublin, Lambert 19026, p. 208–210——On production of the certificate of admission no objection can be made to the registration of a freeman, Martin 14485–14487, Archer 15168–15170. 16058–16073, Seton 18304–18309——Witness has admitted to the register persons who were sworn in freemen after they had served their notice; would not allow a party who had been admitted and sworn in pending his notice to register, Dobbs 18685–18690.

REGISTRATION—continued.

III. Of Householders:

1. In Clonmel:

At the first registration in 1832, Mr. Guthrie was the registering barrister, Higgins 2689–2704——Registry court attended for two days; attendance withdrawn afterwards, because Mr. Guthrie preferred the oaths of the claimants, with regard to the value of their houses, to the testimony of valuators, Higgins 2705–2719, Smith 3802–3812. 3827–3850, Labarte 5483–5498, Glissan 7698–7712, Walshe 9672–9707. 9784–9791——At the registration in 1832 persons were admitted to register who stated they did not pay more than 1 s. 6 d. per week, Graham 4699–4706——No matter what rent is paid, the liberals are opposed every registry, Walshe 9836–9867——Claimants have been registered out of cellars not worth 10 l. a year by Mr. Howley and Mr. Hobson, Graham 4699–4706. 4747–4752, Walshe 9466–9477. 10517–10527——Cases of persons who were rejected by the barrister in consequence of evidence being produced that the premises out of which they claimed were not of the value stated, Walshe 9736–9777——No registry of persons holding houses of 5 l. value has been made since 1834 in Clonmel, Keily 10683–10701.

Many claimants were rejected by Mr. Guthrie for insufficiency of value, Glissan 7138–7147, Lonergan 12702–12705——Objections taken at the registry on the part of Mr. Bagwell related to undervalue, and the voting of more than one person out of the same house, Labarte 5547–5560——More persons would have been rejected had the conservative party paid greater attention to the registration, Walshe 9772–9775. 9781–9784——Objections made by the liberals to parties as to non-value were supported by witnesses; liberal party made fewer objections than the conservatives, Walshe 9792–9836——Many persons were examined in opposition to claimants; after several cases had been inquired into, they declined to give evidence, Glissan 7722——No witnesses have been examined at the two last registry sessions, Glissan 7728–7741——Many persons have been registered who were not included in the valuation as being under 5 l.; when valuation made the valuators inquired the rent, and examined the inside of the houses when necessary, Higgins 2946–2954——Three persons registered out of a house in Bagwell-street, the person who owned the shop, another who lodged in the house, and a third who lived in the cellar, Higgins 2817–2825, Graham 4896–4910.

2. In Dublin:

Householders underwent a very long and strict examination as to their qualification, &c. previous to being allowed to register, Seton 18332–18335——Appeals have been made and argued against the registration of householders, some have been successful, and in others the parties never appeared, Seton 18403–18406. 18411–18420——There are objections in cases of 20 l. householders that require examination as much as in any other cases, Dobbs 18651–18654——Length of time persons applying to register were under examination, Martin 14512, 14513. 14526–14533——Evidence in contradiction of Mr. Martin as to the time occupied in investigating each case, Dobbs 18656–18659.

IV. Necessity for an Annual Revision of the Register:

Registration should be annual; at present a person remains on the register for eight years, and the returning officer cannot refuse to take his vote, if he has left the premises; also the value of the same premises may have decreased, Bates 2336——Should be annual, and the whole register should remain open for revision, Whiteside 2645–2647——Advantage to be derived from an annual revision of the list of voters in Clonmel, Labarte 5346——Beneficial change would be caused from an annual registration and revision instead of the present; quarterly registration tends to keep up an excitement among the constituency, Dobbs 18762–18767.

V. Papers laid before the Committee:

Return of the number of voters registered in each county in Ireland since 1st October 1832, distinguishing them into classes of 50 l. freeholders, 20 l. leaseholders, 20 l. freeholders, 10 l. leaseholders and 10 l. freeholders, distinguishing the date of the registry of each, App. i. p. 39——Return of the number of voters registered in each county of a city or town in Ireland since the passing of the Irish Reform Act, distinguishing the voters into classes of freeholders, rentcharges, leaseholders, householders and freemen, with the date of their registration respectively, App. i. p. 40–44——Return of the several persons registered in the several boroughs in Ireland sending Members to Parliament, who have subscribed their affidavits for registry as marksmen, App. i. p. 45–56.

Return of the number of notices of applications at each registering sessions since the passing of the Irish Reform Act, to register voters in each county, city and town in Ireland, together with the number of such claimants admitted, rejected or withdrawn, distinguishing the same into classes, and in cases of rejection the number of decisions of the assistant or registering barristers appealed against, the grounds of appeal and the judgment thereon, App. i. p. 127–158——Return of the number and names of freemen registered as voters in the city of Dublin since the passing of the Reform Act for Ireland, with the date of the registry of each voter; and the date of the first day of the registry

Registration Societies. Description of persons composing the registration society established in Tipperary by the liberal party; the conservatives never contemplated anything of the sort till after the liberals had established one, Earl Glengall 11755–11764——One established in Tipperary previous to the appointment of pacificators, Hackett 13894–13902.

See also Central Independent Club. Certificates.

Registry Court, Dublin. The registry court in Dublin, at the time of registration, is a perfect bear-garden at times, Martin 14438–14440——Further examination thereon, Martin 14584–14589. 14601–14612——It is not a correct description of witness's court, "that it is very frequently a bear-garden," Dobbs 18788–18792——Number of sessions held for the purposes of registration in Dublin; length of time they occupy, Dobbs 18476–18480. 18642–18675——Some little confusion occurs occasionally in witness's court from two or three persons speaking at the same time, Dobbs 18558, 18559.

See also Collision, Mr. Counsel at Registry Courts. Glengall, Earl. Hyndman, Mr. Mulcahy, Counsellor. Peers. Perjury. Also the Analysis of the Evidence of the following witnesses: Martin, Dobbs and Seton.

Religion. There is no hostile feeling in Clonmel between Catholics and Protestants about religion, Walshe 8514–8518. 8522, 8523——Very little religious feeling in Clonmel among either party till the election of 1832, Hackett 14270–14272——Doubtful whether the aldermen of Dublin would reject a person on account of his religion; the common council would, Archer 14834–14856.

RENT AND VALUE:

1. In Belfast.
2. In Clonmel.

1. In Belfast:

The rent paid was the best guide in ascertaining the value of a house for the purpose of registry, but was not conclusive of value, because the tenant might be paying too much or too little, Mayne 902–921——The rent paid by weekly tenants was not evidence per se of the value of houses in Belfast, O'Dwyer 30–38——The rent is seldom ascertained in valuating a house, and when known, is not a standard of value, if the house be held under a lease, for it may be either improving or decreasing in value, Thompson 856–871——Parties were admitted to register where the rent was under 10*l.* if a fine had been paid, if any subsequent improvements had been made, or if the house was held under an old lease and the value of the houses in the neighbourhood had improved, O'Dwyer 27——Rent is the best criterion of value where houses are held by tenants at will, Bates 2397, 2398.

2. In Clonmel:

Opinion that rent is the criterion of value; it is paid for the accommodation afforded, Legge 4110–4190——It is not exactly a criterion of value in Clonmel, Butler 11380——Rent and value may be considered synonymous, except where improvements have been made, Higgins 2937–2943——Where no fine is paid, Legge 4271–4309——Does not consider rent and value as synonymous, Labarte 5572–5590, Walshe 8344, Lonergan 13061——Rent is high in Clonmel, and houses are generally let at their full value, Higgins 2894–2912——Witness does not agree in this opinion, Walshe 8340–8382——House-rent has not altered much since 1829 in Clonmel, Walshe 7944–7955.

Not the general practice in Clonmel for persons to pay more rent than the premises are worth, Walshe 9404–9407——Tenants are not very fond of saying they pay a higher rent than they do, for fear their landlords should raise it to what they say they pay, Lonergan 12580–

Rent and Value.—2. In Clonmel—continued.
12580–12591. 12605, 12606——Several cases where greater rents could be obtained than those at present paid, Lonergan 12804–12812. 12976——Manner of paying rent of small tenements in Clonmel, Lonergan 12747–12796——It is not uncommon for yearly tenants to pay their rent weekly in Clonmel, Glissan 7496–7523, Walshe 8259. 8963–8966——The fair test of value is what a bonâ fide solvent tenant would be willing to give for the premises, and not the use made of the premises, as rendering them more or less productive, Dehany 17054–17058. 17081–17089——Landlords generally take into consideration the situation of premises, when fixing the amount of rent to be paid, Bates 2196–2206, Dehany 17062–17064. 17084–17087.
See also Duckett-street, Clonmel. Landlords. Licences. Valuation. Weekly Tenants.

Rentchargers. Not many rentchargers that registered in Dublin, Dobbs 18650.

Rentchargers. Return of the number of rentchargers registered at each session since 1st October 1832, stating the name and residence of each person so registered, the barony and denomination of land on which the charge was granted, and the name of the person granting the same, distinguishing the 50*l.* from the 20*l.* rentcharges, App. p. 94–125——Number of rentchargers registered in the following boroughs since the passing the Irish Reform Bill: Boroughs in Carrickfergus, App. i. p. 40—In Cork, App. i. p. 41—In Drogheda, App. i. p. 41—In Dungarvan, App. iii. p. 233—In Galway, App. i. p. 42—In Kilkenny, App. i. p. 42—In Limerick, App. i. p. 43—In Mallow, App. iii. p. 200—In Waterford, App. i. p. 44.

Repeal of the Union. No meetings have been held for the purpose of agitating a repeal of the union, Butler 12445, 12446——Opinion in favour of a repeal of the union is still very strong in Ireland; it is only suppressed for the present, Hackett 13794–13800.

Representatives of Guilds. See Common Council. Merchants, Guild of.

Residence. The assistant barrister required a specification of the street in which claimants resided, as there were many of the same name in Belfast, O'Dwyer 15——Incorrect description of residence in the notice was an objection to claims to register; as stating that claimant was tenant of a house, when in fact he was only tenant or owner of a shop or part of a house, O'Dwyer 16——Is not a necessary qualification to admission to the corporation of Clonmel, Labarte 6191.——See also Occupation.

Revision of Register. See Registration, IV.

Rhodes, Rev. J. P. Was admitted a freemen of Clonmel by grace especial, Smith 3635——Has registered under another qualification, Smith 3642–3646.

Smith, Martin. Of Main-street, Clonmel; was registered by Mr Hobson, who was not very liberal in registering people out of cellars, Walshe 9379–9381——Rent paid by him; extent of cellar, value thereof, and rent that would be obtained for it, Walshe 9382–9391. 9400–9403, Graham, 4870–4875. 4882–4884. 4889. 5232–5239——The cellar occupied by him is one of the largest in Clonmel, Butler 11451, 11452.

Smith, Robert. Passed the guild of merchants by marriage; the city at large by grace especial in 1826, Archer 18927.

Smith, Thomas. Had been in possession of his house, on account of which he claimed to register, for six months, but he did not sleep in the house or occupy it himself until some time after; Mr. Fogarty was satisfied that legal possession was all the statute requires, and admitted the vote, Bates 1083, Whiteside 2586–2588.

Smith, Sir William Cusack, Bart. Admitted to the freedom of the guild of merchants as a humane and upright judge, Allen 16389, 16390.

Smith, Mr. William. (Anaylysis of his Evidence.)—A corn merchant at Clonmel, 3168–3170——Was a valuator in 1828 under 9 Geo. IV., and valued the houses at their utmost value; whenever he and the other valuators were in doubt they entered the premises, 3171–3174——They took into account the situation, and the advantages for any particular business; the rent was sometimes ascertained, 3175–3181——There were 20 or 30 appeals, in all of which the valuation was reduced, 3182–3185——Witnesses attended the registration in 1832, and gave evidence against the claim of William Keily, who was, however, admitted, as the barrister said the claimant was the best judge of the value of his own house, 3186–3205——The house of Thomas Keily, a voter, is not worth more than 3*l.* a year, 3206–3222——Nicholas Lynch's house is worth 10*s.* a year more, 3223–3238.

The rent and value of the houses of James Gleeson, Timothy Carew, Richard Butler, James Fitzgerald, John Hall and Martin Morony, 3239–3274——Of William Davis, Martin Callaghan, Thomas Walsh, Bartholomew Fennessy, John Collins and William Burke, 3275–3308——Of James Wholohan, Thomas Boyd and Patrick Hickey; the two latter would be worth 10*l.* a year if the letting of lodgings were taken into account, 3309–3345——Of John Ryan, John Everard, Patrick Burke and Timothy Dooley, 3346–3365.

[Second Examination.]—William Russell's house described; it is worth 8*l.* a year in the market, but he swore it was worth 10*l.* to him; he has since stated that he would not have sworn that its real value was 10*l.*, 3366–3410——Many persons were admitted because they swore that their houses were worth 10*l.* a year on account of their particular trade, 3410–3414——Patrick Roach and Patrick Toole both registered out of one 10*l.* house, 3422–3430. 3573–3579——Rent and value of Patrick Burke's house, 3431–3439——John and Edward Durney registered out of one house worth 14*l.* a year, 3440–3455. 3580.

The conservative counsel and agents were present to cross-examine the claimants, and to produce witnesses, 3456–3458——A butcher came forward to register out of a stall in the back shambles, but his case was not pressed, and other butchers who were about to apply desisted, 3459–3466——The value and rent of the houses of Thomas Shehy, William Gorman and Stephen Mara, 3467–3480——Witness has made three valuations, viz. the official one in 1828, a second in 1832 for the registration, and the last recently for the purpose of the present examination, 3481–3511——Others took memoranda in 1832 as well as witness, amongst others were Mr. Higgins, Mr. Tinsley, Mr. George Graham and Mr. James Shee, 3512–3534——Mr. Shee, though a Roman-catholic, voted for Mr. Bagwell, who holds the fee of the whole town, 3535–3547.

All the gentlemen mentioned as being engaged in the valuation in 1832, were supporters of Mr. Bagwell, 3548–3550——Although Mr. Bagwell is the head landlord of the whole town, and is a patron of the corporation, he was defeated by a large majority, 3551–3556——Thomas Atkyns had a house worth 10*l.* a year, but was ejected for nonpayment of rent: Thomas Ryan took possession, and Atkyns rented two rooms of him and voted, 3567–3572——Witness was admitted a freeman by right of marriage in 1833; about 40 were admitted at the same time, 3582–3589——For the five years preceding the Reform Act no freemen were created; since that time 83 have been admitted by birth, servitude, marriage or grace especial, 3590–3601——Of these only one was a Roman-catholic, John Farrell, 3602–3605.

Witness does not know whether any freemen were admitted in right of marriage before the Reform Act, 3613–3617——Mr. Chater was elected mayor for several successive years, 3618–3623——Witness applied for his freedom to give his son a vote, 3624–3632——Only three were admitted by special favour, but these cannot vote as freemen, 3633–3653——The only charge when witness was admitted was the stamp duty of one guinea, 3654–3665——The barrister refused to register several freemen; they all appealed to the judge at the next assizes, who admitted them, 3673–3676——No freeman was admitted previous to the last election, who was not in the interest of Mr. Bagwell; Mr. Stephen Lonergan is the only one since that time, 3677–3690——No objection was taken when witness claimed to register as a freeman; one was rejected because he had served seven years without indentures, 3691–3715——Discrepancies between certain returns of Clonmel freemen, 3716–3720.

Witness was one of Mr. Bagwell's committee, and instructed his counsel, Mr. Welch, at the registration, who did not produce so many witnesses as witness desired, 3721–3769——He did not expect that further evidence would have changed the decisions of the barrister, but he thought it necessary that it should be produced in case of petition, 3770–3801——It was useless to give evidence, as the barrister adopted, as a criterion of value, the oath of the claimant, 3802–3812——Evidence given by witness before the Election Committee in 1833, 3813–3826——The oath of the claimant established the value of his house to him, the evidence in opposition related only to the intrinsic value, 3827–3850——There should be a compulsory process to oblige witnesses to attend; no one will give evidence voluntarily, 3851. 3859–3862——About 60 votes are on the register which witness conceives to be of less value than 10*l.* a year, 3852–3859. 3863–3877——James O'Flanagan, a lodger, paying 1*s.* 2*d.* a week, registered, 3878–3891——Jacob Bardin paying

Thompson, Mr. J. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—An architect and builder at Belfast; has been one of the valuators of the police committee for three years; all the four valuators must agree before the value of the house is entered in the book, 749–769——On entering houses the valuators have sometimes raised the valuation; if the parties complain, the commissioners order the premises to be revalued, 770–781——The bonâ fide value is ascertained, if possible, but there is a leaning in favour of the inhabitants; the valuators,

having no right to enter houses, judge from the outside, but in some instances are admitted, 782–813——Witness, from his experience as a builder, can judge of the cost of erecting a house from an outward examination, and he estimates its value at eight per cent. per annum; there is a general scale of interior fittings in houses of a certain class which renders an inspection of the inside scarcely necessary, 814–855——The rent is seldom ascertained, and when known, is not a standard of value, if the house be held under a lease, for it may be either improving or decreasing in value, 856–871——It is not likely that a house valued at 5*l.* or 6*l.* can be worth 10*l.*; but improvements may have raised the value to that extent, which the valuators could not view, 877–883.

Thomson, James. Was refused admittance to the freedom of Clonmel in right of birth, in consequence of being a non-resident, Labarte 6269–6277.

Thomson, Samuel. Of Barrack-street, Belfast; was rejected at the registration in 1832 for being under value; subsequent occupier was allowed to register in 1836, Bates 2240.

Thornton, David. Bagwell-street, Clonmel; premises occupied by him are valued at 14*l.*; he pays, and has paid since 1828, 20*l.* a year, Lonergan 12813–12824——No objection made to his being registered, Higgins 3114.

Thurles. Meeting held there for the purpose of forming a pacification society for Tipperary; violent speeches made by the pacificators, Earl Glengall 11809. 11825——Object of the above meeting was mistaken by Earl Glengall, Hackett 13622–13639.

Tickets. Valuation commissioners are authorized to issue tickets to persons entitled to vote; such tickets have been issued, Keily 10683–10701.

I. Principles on which the Registering Barristers estimated the Value of Property to Persons claiming to Register.

1. In Belfast:

Mr. O'Dwyer estimated the value of houses in Belfast to be that which they would bring in the market; which he ascertained by the rent and police valuation, and by other evidence when necessary. This principle was stated by Lord Stanley in a letter to the Right Hon. G. R. Dawson, to have been intended by the Government who framed the Reform Act, Bates 1943–1954——When the rent and police valuation were low, he put the onus of proving the value upon the claimant, Bates 1955–1959——If the rent was 10*l.* and the police valuation 8*l.*, the onus of proving disqualification was thrown upon the parties opposing, Bates 1962–1965——The same principle was adopted by Mr. Curry and Mr. Mayne, and no appeals were made from their decisions, Bates 1971–1973——Mr. Fogarty acted upon a different principle, and took the oath of the claimant as primâ facie evidence of value until the contrary was proved in all cases, whether the rent paid by him was more or less than 10*l.*: cases of Arthur Lavery, William Bloomfield, Michael Lennard and Joseph Hurtley, Bates 1943–2031. 1975——He stated that as both parties were prepared to oppose the claimants, they would be prepared with necessary evidence to disprove value, Bates 1976–1980.

Mr. O'Dwyer, Mr. Curry and Mr. Mayne adopted the real as the criterion of value; and when this was only 8*l.* or 9*l.* and the police-tax was in proportion, they required evidence of a clear and strong character to prove the value: Billington's case, Whiteside 2460–2463——As 10*l.* rent was primâ facie evidence of a right to register, less than that sum was a primâ facie disqualification, and a fine must have been paid on improvements made to qualify the claimant, Whiteside 2463–2471——In later cases, where the rent and police-tax are very low, Mr. Fogarty required that the applicant should produce witnesses to their opinion of the value of the house, in addition to the evidence of the applicant himself; the cases of Francis Campbell and Owen M'Cann, Bates 2168–2184. 2191–2206. 2257——He considered the value of a tenement to be what it is worth to the tenant for the particular business he carries on, Bates 2191-2195——Opinion that the landlord takes into account the value to a person in a particular business in affixing the rent, Bates 2196-2206——Mr. Fogarty has applied his principle impartially to both parties in Belfast, but the conservatives have objected to it, Bates 2258, 2259. 2271, Whiteside, 2538–2545.

Persons are unwilling to appear as witnesses to disprove the value of houses which claimants to register state to be of the necessary value, and paid valuators are therefore employed for the purpose, Bates 2028–2031——Mr. Fogarty, in the case of Arthur Hamill, added the police-tax to the rent, and took both together in his estimate of value; opinions as to the propriety of adopting this principle, Bates 2032–2160, Whiteside 2595–2613——There is no distinction between the assessed taxes in England and the local taxes of Belfast in adding to the value of a house; they are both criterions of value only, Whiteside 2614–2624——An appeal is allowed upon the point of value in qualifications to a trial by jury, but the assistant barrister has no power, in the first instance, to summon a jury, O'Dwyer, 212, 213——At the first registry sessions Mr. Fogarty admitted claimants whose rent was less than 10*l.* without corroborating evidence; he held that the claimant's oath was evidence which must be contradicted by the opposing party,

Whiteside

VALUATION:—I. Principles on which the Registering Barristers estimated the Value of Property to Persons claiming to Register—continued.

1. In Belfast—continued.

Whiteside 2507-2515. 2524——The police valuation was not conclusive proof of value; some claimants were admitted to register who were valued at less than 8*l.*, because additions had been made in the back premises, which the valuators had not discovered, O'Dwyer, 23-28.

When the police valuation was low, the claimants to register were disqualified primâ facie, until subsequent evidence could be produced to establish real value, O'Dwyer 366-377——Every barrister has registered houses valued at less than 10*l.* in the police-books; some persons were registered who were not rated, as being considered under 5*l.* by the valuators, Gilmore 430-438. 440, 441. 502-513——When houses were valued at less than 7*l.* or 8*l.* in the police-books, evidence of value was required in addition to the oath of the claimant, Gilmore 474-484——Additional evidence was in every case required to establish a claim to register in Belfast, where the police valuation was much under 10*l.*, although neither party had an objection to the person seeking to register, Gilmore 557-559——The police valuation was an unsafe criterion of value for the purposes of registry, as it was under the real value and frequently incorrect, Mayne 913-921.

2. In Clonmel:

The valuation was taken on the full improved value of the premises and has continued in force since 1828, except as to houses which have been changed, and new houses built, Higgins 2670-2681. 3097-3099, Smith 3171-3174——The revising barrister in 1832 preferred the evidence of the claimant as to the value of his house in all cases; he did not object to receive contrary evidence, but he gave a preference to the claimant, Higgins 2714-2718, Glissan 7148-7152. 7158-7163——Neither the valuation of 1828 nor the amount of rent paid by the claimant for their premises were deemed by any of the registering barristers in Clonmel as the criterion of the value of the house, &c. Walshe 10525——Houses valued at their utmost value by witness; valuators took into account the situation and the advantages of any particular business; the rent was sometimes ascertained, Smith 3175-3181——Opinion that the highest rent houses would let for in the market is their value, without reference to the business intended to be carried on, Graham 5313-5342——Intrinsic value may be increased by the advantage of situation, Graham 5390——Principle on which witness proceeds in setting a value on houses, according to what it ought to bring in the market, Lonergan 13074-13094.

Premises being under value was the principal ground of objection to persons claiming to register, Labarte 5547——The facts on which claimants made out the value of their houses to be 10*l.* to them were elicited on cross-examination, Higgins 3052-3059——The oath of the claimant established the value of the house to him, the evidence in opposition related only to the intrinsic value, Smith 3827-3850——Many persons were admitted, because they swore that their houses were worth 10*l.* on account of their particular trades, Smith 3410-3414——Many persons admitted to register who occupy houses of less value than 10*l.*, Labarte 5540-5566, Butler 12498——Three valuations made by witness; in 1828 the official one, in 1832 for the registration, and the last recently for the purpose of the present examination, Smith 3481-3511——The valuation books were never consulted by any party (for election purposes) as a criterion of value, Walshe 10273-10276.

3. In Dublin:

With respect to householders in Dublin, witness considered the payment of the rent as primâ facie evidence of the value, Dobbs 18586-18589——Did not admit as part of the value any imaginative value which the party in possession might attach to the particular premises, Dobbs 18590-18593——Further evidence thereon, Dobbs 18602-18621——There has been no appeal from witness's decision respecting the mode of ascertaining the value of houses, Dobbs 18600——The fair test of value is, what a bonâ fide solvent tenant would be willing to give for the premises, and not the use made of the premises as rendering them more or less productive, Dehany 17054-17058. 17081-17089——The value placed on houses for the purposes of registration is the true value; that for the purpose of excise is an undervalue, Dehany 17026-17029. 17036——Common practice for parties applying for spirit licences, to represent their premises of less value than they really are, Dehany 17123, 17124*——Situation of the house must be considered as one ingredient of its value; the facilities for trade another, Dobbs, 18605-18607——The fact of letting lodgings is not a criterion of value, Dobbs 18609-18618.

II. Local Valuation:

1. In Belfast:

Four valuators are appointed annually by the police committee, one of whom is generally an architect, who are allowed 50*l.* Irish between them for valuing the town, Gilmore 242-250——Names of valuators for this year, Gilmore 425, 426——The town valuators valuators were not examined at the registry sessions in each disputed case, as to value, but each party had special valuators for the purpose, Gilmore 453-469——The practice of having party valuators is less prevalent now, Gilmore 485-492——All the four valuators must agree before the value of any house is entered in the blotter, Thompson 754-769——The valuators have no right to enter houses, and therefore judge from the outside; they are sometimes admitted, and raise the valuation; if the parties complain, the commissioners order the premises to be re-valued; the bonâ fide value is ascertained, if possible, but there is a leaning in favour of the inhabitants, Thompson 770-813——There is a general scale of fitting up in houses of a certain class, which renders an inspection of the inside scarcely necessary; the cost of erecting a house may be known by an outward view, and the value is estimated at eight per cent. per annum, Thompson 814-855.

Valuators do not examine the back premises, Gilmore 285——The houses in Belfast are classed for the purpose of valuation; nature of this classification, Gilmore 251-266——An appeal may be made from the valuation to the police commissioners; there are generally about seventy or eighty appeals out of six thousand one hundred houses valuated, Gilmore 267-269. 273-285——The police valuation of some houses in Belfast has remained the same, although improved, Gilmore 514-542——Houses are built in Belfast without any reference to the taxes which will be payable; in case of an unequal tax upon houses of the same description, the rent would be affected, but not the intrinsic value of the houses, Whiteside 2627-2644——In 10 Geo. IV., c. 8, the criterion of value is that which a solvent and respectable tenant would pay, Whiteside 2501, 2502——This should be laid down as the standard of value for the purpose of the elective franchise, Whiteside 2647——It is not likely that a house valued at 5*l.* or 6*l.* can be worth 10*l.*; but improvements which the valuators may not have been able to discover may have raised the value to that extent, Thompson 877-883.

2. In Clonmel:

Persons employed in the valuation of 1832 were supporters of Mr. Bagwell, Smith 3548-3550——When valuation made, valuators inquired the rent and examined the houses when necessary, Higgins 2946-2954, Smith 3171-3181——Valuators are not changed every three years; commissioners have the power, but they do not exercise it, Lonergan 12881-12888——Those employed under 9 Geo. IV. were not conversant with the value of houses, Lonergan 12684-12690——Those of 1828 did not value correctly, Lonergan 12889-12891. 12956-12964——Examination relative to the instructions given to them in 1831 and 1834 by the commissioners, Lonergan 12838-12902——The valuation of 1828 afforded a general test of value in 1832, except where alterations had been made, Higgins 3119-3123——That made in 1828 was a very low valuation; nearly all the houses were undervalued, Butler 12238, 12239, Hackett 14201-14205. 14216, 14217——In making the valuation, the commissioners did not take the value as a rent and the value placed on their books as synonymous; great many instances in which houses are valued under their real value, Keily 10650-10666.

Improvements may have been made since the valuation; the general value of houses of the same description remains unchanged, Higgins 2955-2964——There has been no general valuation of the town of Clonmel since 1828; a partial valuation took place in 1831 and 1834, Keily 7223-7228——Those of 1831 and 1834 comprise all the houses that have been built since 1828, and those that have been altered by improvements, Keily 7549-7552——Present valuation is rather under the true value of the houses, Butler 12139——Evidence respecting the manner in which the new valuation was made in 1834; description of property that was re-valued, Lonergan 12848-12879——Extent of the alteration made by the commissioners in 1831 and 1834 in the first value put upon the houses under 9 Geo. IV., Keily 9933-9945. 11088-11161, Lonergan 12848-12879——Cases in which it has been reduced, on the ground that, when made, it was too high, Keily 10292-10301——Cases in which increased valuations have been made, in consequence of the improvements made on the property, Walshe 10238-10248. 10257-10267. 10269, 10270, Keily 10283-10289, Butler 12172-12178. 12214-12314, Lonergan 12737-12746——Although the general valuation of the town is above the real value, yet several houses were valued at less than their actual value, Legge 4323-4329.

No steps have been taken by the present commissioners to increase the valuation of those houses which are undervalued in their books, and cause assigned, Walshe 10249-10255. 10268——The expense deterred the commissioners from having a re-valuation of Clonmel in 1833, Walshe 8648-8653, Butler 12141. 12223, 12224——If a new valuation is made, all houses will be higher rated, Keily 10669-10679——Examination on the list delivered in by Mr. Keily of the valuation of certain houses in Clonmel, as appears from the valuators' books of 1828, Walshe 9871-9932. 10148-10233——The commissioners' book of valuation is very inaccurate, Walshe 8442-8458——It cannot be much more inaccurate, Walshe 10234-10237——Intention of the rate-payers to have the town re-valued next July, Walshe 8452-8454——Difference in the valuation of certain premises, and the rent paid, Walshe 9535-9549——Inaccuracy of the valuation demonstrated by the ing the date of the registry of each, App. i. p. 31, 32——Number of rentcharges registered at each session since October 1832, App. i. p. 121, 122——Notices of applications to register voters; number admitted, rejected or withdrawn, App. i. p. 154, 155——Return of the number of voters registered in the county of the city of Waterford since the passing of the Irish Reform Act, App. i. p. 44——Names, residences, &c. of persons admitted as freemen of the corporation of, since March 1831, App. i. p. 89–93——Number of rentcharges registered at each session since October 1832, App. i. p. 122——Notices of application to register voters; number admitted, rejected or withdrawn, App. i. p. 156——Return, &c., of all individuals in Waterford who have made application or received excise licences for the sale of spirits in premises under the annual value of 10*l.* since 1st October 1832, App. iii. p. 298, 299.

Waters, John. Passed the guild of merchants, Dublin, by marriage; the corporation at large by grace especial in 1825, Archer 18924.

Weavers, Corporation of. It is more numerous than the tanners; freemen are admitted by birth, service and marriage, Irwin 17862-17875——The completion of the freedom of the guild depends entirely on the decision of the corporation of the city at large, Irwin 17888——Some persons who were admitted on stamps were not sworn in members of the corporation, Irwin 17899, 17900——No person sworn in to this guild as a freemen till after they have passed the city at large, Irwin 18021, 18022. 18036.

Weekly Tenants. The rent paid by weekly tenants was not evidence per se of the value of houses in Belfast, because they may be vacant part of the year, and the tenant pays the yearly value during a tenancy of shorter duration, O'Dwyer 3038——In the case of weekly tenants, the payment of 10*l.* a year rent is not a criterion of value, as was decided in the poor law cause of Rex v. the Inhabitants of Hellinglee, Whiteside 2592–2594.

Weir, Henry. William-street, Belfast; registered 8th November 1832, Darcus 587——Valued in the police-books at 9*l.* in 1832, and at 7*l.* in 1836, Gilmore 587–592.

Welch, Counsellor. Did not produce so many witnesses at the Clonmel registration as witness desired, Smith 3721–3769.

Welch, James. Of Garrymore; he was opposed by his landlord; particulars of his case, Walshe 9851–9856——Explanation of witness as regards the charge made against him of interfering to prevent the registration of one of his tenants, Earl Glengall 11558–11615.

Welch, Patrick, and Wm. Pollard. Both registered out of one house, worth about 16*l.* a year, Legge 4580–4601——They have two houses; they both voted out of one house; they voted as joint tenants, Walshe 9623–9627——House occupied by them in the same condition now, as to value, as it was in 1828, Lonergan 12639–12649.

Wellesley, Marquis. He was deemed more favourable to the people of Ireland than some of the Lord Lieutenants, Hackett 13727–13729. 13733.

Wellington-street, Clonmel. Houses in this street are worth 10*l.* 10*s.* a year; they are set at 8*l.* 10*s.* Walshe 8356–8362.

White, Mr. Would not act as chairman of the valuation commissioners, Walshe 8696.

White, John. White's-lane, Clonmel; no objection was made to his being registered, Higgins 3111–3113.

White, Mr. William. Refused to act as a valuation commissioner for Clonmel, Walshe 8480.

Whiteside, James. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Has practised as counsel for the conservative party in Belfast at the registry courts, 2454–2459——Mr. O'Dwyer, Mr. Curry and Mr. Mayne adopted the rent as the criterion of value, and when this was only 8 l. or 9 l., and the police tax was in proportion, they required evidence of a clear and strong character to prove the value; Billington's case, 2460–2463——As 10 l. rent was primâ facie evidence of a right to register, less than that sum was a primâ facie disqualification, and a fine must have been paid or improvements made to qualify the claimant, 2463–2471——Their decisions gave satisfaction to both parties; they established a bonâ fide 10 l. constituency: there were no appeals; had appeals been allowed in cases of improper admissions, witness would have advised appeals from decisions of Mr. Fogarty, 2472–2479.

The case of Francis Campbell illustrative of Mr. Fogarty's principle in ascertaining value; he had been rejected by Mr. Fogarty in the preceding session to that in which he admitted him, 2480–2484——This man ought to have been left to his remedy by appeal instead of being admitted to the register, 2485-2494——The expense of an appeal is borne by the parties, but the applicant loses his time, 2495, 2496——He has no power to compel the attendance of witnesses either at the sessions or assizes, but in one case the witnesses are on the spot, and in the other at a distance, 2497–2499——If persons are allowed to apply at successive sessions, and have their cases re-heard, the power of appeal is useless, 2500——In the 10 Geo. IV. c. 8, the criterion of value is that which a solvent and respectable tenant would pay, 2501, 2502——On the rejection of Campbell's claim there was no corroborating evidence of value; on his admission there was, 2503–2506.

At the first registry sessions Mr. Fogarty admitted claimants whose rent was less than 10 l. without corroborating evidence; he held that the claimant's oath was evidence which must be contradicted by the opposing party, 2507–2515, 2524——The correctness of the report of Arthur Lavery's case, as published in the Guardian by Mr. Bates, confirmed, 2516-2523——In Campbell's case evidence was not produced in opposition to his claim until Mr. Fogarty had stated that if none were given, he would admit him, 2529–2531——When the rent and taxes show that the houe is not worth 10 l. a year the claim should be rejected, except under special circumstances, 2532–2535——Witness heard of some cases of personification in the case of Mr. M'Cance for Belfast, 2536, 2537——Mr. Fogarty's principle was applied to both parties with impartiality, 2538–2545.

Evidence relative to the oath under 10 Geo. IV. c. 8, 2546–2551——Mr. Fogarty did not refuse to reject claimants who were willing to stand rejected in order to try the question of value, but he did refuse to do so with respect to the lodger point, which is still undecided by the judges, but upon which Mr. Fogarty himself had no doubts, 2553–2562——Occupation was determined by Mr. O'Dwyer, Mr. Curry and Mr. Mayne to be the residence, either of the claimant, his family or servants, for six months, 2563——Mr. Fogarty held that possession, and the payment of rent for six months, and actual occupation any time previous to the registry, was sufficient, 2564——Several votes were admitted upon this principle which, in the case of James Green Bell, the Chief Baron has decided to be wrong, 2565, 2566——At the last Dundalk assizes the Chief Baron held that actual occupation requires the residence of the family or domestic servants, 2567–2572.

Mr. Fogarty considered possession and occupation to be nearly the same; the distinction was not argued until his time, because his predecessors dated the period of occupation from the day on which the claimant first slept in the house, 2573–2585——The question of permissive occupancy is now decided by the judges, 2589–2592——In the case of weekly tenants the payment of 10 l. a year rent is not a criterion of value, as was decided in the poor-law cause of Rex v. The Inhabitants of Hellinglee in England, 2592–2594——In Arthur Hamill's case Mr. Fogarty added the police-tax to the rent in estimating the value of his house; this principle appears to witness to be improper, 2595–2613——There is no distinction between the assessed taxes paid in England, and the local taxes of Belfast, in adding to the value of a house; they are both criterions of value only, 2614-2624——Witness's attention called to the cases of Rex v. St. Paul Deptford, and Rex v. Framlingham, 2625.

Houses are built without any reference to the taxes which will be payable; in case of an unequal tax upon houses of the same description, the rent would be affected, but not the intrinsic value of the houses, 2627–2644——Suggestions for the amendment of the Reform Act; the registration should be annual, and the whole register should be open for revision, 2645–2647——The standard of value should be laid down according to the 10 Geo. IV., c. 8, what a solvent and respectable tenant would pay, 2647——The assessor at contested elections should be empowered to put questions to the voters, 2648——In boroughs the poll should be terminated in two days, 2649, 2650——The registering barristers are becoming acquainted with the decisions of their brethren, and no change is necessary, except the establishment of appeals in cases of improper admissions, 2652——" Occupation " should be defined by a declaratory law, 2653–2657——The assistant barristers should be transferred from one county to another, 2658, 2659.

Whitton, John. One of the representatives in the common council of the guild of bakers; he is a baker, Card 16005, 16006.

Wholohan, James. Since the registration, has very much improved his house; value thereof is now about 8*l.*, Smith 3309–3324——Alterations in his premises were made previous to the registration, Walshe 9098–9105. 9210–9221——He was distrained upon for voting for the liberal candidate, Walshe 9106–9117.

Wiber, James. Admitted to the freedom of the guild of cooks and vintners in right of birth, Wiber 18223.

Wiber, John. (Analysis of his Evidence.)—Attorney and solicitor and clerk to the guild of cooks and vintners; when appointed clerk; not free of the city at large, 18069–18081——Necessity for being sworn in a freeman of the city at large before they are sworn in to the freedom of the guild, 18082–18093——Witness has never been called upon to enrol apprentices' indentures; but very few entries of their enrolment in the books of the corporation; fee charged on enrolment, 18094–18132——No alteration made in the modes of admission since the Reform Bill, 18134——Oath administered to freemen; persons admitted in right of apprenticeship must either produce their indentures or evidence to prove that they are lost, 18139–18152——Not many admitted in right of service, 18152.

No property as a guild; corporation supported by subscriptions; salary, &c. of witness, 18155–18159——Rights in which parties may be admitted, 18162–18165——Evidence respecting the stamp duty paid on admissions; witness is responsible to the stamp-office for the duty, 18166–18180——Case of Gamble, admitted in right of marriage; served the office of warden of the guild, 18183–18191——Mode of applying for admission to the corporation, 18192–18198. 18204–18211——No ballot allowed in this guild for the admission of persons; only for the election of officers, 18212–18214——Claim by birth is recognised by the guild; manner in which ascertained, 18215–18225. 18227——Some instances of minors having been admitted, 18226——Further evidence respecting the mode of admission to the guild, 18227–18241.

Wicklow. Rights in which persons may be admitted to the freedom of, Archer 15387——Tenements belonging to the guild of tailors situate in Wicklow were granted by the charter of the guild, and confirmed by King William, De Zouche 17258. 17268.

Wicklow, County. Return of the number of voters registered in this county since October 1832, App. i. p. 39——Number of rentcharges registered at each session since October 1832, App. i. p. 125——Notices of applications to register voters; number admitted, rejected or withdrawn, App. i. p. 158.

Winbury, Paul. Of Catherine-street, Clonmel; value of his house 6*l.* or 7*l.*; was registered in 1832, Higgins 2854–2857, Graham 5136–5157——Increased value of his premises since 1828; rent paid by him; description of the premises, Walshe 8112–8146. 9013–9044, Butler 11244, 11245——Premises are worth 10*l.* a year, Lonergan 12507–12509. 12517.

Winchelsea, Lord. Admitted to the freedom of the guild of barbers and surgeons in Dublin since passing the Reform Bill, Clinton 17387.

Withers, Alexander. Barrack-street, Belfast; registered October 1832, Darcus 611——Valued at 7*l.* in the police-books in 1832 and 1836, Gilmore 612.

WITNESSES:

1. Attending Registry Courts.
2. Witnesses attending Committee on Fictitious Votes, Ireland.

1. Attending Registry Courts:

It would be an improvement upon the Reform Act to give the power of summoning witnesses to the registry, and would be a means of checking the admission of fictitious votes, Bates 2019, 2020——It is necessary, because parties will not voluntarily come forward to give evidence if they can avoid it, Bates 2376——There should be a compulsory process to oblige witnesses to attend; no one will give evidence voluntarily, Smith 3851. 3859–3862——It would be an advantage if the revising barrister had the power to compel the attendance of witnesses; has found no inconvenience from not having that power, Dobbs 18776–18784——Great readiness on both sides in getting persons to give evidence before the revising barrister, Dobbs 18785–18788.

2. Witnesses attending Committee on Fictitious Votes, Ireland:

Pecuniary loss sustained by witness in consequence of being summoned to give evidence before the Committee, Lambert 17560–17563, Gale 19052–19065, Bell 19115–19128——Has been in attendance on the Committee ever since the 30th May, the date of his summons, Hyndman 19043–19045.

Wood & Co., Messrs. George. Improvements made by them, subsequent to the valuation in 1828, caused an increased valuation to be made, Keily 10286–10288. 11112.
